THE CATACOMBS AT ROME:

THEIR CONTENTS AND TEACHINGS.

By BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S., Chamberlain of the City of London.

A Vindication of Pure and Primitive Christianity; and an Exposure of the Corruptions of Romanism: Derived from the Sepulchral Remains of the Early Christians at Rome.

WITH SEVENTY SMALL ILLUSTRATIONS.

Tinted Covers, 2s. Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A powerful vindication of pure and primitive Christianity. The value of the book is enhanced by a great number of fine Illustrations. The public have given this book a very hearty reception, as it has now reached its fourth edition. May it reach a thousand more editions! Mr. Scott has done his work well. This book will well repay a careful perusal. Mr. Scott has something to tell, and he tells it in a most fascinating manner."—Irish Congregational Magazine, March, 1889.

"Most people have heard of these famous CATACOMBS; but nowhere have we met with a more graphic or instructive account of their contents than in this book. The many wood engravings help to make the whole thing quite plain. We advise our young ministers, or more educated Sunday-school teachers, to study this volume."
General Baptist Magazine, March, 1889.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS.

A COMPLETE AND AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF THE LIVES, SUFFERINGS, AND TRIUMPHANT DEATHS OF EARLY CHRISTIAN AND PROTESTANT MARTYRS IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

By JOHN FOXE.

With Twelve Full-page Illustrations. Cloth boards, 10s. 6d. Bevelled boards, gilt edges, 12s. 6d.

"Messrs. Morgan & Scott deserve most cordial thanks for the production of this noble edition of a noble book. . . . Only let this book have a place in every British home, and we may smile at the efforts of Rome and of the Anglican Ritualists to undo the blessed work which was achieved for our nation and the world by the thousands of faithful witnesses to the truth who, in dark days of priestly domination, resisted unto death."—Christian Leader.

"It is a most masterly exposure of what Popery really is; and what it can do when it has the upper hand. The perusal of this book should form part of the education of our youth. Heads of families should purchase it for their children to read. Popery could find no favour wherever FOXE'S MARTYRS is studied."—Christian Progress.

The Christian.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of Mr. Henry Toye, of the Home for the Fatherless, Greenwich.

On Sunday, the 30th inst., the churches of Islington will be resounding with the claims of the foreign field; simultaneous missionary addresses will be delivered at fifty-five meetings held in twenty-eight churches. The movement is in connection with the Islington Church Missionary Juvenile Association, which holds similar meetings half-yearly. It is hoped that a large attendance of local residents will be secured, such as will lead to increased interest in the work of fellow-labourers abroad.

We note with much satisfaction the appointment of Canon Westcott to the Bishopric of Durham. The Bishop elect has gained a high name in the field of Biblical criticism; his commentaries are of great value, and his services in connection with the revision of the New Testament have been noteworthy. He also possesses the esteem and confidence of all Protestant denominations. We trust he may be found to exercise a great power for good in the Church of England, and a still wider influence in the Church of Christ.

Every live institution is certain to outgrow its swaddling clothes, and to require some adaptation to the conditions of its development. The death of Mr. Shipton brings vividly to our minds the fact that the Young Men's Christian Association is now more than a generation old. In the process of growth and expansion it has taken form and run into channels that were not much in the thought of its founders. The ruling powers of the Association have deemed this a fitting time to appoint a Committee to inquire into the state of the London Associations, and to consider how far the existing machinery is sufficient for their purpose. The Committee will, of course, fully represent the older ideas, but it also contains a due admixture of young blood. We earnestly trust that the outcome of its deliberations may conduce to the true efficiency of one of the best organisations of the age.

The correspondent of The Standard at Dunkirk recently drew attention to the snares which beset British seamen discharged at foreign ports, who, after receiving their wages, are left to find their way home as best they can. Crimps of the lowest order pounce upon them as soon as the ship is moored to the quay, and, plying them with spirits, cheat them in various ways out of their wages. The correspondent bears witness to the great good already done at Dunkirk, where two thousand seamen are paid off every year from British ships, by the Sailors' Home and by the strenuous efforts of the British Consul there; but he urges that the "Midge system" should be introduced at all Continental ports, by means of which the sailor would be enabled to leave for home as soon as his service on board ship is over, his wages being transmitted to him afterwards. He also strongly recommends that the Board of Trade charge of threepence in the pound for transmitting the wages home should be abolished, as the sailor is now often deceived by the crimps promising to change his money for him at a cheaper rate. The loss to the revenue of such modifications as these would be very trifling, whilst the gain to the seamen's families at home would be immense; and any member of the Legislature who will take the matter up will be rendering far more worthy service than by helping to vote away millions of money for the construction of huge guns and monster ironclads.

An esteemed correspondent sends to us a very earnestly worded protest against the continued existence of "London's Saturnalia," by which he means the obtrusive and unblushing solicitations to immorality to be found in some of our West-end thoroughfares at late hours of the night. He declares that in this respect London has an evil pre-eminence over all other European capitals. The worst feature of the case is that the reputed guardians of public order and morality seem to regard the whole affair with indifference and unconcern.

We have at various times sought to raise an earnest note of protest and appeal on this subject, but the authorities seem to be deaf to all outside remonstrance. The evil consequently becomes intensified, and the traffickers in sin become more bold and unblushing. No doubt there are difficulties and disadvantages attending on peremptory action, but at any rate we have a right to expect that our public thoroughfares shall not degenerate into marts of open vice for the ensnarement of our youth. Will not some self-denying member of the House of Commons take a decided stand on behalf of public morality?

We notice that The Missionary Review of the World for March quotes in full the letter that appeared in our columns over the initials "R. N. C.," criticising the action of the Royal Niger Company in relation to Christian missions; adding in an editorial note that the statements of the article "will cause painful surprise and indignation." But we do not find that our missionary contemporary has made any allusion to the reply to "R. N. C." from Mr. Wilmot Brooke and Rev. A. J. Robinson which we published the following week, and in which the action of the Royal Niger Company was explained and defended.

The recent accounts in The Times of the doings in Siberian political prisons have evidently created some stir in Russian official circles; though the strict censorship of the press has prevented the papers containing the statements from getting into the hands of the general community. The regular correspondent of The Times at St. Petersburg had a long letter in Friday's issue, in which he represents the official view of the case as differing very materially from that which has already appeared. As Russian official reports are not made public and cannot be sifted, it is difficult if not impossible to weigh the relative value of the conflicting accounts. In a leading article The Times asserts that the original communications came from a trustworthy source, and informs the Russian Government that an assumption of ignorance or indifference will not suffice to dissipate the effect of the painful charges made as to the treatment of Siberian prisoners.

The yearning for visible unity would appear to be finding fruit in the Midlands. The County Baptist Association has met in a Congregational chapel in Leicester, and has appointed a committee of ten Independents and ten Baptists to formulate, as far as possible, a basis of union. It would appear to be thought that in some parishes amalgamation between the two bodies may at once come; and that in others the overlapping of new churches, and unnecessary extension of denominationalism, may be prevented. A Leicester minister affirmed that to admit that infant baptism was not to be found in the New Testament would not be a severe wrench to him. The prevailing sentiment, however, was that union and the formation of union churches might be carried forward without compromise.

Earnest men in Manchester as well as London are demanding the inspection and supervision not merely of halls that are licensed primarily for music and dancing, but of the ordinary licensed public-house, where music is performed to relieve the monotony of drinking. A Manchester paper reports a visit to one of these houses, of which there are four or five hundred in the city, and declares, after giving details which are not fitted for our columns, that there is practically no limit to the degradation resulting from such places. The contention is that inspection ought not to be left exclusively to the police. Certainly such burning social questions might make Englishmen desire that unprofitable talk in Parliament might give way to useful and needed legislation.

It is not pleasant to find a well-known literary lady writing in the current Fortnightly Review in serious advocacy of free marriage with unlimited opportunities of separation and divorce. If English sentiment is at present too strong for these opinions, it would be folly to shut our eyes to the drift of them. When it is gravely argued that a new soul has entered into society; that old motives cease to operate; and that former notions of duty are disappearing, we can scarcely ignore the direction whither such notions are pointing.

Another colliery explosion has spread consternation and death in South Wales. This time the scene is the Morfa Colliery in the neighbourhood of Port Talbot. When the explosion occurred, on Monday, last week, a large number of miners were in the pit. Brave efforts were made to rescue them from their entombment, but falls of roof were risked, and the effects of the deadly after-damp challenged, only to bring out the bodies of the dead. Of the eighty-eight persons killed, no fewer than sixty-nine leave widows, with close upon 200 children, not to mention a number of dependent relatives. The bereaved will derive benefit from the Permanent Relief Fund, but there are immediate needs which private benevolence must satisfy. The Lord Mayor of London has made an appeal, and, as in the case of the Llanerch disaster, there will assuredly be a prompt and hearty response.

In a very daintily attired little volume published by Messrs Passmore & Alabaster, Mrs. Spurgeon tells the fascinating and altogether delightful story of her Book Fund and its work for 1889. Though a confirmed invalid, she is not deprived of the luxury of doing good. Last year nearly 7000 helpful volumes were distributed through the medium of the Fund, to 560 poor pastors and missionaries of different sections of the Church. In addition to this there were scattered abroad over 13,000 copies of Mr. Spurgeon's sermons. The grateful responses of the receivers are partly recorded here, and show how much of life's sunshine can stream forth from one sympathetic womanly heart. May our gifted sister have many kind and willing helpers, as long as she is spared to continue her unique and beautiful ministry.

We have lately observed that writers in the press are describing this year as the first of "the closing decade" of the century. This is a mistake. A decade of years of course begins with 1 and ends with 10; the last decade of the century will therefore commence with 1891 and end with 2000. The point is not one of great importance, but it is well to avoid looseness of statement and cultivate strict adherence to fact.

Five-and-twenty years ago a daily contemporary thus depicted the condition of the period:—

> This—we have before now called it so—is an age out of breath. It is going down to the tomb of epochs broken-winded with the pace at which it lives its hard, useful, polemic, inquisitive, restless, mechanical life.

The quarter of a century which has passed since then has been marked by no slackening of speed; and the same paper this week utters its voice in the same tone:—

> It is indubitable that our life is passed in a whirl of incident and excitement which gives us but scant moments of repose. The bow is always bent, the nerves are ever strung. The tension of existence seems to grow greater every day, the pace is getting hotter, there is less and less time for recuperation. We are for ever having to be on the alert, to catch the fleeting moment as it goes, to seize the unrecoverable opportunity, to appropriate the chance, which once missed can never be recalled.

We repeat with emphasis to-day what we wrote twenty-five years ago: "We are in the rapids of time, and the torrent of waters rushes onward to its fall. In the midst of this breathless haste, which impresses its influence upon every circumstance of human life, the elect of God (widowed for awhile) must wait on Him. In contrast to the roaring torrent of the world's life, the waters of Siloam flow softly, and still the Sent One invites the weary and heavy laden, out of breath in the world's rough race, to the calm haven of Divine repose: 'Come unto Me, and I will give you rest.'"

Unsectarianism.

Since the publication of my two articles on Unsectarianism, in The Christian of Oct. 4 and Nov. 8, 1889, several letters have reached me from persons, who, equally with myself, recognise and deplore the existing divisions in the Church of Christ, but who are earnestly inquiring how the spirit of unsectarianism is to find expression. Perhaps many readers will be in sympathy with the following queries which one correspondent proposes:—

> (1) In view of the fact that baptism, while entirely a personal duty and privilege, was, in the New Testament, pre-relative to fellowship with the Assembly, how can such an Assembly be realised to-day, which, while entirely unsectarian, yet retains the New Testament ground of "baptized believer" membership?
> (2) What must be the attitude of those who have taken unsectarian church ground toward others who still remain ignorantly or willingly sectarian? How shall we, on the one hand, avoid the evil of what is called "Brethrenism"—withdrawal from real believers; and, on the other, duly recognise and emphasise the evil of sectarianism?

As a Baptist minister, both these queries have been presented to my mind, and have had to be answered. In replying to the first, the second may be partly answered as well.

At first sight it seems right to insist upon a "baptized believer" membership, which many believe to have been the custom in New Testament times. But several things must be remembered:—

(1) We are separated from New Testament times by a period of nearly nineteen centuries. This does not, of course, make what was true and binding then to be any less true and binding now. But, considering the history through which the Church has passed, and the early associations by which Christians generally have been surrounded, it does make it more difficult to apprehend and to receive what the Apostles taught and practised. Even sincere believers have not yet seen what we believe to be the truth on this subject. To exclude them from Church fellowship on this ground is to show less patience towards them than the Lord has shown towards us, to put them farther away from the teaching by which they might be led to the truth, and to confirm them in their position by compelling them to form a fellowship of their own.

(2) All that can be concluded from the New Testament is that baptism was pre-relative to membership. It preceded membership, but is nowhere distinctly declared to be the indispensable condition of it. Indeed, does not the form in which the query is put suggest this? If baptism is "entirely a personal duty and privilege," why should we impose it as a condition of membership? Does it not then cease to be a "personal duty and privilege"? It is no more pre-requisite to membership than membership is pre-requisite to "prayers" (Acts ii. 38, 39).

(3) To insist upon such a basis of fellowship does not avoid the evil of "withdrawal from other believers." Men whose Christian character gives evidence that they are not only "born of God," but are indwelt by the blessed Spirit, whose fellowship with God is as intimate as any which we can claim to enjoy, with whom it is a delight to have fellowship, both in prayer and in service, and who are allowed to sit with us at the same table, are yet excluded from our church fellowship! Is not this the evil of withdrawal from other believers?

(4) Nor can such a church claim to present any effective witness against sectarianism. Separation from other true Christians, on whatever ground we seek to justify it, is bound to increase rather than diminish the evil of sectarianism. Is not this the lesson which the history of "Brethrenism" teaches? There are many of us, who, if we had lived in the days when "the Brethren" movement was started, would most certainly have joined it. The prospect of exhibiting to the world a spectacle of the Church's unity would have been attractive to us. But is it not painfully manifest that the movement has failed? Have not Brethren become as sectarian as other denominations, besides having given birth to many other sections among themselves? We have many things to thank Brethren for, and I most gladly acknowledge the debt; but one of the most important results of their movement is the warning their present divisions give against the idea of securing a manifestation of Christian unity by separation from other believers.

The testimony of history is not more clearly against separation than it is for "a more excellent way." To remain in membership with existing churches; while there to witness faithfully against everything narrow and sectarian; and to cultivate fellowship in prayer and service with all who are Christians indeed; to seek earnestly for a revival of true spiritual life in all the churches. This is the best method to promote the unsectarian movement. Such is the lesson taught by the history of the revival in the eighteenth century under Wesley and Whitefield. Let two witnesses be quoted in proof of this:—

The first is Dr. R. W. Dale, who thus describes the spirit of that evangelical movement:—"Its supreme care was not for any ideal of ecclesiastical polity; it contributed to the extinction among Congregationalists, and, I think, among Baptists and Presbyterians, of...solicitude for an ideal church organisation....Nor were the evangelical clergy zealous supporters of Episcopacy....It emphasised the vital importance of the Evangelical creed, but it regarded almost with indifference all forms of Church polity that were not in apparent and irreconcilable antagonism to that creed."

A more striking witness is Rev. R. W. Free, who recently issued a most interesting history of Orange-street Chapel. Towards the close of the eighteenth century several ordained clergymen of the Church of England were either ministers or assistant ministers at that chapel. Among these were Toplady, Richard Cecil, Henry Foster, John Eyre, and Thomas Scott, the well-known commentator. These men were products of the revival, and their increased spiritual life revealed itself in their indifference to sectarian divisions. This is our great need to-day. More abundant life would make all true Christians one, as the flood tide covers every little sandbank that separates the pools on the shore.

Truth is not helped by our separation from others. The truth existed before our little systems began, and will continue when they have had their day and ceased to be.

DISCIPLINE IN THE GERMAN ARMY.—In an Imperial order relating to the organisation of the cadet corps in the preparatory military school of Berlin, the following sentence appears:—"Students must be instructed in the fear of the Lord and the comforts of the faith. They must be accustomed to hardness for their own sakes, and to gentleness for the sake of others."

XXVII.—
GOD'S FLOCK AND ITS SHEPHERDS.

1 Peter v. 1-4.

A veteran shepherd is speaking here! As he feels his own strength waning, his heart is away in his loved work, and he is deeply concerned lest it should suffer. The ruling passion is strong even unto death!

Imagine a shepherd's hut far away among the northern hills; stretched on his hard mattress an old shepherd is dying; the strong frame racked with bronchitis; every breath laboured and drawn with pain; fever rapidly consuming his life. Around him stand his sons, inured to peril and hardship. The night which hangs over hill and vale shall not break up under the silver touch of dawn, ere that strong and noble spirit has passed forth to the home for which it has long pined. Bend low and catch his whispered words, mark how they concern the sheep of his care, as he commends them to his boys: "Lads," says he, "mind the flock."

I. We get a vivid Glimpse of the Simplicity of the Constitution of the Early Church.—Wherever God's people gathered, there was part of his flock. The flock itself was scattered throughout the whole world, and according to our Master's prayer was one, even as it is to-day. For though there are many folds, there is but one flock (John x. 16, R.V.). Though some of the sheep are being led by the living fountains of waters beyond the river, and others are treading the stony defiles of this side, yet it is the same flock, bought at the same time, marked with the same initials, belonging to the same Owner. And wherever any believers gather, there is a portion of the one flock, and its officers, teachers, and spiritual guides are just shepherds, pastors.

How eloquent is this silence as to priestly functions! Not a word is said as to the necessity of having properly appointed priests, who should offer a regular sacrifice, and perform holy rites. In the Apostle's judgment there was no need to add aught to the precious blood of the unblemished and spotless Lamb, or to undertake an office which is being performed through all the ages at the throne by the great High Priest. This would have been the moment for such a reference, had it been in his mind; but surely it did not so much as enter his thought. He was more than satisfied to call himself an elder, and to address these simple-hearted men as being on an equality with himself, with the single exception of their not having, like him, witnessed the sufferings of the Chief Shepherd, by which the flock was purchased (Acts xx. 28).

Does not that reference to the sufferings of Christ cast a sidelight on one of the darkest hours of Peter's history? From the fact that he ran in the company of the beloved John to search the empty grave, we may infer that he went to his home, when he left the hall of judgment with bitter agony of soul. It was too much, however, to stay there alone, while all Jerusalem was astir with the trial and crucifixion of his dearest Friend; and so, when the concourse at Golgotha had emptied the streets, he seems to have stolen forth, making his way by devious by-lanes, till he came on the scene of blood, and, standing afar, was a witness of the sufferings of Christ.

This is the one qualification for tending the flock of God: not to have received a learned education, not to be able to talk glibly and eloquently of spiritual things, not to have bent low beneath episcopal hands—a man may have done all these things, and yet not be competent to feed the flock of God. We must behold, each for himself, the sufferings of Christ, not necessarily with the eye of the flesh, but with the eye of the soul; not with the curious glance of the fickle crowd, but with the fixed loving gaze, which finds in them cleansing for sins and balm for wounds.

And to see those sufferings is not only a qualification for shepherdship, but for glory. As surely as a man beholds those sufferings sympathetically and believingly, so surely shall he behold the glory yet to be revealed. The one is the prelude to the other. No cross, no crown. But where there is the true cross, crown there must be. It may seem to tarry long. The heart may turn sick at the long delay. But that glory which shines now and again as we climb the Transfiguration Mount shall ere long make a perpetual heaven for us when it is revealed.

II. The Conditions of Shepherdly Care.—Feed is better rendered tend, which includes in one word all the various offices of a shepherd, the leading, feeding, watching, defending. It is not enough to preach to the flock once or twice each week. There must be personal supervision; watching for souls as by those who must give account; seeking them if they go astray; tracking them to the precipice down which they have fallen; and never resting till the straying sheep is brought again to the fold. All this is included in the word, and we need to do all this if we are to tend the flock of God.

The work must be done from love.—If it is undertaken as the result of the strong pressure brought to bear on him, or for any reward which may be offered, the shepherd does not fulfil the ideal of this passage. "Not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind." None of God's soldiers are mercenaries or pressed men, they are all volunteers. We must have a shepherd's heart, if we would do a shepherd's work. Nor is this love merely the liking which may come from the flesh, or be dictated by the inclination of the soul. There must be the love which is akin to the love of the Chief Shepherd Himself. A love which can endure without return or thanks, which can grow where there is scarcely any soul, and which clings to the least lovely and thankful. That love is only shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit. To take the cure of souls because there is a good living in the family, or for a livelihood, or because it gives position and influence, is a sacrilege which will entail a terrible reckoning for the hireling shepherd.

There is a remarkable addition in the Revised Version: according unto God, which serves to accentuate positively what has already been insisted on negatively. God must call to the work, sustain us in it, and give us all the guidance and grace needed for its efficient performance.

It is hard to give up the familiar reading about God's heritage in favour of the new rendering, your allotted portion. And yet the two expressions are nearly equivalent. For God could not allot that which was not his own. "We are his people, and the sheep of his pasture." My flock is the appellation by which He constantly addresses us. And it is He who allots souls to certain shepherds. Let not those who have small and uninviting charges think lightly of them, since God has entrusted them to their care, and is carefully marking the faithfulness with which the work is done, prepared to reward the true shepherd with a larger charge.

The sphere and people of our ministry should be taken straight from the hands of the Chief Shepherd. We are only accountable to Him. Our work must be done to please Him, and at his direction. We must consult Him about all our plans. We must take his directions as to what part of the green pastures our portion of the flock is to be led into, and by what waters it shall rest. If anything goes wrong we must consider that it should be instantly reported to Him, as the fret and care and burden of direction must certainly be his. If we make mistakes, and the flock suffer through our ignorance, the brunt of the loss must fall on Him. There is no one so interested in the pastor's charge as the Chief Pastor is. He shares all the anxieties, hardships, watchings, and perils of the work. Not to please the flock, not to attract the applause of men, not to gain name and fame, but to do the will of the Chief Shepherd, must be the aim of each true servant of Christ.

And there is to be no imperious overlording. We must not abuse our position. The shepherd must win reverence, not compel it. No servant of God must strive, but be gentle unto all, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves. And since the shepherd, in Eastern mode, must always go before the flock, he must be its example. "Be thou an example of the believers," said Paul to the young Timothy, "in word, in conversation, in love, in spirit, in faith, in purity." Those who assume to lead others must be very careful of their behaviour, that they may not be a stumbling-block to any, but that others may be heartened and stimulated by the beauty and consistency of their walk.

Surely there is comfort for those who constitute the flock in this conception of the Chief Shepherd. When the under-shepherd fails, the Chief Shepherd may be expected to step in to supply his vacated place, or to do his neglected work. Do not grumble to man, but take your complaints to headquarters. And if He does not replace the worthless under-shepherd by another, He will undertake the office of caring for you with his own hands, and you shall cry, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." He will see the work done, or do it Himself.

If these words should meet the eyes of any who are away from the tendance of under-shepherds, let me congratulate them on being superintended by the Chief Shepherd Himself. What could be better? The true description of his care is given in his own words, which deserve careful heed. Ezekiel xxxiv. 12-16 might almost excite to envy.

III. The Reward of the Faithful Shepherd.—Not the crown of Nemean parsley, destined soon to wither, but of unfading amaranth. A reward for faithful service, which will never grow old, never shrivel, never decay. And thus the memory of the Master's appreciation of the poor service we have rendered will be perpetual. Nor is this all, but some additional strands of glory shall be entwined with the immortelles—"the crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Oh, liberal recompense! oh, marvellous condescension! oh, rapture of delight! The work itself were reward enough, to say nothing of such a compensation as this. Yet let us strive to win each of the three crowns held out to us. The crown of life to those who endure temptation! The crown of righteousness to those who love his appearing! The crown of glory to those who tend his flock! And in the meanwhile let us ask that He should quickly appear, casting aside the veil which hides Him, and manifesting Himself to eyes that long and hearts that wait for his appearing. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

MR. G. CLARKE IN KIRKCALDY.

Mr. George Clarke has paid this town another visit, after an absence of three years, extending from Sunday, Feb. 23, to Sunday, March 9. During that time he held a week of evening meetings in Loughborough-road U.P. church, seven afternoon Bible-readings, two Sunday morning meetings for men only in St. Brycedale Free Church Hall, and a week of evening meetings in Bethelfield U.P. church, the last Sunday evening meeting being held in the parish church. Kirkcaldy, on account of its length (nearly four miles) and configuration, is a most difficult town to work. Loughborough-road church is situated in the north-eastern part, and Bethelfield church towards the west, there being an interval of two miles between these churches, so that there were different audiences in each.

It is impossible to speak of results; there can be no doubt of Mr. Clarke's power to attract great multitudes to listen to the Gospel. Whilst the services were largely attended during the week-day evenings, on each of the Sunday evenings the churches occupied by him were crowded in every part, halls and lobbies; and it was estimated that at his last Sunday meeting in Kirkcaldy parish church there were not less than 2500 present, besides hundreds having been turned away for want of room. The after-meeting (at this last meeting) was a sight never to be forgotten, 1000 to 1500 people kneeling in solemn dedication to God.

The afternoon Bible-readings, which were held in St. Brycedale Free Church Hall, capable of holding 300, was quite full, with probably a third more than attended similar meetings on Mr. Clarke's first visit. And the Sabbath morning meetings, held in the same place, for men only were a great success, the place being filled to overflowing; and many testified to having been strengthened and stimulated by what they heard.

Mr. Clarke's visit has revealed emphatically one thing—viz., the permanence of the results of his first visit; many of the workers on this occasion were the fruit of that visit, and at the usual meeting of the Y.W.C.A. held on the last Saturday not less than forty young women gave their testimony to having received blessing, many on both occasions and some only on the present. Similar testimony was given at the meeting of the Y.M.C.A.; many Christian workers testified to a cold wave having settled down on them previous to the meetings, which has now been dispelled. Nor have the meetings been fruitless of conversions. On leaving Kirkcaldy, Mr. Clarke proceeded to the south of Ireland.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.—The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in its latest report tells of many wrongs redressed, and much harm prevented.

Dr. Pentecost in Scotland.

THE PAISLEY MISSION.

Dr. Pentecost's second week in Paisley opened with a remarkable meeting in the George A. Clark Townhall, which was crowded three-quarters of an hour before the advertised time, half-past six o'clock. So closely, indeed, were the people packed that there was considerable disturbance at the start, but eventually this was got over, and the preacher proceeded to deliver the ablest address he had as yet given. It was founded on the words, "Come, see the place where the Lord lay," and was full of telling arguments and touching illustrations. As it dealt with many sceptical notions, which are held by the masses outside the Church, it would do much good were it published and widely circulated.

That it produced a deep impression on the audience was evident from the after-meeting, which was attended by about eight hundred, and at which twenty came forward professing their surrender to Christ. As they knelt at the front seat they were solemnly commended to God in prayer by one of the ministers present. Among them was a leading gentleman in the town, and a prominent office-bearer in a large congregation, who said that he had come forward to kneel with the others that he might be done with indecision for ever, and be out-and-out on the side of Christ. A young woman who was the last to kneel down gave this touching explanation of her delay:—"I was pleading with Maggie (her companion and friend) to come with me; but, when the last verse of 'Just as I am' was being sung, I had to tell her, 'I cannot stay longer; if you will not confess Christ, I must, for He has become precious to me.'"

This great meeting told with good effect upon the attendance during the week in the Free High Church, where the word continued to be spoken with power. About nine hundred were present every evening, and at the after-meetings, attended by about five hundred, forty-five professed faith in Christ. This was a great advance upon the first week, when only twelve stood up. The testimonies, too, given by some of these confessors were very striking, one of them stating that, impressed by what she heard from night to night, she stumbled at the simplicity of the act of believing, until one day, in the mill, whilst watching her portion of the machinery, she gave herself to the Lord, taking Him at his word, and came to the after-meeting that evening to confess the deliverance graciously vouchsafed to her soul, which plainly manifested itself in the rich tones of her voice and her beaming face. A husband and wife, who had travelled up from Renfrew, three miles off, came forward together one evening, and, ere they left, said to one of the workers, "We came up to see and hear Dr. Pentecost, but we will go home with Christ."

On another occasion, four intelligent-looking boys were making their way to the front seat, when the Doctor exclaimed, "Thank God for the boys, for, if their profession is sincere, they have a lifetime before them in which to do good work for the Master." When asked why they came forward, the first replied, "To confess that I have accepted Christ as my Saviour." In this he was followed by the others, and, as their clear young voices were heard distinctly over the hushed house, tears of gladness gathered in the eyes of many aged Christians. A large and well-trained choir go through the principal streets for half an hour before the meeting, singing very effectively popular Gospel hymns; whilst a prayer-meeting is held for the same time in one of the halls adjoining the church. Altogether, the work is evidently taking a firm hold of the community, and the likelihood is that, as it proceeds, it will become increasingly fruitful.

ADDRESSES TO GLASGOW MERCHANTS.

Last year Dr. Pentecost had most successful meetings with business men in the Merchants' Hall, Glasgow. Being in Paisley during the present month, it was suggested that he should conduct a series of similar meetings.

The first service was held on Monday, March 3, and now two weeks have passed by. This mission—as far as it has gone—has been quite as striking as its predecessor. The meetings begin at 1.15 p.m., and it is most interesting to notice the gentlemen hurrying along from their clubs and offices to get to the hall before the service commences. Punctually to the hour the preacher walks on to the platform. The hall, which accommodates between 400 and 500, has always been filled, and on some occasions every inch of standing-room has been occupied.

One is impressed with the constitution of the meeting; the majority are elderly gentlemen, many of them being beyond the "threescore and ten." These old gentlemen are most regular attenders, and show great interest in the address. There is also a goodly sprinkling of young, active business men, besides a few clerks, who have their lunch at that hour, and spend most of the time at the Merchants' Hall. Many of Glasgow's "merchant princes" have been present, and have expressed themselves as being impressed with the clear and logical addresses that have been given. Every day several ministers have been in the audience; one day no fewer than twenty-three were present. It might be well if all our clergymen would come and learn the secret of gaining the attention of keen business men.

After singing a psalm to one of the good old tunes so well known in Scotland, one of the gentlemen present leads the audience in prayer. Dr. Pentecost then intimates his subject, and after reading a few verses of Scripture, launches into it.

As the time is limited there is none to waste in needless introduction. The Doctor is very argumentative in his style, but occasionally he illustrates his subjects by anecdote. This is one of Dr. Pentecost's strong points, and in telling a story he has often drawn tears from many eyes. The subjects that have been taken up have been: "Strange fire," "The Laodiceans," "The barren fig-tree," "Choice of Moses," "The infallible word," "The transfiguration," &c. This week he deals with the "Forgiveness of Sin"; next week he proposes to discuss the subjects of "Eternal Punishment," and the "Second Coming of the Lord." His addresses have been masterly, and the attention of the audience most striking. Many of those who have been attending have confessed to having received great help, and those who have had charge of the meetings have felt that these addresses have been the best efforts Dr. Pentecost has put forth.

After the Paisley mission is closed, Dr. Pentecost goes to Ardrossan for a fortnight, Aberdeen for three weeks, and early in May he returns to America for a well-earned rest. He proposes next autumn to go to India with a band of voluntary workers, and to labour for about two years among the English-speaking people in the three great Presidencies of that Empire.

MILDMAY CONSUMPTIVE HOME, TORQUAY.—Beautifully situated in the Bronshill-road, "Smyrna" is at once a Home and a hospital, for patients in advanced stages of consumption. The inmates are the subjects of a ministry of healing for both body and soul. Of the twenty-three patients received last year, six ended their earthly pilgrimage in the Home, of which Sister Emily is still the beloved superintendent. The third annual report says: "The situation of the new house has proved healthy and good, and as the numerous applicants for admission must receive the reply, 'No vacancy,' we could often wish it were larger." During last year the patients were never fewer than eight, and that only for a week or two at intervals. All inquiries should be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss F. Gumbleton, Connemara, Middle Warberry, Torquay.

For the Young.

WHERE ARE YOU FOR?

AN ALLEGORY.

By Charlotte Murray.

Into the Station of Time they all rushed—those four boys whom we mean to follow.

"Now, young gentlemen, where are you for?" asked a porter of the two first, who were linked arm in arm in a "don't care" kind of fashion.

"Where are we for?" Fol, the elder of the two, replied, repeating the question with a laugh, "that's just what we can't tell, you see. But we don't mind where we go, nor what turns up, so long as we have a jolly time!"

"Then here's your booking-office, sir," said a wily guard, with a look at the clerk in charge. "These young gentlemen here want tickets for—they don't know where, and they don't much care, as long as they have a jolly time; so you're their man."

"All four going?"

"No," Fol answered, with a superior toss of the head; "these other fellows aren't with us, though we came in together; we're not their sort, I reckon. Now give us the tickets, if that's our train."

"Yes, that's your train, young gentleman, so off you go; and a pleasant journey to you—with a bitter ending," he muttered under his breath, as he prepared to issue other tickets to other comers.

I wonder, reader, if you know any one as wise as these two boys—going they don't know where?

PART II.

"What an awfully queer ticket, Fol! nothing on it but 'The pleasures of sin'; no name, nor anything: what does it mean, Fol?"

"Why, just what we are going in for now, Frank, you 'muff.' Isn't it pleasure to be going ahead reckless as we are?"

"Isn't it pleasure?" he asked once more, after two or three hours of "rush" and sunshine. But this time the question lacked the assurance of the former in tone.

Instead of answering, Frank said, as they were suddenly submerged in darkness, "But I didn't bargain for tunnels, Fol! And no light too! Oh, Fol, it's terribly cold and damp! Was that you who spoke, Fol? Was it you who shrieked so loudly in my ear, 'The way of transgressors is hard?' Was it you who said, 'The lamp of the wicked shall be put out?' Was it you who laughed that mocking laugh? Oh, Fol, do speak. There it is again, don't you hear it? What was that touched me? Was it a bat?" And the poor boy buried his face in his hands and shuddered.

"Fol, you might have given a fellow a word of comfort," he said, reproachfully, when the agony of that tunnel was over, and they were in daylight once more.

"I had enough to do to think of myself," the other muttered gloomily; "it was an ugly time. But it's over now."

"The train is stopping, Fol; do we get out here?"

"Not if I know it, that branch-line doesn't look over inviting, so I don't budge."

"Show tickets, please! Where are you for, young gentlemen?" an official shouted, as he suddenly whisked open the door.

"The tickets don't say," Fol replied, with an uneasy laugh. "'The pleasures of sin' isn't a place, I reckon; and that's all I can see."

"Look both sides, my man, and you'll know a little more! But you're a poor fool at best, sure enough, though you aren't acquainted with the fact," he said, with a chuckle.

"Fol, what is that they're calling out up and down the station?" Frank suddenly interposed. "'Change here for Heaven!' Was it Heaven they said? And are we then bound for—for Hell? There! they're calling again!"

"Fol, God helping me, I'll change!"

Another moment, and Frank was on the platform, whilst the train sped on.

"It's getting wretchedly dark and cold," Fol said to himself as his journey was nearing its close. Then he drew his rug round him, and buttoned up his coat. "It's horrid work travelling alone!" he muttered. "Was I a fool to come this road, after all, I wonder? I say! what are they—what are they stopping here for? I've no intention of getting out. Don't tell me it's my terminus. It's nothing of the kind, and I'm going on!"

"Death! death!—stop here!" was shrieked through the carriage window.

"I'm going on, I tell you," he repeated, as the door was suddenly jerked open by an unseen hand.

"Sure enough you're going on, my man, for you're to come with me," a deep voice answered. "I'm commissioned by the Governor to whom I'm bound, to bring you on to your destination. It's a place you've thought little about, it seems to me. Listen; those words follow me everywhere, and they will mock you, as they mock me."

And the boy heard clear and loud above the shrieks of remorse and groans of despair, with which the air seemed laden, these words—

"The wages of sin is death."

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

"Oh, that they had hearkened unto Me."

"Too late! too late!"

PART III.

And what of those other two boys who entered the station at the same time with Fol and his friend?

Ah! they had decided where they were going, and had received tickets accordingly.

Shall I tell you the name of their destination? There was no mistake about it, for the word "Heaven" shone in letters of gold on their tickets; whilst on the reverse side were stamped the words, "He loved me, and gave Himself for me."

What bright faces those two boys Chris and Ernest had, as the train slowly moved out of the station!

They were thinking so much of a great kind royal Friend, who had paid their fare, that they hardly concerned themselves with the country they were passing through. But at last they, too, came to a tunnel; only what mattered that? for there was such a bright beautiful light inside their carriage that they hardly knew it was dark outside, whilst opposite to them they read the words, "I will trust and not be afraid"; "Even the night shall be light about me."

After a time the two lines upon which the four boys had been travelling converged for a short space, and the trains drew up simultaneously at the same station, though on different sides of the platform; and it was here Frank had suddenly determined on a new start.

"Look, Ernest, isn't that one of the fellows who came into the station with us this morning; and went off by that other train? What can he be doing here?" Chris said. "He seems all alone, and wondering what to do. Shall we ask him to re-book, and come with us?"

Thus very soon three boys, instead of two, were speeding on their way to the Celestial City. Oh what happy boys they were! How they laughed, chattered, and enjoyed everything!

Only now and then would a shadow flit across the face of Frank, as he thought of the horrors of that awful tunnel; but he never alluded to it in detail, for he shrank even from its name.

But gradually and peacefully the day wore on, and the boys grew weary for their rest.

"Oh look, Chris! look at the glorious light on those mountains! can that be Heaven, do you think?" Ernest asked, as the sun was setting. "The glory is growing brighter and still brighter. I am just a little tired now, Chris, and I shan't be sorry to be at home."

Even as these words were uttered the train stopped, and a kind voice said to Ernest, whilst a face full of tenderness looked in at the window, "Are you tired, my boy? Then I will take you by a short way home."

"But must I leave Chris and Frank?"

"Yes; they are coming, but not just yet. I want you to be there to welcome them."

With these words He took the little fellow in his arms. And away, away they went until they were lost in the dazzling light of that golden sunset. And now, at the pearly gate of that Heaven-world, Ernest is waiting to welcome his brother and friend, when they too shall arrive at their journey's end.

Dear reader, once more let me ask you, for your own sake, for the sake of those you love, for the sake of those who will be waiting and watching for you—Where are you for? You are now at this moment bound for heaven or hell. Which is it? If the latter, then change and re-book before it is too late; and may God help, and bless you!

NEWFOUNDLAND.—On a recent visit paid by Rev. Dr. Sall, late vicar of Dolphinholme, Lancaster, to Bonaxista, Newfoundland, the scene of his former labours, he left with the schoolmaster a large quantity of Gospel tracts and books for free distribution. The following extract of a letter received from a fishermen will show how they were dealt with:—"I am sorry to tell you that Parson W—— burned the books you left for distribution. Rev. Mr. Baily told me to tell you it was done by his orders. The people were much hurt about it, after the trouble you had taken to bring them out, and a great many have left the church on account of the parson burning the books."

THE LLANERCH COLLIERY EXPLOSION.—Towards alleviating the distress caused by this catastrophe, some of our readers kindly contributed sums of money. Mr. S. G. Prout, writing to express gratitude for this, says that many of the bereaved have benefited substantially from the Miners' Permanent Fund, so that pressing needs has been largely met. A woman, who lost her husband and boy—her all—said to Mr. Prout some days afterwards: "At night, when I cannot sleep, I try to sing, 'Hangs my helpless soul on Thee; leave, ah, leave me not alone.'" Mr. Prout speaks of the excellent character of the work of the Undenominational Christian Mission at Pontymoile, which is near the scene of the disaster. Mr. T. M. Wintle, the hon. superintendent, is a devoted labourer in the Lord's vineyard, and, as he occupies a responsible position among the men themselves, he exerts a powerful influence for good. By many agencies Mr. Wintle brings the claims of the Gospel to bear upon the community; and, in order to carry out his ever-widening plans, he hopes soon to be enabled to erect an institute which may become the home and centre of much beneficent work in the district. Mr. Wintle's address is Pontymoile, Pontypool, Mon.

SALVATION ARMY RESCUE WORK.

"Won by the Cross," the report of the Salvation Army rescue work for 1889-90, contains many remarkable stories, on the one hand showing that "the way of transgressors is hard," and on the other hand testifying that the grace of God is all availing for those who will make Christ their Lord and Master. The Rescue Homes are eleven in number, six of them in London. The total accommodation is for 274 persons, who are engaged in various industries, superintended by those who earnestly seek their highest good. The central office of the work is 259, Mare-street, Hackney.

Since the work began in 1884, over three thousand girls have been rescued. Last year 408 passed through the Receiving House, at Hackney, and, having told their woful tales, were dealt with as well as was possible. It is pleasing to read that their sewing work in the Homes is appreciated by those who have bought it. The secretary of the Clapton Home reports: "We have made great advances in the needlework department. Ladies are so pleased with our work that orders are coming in nicely, though we should be glad of more." The Help and Inquiry Department has been vigorously worked, missing relatives having been found for many a lonely woman and child.

Staff-Captain Leigh, secretary of London Home No. III., 183, Amherst-road, Hackney, writes as follows of a young woman who for three years had lived in sin: "When she came to us, she had a most PROUD AND VAIN SPIRIT.

She was rather troublesome in the Home at times, having fits of temper and self-will, but at last the Lord conquered. Ellen has been in the same situation a little over a year, and has never given the slightest cause for anxiety since leaving the Home. In reply to a letter in which Mrs. Bramwell Booth's photograph was enclosed, she says: 'Thank you very much for dear Mrs. Bramwell's photograph. I feel more determined than ever this new year to do more and more what is right and well-pleasing to my blessed Master.' She also sent two shillings to buy oranges for the lassies in the Home at Christmas-time, and said she would have sent more but her father had been ill for five weeks, and therefore she had sent home as much as possible; which is a strong proof to us of the change the Lord has wrought in her soul, as her parents appeared utterly to neglect her when living in sin and disgrace."

From Glasgow, Captain Adeline Lampard writes:—"One of the latest troubles in our Home is that of a woman who had been for years a slave to drink and smoking, and who had resisted every effort made by friends to reclaim her. When she first came to us, she seemed so stupid and ignorant that it looked next to impossible that the light could ever penetrate either head or heart; but now she is completely transformed. With a beaming face, she testifies to the power and grace of God in saving such a poor hardened sinner as she. She told us, one day, that though the desire for drink was gone, she couldn't help sometimes longing for the pipe. The desire for it disturbed her dreams, and at times she would wake and find herself enjoying an imaginary whiff! She is now, however, trusting Christ to save her even from this desire."

Mrs. Bramwell Booth has the direction of this important work. In an introductory letter she writes:—"As for us, praise God, our choice is irrevocably made, whether amidst the enrapturing encouragements which these pages detail, or amidst the greatest perplexities, weariness, and trials that can ever come—we shall go on to do whatever we can to help every poor creature within our reach. What the future may bring to us of toil and sorrow we know not, but we are determined that our footsteps shall never turn aside to any path of self-seeking, or our hearts waver in trusting God and loving his banished ones." The report seems to breathe this devoted spirit throughout.

LONDON MEDICAL MISSION.

It is gratifying to read in the eighteenth report of this Mission that the whole-hearted efforts of the workers are still being attended with great blessing to the poor. The agencies are numerous, and in vigorous operation. The sick are attended and the naked clothed; the young are taught and made happy. In fact, all possible is done on every hand to commend the Gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. The kind of work which the Mission does in St. Giles and Seven Dials, may be judged from the following extracts from the report:—

"Down in a dark, dismal cellar, scarcely penetrated by the light of day, a family is found in the most abject poverty; a few sticks for furniture, and the only bed consisting of boards, with a few rags spread over them; no fire, and scarcely any food, the only breakfast for the ragged and emaciated children being bread and carrots! Parents are pale and sad, listening in agony to the cries of the famishing children. Our special fund enables us to assist in cases such as these, where the trouble is due solely to the father being out of work.

"In another house, in a wretched bed—the only article of furniture left in the room—lies a poor woman in advanced consumption. She has no food, except the weekly loaf supplied by the parish, and her husband is in the hospital. The only means of assuaging the racking thirst is found to be a piece of lemon peel picked up by one of her children. How grateful a poor creature like this is for medical treatment, beef-tea, and some clothing. Sometimes the doctor's hand is grasped, and the order for the much-needed nourishment seized as a starving dog would snatch a bone, and the exclamation is heard: 'Oh! and what would we do but for the Mission?'

"In another room is seen an old saint, who tells us that for eighteen years she has trusted the Saviour, and that He has never failed her. This is bright testimony amid the most wretched surroundings. She goes on to say: 'My husband and I prayed all the morning for a shilling to make up our rent. We said we would go out for a walk, and come back again and ask Him to send it to us; and, just as we got outside the door, Tom put his foot on the very shilling we wanted. Oh! doctor, the Lord does answer prayer.'"

The work affords glorious opportunities of bringing people face to face with the Word of God. The number of visits to the sick at their homes and attendances at the dispensary average from 24,000 to 25,000 a year, representing about 4,000 individuals. During the past few months, sickness and distress have been unusually prevalent, owing to the influenza epidemic; the attendance at the Dispensary during January and February numbered 4269, and 1904 visits were paid by physicians to the sick in their own homes; while the grace of the Great Physician has gone alongside efforts to alleviate suffering and weakness. The new Invalid Kitchen has proved a great blessing, saving patients from the temptation of resorting to the public-house while waiting their turn to see the doctor.

The development and progress of the Mission is a study full of interest. Dr. Latchford is the medical superintendent, and communications should be addressed to the secretary of the Mission, 47, Endell-street, St. Giles, W.C.

UXBRIDGE.—An earnest address on "The Perils of our Young People" was delivered last week in the Friends' Meeting House, Uxbridge, by Rev. G. Snashall, of Victoria Park Tabernacle. He dwelt strongly on the evil effects of corrupt literature.

WATCHING FOR HIS COMING.

Luke xxi. 34, 36.

Signs in heaven and earth betoken,
On the sea, and in the air,
That the day, so long bespoken,
Cometh, sudden "as a snare."

Flood and famine, sure forerunners,
Earthquakes, pestilence, and fear,
"Nations in distress," and terrors,
Show the end is drawing near.

In the morning watch, it may be,
Or at noontide, or at night,
When the world is wrapt in slumber,
There may burst a sudden light.

Like a lightning-flash, revealing
Wondrous things to mortal sight;
While the thunder, trumpet-pealing,
Heralds Christ in glorious might!

Can it be that we shall see Him
Coming thus in yonder skies?
And, with awe and wonder, hear Him
Calling all his own to rise?

Shall we blush to stand before Him
With our life-race all un-run?
Only "hay and stubble," show Him,
For the "building" we have done!

Can we still be idly dreaming
While the golden moments fly?
Drifting, with our listless seeming,
When the end is drawing nigh?

Should we not be always watching,
Blending prayer with service sweet,
That we "stand" at his appearing
Clad in armour "all complete"?

Let us, then, be "up and doing,"
With our heart, and hands, and feet,
That, thus "watching" and "pursuing,"
We may glad his coming greet.

MISSIONARY PRAYER-MEETINGS.

[The following letter mentions China only, but why not carry out the suggestion for Africa, India, and all the world?—Ed.]

Dear Sir,—I shall be glad if you can find space for a question regarding prayer-meetings for China. Would it not be possible, by a little careful arrangement, to establish weekly prayer-meetings in the majority of Christian churches, in every city and town in Great Britain and Ireland? Could not such meetings be made at once interesting and a means of awakening a deeper interest in the work of God in this land? Could not the parents and friends of the missionaries read, or allow to be read, extracts from the letters they have received? If one thousand missionaries in China were each represented by such a prayer-meeting, what a mighty agency would be set in motion!

Would it not be possible for a monthly letter to be sent from such a meeting to the missionaries whose letters are read, asking for such information as would make the meetings reliable sources of missionary information—fires whose glow and warmth would help to thaw the icy indifference which encrusts too many professing Christians? A "God bless you!" shot from the hearts of a score of warm-hearted Christians carries a long distance! We are far from being discouraged—yea, our hearts are full of hope—yet we remember the Word says, "Peter continued knocking." We are no stronger than Paul—yea, many of us are much weaker—yet he especially asked for the prayers of his brethren; yea, his "Finally" was "brethren, pray for us, that the Word of the Lord may run and be glorified, even as also it is with you" (2 Thess. iii. 1).—Your fellow-labourer in the Gospel, Thomas Eyres.

C.I.M., Ning-Kueh Fu, S. An Huei, Jan. 13.

OPEN-AIR PREACHERS.

The goodwill of the pastor and office-bearers of the Regent-square Presbyterian Church towards the open-air preachers of the Metropolis found expression on Wednesday evening last week. The preachers were entertained to tea; and thereafter Rev. John McNeill gave a short address. He found a text suitable to the occasion in Judges iii. 31: "Shamgar slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox-goad; and he also delivered Israel."

You men of London, said Mr. McNeill, busily engaged at your daily toil, see godlessness, drunkenness, and tides of evil coming in like a flood, and you exclaim, "This cannot go on." You leave your ploughing and take to preaching. You feel you must do it; you cannot help yourselves. But, if I may, let me say: "Stick to the ox-goad, rough and unpolished as it is." Without training you cannot use weapons of precision. The one indispensable thing is to be under God's guidance. This is to follow in the footsteps of Samson and David. I hope you will not be tempted to set out in search of foes to fight while they are standing thick round about you. Think of the needs of the people before you. No one can say how much good is being done in London by a thousand witnesses for Christ proclaiming the good news in streets, lanes, and popular places.

Mr. McNeill has introduced a temperance pledge-book to his congregation. It was opened for the first time at the preceding Wednesday evening service and received fifty-two signatures, and he cordially invited those present to record their convictions by signing his book.

In the course of the meeting a letter of good tidings was read from Mr. G. Kirkham, the secretary of the Open-Air Mission, who is now travelling in the East.

LADS IN CLAPHAM.

Dear Sir,—Short of a large and necessarily expensive Institute, much of our Master's work among lads may be done by one or two willing workers in their own homes. Struck by the large number of respectable lads wandering about the streets in this neighbourhood on Sunday mornings, I had printed and circulated by the members of my two adult Bible-classes a hearty homely invitation to those between the ages of twelve and eighteen, who had left Sunday-school, and did not attend any place of worship, to a meeting of their own on Sunday morning, and a social evening on Wednesday, the latter comprising games of skill, illustrated papers, &c., both held at my own house.

On the first Sunday morning eighteen responded. Now we have 170 names on our books, and an attendance of over a hundred on Sunday; on Wednesdays seventy to eighty. We have also a Free Lending Library, enthusiastically enjoyed by ninety members. Better than all, we have scarcely had a Sunday without lads staying behind voluntarily to give their hearts to Christ, and, on Wednesday night, thirty young Christians leave their games to join in prayer in an upper room.

Of course one's furniture suffers, and expense is incurred in printing handbills, small prizes for regular attendance, &c., all of which I have hitherto borne myself. But the reward is rich indeed, especially among the most wayward and wild, to whom the "home" feeling and loving personal influence seem greatly blessed. The work is quite undenominational, the meetings being addressed by various Christian gentlemen.

Though at present a complete invalid myself, I always endeavour to be among my dear boys. I should be glad to send particulars to anyone led to the same work.—Yours faithfully in Christ, (Miss) Edith Spicer-Jay.

Willow Dene, King's-road, Clapham Park.

CENTRAL AFRICAN NOTES.

Despatches from Major Wissmann to the German Government have been published, giving details of his military operations, in the first week of the year, against an Arab chief named Heri, who had occupied a strong position in the first range of mountains back from the coast. It is significantly related that the weapons in the hands of the slave-dealer's men were breech-loaders, and the despatch tells of stringent measures adopted to stop their import. We naturally ask, who manufactured them? and who sold them in Zanzibar? It is nearly certain they were manufactured in England or Belgium, and it is certain they passed through European hands in Zanzibar. The measures must be stringent indeed which will counteract the unscrupulous selfishness of manufacturers and traders. It appears that the British Consul co-operates heartily with Major Wissmann, and has ordered a search of the dealers' houses; the German Consul, he says, "has been requested to aid him." This looks like a hint to Prince Bismarck to send out firm orders; let us hope that both the European powers holding paramount influence in what has been so long a sink of iniquity will act vigorously in this matter.

It is, of course, satisfactory that if such things have to be done, the charge of them should be in the hands of one who has long ago proved himself so true a friend of the African natives, and we trust that the unintelligent cry of waging war on the helpless natives will not be raised against Major Wissmann. It is not the natives; but their atrociously wicked oppressors, whom he is fighting with. Still it is very rough work, and the sooner it gives place to the introduction of peaceful trade the better. The contrast is a striking one between the noise and fire of this warfare and the quiet policy pursued in the adjoining British territory by means of caravans wisely planned, ably manned, and carrying only legitimate articles of traffic. The same German despatches tell of proposed work in the way of supplying seeds to the traders and engaging to buy the produce; and we are thankful to see the Germans thus taking a leaf from the book of their British neighbours.

The latest telegrams we have seen speak of Wissmann sending to resist the same chief Heri at a point near Saadani last week, so that the victory in the first week of January cannot have been so thorough as it seemed at the time. We ear that men are only beginning to learn, as Africa gets opened up, how tremendous and persistent is the slave-dealing force in the interior, and how inextricably that force is linked with the greed of Europeans outside. The hopeful thing is that the tide of public opinion on the side of God and righteousness is rising; but there is need for every effort and for unceasing prayer to sustain and extend it.

DAILY PRAYER UNION.—A friend has forwarded to Rev. H. Law Harkness, St. Swithin's, Worcester, £500 towards the endowment fund of the missioner of the Daily Prayer Union. During the last three months of 1889 Rev. P. Norton, missioner of the Union, travelled 3000 miles for the Society, and held missions in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

THE KOLAR MISSION.—Miss Anstey writes:—"The gold mines in our neighbourhood are pronounced to be in a flourishing condition. Bowring Pettah, eleven miles from Kolar town, formerly an insignificant village, is rapidly becoming a large and prosperous place. I went over there last week to make arrangements for Gospel work. A very suitable building, in the best part of the town, was offered at £75 or £80; in a few months the land alone will be worth the money. I hope the owner will not be tempted to sell to anyone before the money is paid, and the deed of purchase registered. The three Christian villages, Bethany, Nazareth, and Elim, are now being worked by independent farmers; those families which have not been set up with bullocks, &c., maintain themselves as wood-cutters. The Lord has been very gracious to these rescued famine orphans, most of whom now have nice families of their own."

American Notes.

The church in Boston over which Dr. A. J. Gordon presides has celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his pastorate. It was an occasion of great interest, and many Christians of the city came to offer congratulations. Knowing their pastor's repugnance to any exhibition not spiritually profitable, the meeting was characteristic of his ministry. The young people greatly gratified him by presenting him with a purse of one thousand dollars for his Missionary Institute. They knew their pastor would receive no personal gifts, while funds were needed to train men and women for the foreign field.

Following close upon the anniversary came the annual missionary "breakfast." This with us is an entirely new feature. We wish to copy the good things of England. Dr. Gordon's church is the first to adopt this method of reviving and keeping alive the missionary spirit. Three years ago the "breakfast" was first introduced; this therefore was the third experiment of the kind. The day appointed is the birthday of George Washington; it being kept as a holiday the business men could attend. Dr. H. Grattan Guinness was present with other invited speakers. The guests paid a breakfast fee which left a margin over for mission work.

"Revision" is the great religious question of the hour, especially among Presbyterians. Since the decision of the New York Presbytery for revision of the Westminster Confession by a small majority, most of the Presbyteries in their respective gatherings are expressing sympathy with the New York revisionists. Several prominent pastors and theological professors express themselves in a very radical manner.

Our good friend Joseph Cook opened his Boston lectureship most auspiciously. The crowds are great as ever, and this modern defender of the faith is giving sturdy blows to the enemies of evangelical Christianity. We heard him declaim with terrible earnestness against the theory that it is safe for a man to die in his sins. It was good to hear the old-fashioned doctrine of the need of repentance urged upon the people. Mr. Cook also showed the fallacy of the reformer's scheme for a millennium founded on socialism and organised societies.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN (Great Ormond-street, W.C.), has 127 beds, and an extensive out-patient department. There is a pressing need of special wards for certain urgent cases, which have hitherto been unavoidably excluded. It will, it is hoped, soon be possible to enlarge and complete the building, and thus to provide additional accommodation, which is required, alike for the nursing staff and the little patients. Since 1880, no few than 130,000 cases have been treated at the Hospital.

PORT SAID.—Started about a year ago by Commander Carey-Brenton, the Sailors' Rest at Port Said has now been put on a working basis. It is under the management of Mr. Locke, whose wife is one with him in work for the Lord. A committee has been formed of Christian officers of the Royal Navy, with Mr. Taylor, agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society, as secretary. Sailors and others will find the Rest a Christian Home. It has already been blessed to the conversion of souls to God. Commander King-Hall, of H.M.S. Melita, writes:—"I know of no place that requires a Rest more. The town abounds with temptations and vice of every kind. I believe much good will yet be done at Port Said." The Rest wants friends, and the sooner they declare themselves the better will the work be enabled to proceed. Mr. Eoll continues his devoted efforts on behalf of the foreign sailors of the town, and is often encouraged by seeing good fruit of his testimony.

Mr. Moody in New York.

LENT has brought a rare treat to the religious people of New York and Brooklyn in the interesting series of Bible addresses given by Mr. Moody. Meetings, as many as five in a day, have been held, the congregations being limited only by the capacity of the church buildings in which they gathered. And the old-time scenes were recalled, as he swayed the great audience at will, now provoking a smile, and a moment later causing the tears to start. Four meetings in the Collegiate Church at Fifth-avenue and Twenty-ninth-street, had been planned, and, to prevent a crush, tickets were issued for each meeting. Before the opening service on Tuesday of last week, every ticket for the four meetings had been distributed, and there were several hundred applicants still unanswered.

To provide for these and for others who might desire to hear him, Mr. Moody agreed to hold a second service in another church an hour later than the first. Dr. Charles L. Thompson, of the Madison-avenue Presbyterian Church, offered the use of his church, and two meetings were held there which filled this great edifice the second largest Protestant church building in this city, it is said. In addition to these services, one held at 10.30 a.m. and the other at 11.30 a.m., Mr. Moody spoke every day at 4 p.m. in Greenpoint, and twice more in the evening at Brooklyn churches. So great was the interest evinced in the meetings last week that services for four days this week in each of the two New York churches were provided for, and the Marcy-avenue Baptist Church, of Brooklyn, was selected for one of the evening meetings.

Mr. Moody's belief in the power of Christian song is well known, and he is particularly fortunate in the selections of his associates. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stebbins have been assisted by a chorus, and also by the ladies from the quartet of the Central Congregational Church of Brooklyn. At one service Miss Cavannah sang the solo, "Not Ashamed of Christ," and Miss Beebe, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins gave several duets during the week. While the audiences were composed largely of ladies, there were many clergymen and laymen present. On Wednesday Dr. William M. Taylor, and Dr. Lyman Abbott were in the pupit. Both offered prayer at Mr. Moody's request. Tuesday and Wednesday were given to a discussion of "The Gift of the Holy Spirit for Service," and on Thursday and Friday Mr. Moody spoke on "The Bible: How to Study it, and How to Use it."

Mr. Moody studies the Bible now one Book at a time: again he takes up a character or type as Joseph, and finds out all that is said about him from Genesis to Revelation. Again he takes his concordance, and studies the doctrines of the Scripture. Some people are afraid of the words "conversion," and "revivals"; he is not. He believes in both terms, and in the fact that a man may know he is saved. It is a sin to live in Doubting Castle. Take any of the doctrines, as the atonement, justification, sanctification, holiness, faith, hope, the resurrection, humility, and study it carefully, and see how doubts flee. He commended very highly the diligent daily use of a concordance, and with it Major Whittle's "Scriptural Bible Readings."

STREATHAM.—The friends at Lewin-road Baptist Church, Streatham-common (Rev. J. Pearce Clark, pastor), have erected a new hall, adjoining the church, for the Sunday-school and for lectures. It was recently opened, and must prove a very helpful adjunct to the work of the church.

A Waif and Stray.

BY T. J. BARNARDO, F.R.C.S.E.

POOR TOM MATTHEWS lived on and by the streets, following the familiar but overcrowded employment of selling matches, or sometimes flowers, but more often cigar-lights and evening papers. He had had a hard life of it ever since his mother deserted him, two years before, and left him, poor youngster, alone in the world. And yet it was not much material help that she had ever devoted to his upbringing, for not very long prior to his desertion they were both in the workhouse. She took her discharge, and for awhile continued to hawk odds and ends about the country, but eventually took up with some tramp, and the pair thereupon turned the boy adrift as a profitless encumbrance. This occurred at Colchester. Tom turned his face toward London, and stoutly tramped up thither to begin a street life which lasted for a little over two years. He formed the acquaintance of a woman who sold flowers at Islington, and who conceived quite a motherly affection for the homeless and friendless lad. Yet she herself was merely the inmate of a common lodging-house. She did her little best for Tom, however. Occasionally she gave him pence and scraps of food, in return for which he carried her basket for her to and from the market in the early morning, or he would make himself useful at other times and in other ways.

But one day he had what he would describe as a turn of ill-luck. Running after a tramcar to sell lights to the passengers on the top, he missed his footing, slipped, and fell on the roadway, and, before he could recover himself, his hand and arm were run over by a light trap. The bones of the hand were injured. He went to the hospital, but was discharged. Where could he go to? His wage-earning power was for the time being almost nil, and yet his only home was the lodging-house, and his only friend the poor flower-seller. Yet she did not desert him. But for her kindness the boy must have starved. As it was, he found it a matter of very great difficulty to pick up a living upon the streets. At last he accosted me one day as I passed through a crowded thoroughfare, and my attention was attracted by his wounded hand. In conversation, his pathetic little story came out. Though he looked half starved, his face was by no means unattractive. His clothes were in rags, but he had recently been given a pair of boots that were fairly sound.

We walked down the street together, and I found that the boy was as much a heathen as if he had been born and lived in Africa, far away from the sound of the Gospel. He knew absolutely nothing of the most elementary facts of Christianity. During the short time he and his mother had been in the workhouse, he had for the first time heard something about religion, but he certainly had not understood what he heard there, and he now retained his knowledge only in a confused, distorted condition. He did not know his alphabet. It is curious how boys of his class escape the School Board. As the late Sir Charles Reed said years ago, these "waifs" are nobody's children. They live on nobody's land, they pass over the boundary of civilisation, eluding, in one way or another, all ordinary efforts to catch them, and it is principally by institutions such as ours that this class of boys is being constantly sought out, rescued, and saved, for God and for the community.

I examined poor Tom's hand, and was glad to find that the injury he had received would doubtless result in a good recovery, and that no permanent loss of power to the hand would ensue. "How would you like to enter a Home like mine?" I inquired, and I received an eager affirmative. I had thereupon to volunteer some serious information. No, he would not be "allowed his liberty," if that meant that he could run out in the streets whenever he chose. He would have to remain steadily in the Homes and learn to read and write, and gradually gain the confidence of those in charge by his good behaviour. According to his improvement in conduct and attainments, he would be allowed more "liberty," and afterwards he might be placed out in service in Canada. If he liked, he might come to me the next day.

But poor Tom had had enough of wretchedness, enough of starvation, enough of the common lodging-house kitchen, enough of the cold, miserable streets, enough of friendlessness and homelessness. He saw the fair vision which my words had conjured up, and, fearing lest it might vanish for ever if he lost sight of me, he begged to be allowed to follow me there and then, nothing daunted by the conditions I had laid down. Of course, I assented, but said that he must think over the matter, as we never allowed a boy to come right into the Home without giving him an opportunity to change his mind if he thought fit. I therefore decided to allow him to lodge for two or three days in the Receiving House, during which time he could determine upon his course.

Thus the bargain was struck. Tom found first a temporary and very soon a permanent place in the swarm of busy youngsters who fill every cranny of the Homes. Some might call them, as they come to us, "refuse material"; but, in the Homes, the blessed chemistry of love turns them all into use for the service of mankind, as upright and honourable citizens, who will one day, by God's help, repay us and our country a thousandfold for all the labour and toil we have bestowed upon them. Tom's record for usefulness lies in the future; but I am persuaded that that record will yet be written in characters which will tell of honourable achievement and a successful career.—Night and Day for March.

ARMY AND NAVY PRAYER UNION.—DEAR SIR,—Allow me to remind the officers who were at the prayer-meeting and conference at the Cannon-street Hotel, on Saturday, 8th inst., that this conference will be resumed, as then agreed, at the office of the Army Scripture Readers' Society, 4, Trafalgar-square, on Saturday, 29th inst., at 3.15 p.m. It is hoped that all who can will attend.—Yours very truly, W. J. EVERED POOLE.

SCOTTISH EVANGELISTIC ASSOCIATION.—About thirty general missions were held last year under the auspices of this undenominational agency. On all hands ministers of the Gospel united in encouraging the workers. The following sentences are from the annual report:—"Only a few days ago a correspondent in the Ross of Mull gave us the pathetic news that there was only one pulpit now occupied within a radius of thirty miles. Loud calls have come from Tiree and neighbouring islands; one minister has been evangelising there twenty weeks out of the possible fifty-two in order to overtake some of the work. This has been done at the expense of time which would otherwise have been devoted to ministering to his own flock. The committee hope to secure the services of a Gaelic-speaking evangelist for work entirely in those parts for a few months." The office of the Association is 5, St. Andrew-square, Edinburgh.

MAJOR WHITTLE AT GREENWICH.

The campaign here was resumed on Sunday, March 9, in St. Mark's Presbyterian Church, when fully 1500 children crowded pews and passages at 3 o'clock. An overflow meeting of some 200 or 300 was held in the schoolroom. By a few chemical illustrations the preacher enforced some very essential truths, and the interest evinced was great. At 8.15 some 1100 adults filled the church, when a very searching address was given and many seemed impressed.

The Stratford Male Choir paid another visit on Monday evening which was much appreciated, and one of them told a thrilling tale of his own experiences of the grace of God. Throughout the week the audiences have been very large and many have been impressed. The after-meeting has divided itself into two, one specially designed for young women in the schoolroom, and one for young men in the gallery, at both of which many have professed to have found the Lord.

The names and addresses of a large number of anxious ones have been taken, and these will be followed up after the mission is over. One week more brings it to a close. The final meetings will be held in the Wesleyan Church, and the Bible-readings in Greenwich-road Congregational Church. George Elder.

A MISSIONARY LIBRARY.

The committee of the Missionary Bureau desire to establish for the use of candidates a missionary library. All knowledge is power, and next to a firm grasp of the great truths of God's Word no knowledge is more helpful to a young missionary than that derived from a careful study of missionary literature. When the Lord of the harvest lays upon the heart of his own chosen ones the desire to enter the field, He generally causes them at the same time to think specially of some particular country.

The aim of the Missionary Bureau is to guide candidates into that sphere of service, in whatever land it may be, to which they feel the Lord is calling them. That such candidates should have easy access to a collection of books descriptive of missionary work in all lands would be in very many instances a boon and a blessing indeed. The following facts may serve to illustrate the extent of the value such a library might prove in connection with the Missionary Bureau.

During the past ten weeks of the present year applications have been received from ninety-seven candidates. Seven of these are ministers of the Gospel. After the seemingly hopeless cases have been eliminated by very careful investigation into the merits of each, the Committee have good reason for believing that a very large majority of these applicants have been divinely called to fill one sphere of usefulness or another in some part of the great mission field. Some are fit for immediate service, others only after a period of preparatory reading. Very hopefully, therefore, is this appeal sent forth to all publishers of missionary literature, to committees of missionary societies, and to ladies and gentlemen interested in foreign missions, requesting them to co-operate heartily with the Committee in making the proposed library such as will give a powerful impetus to many a young life called to serve God in heathen lands. Donations of books, or towards the purchase of books, should be addressed, "The Missionary Bureau, 186, Aldersgate-street, London, E.C."

THE RAILWAY MISSION. — A ten days' mission has just been conducted by Mr. R. Nixon, secretary of the Railway Mission, at Doncaster, where about 3000 men are employed in the Great Northern Railway Works. Several addresses were delivered at the Works during meal hours. The men listened with rapt attention to the Gospel, and, after the first meeting, asked that they might be continued. A number of interesting conversions took place during the mission. Very successful missions have also been held lately at Ashford, the centre of the South Eastern Railway Works, by Miss Noyes, of Eastbourne; and at Yeovil, on the London and South Western Railway, by Mrs. Skipton, of Ealing. In both places there was manifest blessing, and the regular work has received a great stimulus.

REV. R. BALGARNIE AT HAMMERSMITH.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of our friends at West-end Chapel, Hammersmith, I desire to record, to the glory of our Triune God, the great blessing He has given us in the mission we have been holding this week under the direction of Rev. R. Balgarnie.

There had been a good spirit of prayer, especially in private, before our brother came, but God has done exceeding abundant above anything we dared ask or think. A large company of workers gathered on Saturday evening to welcome our friend, and then God's Spirit was poured out, and we knew He was going to bless.

The joy of ingathering began on the Sunday afternoon, when forty-four of our young friends passed into the inquiry-room, and came back to confess a Saviour received; since then every service has been fruitful in personal surrender to the Lord Jesus.

Though all this has come as a glad surprise, it is, in fact, the fruit of much and long sowing, and of a greatly increased spirituality in the church; but all the glory belongs and is given to the Redeemer.

Brother Balgarnie has won all our hearts, and we lovingly commend him to the Lord, whom he so well serves.

WESTBOURNE GROVE Y.M.C.A.

The fourth annual meeting of this Association was held last week at the Paddington Baths Hall, Queen's-road. Mr. J. D. Allcroft presided.

In the place of Rev. Henry Dening, Rev. Webb-Peploe delivered the opening address. Mr. Webb-Peploe, taking as his text the word "Christian," as applied in the name of the Association, set forth an urgent claim for the strictly evangelical basis of the work. He insisted on the uncompromising acceptance of the doctrine of the atonement, of imputed righteousness, and of justification by faith; and made a vigorous attack upon what was termed "liberal Christianity," especially upon the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God, the theory of evolution, and other tenets of modern thought, which he condemned in strong terms, and at considerable length.

Mr. W. H. Mills spoke in feeling terms of the value of the Association in Great Britain, as bringing the power of evangelical Christianity into active force, and restoring many young men to lives of usefulness and consecration.

Mr. Walter Wild (secretary) read an abstract of the annual report, which showed a full record of work in the nature of Bible-classes, prayer-meetings, conferences, and other regular social gatherings of a religious character, together with much personal effort, including correspondence with emigrants and other absent members, &c.

The Chairman remarked upon the value of religious resources for the young men engaged in the large business houses of the neighbourhood. Mr. F. C. J. Millar, Q.C., Dr. A. T. Schofield, and Rev. Filmer Sulivan also spoke.

SHANGHAI SEAMEN'S MISSION.—With the new year, coffee, dining, and additional bed-rooms were opened in connection with this Mission. Now our bluejackets on leave and others can get all their wants met without having to patronise the public-houses or restaurants of doubtful character. It is hoped this will greatly enhance the usefulness of the Mission, which is entirely unsectarian, and where helpers of all denominations are pleased to join in proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Gifts of sound attractive literature in any language will be thankfully received for the reading-room, which is frequented by seamen of all nations. Also grants of anti-infidel and clear Gospel tracts, &c. Miss Bessie Fowles is in sole charge of the work; many of the sailors look up to her as their spiritual mother and true friend. Will your readers pray that, with a larger field, the Mission may prove a great blessing to our sailors.

STUDIES IN THE SPIRITUAL LIFE.*

It is rarely that we have the pleasure of calling attention to such a thoughtful and useful work on the life of faith as the one now before us, from the pen of Rev. John Baird, of Edinburgh. The author knows his Bible and human nature as well. He neither exalts the natural nor degrades the spiritual; but in lucid language and to practical purpose he defines and describes the life which is life indeed. Mr. Baird admirably maintains that "What God calls us to in the Gospel is fellowship with his Son. Living at a lower level than that of Divine communion, is living below our possibilities and our powers."

As to how this may be, he writes: "The will of the Christian is effective for good only as it is under the influence of the Divine Spirit. The holiness of the regenerate is thus no inviolable or inalienable possession; but is conditional upon the retention and operation of the Spirit in his graciousness, fulness, and power. The believer without the Spirit is a Samson shorn of his locks." Again, "The Spirit of God in us is the effectual spiritualising power, and it is as He dwells and works in our hearts that our efforts towards emancipation from evil are crowned with success. Love to Jesus Christ is the great sin-extinguishing passion. It burns sin out of the soul in which it is kindled. He that loves Christ, not merely will not, but cannot, love sin."

Mr. Baird is no complacent "perfectionist." He well says: "The process of grace in our hearts is a process of transformation, which we may greatly aid or seriously retard. Indwelling sin is cured in so far as we are transformed, and no further. But let it be clearly understood what the curability of indwelling sin means. It does not mean freedom from temptation. It has pleased God that we work out our salvation under conditions of conflict. The battle will go on till life ends. The experience of rebellion, however, carries no guilt with it, provided it be resisted, and never allowed to come to conquest. The great matter for us is not to be free from conflict, but to be triumphing in it." Hence the author shows that "Holiness is not a separate grace, but the sum and union of all graces. It needs all the primary colours to produce pure white, and it needs all the graces to produce true holiness." "Communion with our Lord, the only pathway to holiness, was the great truth with the publication of which his three years' ministry terminated. We grow in enlightenment of mind, obedience of will, sanctification of heart, in freedom from evil, in superiority to the earthly, and in conformity to the heavenly, as we live in full fellowship with the glorified Christ."

Eminently experimental, our author explains: "Sanctification is, in its practical aspect, not a matter of faith, but the receiving of the necessary grace is. We may trust Christ to the fullest extent, but our trust will not of itself sanctify. Trust puts us in possession of the blessing we require, but the actual going forward in the path of God rests with ourselves. As we strive to be holy, God makes us holy." As to 1 John i. 7, he writes: "The blood of Christ does not keep us clean, but it makes us clean—for the word cleanseth implies that there is something to be made clean, and that it makes us clean now."

"Perfection as a motive" is an attractive section of this very helpful book. Mr. Baird asks: "If to the end of life our sanctification is to be attended with a measure of incompleteness, is not the great motive to its pursuit taken away?" In his answer, he says: "By no means; there is an element of selfishness in seeking sanctification for perfection's sake. We are to seek it for Christ's sake, irrespective of the degree of success with which our efforts are rewarded. Since perfection has its legitimate place as an inspiring ambition in art, in medicine, and other departments of science and thought, even though there is the consciousness it will never be reached, so it has its place in religion, as our Lord enjoins, 'Be ye perfect.' The attainment or non-attainment of it are questions with which the true artist, for example, never troubles himself; what he does is to do his best; and the devoted Christian, remembering the words of his Lord, contemplates entire sanctification as his goal, dismissing as an unprofitable perplexity the question raised by some, and recognising that, however it be settled, whether it be attainable in this life or the next, present duty abides the same."

Isabella Macpherson:

The Story of a Devoted Life.*

By her Brother, Rev. JOHN MACPHERSON, Dundee.

CHAPTER XV.—LAST DAYS.

For twenty-seven years our worker had laboured with unwearied industry and consuming zeal. Her share in the work of reclaiming those waste places was unique. To her was given, in the conversion of Helen Sharp, the woman who "cam' to Christ, drink an' a'," to lay the first stone in the building. From the same quarry it was hers to lay many another stone upon the rising walls. Her example of heroic faith and self-sacrificing love inspired others. She always led the forlorn hope.

When the Infant Mission was all but destroyed by dissension within and hostility without, she bravely stood in the breach, and solemnly vowed that the work should not thus end. Joined in her noble stand by two or three like-minded souls, she saved the stranded vessel from total wreck. There was no part of the work, material or spiritual, to which she did not lend an efficient hand. There is no wall, or window, or door, or pew, in church or hall, which did not owe something to her prompt and strenuous effort. It was her joy, at length, to see a large and flourishing congregation gathered: the original nucleus of the one converted sinner growing to a church of five hundred communicants, with a staff of sixteen elders and deacons; four Sabbath-schools, with sixty teachers and seven hundred scholars; an elder's Bible-class, attended by three hundred young men; bands of visitors; tract distributors; street preachers, and other workers—a goodly "monumental host" led by a devoted pastor, whose powerful ministry has been crowned with continuous success through twenty laborious years. To her it was given also to see the sons of the Mission Church, who always revered Isabella as a true alma mater, going forth to the help of the Lord against the mighty; some, after the usual college curriculum, becoming pastors of churches, others as accredited evangelists occupying important spheres at home and in foreign countries.

A PALACE BEAUTIFUL.

In this work others laboured long, Isabella longer than any. Others laboured nobly; with Paul she might have said: "I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." Others gave much to the work, she more: she gave herself, her life, her all. But for her prayers and tears, her courage and patience, her magnanimity and love, it may be doubted whether this vigorous church, now pouring a flood of blessing on many a cheerless court and many a benighted home, should this day exist. It is the monument of a gentle woman's consecrated life. In reclaiming the moral waste she was recognised by her fellowmen, first and foremost, the chosen instrument of God. She found a bog: she left it a field of yellow corn. When she went in, it was a den of lions; when she came out it was a fold of sheep. From the mire of the slums God gave her to rear a Palace Beautiful. The Palace Beautiful was first reared in her own soul, and the grace that made the worker also wrought the work.

For several years her health had been giving way. She was frequently laid aside by severe illness, and often rose from her bed in much weakness at the call of household duty or her loved work of winning souls. During her last two years life was a burden, work a battle. Many a time she paused at the bottom of long stairs and prayed for strength to ascend. Frequently brought to a standstill, sheer weakness compelled her to lean against the wall, as the light faded from her eyes, and her heart almost ceased to beat. When strength utterly failed her, she was wont to betake herself for a little rest to the house of a Christian woman in the district, where in fellowship she would pour out her heart in prayer with much weeping for the perishing, and then resume her work. Sleepless nights, days of prostrations, seasons of acute pain or deep depression, became her familiar experience; but she refused to succumb, and bravely held on her way. Her growing weakness seemed to shut her in the more to the Source of all strength; her sufferings served to purify her zeal; her weariness caused her to long for home. "It is well with those who have got through with it all," she would say. To the older saints she sometimes cheerily remarked, "I think I will get home before you yet."

"FAINT, YET PURSUING."

"My work is done," she said to a fellow-worker at the opening of the new Mission Halls, for the erection of which she had made a supreme and successful effort. This last labour, extending over many months of her last year of her life, involved almost incredible self-denial; for she was dying all the time, and she knew it. But her great natural strength of will, heightened and sustained by Divine grace, carried her on. At the opening service her heart overflowed with joy and gratitude to God, while also voices seemed to whisper that her work was finished and her warfare accomplished. So it was. Henceforth she went out and in as one who had received notice to appear in the presence of the King. Though to her, during the last months of life, work meant martyrdom, she pressed forward, "faint, yet pursuing." In perfect truth she could say—

If I were told that I must die to-morrow,
That the next sun
Which sinks should bear me past all fear and sorrow—
For any one,
All the fight fought, all the short journey through,
What should I do?

I do not think that I should shrink or falter,
But just go on,
Doing my work; nor change, nor seek to alter
Aught that is gone;
But use, and move, and love, and smile, and pray
For one more day.

In the month of April, 1888, feeble though she was, and suffering from disease of the liver with complications, she conducted a week of prayer. Those weeks of prayer had been

SEASONS OF EXTRAORDINARY POWER.

Often the Holy Ghost fell upon the assembled women. Again and again the entire assembly were filled with a sense of the Divine Majesty; the glory of the Lord seemed to shine around them; the souls of all were flooded with joy in the Holy Ghost, so that sometimes they could not sing for weeping. Those who were present say that the meetings marked a very notable epoch in their lives. They thus reached an elevation of holy communion far above ordinary altitudes—the effects of which remain in blessed memories; in purified characters; in power for service; in deadness to the world. This was her last week of prayer, her last great effort for God and souls. The meeting was composed of Christian young women whom she was training in the Lord's work. On each night there was a special subject of intercession: for themselves; for the congregation: for the office-bearers and members; for the young men and young women's Bible-classes; for the work; for the evangelists, missionaries, and ministers of the congregation, at home and abroad—for every interest.

Her manner and tone assumed a more than wonted solemnity and tenderness; as if the light of a near eternity were breaking in upon her. Her prayers, her words of counsel, her every movement seemed to glow with the fire of a holy love. Heaven was near, the Lord was there. At times the silence, broken only by the sound of weeping, was so awful, that they were afraid to look up lest they should see a visible presence too glorious for human eyes to look upon. She narrated to them an experience of which she had never before spoken. It was the story of her battle with the world, the devil, and self, some twenty-one years before. She described the tempting offers, the glory of the world with its vain parade; and how, after a long season of conflict, she one night obtained a glorious deliverance. The Lord came to her and showed her his own glory and the mansions of the blessed. The world's glory then faded from her view, and she became so enrapt with those bright disclosures, that she begged the Lord to take her home. The beauty of holiness so fascinated her soul that she could not brook the thought of returning to the world: she shuddered at the possibility of the slightest stain of sin, the faintest breath of evil; and she cried to the Lord,

"LET ME DIE! LET ME DIE!"

But this was not his will; her mansion was not yet ready, she must tarry a little while. "Here I am still," she said; "for twenty-one years I have been waiting for his coming and my going home." Such was the sense of God's presence, and the power of her testimony as she stood, with her wonted gentle dignity, in the midst of her young sisters, and exclaimed, "Let me die! let me die!" the entire company broke down and burst into loud weeping. The longing for perfect holiness seized those tender hearts; the dread of sin found expression in groans and sobs; they would rather die than sin, and they desired to depart and be with the Lord. To hear those young Christians speak of that night, as they do with singular calmness and a tender solemnity, is deeply impressive. "It will be to us," they say, "a memory to all eternity."

On another night the Holy Spirit again fell upon them in such power, that when they began to sing:

Repeat the story o'er and o'er
Of grace so full and free;
I love to hear it more and more
Since grace has rescued me;
The half was never told, the half was never told,
Of grace Divine, so wonderful, the half was never told, they broke down with a joyous weeping and were unable to proceed. Such and so real is the presence of God in seasons of blessed, rapt communion. This experience, this vision of the glorified Lord on the mount gives way to other scenes and other experiences; but a blessed effect remains—a calmness, a steadfast walking with God, a power in prayer, a joy in service, a heavenly purity, a dread of sin, a passion for souls, and a vivid sense of eternal realities, which contact with earth and earthly things is not able to impair. Fill the Church of Christ with men and women familiar with such experience of high fellowship with the Holy One, and the world will soon be ringing throughout with the "good tidings of great joy."

CONVERSAZIONE IN WHITECHAPEL.—Last week a well-attended conversazione was held in the Working Lads' Institute, Whitechapel, when Mr. H. J. Wilson, M.P., presided. The hon. secretary, Mr. H. Hill, described the objects of the Institute, which include the physical and mental training and recreation of lads who are toiling during the day for a small wage. They were aided by the boys to the best of their ability, and that their efforts were appreciated was shown by the fact that lads who had experienced the benefits of the establishment frequently return to give their services, and some had started similar associations elsewhere. They had been instrumental in obtaining a public playground at the back of their building. Unfortunately they were in debt to the extent of £4800, and £300 was urgently required to meet current expenses. Among the items of the entertainment was a gymnastic display of a very high order of merit.

Rev. JAMES LA TROBE,

Senior Bishop of the Moravian Church.

WE this week give the portrait of one who has long been a prominent figure in the Church of the United Brethren, better known as the Moravians.

James La Trobe is descended from a noble Huguenot family. At the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, Jean La Trobe, a refugee from Languedoc, left all "for the sake of the religion." What more fitting than that in the next generation the descendants of those who had thus suffered for the faith in France should be directed by Providence to the Church of the United Brethren, whose ancestors had endured similar persecutions from 1457 to 1622 in Bohemia and Moravia? This Church has now for nearly a century and a half numbered among its staunch adherents and faithful servants members of the La Trobe family, distinguished for their zeal in its missionary activities.

Among the Moravian missionaries who preceded Carey in India, was James Gottlieb La Trobe, who, however, returned invalided to England in 1786. He afterwards became minister at Tytherton in Wiltshire, where his youngest son James, the subject of this sketch, was born, on September 7, 1802. Space forbids our lingering on his happy childhood, shadowed by the early death of his pious mother, or his privileged youth in Fulneck School, which he entered at the age of six. When his prescribed educational course drew to its close, and it became necessary for him to choose his calling in life, James La Trobe had lost his early impressions of a Saviour's love. He returned to his father's house undecided in mind, but leaning more to the pleasures of sin for a season than to the service of Christ for ever. He has often reverted with sorrow to this period of life when a father's prayers, and tears, and holy example were the cords of God's restraining grace, which at last prevailed to lead him back to the Good Shepherd's fold. Then his early manhood was devoted to the service of the Redeemer and the Church in which he had been born and brought up. Gladly returning to Fulneck, the young man resumed his studies. Christ became increasingly precious to him, and soon his longing to tell others what a dear Saviour he had found sought opportunity and scope in that ministry to which, in the Moravian Church, a young man is first appointed—the mental, moral, and spiritual training of the children in her schools. And, rightly viewed and exercised, it is an excellent preparation for subsequent ministry on a wider scale. His six years' service in the boys' school at Mirfield commenced in 1821, and two years later he began to preach the Word of Christ crucified and risen. This Gospel he has never ceased to declare in its breadth and fulness with acceptance, power, and blessed results.

Early in 1827 he was appointed assistant minister at Gracehill, in the north of Ireland; and since then he has had the successive charge of seven Moravian congregations—

(From a Photograph by Mr. W. W. Winter, Derby.)

Ayr, London, Mirfield in Yorkshire, Bath, Bristol, Bedford, and Ockbrook, near Derby. In each of these the Lord used him to win souls, to revive and deepen the Christian life of the members, and to build up the church of living stones; and to this day he vouchsafes to his aged servant, now living in retirement in Bristol, fresh and cheering manifestations of the fact that many spiritual children were given him as the seals of his faithful ministry and pastorate.

He has twice been married; his first happy union was cut short after one brief year, at the birth of his first-born son in 1830. Three years later he married again, and last Christmastide had the sorrow of losing the dearly beloved partner of nearly fifty-seven years. This union was blessed with seven children, of whom two have been ordained by their father to the ministry in the Moravian Church. About seven years ago, children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren celebrated with their honoured parents the anniversary of their golden wedding.

Early in 1863, Mr. La Trobe was consecrated Episcopus Fratrum, having been elected to that honoured office by the votes of his brethren. He is now the oldest Bishop of the whole Unity. The Provincial Synod held in June of that year also elected him into the Board of Elders, and he served in that capacity until 1874, when advancing age obliged him to resign its arduous duties. It was during this period of office that a singular link of Providence enlisted his sympathies on behalf of the lepers at Jerusalem. In 1865 Baron Keffenbrinck Ascheraden and his noble lady visited the Holy Land. Their hearts were moved by the misery of the lepers, and they founded an asylum for them near the Jaffa Gate. Previous Moravian work for lepers led to their appealing for Bishop La Trobe's help; and he has ever since rendered very substantial assistance to the growing work. It is impossible within the limits of this sketch to pursue the story in its details, or to relate the many providential interpositions on behalf of a cause which God has greatly blessed. From the first, the Moravian Church has supplied the missionaries and nurses. For seventeen years Mr. Tappe and his self-sacrificing wife worked in spite of great discouragements. They have been succeeded in the superintendence by Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Müller. The Home passing into the hands of the Directing Board of the Moravian Church, a new and more suitable building was erected in a more healthy situation. The facts are full of interest, and may be read in the Bishop's pamphlet, "Work Among Lepers." After relating the touching story of three leper girls, who all died happily in the Lord, Bishop La Trobe says:—"If there were no other fruit of this labour of love than the cheerful lives and happy deaths of these young women, the reward would be ample. But these are only a few of our patients who have returned to embrace the feet of their Saviour, and to glorify God in songs of deliverance. We might tell of many dying lepers whose sore pains of body, lovingly soothed by their self-denying teachers and nurses, have been blessed to lead them to the crucified One, as a Saviour in time of trouble."

For some time negotiations have been pending with a view to obtain from the Turkish Government legal recognition of the proprietary rights of the Moravian Church in the Leper Home at Jerusalem. On receipt of the good tidings that these efforts had been crowned with success, the venerable Bishop La Trobe recently wrote:—"Most heartily do I rejoice in the concession by the Turkish Government of our rights of proprietorship. As I look back from this unexpected summit, gained by faith and patience and prayer, I am astonished to see how the Lord has advanced this work, step by step, to stability and permanence. Surely my work, which the Lord gave me in my old age and prolonged years, is accomplished, the iniquity of holy things pardoned, and I may say, 'Now, Lord, lettest Thou thy servant depart in peace.' Yet, Lord, till then let thy work be my delight, to labour, and pray, and praise, as I can, and specially to pray for the peace of Jerusalem (and its Leper Home), and wait till the Lord shall build Zion, and appear in his glory."

A year or two ago the treasurership for the Leper Home was assumed by Dr. W. V. Drury, Lingmoor, Dean Park, Bournemouth, with whom is associated Rev. B. La Trobe, son of the Bishop, and Secretary for the Moravian Missions, 29, Ely-place, London, E.C.

Bishop La Trobe's pen has ever been busy in the service of his Master, and especially in Christian correspondence, for which he has a remarkable gift. Hundreds of letters of counsel, consolation, or cheer, in his singularly beautiful handwriting, are cherished by those who have thus received strength, comfort, or guidance through his instrumentality. He has not published much, though he has been a faithful contributor to the magazines of his Church. In 1871, at the urgent and repeated request of friends, he consented to the publication of a course of Lent Lectures on a series of petitions in the Moravian Church Litany, entitled the "Merits of Christ."

We trust that the last days of this highly esteemed worker in the Lord's vineyard will be full of peace, and that, as the end draws near, his experience will be joyous and sweet; that with the glory of Christ in view his path will shine "more and more, unto the perfect day."

EARLSWOOD ASYLUM.—At the Hotel Métropole last week the forty-third anniversary festival of the supporters of the Asylum was held. Mr. Alfred L. Cohen (chairman) said the Asylum was an institution drawing its inmates from every part of the Empire, and staffed by teachers who were miracles of patience, and combined gentleness with firmness. It was a remarkable fact that 20 per cent. of the patients left the institution, and were earning their own living. Occupation was one of the chief means for the development of the diseased intellects of the patients. Earlswood was, indeed, a school of remarkable and rare excellence. The physically weak became strong, the idle became useful, the unclean became orderly and moral, and the religious tone of the brutish became elevated and exalted. He stated that the income fell off last year by £4000, and the institution was in debt to that amount to its bankers. Subscriptions, &c., to the amount of £6536 were announced in the course of the evening, including an anonymous donation of £1000.

"Lux Mundi."

Though united on questions of ritual, the High Church party is seriously divided on matters of faith. This is plainly shown by the reception accorded to the volume of essays entitled "Lux Mundi," edited by Rev. Charles Gore, Principal of Pusey House, Oxford, and recently published by Mr. J. Murray. Written by a number of Oxford scholars, the essays profess "to present positively the central ideas and principles of religion in the light of contemporary thought and current problems." According to our reading of the volume, some of the writers seem to be earnestly bent upon yielding the honour of "Light of the World" to that knowledge, real and false, which has been accumulated by scientific inquiry and speculation. Patristic lore and philosophical opinion are, by the ritualistic essayists, invoked to the aid of a vague dogmatism and superstitious sacramentarianism, combined in a system intended to draw into the net of "The Church" such thinkers as now remain outside, and regard Christianity as a whole with something akin to contempt.

Allied with this dogmatism is a vain glorification of "The Church" and an unblushing degradation of Holy Writ. The tone and temper of the most characteristic of the essays may be inferred from the following sentences from one by Mr. Gore himself:—

The belief in the Holy Scriptures as inspired requires to be held in context by the belief in the general action of the Holy Spirit upon the Christian society and the individual soul. It is, we may perhaps say, becoming more and more difficult to believe in the Bible without believing in the Church...How irrational it is, considering the intimate links by which the New Testament canon is bound up with the historic Church, not to accept the mind of the Church, especially when we have its consent, down independent lines of tradition, as interpreting the mind of the Apostolic writers.

The Christian creed asserts the reality of certain historical facts. To these facts, in the Church's name, we claim assent: but we do so on grounds which, so far, are quite independent of the inspiration of the evangelic records....We cannot make any exact claim upon anyone's belief in regard to inspiration, simply because we have no authoritative definition to bring to bear upon him. Those of us who believe most in the inspiration of the Church will see a Divine Providence in this absence of dogma, because we shall perceive that only now is the state of knowledge such as admits of the question being legitimately raised.

And so on. It is "The Church," "The Catholic Church," that men must be right with. And, by declaring that what are known as the deductions of science about evolution and other theories may be held without disloyalty to the Christian faith, the essayists think they do much to "succour a distressed faith!" The work certainly is one that makes heavy drafts upon the credulity of those whose mental capacity it has obviously been written to flatter. Bidding as it does for Modern Thought patronage to a new High Churchism, it is likely to be much heard of for some time in ecclesiastical if not in scientific circles.

London Barmaids.

These servants of the drinking public have for years found a true friend in Miss C. M. Gough, of Morley Rooms, John-street, Bedford-row. In addition to her many other services, she is now seeking with the friendly aid of influential Christian ladies, to ameliorate the very hard conditions under which barmaids work. As the outcome of a recent conference, a Bill is being prepared for submission to the Legislature, and, if it should pass into an Act of Parliament, it will do much to make their lot more endurable. The provisions of the bill will be in the direction of shortening the hours of work, and remedying sanitary defects in their lodging accommodation. There is a crying need for reform in both these respects. A representative of The Daily Telegraph, who interviewed Miss Gough, gives some particulars from which we may quote:—

Some railway-buffet barmaids begin work at seven a.m., and continue till eight p.m., with an interval of two hours' rest from eleven a.m. to one p.m. The girls go to bed at eight until midnight, when they are called and remain on duty until four or five a.m. It is the same toil on Sundays, with the exception that two hours are allowed off. Another set of girls work from nine a.m. to midnight, with one hour for rest and half an hour for dinner. They are paid 5s. a week, with board and lodging, subject to a charge of 7d. to 9d. per week. Whilst the bars are closed on Sundays the girls on duty have to remain prisoners, and are actually locked in the bars to prevent them from going out of doors in the intervals of church-time. The railway contractors are not all alike in their treatment of their barmaids, and the hours vary considerably, but twelve to fourteen hours' work a day appears to be the average task which is set.

At one station they are not allowed to sit at all, and quarters are provided for twenty persons in an eleven-roomed house. It is stated that at one station the girls sleep under the underground bar, and their only lavatory accommodation is the use of the public waiting-room. At another station the bedroom is at the back of the bar, with a door opening upon the platform. In this small apartment, which serves also as sitting-room, eight girls are housed. Over their heads are the tanks which hold the spirits vended in the bar, and the girls' privacy is seriously interfered with when it becomes necessary to refill these tanks. At a certain restaurant the proximity of the sleeping quarters of the girls to the other parts of the establishment is commented upon as highly dangerous in a moral aspect.

As for the wages, their 8s. to 10s. a week is reduced by the cost of washing and breakage, say 1s. 6d., so that the recipients get not more than 7s. to 7s. 6d. net. The girls are no better off at hotels, it is said, and an instance is given of one establishment at which a barmaid is expected to be on duty from 9 a.m. till 1 a.m. the next morning, with only half an hour in which to dress. There is here no Sunday work, but the employés are compelled to go out at 10 a.m., and cannot gain re-admittance until 12 midnight, and, if they arrive home before, they are obliged to walk up and down the streets until the door is opened to them. At other bars the girls work fifteen and a half hours a day, with one hour off. One proprietor allows his servants ten minutes only for dinner. Such examples might be repeated indefinitely.

We trust that at no distant date public opinion will demand that no woman shall be permitted to serve in a public drinking bar. Meantime we must not pretend that we have abolished slavery till the conditions under which barmaids work are made such as will enable them to lead a rational existence.

NOON PRAYER-MEETING, ALDERSGATE-STREET.—Mr. Reginald Radcliffe was announced to speak at this meeting on Thursday, 20th instant. On Monday next Dr. Barnardo will be present with a band of boy emigrants soon to proceed to Canada.

COWCADDENS, GLASGOW.

THE ORIGIN OF THE WORK.

The centre of the northern evangelistic work is in Cowcaddens Free Church. On every side there is a dense population, a very large portion of which came from the lower parts of the city when the "Improvement Scheme" made it necessary to remove the people. The district is well garrisoned with agencies of a destructive kind, there being no fewer than four theatres, and twenty-two public-houses in the vicinity.

Upwards of twenty years ago the Free Tron Church began a mission in the locality. Rev. Gabriel Kerr, at first as missionary and afterwards as minister, laboured anxiously and earnestly for the spiritual welfare of the people. It is to his forethought and largeness of heart that the choice of site and present extensive buildings, so admirably suited for aggressive Christian work, are due. The original buildings and recent extensions cost upwards of £13,000, of which Mr. Kerr, his devoted wife, and his friends gave and collected £7200, though he did not live to see the fruit of his labours, nor his ideal fulfilled.

During Mr. Moody's last visit, he made the church his headquarters for the northern district of Glasgow, and on Sabbath evenings when the church was crowded Mr. Kerr was busy in the passages, and was heard to exclaim once and again:

"THIS IS GLORIOUS!

This is what I waited for, and I have seen it at last." During the vacancy, the congregation suffered much. Rev. Professor Lindsay and Professor Drummond, however, came to the rescue, and supplied the pulpit for nearly twelve months, and the United Evangelistic Association carried on the aggressive work under the superintendence of Major A. S. D. Colquhoun. This gave all parties time to consider what ought to be done, and how to set about it. Professor Lindsay, having thrown himself heartily into the work, was of opinion that there was a rare opening for a capable minister doing a great work on new lines. The possibilities were certainly there; the difficulty was, Who could be got to face them, and, under God, convert possibilities into realities? In Rothesay, one of the most beautiful and healthful of Clyde watering-places, there was a small congregation in the Chapelhill, whose minister was known to be an earnest temperance advocate, an untiring and active evangelist as well as a scholar and man of business. On one occasion (1881) in the train between Edinburgh and Glasgow, the compartment was filled with ministers returning from church business in the capital. The conversation turned upon evangelistic work, its conditions, limitations, and results, and the Rothesay minister was asked to give his opinion on the question. He replied substantially as follows:—

(1) The old Gospel is quite sufficient. There is no need of a new one.

(2) The work ought to be done by the church, and in the church building; and when done the results should be gathered into the church.

(3) The work must be as continuous as the destructive agencies from which the people are to be saved are constant—it must be carried on every night.

(4) The workers must have the Bible in one hand and the temperance pledge-book in the other.

(5) The work must be both territorial (from house to house), and public (open-air service), as well as inside the buildings; and it must be catholic.

(6) And lastly, there must be a body of workers, stayed, devoted, and prayerful, to support the minister and do the work. It is by the living membership of the church through the word and Spirit that the dead and uninterested are to be made alive and nurtured.

One of those present said, "Ah! man, you must come to Glasgow and do it. Then you will find it is not so easy." He replied, "The results are certain as God is true; but Glasgow is not for me, I don't think I could live in it. Indeed I have prayed the Lord for fourteen years, that my lot may not be cast in it. But besides I am a Gaelic preacher, and my first duty is to my own people." Within fifteen months thereafter from Cowcaddens was given to this same minister—Rev. William Ross.

He was now face to face with his own ideal of Christian work, and, as Moses fled before the live rod, he shrank from it. He had to consider various things. (1) Giving up a Gaelic charge which was dear to him. (2) Parting with a comfortable income to engage in work with no guarantee but the equal dividend. (3) To go to a congregation weakened in numbers and burdened with debt. On the other hand there was a field for work as real as China or Africa, and there was no competition for occupying it, and so he at once and manfully said, "Yes, I'll go." He began the work in the Cowcaddens on Sabbath October 21, 1883, and under his superintendence the church has been open and the work carried on 2317 nights in succession, without intermission. To our inquiries he replies that they have been "very rarely a single night all that time without some soul professing surrender to Christ." The attendance on Sabbath evenings varies from 900 to 1200, and the aggregate attendance during the week will be fully as many. There is a staff of workers of about 460, in the various departments which imply upwards of fifty services and meetings a week in four different centres of operation.

THE METHODS ADOPTED.

Knowing that in this series of papers THE CHRISTIAN wished to show what plans or methods were most successful, we asked Mr. Ross kindly to tell us something on that subject. He said, "We have only one fixed thing, and that is our purpose 'by all means to save some.' All else is free—free as the circumstances, persons, and places demand." "Yes," we replied, "but you surely have some general line of action?" "Oh, yes, for example, waiting on God in prayer first, then we have open-air singing and speaking for half an hour every week night and three quarters of an hour on Sabbath night. Our inside meeting is in the body of the church building, upon principle. We always have a second meeting, we give the pledge to all who desire it, we converse about personal salvation with every one as we have opportunity. We have had the ready and devoted help of the most spiritual ministers and laymen whom we could get, and a small body of soul winners were ready for service. We have frequent testimony meetings, a Bible-study on Tuesday evenings, evangelistic meetings Sabbath, Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday (Mizpah Band), Wednesday and Saturday being also Gospel temperance." "Have you any means of training or developing the young Christian life?" "Yes! we have our Christian Progress Society, which meets every Thursday evening, specially for the study of the Word, and for prayer and testimony. After being two months in the society members are advised to JOIN SOME CHURCH.

They are allowed to choose for themselves. Those who do not wish to go elsewhere are invited to our own communicants' class, and thereafter, if approved, are admitted to the fellowship of the church, whence many of them pass into our body of workers. The whole organisation is worked on spiritual as opposed to secular lines. We aim at spiritual results: believing that the harvest is according to the nature of the seed sown. He that soweth to the Spirit shall reap of the Spirit. There is no other mystery, nor peculiar method in the work."

"Will you give me your experience in regard to special prayer?" "Our experience is remarkable, as showing the faithfulness of God and the truth of his Word.

IN ANSWER TO PRAYER

we received our senior missionary, and the money for his salary from 'three disciples'; also our second missionary, and nearly the half of his salary, from 'a dear friend.' In answer to prayer we received our medical missionary, Dr. A. Muir Smith, who has done one of the noblest things I know of—given his services free, and provided medicine free for upwards of 11,500 of the poorest of the poor, these last three years. In the same way one of our district missions has been provided for. In answer to prayer £6014 of debt and expenses of new buildings have been paid, and when we were in great straits with our ordinary work in the outlying districts, and £100 must be provided by a certain day, the money came to a day from a most unexpected quarter in the Southern States of America. We can only say 'Ebenezer: hitherto the Lord hath helped us.' 'Trust ye in the Lord for ever, for in the Lord Jehovah have I righteousness and strength.' In spiritual things we could tell more wonderful things still. We have also to say that friends to whom we have made known the needs of the work have proved sympathetic and generous. Our annual requirements are £363 for the central, and £253 for the out-stations; none of this goes to the congregational fund, but the congregation give us for this aggressive work about £120 annually, and the great body of them are, so far as this world goes, the poorest of the poor."

"What do you consider to be the results of these six years labour on the lines you mention? might any congregation do the same?"

"We believe that any congregation of live, prayerful Christians, under the superintendence of their minister, can be the instruments in God's hand in doing it. The poorest can do it, and become rich in grace, gifts, and capacity for work, as well as in the results. 'Seek first the kingdom and all other things shall be added unto you.' That is the Divine order. No other is needed, and no other will succeed. We have had the privilege of giving the pledge, and having personal conversation regarding salvation with over 12,000 persons, 11,500 have received free advice and medicine through Dr. Smith. There are 460 workers, 92 office-bearers (deacons' court); 1723 have been received into fellowship, many are in other lands, but 1200 still remain to testify to the grace of God that bringeth salvation. Do not mistake me. There are several other churches in Glasgow doing the same work on their own lines, and with like results. What God wants is men and women filled with his Spirit, consecrated to his work, seeking the honour of his Christ; and as his word is true, they cannot fail. He that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal."

We thanked Mr. Ross for his candour and courtesy. He is a man fully six feet in height, of open frank countenance, self-possessed, calm, and kindly, and with unswerving faith in this kind of work. He seems to carry a breeze with him wherever he comes. He is fond of music, and makes abundant use of it. His workers seem to be all animated with the spirit of Christ. That this work may increasingly grow and prosper is, I know, your desire, and that of the numerous readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

SAILORS' ORPHAN SOCIETY.—Mr. R. H. Hunter, of the Glasgow Seamen's Friend Society, has received from a Scotch shipowner in London the sum of £500 towards the Endowment Fund of the Sailors' Orphan Society. The trustees aim at raising a capital fund of £100,000, the interest from which will, it is expected, with annual gifts, provide for all the orphan children of seamen and fishermen throughout Scotland. Communications to Mr. Hunter may be addressed, 2, Park-circus, Glasgow.

RITUALISM.

"The whole system of Ritualism is one of church instead of Christ—priest instead of Gospel—concealment of truth instead of manifestation of truth—ignorant superstition instead of enlightened faith—bondage wherein we are promised liberty—all tending to load us with whatever is odious in the worst meaning of priestcraft, in the place of the free, affectionate, enlarging, elevating, and cheerful liberty of a child of God."—Bishop McIlvaine.

INFLUENCE OF PARENTAL PIETY.

In a certain village there were 98 settled families having children over ten years of age. In 27 of them, both parents were pious. In these 27 families there were 125 children over ten years old; 84, or about two-thirds of these children, were pious. In 19 of the 28 families only one of the parents—the mother with a single exception—was pious. Of the 95 children they contained, 31—one-third—were pious. In the remaining 52 families neither parent was pious. Of their 139 children, only 13—not one-tenth—were pious. These facts, the fruit of careful investigation, strikingly illustrate the immense power of parental influence for good or ill. Piety in both parent won two-thirds of their little ones to Christ; in one parent, one-third; where no piety existed, only one-tenth (and they were saved by the Sunday-school) were lovers of God.

FIGHTING MORMONISM.—In one of his Boston Monday Preludes, Rev. Joseph Cook dealt very trenchantly with the Mormon question. Quoting some startling revelations as to Mormon methods of propagation, he said: "It is most credibly asserted by the closest students of Mormonism, at Salt Lake City, that more than 600 murders (of which legal evidence could be produced, if it were worth anything before the Mormon courts) have been committed within ten years for religious reasons upon persons endeavouring to leave the circle of Mormon tyranny." He (Mr. Cook) states that, though the "Gentile" element in a recent election has obtained the civil control of Salt Lake City, the territory of Utah is still overwhelmingly Mormon. The United States must ordain the universal disfranchisement of the polygamists.

FRIENDLESS GIRLS OF BRIGHTON.—For the last sixteen years a steady work has been done, under the auspices of the Brighton Ladies' Association for the Care of Friendless Girls. The object is twofold—prevention, and rescue. The first end is sought by efforts to provide suitable places for girls leaving day schools; the second by helping those who have made one false step to retrieve their position, as well as by opening a door of hope to such as have gone further in a life of sin. The work is carried on by means of the East Brighton Free Registry and Training Home, 103, Edward-street, and refuges for rescue cases. During the last few years a start in life has been given to hundreds of girls who, but for the helping hand held out at the right moment, would not at present have been useful members of the community. Miss Ellice Hopkins, and other well-known ladies, are on the committee, which is at the present time sadly in need of Christian sympathy and support in carrying on the work. Communications may be addressed to the hon. sec., Miss Mary Jeaffreson, 22, Bloomsbury-place, Brighton.

Letters to the Editor.

"APOSTOLIC WARFARE."

Dear Sir,—In reply to Mr. Railton's contention that he had no wish to "charge with unbelief any evangelical minister," and that even I must see this it is enough to state that in no part of the chapter from which I gave the sample quotation is there any recognition whatever of the evangelical character of the churches of the present day. All the evangelical savour is with the Army, and the churches are treated as alike devoid of power and faith. Any candid reader of the report in question will bear me out in this. Hence the quotation I gave is followed by another equally sweeping and unjust: "Where are the preachers who stand up believing that upon the acceptance or rejection of their message depends the eternal happiness or misery of their hearers?" No suggestion is given that there are multitudes of preachers that do this, both ministers and evangelists, or, indeed, that there is any evangelical minister at all. This charge, like the one already quoted and refuted by me, is allowed broadcast application. Our very existence as evangelical teachers is denied, and yet Mr. Railton does not intend, he tells us, to charge any evangelical minister with unbelief. He well may make that concession after assuming the whole race to be extinct.

Coming now to the second main issue, I fail to see wherein our brother's array of texts and references serves his purpose as proofs in support of the Salvation Army system of government. For one thing, he has not yet shown anything analagous in Apostolic times to "General" Booth's position. Mr. Railton speaks in his report of "universal subjection to one will and one rule," meaning the will and rule of "General" Booth. But we do not find any such headship among the Apostles. It is strictly Papal, and has no Apostolic warrant. Peter had Apostolic authority, but he never had, and never laid claim to, autocratic rule. The like applies to Paul and others. The position of the head of the Army is clearly ultra-Apostolic.

Nor does it serve as proof to instance, in the bulk, the Old Testament Scriptures. No doubt we do get the autocratic there, but Christ Himself expressly disclaimed any such position, so far as his followers are concerned, in the New Dispensation He brought in. He reserved for Himself the autocratic place. And the reason is manifest. Aaron and Moses were types of Christ, and, therefore, to base autocracy on Old Testament grounds is to invade Christ's prerogative. Is it too much to ask that the Salvation Army head retire from Christ's seat?

But I think further that "General" Booth should withdraw from the Apostolic chair. Mr. Railton seems to think that because Paul legislated, therefore all their military organisation is justified. This reasoning has no force. No Christian doubts that "Paul was an Apostle by the commandment of God our Father," and that he was divinely inspired to legislate for the Church. But where is the living man of whom the same can in justice be said? Paul we know, and Peter we know, but modern apostles we know not.

The grand question to be considered is, What is the will of Christ? What is the course of Apostolic action? Is a military despotism that which Christ and his Apostles have instituted? For an answer we need not go beyond the passages Mr. Railton has himself cited. Thus Timothy, appointed an elder by Paul, is bidden "to ordain elders in every city," even as himself had been appointed. He does it; so does Titus, and such, I may add, holds to-day. Elders or presbyters are still ordained, as in Apostolic times, by those of the same rank. The Apostles' instructions we respect. Can the Salvation Army say the same? How can they? They have no elders at all, or presbyters, or pastors. The Apostolic appointments of bishops and deacons they ignore. Instead, they have general and chief-of-staff, majors and commissioners, captains and lieutenants. And their plea for all this, as given by Mr. Railton, is this: "I have never heard, in connection with an army, of any authority more absolute than that which Paul evidently exercised over all ranks of his comrades." Even granting that, Paul's authority is such as no man living is entitled to. He was an inspired medium of Divine communication; he had seen the Lord; he was an Apostle "neither of man nor by men."

Are we to concede to Mr. Booth or any of his subordinates this place? God forbid. Let the Christian minister exercise his pastoral authority, by all means. The Apostles have fully allowed for that. But let the rank and file remember that they are Christ's freedmen; that one is their Master, even Christ; that they are not machines, to be drilled or despatched at the ipse dixit of any individual, but have to serve as unto Him to whom alone an account at last must be given. Let them, in offering themselves, offer themselves willingly to the Church militant, the true army of the Lord in every age.—Yours faithfully,

Jas. Douglas.

ROME AND MARIOLATRY.

Dear Sir,—I read with some amazement the quotation you gave us in your "Notes and Comments" of March 7, from Lord Archibald Douglas's pamphlet, entitled "A Voice of one Crying in the Desert," in which he declares that "the Roman Catholic Church upholds the Bible in its entirety" and "hates" priestcraft and Mariolatry.

May I commend to the notice of your readers a four-page leaflet "most respectfully addressed to all sincere Roman Catholics," entitled "Which is right—the Church of Rome or the Word of God?" published by the Irish Church Mission, 12, D'Olier-street, Dublin. All can then judge for themselves the truth or otherwise of Lord Archibald's assertion.

Here are two extracts from "The Glories of Mary," a work heartily commended by Cardinal Manning, and stamped by Papal infallibility:—

"Oh, Lady in Heaven, we have but one advocate, and that is thyself."

"Thou, O Mother of God, art omnipotent to save sinners."

In view not only of the blasphemies poured forth by the Church of Rome on this subject, but also of the increasing tendency in the Church of England to an idolatrous exaltation of the Virgin, it would be well if this tract were more widely circulated.—Yours very faithfully,

Frank H. White.

PAIGNTON, SOUTH DEVON.

Mr. J. Crofton Rainey writes:—God has been cheering the hearts and strengthening the hands of his faithful ones here during the past week. A mission for the young has been held at the Baptist Chapel, conducted by the superintendents, Sunday-school teachers, and friends of the various Sunday-schools of the town. We all laboured heartily together for the Lord, and He wrought with us. The meetings were well sustained, and many of the young people went into the inquiry-rooms and came out on the Lord's side. The mission is to be continued a second week.

On Wednesday evening we had a deeply interesting service at the Gerston Hall, when ten adults witnessed their union with Christ in believers' baptism. Though the congregation thronged the hall, the presence of the Lord among us kept all in a hushed and reverent attitude, and we have heard of several whose consciences were awakened, and who were much impressed by what they heard and witnessed.

Our congregations grow too large for our hall. We cannot enlarge outwards, so we meditate literally "raising the roof," in order to build a gallery across one end. The help of friends will be welcomed.

Might I ask prayer for an eight days' mission at the hall in the village of Stanton Drew, near Bristol? We commence on Sunday, 23rd instant, God willing.

MISSIONARY ENTHUSIASM. — Were our christian endeavour simply inspired by holy enthusiasm and directed by consecrated enterprise, more would be accomplished within the next quarter century than during the past thousand years toward the pervading of the world with the Gospel. In this matter the Church is doing nothing worthy of herself, her Master, or the cause of missions. Satan himself puts us to blush by the promptness and eagerness with which he pours his agents into every open door. His pre-occupation often prevents our occupation of the field, or seriously and effectually delays all our missionary operations. "It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing." Oh, for some potent influence from above to make God's people zealous to push the occupation of a world for Christ, and to do it in our own generation!—Dr. A. T. Pierson.

Obituary.

CANON BUTLER.

We announce with regret the death of Rev. George Butler, D.D., Canon of Winchester. He was the eldest son of the late Rev. G. Butler, Head Master of Harrow, and Dean of Peterborough, and was thus brother of the present Master of Trinity. Canon Butler, who was born in 1819, and educated at Harrow, and Trinity, Oxford, was formerly Vice-Principal of Cheltenham College, and Principal of Liverpool College. In 1882 he was appointed to the Canonry at Winchester, which he had since held. Dr. Butler was the author of several school books and other works. He had for some time been in a weak state of health, and latterly resided in the south of Italy.

We are sure that our readers will remember in prayer his devoted wife, Mrs. Josephine Butler, who is, we learn, much broken down by her sad bereavement.

In the course of a sermon upon Cross-bearing, preached in Winchester Cathedral on Sunday last, Rev. R. T. Marshall, Minor Canon, referred to Canon Butler in the following terms:—

I cannot conclude without referring to one who was but lately a senior member of the Cathedral body, and has only within the last few hours passed to his rest.

George Butler was an instance of one who took up the cross of pain and bore it cheerfully and well. After a distinguished career at Oxford, and a period of useful and varied activity in the educational world, he settled down at Winchester to spend his remaining days in well-earned peace and retirement. But God willed that the former blessing should not be his, for a wasting and wearying sickness came upon him, and none but his family and a few intimate friends know how uncomplainingly he bore his pain for a space of nearly two years. Hardly a murmur ever escaped his lips; he felt that it was God's will that he should suffer, and he submitted with a cheerful resignation. Indeed, unfailing cheerfulness and geniality were the prominent features of his character.

He loved not the stir and glare of public life, preferring the quiet pursuit of art in his own home. But he never refused to listen to a tale of distress, and his large-hearted sympathy would not permit any sufferer to go away uncomforted and unbefriended.

His gratitude, too, for the least service or kindness was very striking—the mark of a generous and noble nature. These qualities were the outcome of a simple faith and piety, shining through the bright envelope of the courteous, considerate man.

The beautiful and touching lines of our aged Poet Laureate, written only last year, might well have been spoken by our departed friend before setting out on his last journey home:—

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving, seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening fell,
And after that the dark;
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For though from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far;
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

M. MORIN DE MAISABRIER.

Protestantism has sustained another sad loss in France, by the death of Baron Morin de Maisabrier, at the age of 75. He was president of the Central Council of the Reformed Churches of France, and a firm friend of Christian and philanthropic effort. The Baron was a descendant of a well-known Huguenot family.

SIR PETER COATS.

We regret to have to record the decease of this well-known Paisley manufacturer, whose large benefactions to Christian and philanthropic enterprise are matter of common knowledge. He had for some time retired from active business life, and died at Algiers, where he was spending the winter. In an early issue we hope to give a portrait, and sketch of the life, of the deceased.

MR. W. E. SHIPTON.

The death of this well-known worker among young men removes another of the links between the present and the early days of the Y.M.C.A. As secretary of the Association in Aldersgate-street, for the long period of thirty years, Mr. Shipton had a leading hand in moulding the course of the institution in its most plastic stages. He was very warm in his devotion to the interests of young men, and his strong personality was thrown into the scale on their behalf. He retired from active work in 1879, and since then has done good service to the Association in various ways. He died on Tuesday, last week, and on Friday was interred in Highgate Cemetery, in the presence of a large company of sorrowing relatives and friends. In an early number we hope to give his portrait and sketch of his career as Association secretary.

DR. SOLOMON SCHILLER-SZINESSY.

This well-known Oriental scholar, Reader in Rabbinic and Talmudic literature in the University of Cambridge, died a few days ago, aged sixty-nine. A native of Hungary, he was for some time Rabbi of the United Congregation of Jews at Manchester. As a Rabbinist, his knowledge was enormous, and his diligence in the work of cataloguing the Hebrew manuscripts in the University library—on which he was engaged a number of years—most exemplary. He held to the last to the "traditions of the ancients," but was highly esteemed by Christian scholars who were privileged to enjoy his acquaintance. So greatly did he love his Hebrew Bible as a youth, that he knew the whole of it before he was ten years old. The prophet Isaiah was ever his favourite portion, and he studied it critically at various times under Jews and Christians of various schools. A few years ago, he published a remarkable pamphlet expounding chap. liii. with the concluding verses of the preceding chapter. He regarded "The Servant of the Lord" there spoken of as the people of Israel, as represented by the pious in his midst, culminating in the Messiah. He made substantial concessions to Christian exegesis; indeed, he justified it in its essential features. He even invoked the blessing of God upon the religion which he did not himself profess, saying "May Christianity yet bring many thousands and millions of men to Christian worship, to the worship of the God first recognised and taught by Israel to mankind."

Appeals.

The Tramps' Labour Shelter of the Church Army is in need of old coats, so as to enable these poor fellows to make a fresh start in life. It is often possible if they can be made to look nice to secure for them a permanent situation. Every effort is made to lead them to a full decision for Christ. C.A. Captain Swanson will be thankful for parcels of old clothes suitable for men. They should be addressed to him at 130, Edgware-road, London, W.

Union Tabernacle, Wandsworth-road, S.W.—A growing work is being carried on in this needy district. The people who are converted and gathered in as worshippers and workers are chiefly engaged in the various railways and gasworks round the district. The people have hitherto almost supported the work themselves; but, on account of prevailing sickness and other causes, our funds have got very low. Further information will be gladly given by Pastor D. M. Cameron, 515, Wandsworth-road, S.W.

Soldiers in the Isle of Wight.—Special prayer is asked on behalf of a proposed effort to establish a Soldiers' Institute at Freshwater, Isle of Wight, near the headquarters, Golden Hill Fort, where, including six other outlying forts, garrisoned by about three hundred men, there are no public places of resort available for the men except the public-houses. May this great need be deeply laid upon the hearts of the Lord's servants, and may they be constrained to help practically towards the opening of a Home for the benefit of the soldiers quartered in this place. Subscriptions will be gladly received by Colonel Doran, Sibmah, Worthing.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. Henry Smith, of the Evangelisation Society, who lately concluded a successful month's mission at the Wesleyan Chapel, Leicester, is now labouring at the Wesleyan Chapel, Bardney, Lincolnshire, with equal success and blessing.

A fourteen days' mission has been held in the London City Mission Hall, Railway Arch, Latimer-road Station, conducted by Mrs. M. T. Dawson. Surrounding this hall is a very low class population, but much blessing is resting upon the labours of Mr. Ireson, the missionary.

Mr. J. W. Moodie conducted a series of evangelistic meetings in the Mission Hall, Newarthill, from March 2 to 13 inclusive. Almost every night anxious ones passed into the side-room to be dealt with. An adjoining village shared largely in the blessing. Mr. Moodie has gone to Dublin. J. P.

Mr. E. J. Parker and Miss Parker have closed a successful fourteen days' mission in Emmanuel Baptist Church, Falmouth. Great interest has been manifested in the meetings by Christians of all denominations, and at the last meeting the personal testimonies of the many young converts lasted more than an hour. It was indeed a joyful time when the sower and the reaper rejoiced together.

Mr. Charles Inglis has been holding ten days' special services at Canning Town in connection with Lady Ashburton's Mission. Large numbers have been gathered together nightly to hear the Gospel, and much blessing has been the result. Nearly all classes have been reached, and in some instances persons of abandoned life have been convicted of sin, and brought to a saving knowledge of the truth. On the last night of the mission many stood up to tell of the blessing they had received.

Mr. J. S. Harrison has concluded a ten days' mission at Chelsea Chapel, Lower Sloane-street. His visit was greatly appreciated, and his labours were much blessed. Mr. Harrison's afternoon Bible-readings and expositions of the Word at other times were most instructive to believers, while his Gospel addresses to the unsaved were striking and powerful. Not a meeting passed without some finding their way to the inquiry-room. Mrs. Harrison rendered very efficient help by her sweet solo singing, and in dealing with inquirers.

Ireland.—Rev. H. J. Borgner, of London, has held mission services in St. Kevin's and North Strand Churches, Dublin; similar services have been held in Bantry by Rev. J. W. R. Campbell, of Cork, and in Galway and Limerick by Rev. Jas. Kirkwood, Methodist Conference evangelist. The mission services at the Custom-house Steps and in St. George's Hall, Belfast, are increasing in interest. Gospel meetings have been held for the last three weeks in the Court-house, Cough, by Rev. John Elliott, Stewartstown, assisted by Messrs. Poolton and Donnelly.

Mr. Hammond in Illinois.—This evangelist has been holding union meetings in Centralia, Ill. All the pastors of the city have been united in the work. Rev. Mr. Wolcott, rector of the Episcopal Church, who knew Mr. Hammond, entered heartily into the mission. The Opera-house, the largest building in the city, has been crowded daily. About one hundred and fifty have professed conversion. The morning prayer-meetings fill the church. Mr. Hammond goes next to Carbondale, where is located a Normal School at which are four hundred students. Much prayer is being offered that these students may be led to Christ, and as they go out to teach may be the means of doing great good.

N. M. H.

Rev. F. B. Meyer at Plymouth.—A remarkable mission was held in this town last week by Mr. Meyer, assisted by Rev. W. J. Mayers, who led the musical arrangements, and sang suitable solos. The large St. Andrew's Hall was crowded with congregations drawn from all evangelical bodies of believers, and were remarkable for their number and representative character. In the evenings the spacious George-street Chapel was filled to overflowing. In addition, addresses were given to the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., and a meeting was held with a large number of Christian ministers, in which all sections of the Church were represented. The object of the mission was the deepening of spiritual life, and many gratifying instances of blessing have already come to hand.

Personalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Muller, Canon Wilberforce, and Lord Radstock, sailed from Bombay for England in the s.s. Clyde on February 22.

Rev. Dr. C. S. Robinson, of New York, has started an undenominational and illustrated weekly religious paper, with the title of Every Thursday.

Dr. Fairbairn, of Mansfield College, Oxford, has agreed to deliver a course of lectures next summer at Chautauqua on "Leaders of Religious Thought in the Nineteenth Century."

Professor Henry Drummond left England last week for Melbourne. He expects to be absent about six months, and intends, if possible, to visit Tokio University, Japan, on his way home.

Rev. Phillips Brooks, D.D., of Boston, has lately been addressing large audiences of business men day by day for a week in Trinity Church, New York. His general subject was the liberty of the Christian life.

The late P. H. Gosse.—Mr. Edmund Gosse is writing a biography of his father, the late P. H. Gosse, the Christian Naturalist, whose portrait we gave some time ago. Mr. P. H. Gosse's published works number nearly fifty volumes.

Dr. Philip Schaff, of New York, has gone to Italy for data with which to complete his history of the Church. He will try to get material in the library of the Vatican at Rome, and takes with him letters of introduction to the Pope.

Mr. John Kirk, secretary of the Ragged School Union, proposes to visit the United States next autumn. When his committee knew of his intention they voted him three months' leave of absence and a sum of money towards his expenses.

Mrs. Booth still lingers on the brink of the river of death. On Wednesday last week she became extremely low, and it was thought by those attending her that her last hour had certainly come. She again rallied, however, and is still patiently awaiting the call of God.

Rev. G. C. Grubb writes to a friend in England that Mr. Campbell, Mr. Millard, Mr. Richardson, and himself expect to be in New Zealand by April 12—15. He asks the prayers of English Christians on behalf of their work there. God has greatly blessed them in Ceylon and India.

Mrs. Prinsep, who is well known as an earnest Christian worker on the Continent, and who has been spending some months in Japan in order to inquire into Bible distribution there, hopes shortly to pay a visit to this country. She intends to return to Japan, viâ America, in the autumn.

Mr. Harley Mason.—We regret to learn that Mr. Harley Mason, well known from his long official connection with the Young Men's Christian Association, is seriously ill with paralysis. His family ask the prayers of Christian friends that his life may be spared and his strength restored.

Dr. Patton, the new President of Princeton, has taken the heart of everybody. Quiet and unassuming in manner, only those who know him well can appreciate the variety of his learning. The venerable ex-President, Dr. McCosh, though relieved from all active service, still abides at Princeton, and his very presence is a benediction.

Dr. A. T. Pierson purposes spending the month of April on the Continent, pleading the cause of foreign missions and visiting places of special interest. He will be accompanied probably by Major Whittle and Dr. Moxey. To his magazine, The Missionary Review, Dr. Pierson is contributing very excellent sketches of his missionary tour in Scotland.

Dr. Barnardo has succeeded in an application to the High Court to order stay of further proceedings in the Tye case, pending the result of the appeal to the House of Lords in the Gossage case. The two judges agreed that the decision of the House of Lords would govern the result in both these cases, and therefore it was reasonable to await that decision.

Mr. Richard Cadbury, of Moseley Hall, a member of the firm of Cadbury Brothers, the cocoa manufacturers, has addressed to the committee of the Birmingham and Midland Sanatorium a letter containing an offer of the hall where he resides and a large area of land as a sanatorium for women and children, together with a sum of £30,000 for the purpose of adapting the property to its new use and endowing the institution. There are about twenty acres of land attached to the building.

The late Mr. H. F. Bowker.—It is proposed to publish some memorials of Mr. Bowker at the suggestion of some of the very large circle of friends to whom he was so well known. Anyone having letters, papers, or addresses, or special knowledge of incidents in Mr. Bowker's life, will greatly oblige by sending them as soon as possible to Rev. H. C. Bowker, Culmington Rectory, Bromfield, Salop.

Y.M.C.A. Notes.

The City of London Association News for March gives a good digest of the weighty speeches made by Bishop Barry and others at the recent anti-gambling demonstration at Aldersgate-street.

In the same paper there is an interesting statistical account of "A week's work in Aldersgate-street," from which it appears that close upon five thousand men entered the Y.M.C.A. rooms there for various purposes during the week from Feb. 3 to 9, inclusive.

The friends at Aldersgate-street have formed a Ladies' Auxiliary, with Lady Ashburton as president, to co-operate in sustaining the practical interest of the Association work.

The Camden Town Association is said to have got on "right lines"; that is, the mixed evangelistic meetings are discontinued, and it will aim solely at reaching and influencing young men.

"Stylus," in The City of London Association News, lodges a protest against the idea of "smoking rooms" finding a place in our Y.M.C.A.'s.

Mr. D. McConaughy, jun., reports the hopeful commencement of Y.M.C.A. work in Madras. A suitable and centrally-located building has been secured. The newly-formed Association has expended some of its youthful zeal in the issue of a monthly paper, called The Young Men of India. The first number, of which we have seen advance proofs, gives promise of considerable vitality, and we doubt not it will do much to swell the rising tide of interest in Christian work for the young men of our great Dependency.

The annual report of the Sydney Association shows much excellent work done under the management of the indefatigable general secretary, Mr. Walker. Every description of in and outside work seems to have been well attended to. The financial position is a sound one, but greater efforts could be made were more funds available.

Mr. D. McConaughy, writing from Palestine to The Young Men's Era, says the only Association in Syria is in the Protestant College at Beirut. Palestine he describes as a fifth Gospel graven upon rocks, and Jerusalem is its most intensely interesting chapter.

A Kansas pastor writes to The Young Men's Era on the Y.M.C.A. as a helper to the Church:—"I have watched the workings of the Association in my own city for two years and more. I find that most of the most capable, useful, courageous, self-sacrificing, trusty, and successful young soul-winners in our churches have had their training in the Young Men's Christian Association. I thank God for it, and I counsel all young men to work in it, and everybody to stand by it heartily and practically."

Mr. L. D. Wishard and his wife, by latest accounts, were in Calcutta. Mr. Wishard addressed meetings there at the General Assembly's Institution and the Free Church college. He hopes to establish branches of the Y.M.C.A. among the students of India.

One of the most hopeful things we have lately known in connection with the London Y.M.C.A., is the success that has attended Rev. F. B. Meyer's Saturday afternoon addresses at Aldersgate-street. Week after week, from 250 to 300 earnest-minded young fellows have come together for these talks on fundamental truths of revelation. The present series will be concluded with a consecration meeting to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon. After the Easter holidays, Mr. Meyer will give six more Saturday addresses; taking up again the basic facts of Christianity, as embodied in the Apostles' Creed.

A conference and summer school for Christian workers will be opened at Clifton Springs, N.Y., July 12, and will continue to the evening of July 27. A special invitation is given to secretaries of Young Men's Christian Associations to attend. Prominent instructors have been engaged.

The Chicago Association have a staff of thirty secretaries, assistants, and employés. The Association has been fortunate in identifying with its management many of the young men in the city who are representative in the financial, social, and religious circles.

On Monday evening, Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., and Mrs. Abel Smith entertained a number of young men in the rooms of the Association, Exeter Hall. Collections of photographs, microscopes, and scientific apparatus were shown and described, and, after a short word of welcome by the chairman, an interesting, forcible, and humorous address was delivered by the Very Rev. William Lefroy, D.D., Dean of Norwich. His earnest words were received with much enthusiasm by the crowded audience invited by Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and the address was followed by a concert.

The Temperance Cause.

The new licence law for Ontario gives the municipal councils power to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor.

Six of the seven Cornish members have placed their names at the back of a Bill for prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in Cornwall on Sundays.

The London Temperance Hospital has received £5000, on account of its share of residue, under trust deed executed by the late Mr. George Sturge, of Sydenham-hill.

Norway has a regular organised prohibition movement. It seems that there are very good prospects for Norway to be the first prohibition country in the world.

Postmaster-General and Mrs. Wanamaker deserve the hearty thanks of the friends of temperance for their praiseworthy example in entertaining in Washington without wine.

The Manchester Christian Women's Temperance Association and Prison Gate Mission report a year of earnest work. Many drunkards have been reclaimed, and the work at the police-courts, and at the prison gates, has been of great value.

The magistrates at Limerick have held a private meeting with the Roman Catholic Bishop, and decided that for each new licence granted three existing licences must be proved to have lapsed, until the number of licensed houses in Limerick is reduced to 100.

Mr. George Blaiklock is still rendering good service to the Gospel temperance cause in the Colonies. Lately he has held successful meetings in Ballarat, Victoria. He intends prolonging his stay in Australia for some while yet, and will probably return to England in the autumn.

Many merchants in Scotland are agitating for the complete separation of the wine and spirit trade from the grocery trade. Those who can help on the movement should put themselves in communication with Mr. J. Cuthbert, 154, Hilltown, Dundee, N.B., secretary of the Unlicensed Grocers' Association in that district.

Great indignation is felt at Liverpool regarding the wholesale reversal of magisterial convictions by the Recorder at the City Sessions. The Reformer says:—"Between the Recorder and the county justices pandemonium is let loose in the city once more. The vigilance men are staggered; the rum sellers are in a frenzy of delight."

In a letter quoted by Mr. Bradlaugh, M.P., in The Fortnightly Review for March, Mr. George Livesey, of the South Metropolitan Gas Company, says he is convinced, from a life spent amongst the working classes, that until they have the direct veto on the granting or renewal of licences for the sale of intoxicating drink, legislation can do little or nothing to improve their position.

Some very helpful and practical directions as to the organising and the conducting of tent missions for the promotion of Gospel temperance are issued by Mr. J. T. Rae, the secretary of the Hoxton Hall work. As the season for such work is now approaching, we trust many of our temperance workers will study these suggestions, and carry them into practice. Mr. Rae, who may be addressed at Hoxton Hall, Hoxton, E., will no doubt send a copy of his leaflet to inquiring friends.

MR. R. CAIRNS, of the Evangelisation Society, has been in the neighbourhood of Fraserburgh for some weeks. There is a deep spiritual awakening. The meetings are crowded, and many are inquiring the way of salvation.

"SURREY GARDENS."

MANY of our younger readers may not be aware of the fact that in the earlier part of his London career, Mr. Spurgeon preached for years in the great music-hall that stood in Surrey Gardens. In the current Sword and Trowel, Mr. Spurgeon tells in brief the story of those eventful days, and of the terrible catastrophe that happened on the first Sunday of his ministry there. We give the closing paragraph of his account:—

"To carry on work upon the spot, a band of brethren and sisters commenced a school in the Carter-street Literary Institution. This building came into the market, and was bought by the zealous clergyman of the district. But the workers, when they lost their meeting-place, could not quit this locality: they met in a Board-school. On and on they have worked; and now the hour has come when their hopes are to be fulfilled, and their labour rendered permanent. We have resolved to raise a worthy memorial: the plans are in preparation; some £1100 is promised, and our appeal is now made to all who remember the hour of cloud and the rain of blessing which came forth from it. It may be that those whose memories cannot carry them so far back will yet achieve the distance by sympathy, and thus, by the help of many, we shall make a 'forward movement,' which will be useful to the dense population which now covers the site of the Surrey Gardens, and will show our gratitude to our upholding God."

PORTUGAL.—Mr. S. L. Ginsburg, of Oporto, writes:—Would you ask your readers to pray on behalf of a missionary journey through the North of Portugal, which will last for a week. Senhor Brage and myself will visit little Catholic towns and villages, distribute tracts, and try and hold public or private meetings. We are also having with us Hebrew New Testaments, received from Mildmay, which we hope to distribute amongst the Jews.

A CO-OPERATIVE DRESSMAKING ASSOCIATION, with the object of enabling needlewomen to deal directly with the public has been started at Walworth. The work is carried on in clean, healthy rooms, and it is hoped that, with the help of those who sympathise with the dressmakers in their endeavour to derive more benefit than at present from their industry, the undertaking will prove successful. Only high-class work is undertaken. Further information may be had from the secretary, 20, Lorrimore-square, Walworth, S.E.

THE CHILDREN'S "LEAGUE OF KINDNESS" now numbers about four hundred members and associates. The object is to help the poor to obtain suitable clothing at a nominal price, and also to bring a little sunshine into the children's lives in some of the poorest parishes of South London. Much in this way is being done for East London, while South London, although equally poor, is very often neglected. Those who sympathise with city waifs are invited to become members or associates of the League. Miss F. F. Young, 32, Westbourne-park, W., is the hon. secretary.

ROMAN CATHOLICS AND EDUCATION.—The Romish hierarchy in Austria are claiming that Roman Catholic children ought not to be made to mix with the children of other communions, and that their teachers ought to be trained under ecclesiastical supervision.—An Act has been passed in the Manitoba Legislature abolishing the separate Roman Catholic schools.—Bishop Wigger, of Newark, U.S.A., ordered that the children of Roman Catholic parents in his diocese should be taken from the public schools, and forced to attend the parochial schools. Few of the parents have obeyed the order.

NATAL.—Writing to The Missionary Review, Rev. Jas. Scott, of Impolweire, Natal, says:—"We got back to our work here in September. Although we have found some cold and indifferent who once gave promise of better things, we have reason to thank God and take courage. In the last three months I have baptized fifty-eight, and expect in the next three months to have as many more, as I have not yet had time to visit all my out-stations, some of them being far away, and the season unsuitable for travelling. Amongst those whom I baptized last Sabbath was an old woman who had first heard the Gospel from a native evangelist sent out by my predecessor: this was some thirty years ago."

The Book World.

A Phonographic Treasure.

MR. E. J. NANKIVELL, editor of The Reporters' Magazine, has earned a fresh meed of praise from the great army of Pitmanite phonographers by the issue of a phonographic edition of UNCLE TOM'S CABIN. The selection of Mrs. Beecher Stowe's immortal narrative for presentation in phonographic dress is most timely at this juncture when the question of negro slavery in Africa is filling the mind and heart of the civilised world. It need hardly be said that from a shorthand point of view the book is beyond all praise; if we except Mr. Pitman's shorthand Bible, no volume of its class can at all compare with it for consummate beauty of execution and for general utility to the student of phonography. No devotee or practitioner of the art ought to be without a copy. As a prize volume for schools and private classes it is without a competitor. (6s. 5, New Bridge-street, E.C.)

Mr. C. F. Dowsett has compiled a book presenting, from a Protestant and "Unionist" standpoint, a record of some STRIKING EVENTS IN IRISH HISTORY. Special attention is given to some features of the history of the past ten years, and to the proceedings before the Special Commission. (Kegan, Paul & Co.)

THE MAGIC LANTERN: ITS CONSTRUCTION AND USE. 6d. Perken, Son & Rayment, 99, Hatton-garden, E.C. A wonderfully complete and amply illustrated guide to the use of the magic lantern. Christian workers who use this means of interesting and instructing the people will find the book very serviceable.

TIMES OF REFRESHING IN SPAIN is a quarterly record of the progress of the work of God under the Spanish Evangelisation Society. The January issue contains, in addition to reports, some interesting notes of the early work of the Society. A historical chapter deals with the severe persecution of thirty years ago. (3d. Edinburgh: Religious Tract and Book Society, 99, George-street.)

EVERYBODY'S BOOK OF PROVERBS. 6d., 1s., and 2s. 6d. Howe & Co., 23, St. Paul's-buildings, E.C. In this handy little volume is found a mine of wisdom. The proverbs are classified with extreme care, and so conveniently that reference is but the work of a moment; while no less than 256 known sources are quoted. With the pocket so well supplied, the mind should never be at a loss for food.

THE EVANGELICAL MAGAZINE, with which is issued "The Missionary Chronicle," is a very readable serial. The March issue contains a life-like portrait of Rev. Edward Hassan, of Salisbury. Rev. J. Brierley draws a hopeful picture of the religious future of Switzerland. He warmly sympathises with the Salvation Army in the persecution it has endured. Dr. John Stoughton writes on "The Egypt of the Bible seen in the Light of Modern Discoveries." An unpublished letter of Dr. Isaac Watts is a contribution full of interest. (6d. Elliot Stock.)

THE SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA; or, The Seven Golden Candlesticks. By the author of "The Spanish Brothers." 1s. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark. This is a capital addition to the series of Bible-class Primers edited by Professor Salmond, of Aberdeen. It would be difficult to conceive a more profitable treatment than this little work affords of the first three chapters of the Book of Revelation. The expository and practical are admirably combined, and the volume very appropriately closes with a chapter on the one complete and glorified Church, as prophetically exhibited in Rev. xxi. 9-27.

THE KEYNOTE OF LIFE; or, "Thy Will be Done." By I. E. Page. Marshall Brothers. As the title indicates, this is a book on holiness of life. The author has studied the Scriptures with care, and read with attention the writings of those who have set their hearts and minds upon knowing and doing the will of God. These pages embody his reflections, which are uniformly well expressed and stimulating. The tone is high, in harmony with the theme; not only is the Christian's duty and privilege in relation to God's holy will beautifully explained, but the will of God in relation to the believer—"your sanctification"—is well set forth. We trust many will read these searching pages, which, while abating nothing of the high vocation of the disciple of Christ, are clear of anything like delusive perfectionism. The pages contain many gems of teaching from theological literature.

NYASSALAND. It was a happy thought on the part of Professor Henry Drummond to reissue in separate form those chapters of "Tropical Africa," descriptive of Nyassaland, our new Protectorate. In five short but most glowing chapters we are greatly helped to grasp the situation, and to appreciate the importance of the stand that the English Government has made against the unwarranted encroachments of the Portuguese. This fascinatingly written brochure, with its vivid pictures of the land and the people, and its diagnosis of the accursed slave traffic, must strengthen the hands of those who are working in various ways for the regeneration of Central Africa. (1s. Hodder & Stoughton.)

PEGS FOR PREACHERS: POINTS FOR WORKERS. By Charles Inglis. Second edition. 2s. Morgan & Scott. This book has already more than justified its existence. The earnest author cannot but be gratified that his efforts to help fellow-workers by placing before them some three hundred outlines of addresses and Bible-readings have met with widespread recognition. These pages present in condensed form the spiritual teaching of many books and parts of Holy Writ. They do not dispense with direct study of the Word itself, but rather indicate a method whereby thoughtful Christian teachers can use the inspired volume to special advantage in the course of public testimony. The numerous references seem to have been carefully checked.

EGOISM, ALTRUISM, AND CHRISTIAN EUDAIMONISM. Present-Day Tract No. 62. By Rev. M. Kaufmann, M.A. 4d. Religious Tract Society. A valuable addition to a series of sterling worth. The author ably exposes the fallacies of unbelieving critics. He shows that, while recognising an ennobling individualism, Christian ethics, properly understood, inculcate a living and labouring for others, the strong bearing the burdens of the weak. He also proves Christian Eudaimonism, which takes a cheerful view of things on grounds of faith and hope, to have a power possessed by no rival ethical system. The essay is a triumphant vindication of Christianity from the misrepresentations of writers belonging to agnostic and other schools of philosophy.

THE TEMPERANCE READER. By Rev. J. Dennis Hird, M.A. 1s. 6d. Cassell & Co. A capital volume of the "Modern School Series." It shows intemperance to be the national enemy, and in a manner calculated to awaken reflection and inquiry. The historical chapters present the vice as prevailing in our country from the earliest time to the present day. The terrible results of the traffic are ably depicted, and the duty of fighting it strongly enforced. The author is London Diocesan Secretary of the Church of England Temperance Society, and well acquainted with the subject. His formula for the cure of the evil is "Never take any drink; never offer it to anyone else." Thoughtful and well illustrated, these pages contain hundreds of pertinent facts, quotations, references, and mottoes, which will prove of service to temperance workers, while the book is wholesome reading for young people.

THE CHARITIES REGISTER AND DIGEST. By C. S. Loch. Longmans & Co. This large work, which has reached a third edition, contains a classified register of charities in or available for the Metropolis, together with a digest of information respecting the legal, voluntary, and other means for the prevention and relief of distress, and the improvement of the condition of the poor. The compiler has had special facilities for securing accurate and full information, and, what with the elaborate indexes with which it is furnished, the volume cannot fail to prove of great service to such as have much to do with charitable institutions and movements. The introduction has also been published in a separate form under the title HOW TO HELP CASES OF DISTRESS. As a handy reference book for almoners and others, this will unquestionably be very useful. The powers and functions of the public authorities in the administration of relief are set out in very full detail.

The cheap serial reproduction by Messrs. Cassell & Co. of Archdeacon Farrar's Life of Christ is proceeding. We have received the first two monthly parts, published at 3d.; the weekly parts are ½d.

FRENCH MISSIONS TO THE CONGO.—MM. Allégret and Teissères, agents of the Paris Society of Evangelical Missions, purpose next month to commence a journey of exploration into the interior of what is known as the French Congo. It is hoped that the result will be the establishment of a new mission station.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Bishop of Rochester is earnestly promoting a movement in his diocese on behalf of religious instruction among the young.

A Night Rescue Shelter for women has been opened in the Edgware-road by the Church Army, which seeks to reach the lowest and most depraved.

The Pall Mall Gazette states that Rev. J. W. Horsley, vicar of Holy Trinity, Woolwich, has been offered an Australian bishopric. Just now he is contributing some scathing letters to the local Press on the sanitary state of Woolwich, which permits a death-rate of over 20 per 1000.

Rev. C. E. Storrs, vicar of Ellacombe, Torquay, has concluded a series of Sunday afternoon talks to men in the parish church. The subject of the last address was, "Mind your own Business." Mr. Storrs, after inculcating the lesson that men should not unnecessarily interfere in other people's affairs, pointed out that their great business was to have Christ in their lives. He spoke forcibly of parental influence and example, and advised his hearers not to allow their earthly business to come first, or between their souls and God.

Rev. A. R. Tucker, curate of St. Nicholas', Durham, has been appointed to the bishopric of Eastern Equatorial Africa, in succession to Bishop Parker, who died there nearly three years ago. Mr. Tucker began life as an artist, but after several years gave up that profession to enter the ministry. While at Oxford he took a very active part in open-air preaching and other work of the undergraduate movement, which owed so much to the late Rev. Henry Bazely. In 1885 Mr. Tucker was appointed curate to Rev. H. E. Fox, in the parish of St. Nicholas, Durham, where he has since laboured with great devotion.

SALVATION ARMY.

Commissioner Railton has been appointed to the command of the Army's work in Germany. He is at present visiting the stations in Norway, and will enter on his new work after Easter.

The Court of Queen's Bench have ordered that the trial of certain members of the Army for alleged obstruction at Whitchurch shall be moved from the Winchester Assizes to London, so as to secure an unprejudiced hearing.

A correspondent of The Christian Leader writes in very strong terms of the needless hardships that young English girls are called on to endure in Ceylon as officers of the Army, by their strict adherence to native modes of life. He says it is a sin and a crime to send them there.

CONGREGATIONAL.

In a month the historic Whitefield Tabernacle will be rased to the ground, preparatory to the erection of the new structure.

Rev. Robert Harley, who has resigned the pastorate of George-street Congregational Church, Oxford, is about to visit Australia. He will occupy for two months the pulpit of Pitt-street Church, Sydney, vacant by the return to England of Rev. Dr. Jefferis.

On Sunday last closing services were held in Park Chapel, Cheetham, Manchester, the congregation having decided to discontinue the religious services which have been held there for the last fifty years, and to offer the building for sale. The last pastor was Rev. F. Moore, who laboured under discouraging circumstances. Many of the congregation had removed to the suburbs, and although he struggled bravely, it soon became evident that it was hopeless to expect a return of the past prosperity, and in 1886 he resigned. Since then efforts have been made to induce the Lancashire County Union and the Ministers' and Deacons' Association to revive the work on lines similar to those adopted by the Wesleyans in the Central Hall.

METHODIST.

Rev. Dr. Keen has tendered his resignation of St. James's Bible Christian Church, Forest-hill. He leaves in August, when he will have completed a five years' pastorate. The membership, the number of seatholders, and congregation were never so large as at present.

The Special Committee of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, to which has been delegated the duty of investigating the charges with regard to Indian missions, which were made last year by The Methodist Times, meet on April 24, when it is expected that Messrs. Patterson and Findlay, the delegates from Madras, will be present to lay their views before the Committee. The inquiry will extend over two days.

A novel missionary meeting was lately held at Conway-road Wesleyan Chapel, Cardiff. The meeting was entirely in the hands of boys and girls, one of the former occupying the chair, and others making speeches. Separate addresses were delivered on "Our Work at Home," "Women's Missionary Work," "The Past and the Future," "China and Fiji." The meeting was largely attended, and was a great success.

A Wesleyan Circuit Convention has been held at Ramsey, Isle of Man. Afternoon and evening sessions were conducted. At both meetings an interesting conversation took place on "How best to promote the work of God." A variety of opinions was expressed, and many suggestions were made. The value of special revival services was fully recognised, but it was felt that there was much need of great fidelity to the duties and opportunities of the ordinary means of grace.

PRESBYTERIAN.

At the meeting of the London Presbytery last week, Dr. Monro Gibson reported, on behalf of the Evangelisation Committee, that, in addition to addresses delivered by Mr. Stark and others, during the winter special services had been held in forty-four churches, and in thirty places open-air services had been regularly conducted. At the same meeting Mr. Courthorpe Todd, of the Theatrical Mission, applied for admission into the Church as a minister, and it was agreed to strongly recommend the Synod to grant the application.

Rev. John McNeill is about to conduct Sunday afternoon services either in some theatre, or in the Central Hall, Holborn, which is said to accommodate 5000 people. Dr. Gibson brought the matter before the London Presbytery last week, on the recommendation of the Evangelisation Committee. The committee favoured the Central Hall, but Mr. McNeill said he found that audiences of the most careless could easily be attracted to a theatre. A committee was appointed to secure either the Central Hall or a theatre for four weeks to commence with Easter Sunday. Dr. Thain Davidson, who has had the Agricultural Hall for twenty-two years, offered to lend it to Mr. McNeill, but the latter favoured an entirely new enterprise.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Emily Wright, a young Friend of Leeds, has been "thankfully accepted to go out and join the band of workers this autumn on Mount Lebanon, Syria."

The Friends' High School in Hobart, Tasmania, s doing well, and rendering splendid service in the cause of Christian education. From The Australian Friend we get cheering accounts of work and union in the Colonies.

In Lippincott's Magazine for March, Dr. Clifford, discussing the question "Who are Christian ministers?" affirms that "the real successors to these first century societies, if conformity to their ministry be taken as a test, are the Friends."

Henry Stanley Newman, who, we are glad to say, has recovered from a recent severe accident, gives deeply interesting accounts of Friends' work among the North American Indian nations. Civilisation and education are spreading among them, and the successors of William Penn are evidently at once in their right place, and highly valued among them.

The visit of Frederick Sessions to India is likely to be fruitful of good. He is travelling and investigating some of the great moral questions affecting the welfare of the Indian people, and will help to their solution by and by. Recently he addressed some hundreds of our soldiers, who thanked him for his kind words. Frederick Sessions is already complaining of the missions being "undermanned," and appealing for more workers from home.

BAPTIST.

Mr. J. E. Roberts, of Regent's-park College, will become assistant to Dr. Maclaren, of Manchester, in July.

Rev. W. Rosevear, of Coventry, is about to resign the stated pastorate, after forty years' labour in the ministry.

The memorial stones have just been laid of the new chapel being erected by the London Baptist Association in the rapidly rising district of Harlesden, N.W. A small church has existed for nearly twelve months, and during that time considerable progress has been made. The new chapel will seat 800, and is to be opened in about three months. This is the twenty-sixth chapel built by the London Baptist Association.

Bloomsbury Chapel (Rev. James Baillie, pastor) reports 816 in fellowship, being a net increase of forty-two during the year. The mission in Soho and St. Giles, which has been in full operation now for more than forty years amongst the poor, has been well sustained. The Sunday scholars number 956, with ninety-two teachers, Christian bands, Bands of Hope, mothers' meetings, gymnastic and swimming clubs for boys and girls, are in full operation.

An interesting sketch of the history of Regent's-park College has been issued. It shows a remarkable record of good men and collegiate honours. There are now on the college lists the names of 365 ministerial students. Of these, 228 are still living, and there are also the names of 108 lay students. Of the entire number of ministerial students, twenty-nine have laboured or are now labouring as missionaries in the East, fifteen in the West Indies, ten in Australia, four in Canada, twelve in America, ten in Africa, and ten in Continental Europe—ninety in all.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Much regret is felt at the early death, from influenza, of Mr. Thomas Walker, of Belfast, a most promising student, who was preparing in the Presbyterian College for foreign mission work.

Gospel work in Kinsale, co. Cork, under the direction of Rev. John Hadden, is in a very hopeful state. Some new preaching-places have been opened in neglected localities, and the labours of the district colporteur have been much owned of God.

The Sabbath-school Society for Ireland, in connection with the Presbyterian Church, is doing a noble work. It has over 1000 schools on its roll, with nearly 10,000 teachers and 85,000 scholars, and it sold, or gave away, last year nearly three-quarters of a million of Bibles and other publications.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

The West Free Church at Pollokshaws, Glasgow, have resolved to abolish pew rents.

St. Paul's Established Church, Glasgow (Rev. James Paton, pastor), has a communion roll of over 800, and there are upwards of 500 scholars attending the various Sunday-schools connected with the church. The congregation contemplate building or purchasing large and suitable parochial halls, and engaging a probationer to assist Mr. Paton in overtaking the non-churchgoing population of the parish.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Mr. S. McNicoll, long an elder and Sunday-scho o superintendent of the Free Church, Kirriemuir, N.B.—Rev. Canon Landon, vicar of Ledsham, South Milford, Yorkshire.—Rev. John Cole, Baptist minister, of Cottonend, Bedford.—Rev. David Davies, a retired clergyman, of Cotham, Bristol.—Rev. Andrew Urquhart, senior pastor of Portpatrick Free Church, N.B.—Rev. G. B. Bennett, vicar of St. Peter's and rector of St. Owen's, Hereford.—Rev. Arthur Brigg, superintendent of the Cockermouth and Keswick Wesleyan Circuit, formerly for twenty-five years a missionary in South Africa.—Rev. Henry Tarrant, Baptist minister, formerly of Maindee, near Cardiff.—Rev. M. Bennett, retired Primitive Methodist minister, Ripley.

MR. JOHN SHRIMPTON'S LETTERS TO SCHOOLBOYS.—These two instructive epistles, addressed to the boys of our public schools, have been made up into a neatly bound little book. Mr. Shrimpton writes that he will be pleased to present a copy to any public schoolboy who will write to him for one, to Westminster Chambers, 3, Victoria-street, London, S.W.

THE COLUMBUS CENTENNIAL.—Rev. Jos. Cook thinks the proposed celebration of the Columbus Centennial, in 1892, should be a continuation of the Pan-American Congress. It should be an occasion for conventions on temperance, labour, &c. The Congress should be a prototype of a congress to promote peace, commerce, and international arbitration. America, he thinks, is better adapted to call such a congress than any nation on the globe.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—Missions, by Rev. W. Haslam, at St. Paul's, Penzance, commenced March 16; Baldhu Church, Cornwall, commencing March 23; Carysfort Church, Blackrock, Dublin, commencing March 29.——A mission being held by Mr. Charles Inglis, at Pontymoile, near Pontypool, Mon.——Evangelistic services at Fabius Chapel, Everton-road, Liverpool, by Mr. G. R. Cairns, to March 26.——A mission at Ripley Court, Surrey, conducted by Mr. Herbert R. Francis.——A mission by Mr. William Forbes, next week, at Herne Bay.

INTRODUCTION TO

THE BOOK OF JOB.

The age and authorship of this book are doubtful. Modern criticism assigns it to a period not later than the return of the Jews from Babylon, and not earlier than the time of Solomon. If this opinion be accepted, the authorship of the book remains entirely uncertain. But there are many reasons for believing the older view, which assigns the book to a much earlier date, and regards it as having been the "Bible of the Patriarchs," from which they received their instruction concerning the character and ways of God. The poetical part of the book is supposed to have been written either by Job himself, or by Elihu; while the Prologue and Epilogue—both in prose—were added by Moses.

Its canonicity is proved by the New Testament quotations from it. See Heb. xii. 5; 1 Cor. iii. 19, and James v. 11. Its position in the Hebrew Scriptures is, in some copies, after the Psalms, and, in others, after Proverbs. In favour of its present position, Matthew Henry says—"Being doctrinal, it is proper to precede and introduce the Book of Psalms, which is devotional, and Proverbs, which is practical; for how shall we worship or obey a God whom we know not?"

Though the body of the book is in the form of a poem, yet the narrative is historical. Job was not a fictitious hero, but a real person (Ezek. xiv. 14; James v. 11), and the experiences related were not imaginary, but actual facts. There is little doubt that Job lived about the time of Jacob. Is it not significant that the problems which occupied the thoughts of men in those early days are matters of discussion still?

The purpose of the book is to discuss the question of the sufferings of men in relation to the righteousness of God. The idea that special sufferings are the result of special sins is maintained by Job's three friends, but stoutly resisted by Job, and contradicted by the Lord Himself (xlii. 7). To encourage submission to the appointments of God's providence we are reminded (1) of our inability to comprehend the ways of God; (2) of the end to which afflictions lead (xlii.; James v. 11); and (may we not add?) (3) of the fact that God, by means of the sufferings of his people, is being glorified among others besides men (Eph. iii. 10).

But it appears to us that the book has a most important bearing upon some of the modern teaching concerning holiness. It contains the trial of a perfect man—perfect even in God's judgment—so perfect that even Satan could find nothing whereof to accuse him. By the loss of all his possessions, and by the fearfully afflicted condition of his own body, Job is tried; and the trial proves that, though perfect, he was not sinless. In the dialogue with his three friends he several times makes acknowledgment of sin (vi. 4, vii. 20, ix. 30, 31). Yet two things are clear: (1) that these confessions do not humble him before God; and (2), that they are sometimes contradicted by claims to righteousness, and by a desire proudly to argue his case out with God Himself (xxiii. 3, 4, xxvii. 2-6). The interposition of God, however, produces exactly the opposite effect to that which Job expected. Instead of defending himself, and maintaining his own integrity, his pride is completely humbled, and he takes the lowest possible position before God. "Behold, I am vile" (xl. 3-5); "Mine eye seeth THEE, wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes" (xlii. 5, 6).

That is the position to which God designed to bring the perfect man. It was not the position Job expected to take when God appeared; but it was his true position, and it proved to be the position of blessing. Before the trial, when proclaimed "perfect," Job was "vile," though he may not have known it. After the trial, when confessing his vileness, Job was "perfect," though he did not proclaim it. The difference is explained by the fact that he has seen God, and his holiest attainment appears sinful before Him. Is not this the lesson which the present-day teaching on Holiness needs? A "Holiness Convention" which brought men into living contact with God, and humbled them before Him with a similar confession of personal vileness, would be an unspeakable blessing. When we are so occupied with Him that we have not a single word to say in favour of ourselves, we have got the true secret of holiness.

> The more thy glory strikes mine eyes,
> The humbler I shall lie;
> Thus while I sink, my joys shall rise
> Unmeasurably high.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, MARCH 23.—Esther V.

WHAT can we not do when the heart is strong through waiting on God! The solemn fast had nerved Esther to the heroic attempt. She sought to win her point, not by personal attractions, but through the power of God. Those who prevail with God can also prevail with man (Gen. xxxii. 28).

From her reception by the king (23) we may infer how our prayers will fare with God (Luke xviii. 6-8). "How much more?" Ahasuerus was imperious and evil; God is good. She was not invited; we are. She braved a prohibition; we are assured by many a promise. She had to plead for herself; we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous. She had to persevere in the teeth of a law of the Medes and Persians; we have the laws of the Being of God on our side. May we not expect to have the golden sceptre extended to us, and to hear a promise of answer to the uttermost resources of God.

It was very wise to introduce her requests in this way (4, 5). She thus propitiated the king, and paved the way for her attack upon the wicked Haman. She was led, however, to postpone her final assault until the following day. And certainly God's hand was in this, because on that night a circumstance was timed to occur which made her work infinitely easier than it could otherwise have been.

How small a fly may spoil our ointment! The refusal of Mordecai to show him respect beclouded Haman's gladness (9). Worldly men are at the mercy of the smallest causes of discomfort. If there be one element of wounded pride, it vitiates all besides. Vanity of vanities! "All this availeth me nothing" (13). Haman slept calmly, and went merrily to the destruction of Mordecai, little weening that God was about to frustrate all his counsels, and that he was building the gallows for himself. Ah, how little cause have we to envy the wicked when we have Jesus and all his wealth!

MONDAY, MARCH 24.—Esther VI.

King though he were, commanding 127 provinces, yet could he not command sleep. God held his eyes waking for a specific purpose. Let us trace God's hand in the smallest matters, even in a wakeful night; and open our ears for his word in the silence of the night watches (Ps. lxiii. 6). If we are right with God, there is no one, however exalted, on whom God cannot and will not work on our behalf. The hearts of kings and princes are in his hand.

Haman thought that he was planning honour for himself, and therefore proceeded to lay his schemes out very liberally, and he gave ample evidence of the vanity and ostentation of his heart. A haughty spirit goes before a fall. How astonished must he have been to discover that the object of the king's thought was his hated foe! May we dare to see a parallel here? Shall not the prince of hell be thus compelled to honour the Son of God? Do not all his schemes for his own aggrandisement prove abortive? And shall he not one day be compelled to swell the triumph of Him whom he would fain abase.

Mordecai was so little elated that he went quietly back to his duties (12). It would seem as if the heathen had been impressed by the special care exercised over the Jews by their God (13). What dismal prognostications were these, unmingled with a grain of comfort, and good counsel. Thus Saul was warned by the witch of Endor of hi coming fate.

The honour of this world is a breaking bubble, like the evanescent colours of sunset. Those who live for it sow for themselves bitter harvests. How much wiser to seek the honour which cometh from God only. Ah! what blessing does God put into the lives of those in whom He takes delight (1 Sam. ii. 30; John v. 44). But let us never forget that God's acceptance and delight are in Christ (Eph. i. 6).

TUESDAY, MARCH 25.—Esther VII.

How affecting was this outburst of intercession! Surely we should make better use of our approaches to God to plead for those near and dear to us Esther quoted the words of the royal decree, so that there could be no mistake (iii. 13). She obviated any jealousy as to her interference with the affairs of State, by adding that she had not presumed to interfere, except that the matter was one of life and death; though even the reduction of the Jews to bondage would have been greatly to the king's damage. She appealed to motives of selfish aggrandisement when she spoke thus. How much more shall we prevail with Him who is love, and needs not to be approached save from the side most favourable to men, of tender compassionateness!

From the royal question (5), we may infer the carelessness with which Ahasuerus had handed over himself and the destinies of his subjects to an intriguing and designing man. We have no right to delegate to others responsibilities with which God has entrusted us, unless we are morally sure that they are in safe keeping.

The Agagite was hanged when he intended to hang Mordecai, in the sight of the whole city. His curses came home to roost. He sank into the pit that he had made, and was taken in his own snare (Ps. ix. 15). Surely God scorneth the scorners (Prov. xi. 8). It is probable, if only we could see into the heart of things, that we should discover an even-handed retribution towards those who plot against the righteous. Wherefore listen to the Psalmist's threefold "Don't Fret" (Ps. xxxvii. 1, 7, 8). Is not the time at hand when the great accuser of the brethren shall be cast out? when the Bride, the Lamb's wife, shall be for ever delivered from those who would injure her, and shall shine forth as a monument of God's delivering care.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26.—Esther VIII.

It is well when money is transferred from wrong hands to right ones. Esther became owner of Haman's wealth, and she appointed Mordecai to administer it. Mordecai also became the king's confidant and adviser, exercising the office previously held by Haman. The use of the ring before referred to (iii. 10) reminds us of our right to use the name and authority of Jesus in our prayers.

Though Haman was dead, yet the edict he had promulgated was in force. And, according to the custom of the land, it could not be repealed. But, in answer to Esther's appeal, a second decree was issued, authorising the Jews to resist those who came against them. Is not this always so? Enmity to the people of God is allowed to come to a head; God might check it in its earliest manifestations, but He forbears. Satan is allowed to do his worst to the individual and the Church. Our lot is menaced by constant alarm, that we may learn to gird on the whole armour of God. He teaches our hands to war and our fingers to fight. And at the end, the right comes out victorious. The Lamb and his followers fight and overcome.

What a change is apparent in these closing verses (15-17). "The oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." So God often turns the shadow of death into the morning. We none of us know how near we are to a great and blessed interposition of God, which shall put an end to our anxieties and fears. In the meanwhile, the floods of great waters shall not overwhelm us. The movement which Haman set on foot to stamp out the Jews ended in augmenting their numbers (17). What a sweet fulfilment of Isa. liv. 15-17.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27.—Esther IX.

The Jews successfully resisted their foes, standing together in concert. "They gathered themselves together" (2). We should see the Church much more able to hold her own, if only she were united within herself. But there seems also to have been a special fear which spread among the people from the hand and by the ordering of God

(Gen. xxxv. 5). The numbers slain by the Jews were very considerable, but they acted in their own just and necessary defence, authorised by the law of self-preservation, as well as by the king's edict. They evinced a noble self-restraint in abstaining from laying hands on the property of their foes (15, 16).

It was a revengeful spirit, both on the part of Esther and of the people, which asked for a second day, and that Haman's sons should suffer their father's fate. But we must remember that they had never heard the Sermon on the Mount, and we must acknowledge that He was indeed from heaven who, though himself Jew-born, taught this hot-blooded race to love their enemies. Such thoughts could not have emanated from their own hearts.

When we feast, let us not forget to send portions to others, specially to those for whom nothing is prepared (17-19; Neh. viii. 10-12). We double our joys when we share them. A new annual festival, which continues to this day, was appointed to commemorate their deliverance. Purim (from the Persian pur, a lot) recalled the lot which Haman cast for their destruction. It is well to have red-letter days in our lives, in which to recall the Lord's deliverances, and to consecrate ourselves to his service, with joy, and gladness, and exchange of gifts.

FRIDAY, MARCH 28.—Esther X.

The book closes with a reference to the greatness of Mordecai. But it is noteworthy that he did not disown his kindred. He was still Mordecai the Jew. It ill becomes us, when we prosper in the world, to conceal our religion or our ancestry. And it is also pleasant so see that he used his great position as a precious talent to be employed for the benefit of his people. The closing words are very beautiful, and remind us of what God will do for us also, if we are faithful to Him. Promotion comes neither from East or West, but from God. And He too alone can make us accepted by our brethren, who else might be inclined to envy us. Let us learn to seek the weal of others, and to speak words of peace.

It is said that the word Jehovah is interwoven into this book as an acrostic. It may be so, but certainly God is manifestly the great, though unseen, agent throughout. An unseen power is working behind all human affairs. On the whole, the balance of awards is often fairly adjusted even in this life; bad men going to the gallows, and good men reaching positions of influence. At the best, the prosperity of the wicked is unsatisfying and uncertain. "All things are woven by God's shuttle into the fabric of God's loom." And God's purpose for his Church cannot be overthrown by the plottings of any adversary whatsoever.

May we not also learn that the soul, poor and destitute at first, becomes tenderly loved by the great Bridegroom, adorned with robes of his provision, welcomed into his presence, and allowed to press requests for itself and others to the half of the kingdom.

SATURDAY, MARCH 29.—Job I.

[For Introduction to this Book see previous page.]

This interesting narrative carries us back to patriarchal days, for Job was probably contemporary with Jacob. "The land of Uz" appears to have been part of, or adjacent to Edom (Lam. iv. 21). The fact that Eliphaz the Temanite was the friend of Job (Jer. xlix. 7) supports this view. Nothing more definite can be discovered as to the locality where Job lived.

(1) Job in his prosperity (1-5).—No more favourable circumstances than those which surrounded Job can be conceived. His wealth exceeded that of all other "men of the East" (3). The round numbers in which his flocks and herds are described are no argument against the historical truth of the narrative. The numbers must have been constantly changing, so that only round numbers could be used. His family were a source of pleasure to him. They evidently lived together in the most perfect harmony (2, 4), the three daughters feasting during the week with each of the brothers in turn. His piety (1).—Perfection does not mean sinlessness, but sincerity and uprightness. Perfection, in this sense, is a Scriptural doctrine, and is required in all saints. In Job it was connected with "the fear of God." Right relationship toward God must ever be the foundation of right conduct. His scrupulous care for his children (5).—He saw in their daily feasts a danger. The word "cursed" means literally "blessed," and its secondary sense is salute, bid farewell to, renounce. Job fears either that his children might have adopted the idolatrous custom of blessing the gods, or that in their feasting they might have "renounced," or forsaken, the true God. For their possible sin he presented his offering, so that he and they might continue to enjoy the Divine favour.

(2) Satan's calumny (6-12).—These verses transfer the scene from earth to heaven, where God confirms the testimony (1, 8) as to the character of Job. "The sons of God" (6) are the angels (xxxviii. 7; Ps. ciii. 21). Among them appears Satan, as though he claimed, in some sense, to be prince of this world (7). From his words during the temptation (Luke iv. 5, 6), and from the term by which Jesus spake of him (John xii. 31), there is reason to believe that he had once been appointed as God's vicegerent in this world. He appears now as the adversary and accuser of men (Rev. xii. 9, 10). Even he cannot deny the piety of Job; but he does deny that it was of an unselfish character (9, 10). It was not God Himself, but God's gifts, that secured the devotion of Job. Where religion proved so profitable, who could not be religious? Such was Satan's slander; and it was to refute this that Job's possessions were put into Satan's power (12). Of all this Job knew nothing, nor was it revealed to him. There are evidently purposes behind God's dealings with us which only eternity can reveal.

(3) The first trial (13-22).—What a crushing trial it was! One messenger had hardly told his story, before he was followed by another with still heavier tidings of woe. All his wealth (14-17), and all his family (18, 19) gone in one day! The Sabeans (15), Chaldeans (17), the lightning (16), and the whirlwind (19) were all set in motion against him. Yet see the effect on Job (20-22). His grief is great; but his piety has sustained the fearful test. "The Lord hath taken away" (21)—was Job right? Had not Satan done it (ii. 3)? True, yet not without Divine permission, and for a Divine purpose. Already the slander of Satan is disproved. In the wreckage of all his former possessions, Job, a solitary man, bows and worships God. He could not understand God's dealings with him, but he "sinned not, nor charged God foolishly" (22).

BORDESLEY EVANGELICAL MISSION, BIRMINGHAM.—The eleventh annual report of this work, under the superintendence of Mr. J. Stead, shows that it is making progress. The Mission has under its control two large halls, capable of accommodating 2000 people. It enjoys the hearty sympathy and support of ministers and other workers in the city and its surroundings. Mr. Stead's address is 221, St. Andrew's-road, Bordesley, Birmingham.

A LAW CLERKS' CHRISTIAN UNION has been formed. All persons occupied in the different branches of the law will be eligible for membership who are desirous of promoting the glory of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. All members will unite in private prayer for the legal profession, at a time to be agreed upon, once a month, and there will be periodical meetings of a social kind for prayer and the study of the Scriptures. Four times a year the members will be invited to join and assist in the public meetings of the lawyers' Prayer Union, for it is proposed that those meetings shall be held quarterly in future after the Law Clerks' Christian Union has been formed. Persons desirous of joining should apply to Mr. H. C. Nisbet, 35, Lincoln's Inn-fields, W.C.

THE HOMES FOR WORKING BOYS IN LONDON, nine in number, and situate in various parts of the Metropolis, are admirable institutions. London still draws a large proportion of its best young workmen from the country, but the employers are seldom able to provide a home or lodging for them, though no doubt much has been done by particular firms. Further, the London labour market is being constantly recruited by boys from industrial schools and similar institutions, who, by the aid of a good home and a little kindly influence at first starting, will probably develop into capable and useful citizens. The Society's Homes afford accommodation for 350 boys. There are other independent Homes, but it is felt that the time has now come for the establishment of a large home in the vicinity of the City to meet the wants of a number of lads who are engaged in warehouses and offices. The lease of the original home in Bishopsgate expires at the end of the present year, and an opportunity has presented itself for rebuilding a house capable of accommodating ninety or one hundred boys on an enlarged freehold site. The proposed building will entail an outlay of £7000 or £8000. The secretary of the Homes is Mr. H. Bristow Wallen, 8, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.

International S.S. Lessons.

Sunday Afternoon, March 30.

Review of Quarter's Lessons.

Golden Text: Isa. xlii. 1.

For the Review, the Golden Text is most wisely chosen. The Quarter's Lessons enable us to "behold" Jesus as the child; the boy; and the man.

(1) As the child.—Recall (1) his humiliation. His lowly parentage; birthplace; and the sign mentioned to the shepherds (ii. 12). Apply the lesson of such great condescension. Recall also (2) the evidences of his dignity. Heralded by a forerunner; both He and the forerunner the subjects of Old Testament prophecy; the birth of both announced by angels; the inspired songs both of Mary and Zacharias; the angels' visit to the shepherds. How important to accept a Saviour thus miraculously introduced. Remember also (3) who rejoiced over Him. Angels—though he took not on Him their nature; Mary, though his mother, yet needing Him as her "God and Saviour"; Zacharias, who saw in Him the long-promised deliverer; shepherds, representing the lowly and despised among men; and Simeon the aged, whose faith saw even in the babe, the consolation of Israel. Shall not we learn to rejoice in Him too?

(2) As the boy.—Only one incident recorded. Elicit by questions—his age; the city; how lost; where found; his first recorded utterance; and his subjection to his parents. Apply the lessons for boys suggested by his very real and perfectly natural boyhood.

(3) As a man.—(1) The two incidents which marked the commencement of his public ministry—Baptism. By whom; where; at what age; and what the significance of his baptism. How was He employed; and what remarkable incidents followed? His temptation. How He entered it; the significance of the three assaults; how He overcame. The advantage of having a Saviour who knows what temptation is (Heb. ii. 18). (2) His ministry at Nazareth.—Anointed; wondered at; yet cruelly rejected. Danger of prejudice—how it blinds the eyes and hardens the heart. (3) His ministry at Capernaum.—Here his power was displayed; He was enthusiastically received; his enemies were confounded; and his power to forgive sins was demonstrated.

Behold Him—not only to admire, and then to reject, as Nazareth did; but to trust Him for pardon, and to follow Him as Lord.

THE STRANGERS' REST, 163, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, E., is a remarkable centre of Christian activity. From the twelfth annual report, we learn that between 1500 and 2000 meetings are held in the course of the year. Sailors in the Highway are invited to enter the Rest, which is also the rallying-place of many who have at heart the eternal welfare of the seafaring community.

COUNTRY FAIRS.—It is well known that many of these institutions are often associated with excessive drinking and other objectionable features. Some ladies in a northern town, with a view to combating the evil, have hired the Town-hall, which is thrown open from 11 a.m. till 4 p.m., for the "fairers" to "come and rest, and bring their friends," while "a choir of ladies will sing at intervals." Our friend writes that the plan has proved successful in many places, and affords opportunity for individual conversation as well as for a few words of Gospel preaching between the hymns. We commend the effort to the prayerful consideration of our readers, and hope that others will put forth similar endeavours.

TOWER HAMLETS MISSION.—The Emigration and Colonisation Fund continues to assist in the temporal salvation of able-bodied East-end toilers. The picked men and women who have hitherto been helped out to Canada have done well. The report of last year's work, which is got out in a very attractive form, gives copies of interesting letters received from Emigrants. The office, at the Great Assembly Hall, is always open to inquirers, and on Saturday evening and Monday at noon, there are emigration meetings open to all. An emigrants' colony has been proposed, and it is hoped that the Fund will be enabled to start village settlements for sober and industrious people desirous of returning to life on the land. All communications with regard to the work should be addressed to Captain Andrew Hamilton, at the Great Assembly Hall, 31, Mile End-road, E.

Christian Community.

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY, since this work began, 21,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual severity, arising from the recent Dock Labourers' Strike and other causes; and from present appearances an unusually severe season is most certainly apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the SECRETARY; or Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by the EDITORS of "THE CHRISTIAN."

JAS. ATKINSON, Secretary.

DONATIONS
RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, MARCH 17, 1890.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER the devil's missionaries are apt to get the start of the Lord's heralds. A correspondent writes to the New York Independent that he is twenty miles from the nearest church. He does not know of a single professing Christian nearer than that place. In the camp most of the people are Ingersollians, and a few years ago, when the population was larger than it is now, the postmaster kept the post-office counters covered with Ingersoll publications.

MISSIONARY VOLUNTEERS IN AMERICA.—An encouraging statement with regard to the missionary movement among students in America appears in The Missionary Review for March. The writer says: "Interesting statistics were presented by the recording secretary. There are now 4752 volunteers. Up to December 10 there were 4632, of whom 194 have been sent out as missionaries, to be found principally in China, Japan, India, and Africa, all scattered in twenty-one different fields, and representing twenty-five different organisations; ten volunteers are under appointment to sail, twenty-five deceased, and only eighteen withdrawn, so far as can be known at present. There are still remaining in this country 4385 volunteers."

AWAY TO THE WEST!!!

170 Trained Lads (the First Party this year) will (D.V.) "Swarm Off" from our various "Homes" for Canada on March 27. A number of these will be bound for our New Industrial Farm, Manitoba, the remainder for Ontario.

Dear Friends,

With the winter still upon us, I am bound to make arrangements for the exodus of my First Party of little Emigrants for this year; and I hope to be able, through God's goodness, and the generous gifts of His people, to meet all the expenses for the "Swarming Off" of 170 Fine Lads from our overcrowded hives in East London.

As everyone knows who reads THE CHRISTIAN, I and my faithful colleagues have had very heavy burdens to bear during the past eight or nine months. The struggle has been in several respects a fiercer one than heretofore. Moreover, it has been made more difficult to rescue the perishing, and to snatch unhappy children from the vile surroundings in which they were discovered by us; but through the infinite mercy of the Lord, we have been sustained, and though often "faint," are yet "pursuing."

These 170 dear young lads now about to leave us have all of them been tested and trained with the greatest care in our workshops. Not a few of them have also, happily, given marked evidence of having "yielded their own selves to the Lord." This gives me greater confidence in the prospects of their future success, and I know I may ask for them all the prayerful sympathy of every servant of Christ.

Need I remind you that no truer, wiser method has ever been devised for effecting four very desirable objects than this scheme of well-organised Christian Emigration of trained and tested young people?

(1) It saves the child, delivering it for ever from the perils of its former lot.

(2) It relieves our over-crowded cities, the labour-markets of which are hopelessly congested, and in which the struggle for existence is growing fiercer every day.

(3) It supplies Canada with her greatest need: additions to her population of the choicest materials—honest, healthy, and industrious, and piously-trained children, who, by God's blessing, will grow into the successful citizens of the near future.

(4) It provides room for the immediate admission to these Homes of as many fresh cases, to be rescued from the streets and lanes of our great city.

But further Funds, to meet the expenses of this Emigration Party, are much needed. Some help has already come in, but much yet remains to be done. As in former years, I am glad to be able to announce that £9 per boy entirely covers the cost incurred in settling him suitably in Ontario; but £11 are required for placing each of the Older Lads in Manitoba.

£54 will therefore give six Ontario boys a start in life. £66 will do the same for as many older youths going to Manitoba.

I hope during the present year to be permitted, if God spare my life, to place out at least 500 trained children in the Dominion, far from the squalor and wretchedness of the slums of East London.

Any gift sent in response will be gratefully acknowledged by our Treasurer, WM. FOWLER, ESQ., or by

Your faithful Servant in Christ,

18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

"In this delightful narrative of Christian experience we have an example of working for Jesus, and being happy; of suffering bodily affliction, and being happy; and of dying, and being happy."—Wesleyan Times.

Precious Gems for the Saviour's Diadem:

Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.;
Bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"The narratives which make up this book are simply and beautifully written, and are adorned by a thread of poetry running through the whole. These 'Precious Gems' are radiant with devotion and spirituality."
Christian World.

Asked of God:

Experiences of Answered Prayer.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.;
Bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"The many instances given of the success and prevailing power of prayer are very remarkable, and must confirm the confidence of all who believe in its efficacy, whilst they rebuke the doubts and unbelief of those who question its power. The book is fitted to be eminently useful."—Preacher's Lantern.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN"

Who may be personally or relatively

INTERESTED in THIS MATTER.

MR. CONGREVE will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this Journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

TESTIMONY of the EDITOR of the 'GAZETTE,' BOURNEMOUTH.

"Some twelve years ago the writer of this, who was then little more than a lad, was in failing health, and various doctors, who were consulted, pronounced the complaint to be consumption, and did not give much hope. As a last resource, Mr. Congreve was visited at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, where he prescribed his medicine. The treatment directed was adopted for a few months, and the writer was restored to comparative health and strength, which he still enjoys to the present day. Gratitude being stronger than all other considerations, he feels compelled to bear this testimony for the sake of those who may be vainly seeking to battle with this terrible disease."

TWO CASES AT MAIDSTONE.

Medicine was obtained for each patient from me by Miss STAPLEY, who writes from Marsden, Bower Mount-road, Maidstone.

The first was the case of Mrs. HOPE, a very advanced case. "She took your medicine for some months. The result was most successful. She is now quite another woman." So Miss S. writes me in April last.

At the same time she introduces the other patient: "A similar case has come under my notice. I do not think it so far advanced as Mrs. Hope's, but am anxious for her to commence your treatment."

This was done. In two months she writes: "Edward Morgan is much better and able to work again," and in Aug. last the patient himself writes: "I am now as strong and well as ever. I wish to add my testimony to the very great value of your medicine." (The patient, Edward Morgan, is in the employ of Mrs. Chapman, The Postal, Lenham, Kent.)

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

Is a Household Requisite of Constant Utility.

That BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR possesses very valuable qualities as a food for all classes, at all periods of life except earliest infancy, has been attested by eminent dietetic authorities, as well as by universal public experience during over thirty years.

Interested attempts to set aside these facts in favour of other foods can only appeal to ignorance and prejudice, and it remains true that no other kind of food can serve the special purposes of Corn Flour.

BEETHAM'S Glycerine & Cucumber.

Soon renders the SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, AND WHITE; entirely removes and prevents all ROUGHNESS, REDNESS, SUNBURN, TAN, &c., and preserves the SKIN from the effects of the Sun, Wind, or Hard Water, more effectually than any other preparation. No lady who values her complexion should ever be without it, as it is INVALUABLE at all seasons for keeping the SKIN SOFT AND HEALTHY.

It is perfectly harmless, and may be applied to the skin of the tenderest infant.

Bottles, 1s., 1s. 9d., and 2s. 6d., of all Chemists; free for 3d. extra by the

MR. SAMUEL G. SHEPPARD AND DR. BARNARDO

INVITE all the Friends of Christ's Work among Children of the Streets to attend

A SPECIAL FESTIVAL at STEPNEY CAUSEWAY,

On WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9 (D.V.).

Doubtless many happy Boys and Girls home for the holidays will be glad to visit their poor little brothers, and to see something of their mode of life, and of the wonderful things they do, and we advise these to have early luncheon, so as to reach Stepney Causeway by 1.15 p.m. if possible.

The Programme contains several items of peculiar interest, such as:

(1) Military Drill in the yard at 1.15 p.m. precisely.

(2) Dulcimer, Mandolin, and Violin by small boys at 3 o'clock.

(3) Musical Drill by a squad of our trained boys at 2.30.

(4) Swimming Matches in the Swimming Bath at 4.30 and 5.30.

(5) Music by the Highland Pipers and the Hand Bell Ringers during the afternoon.

(6) All the new and enlarged Workshops will be open to view, and the following trades can also be seen in full operation:—

Bakers.	Harness-makers.	Wheelwrights.
Blacksmiths.	Matmakers.	Woodchoppers.
Brushmakers.	Printers.	And perhaps
Carpenters.	Shoemakers.	Tinsmiths.

(7) A GREAT MEETING will be held in the Gymnasium at 2.30 p.m., when Dr. Barnardo and others hope to be able to interest those present by the recital of some entirely new Narratives of Rescue of the boys and girls who are daily being added to the inmates of the Homes.

(8) Her Majesty's Hospital for Waif Children (exactly opposite the Home) will be on view the whole afternoon until 5.30.

(9) Refreshments provided at very moderate rates.

Admission will be by ticket only, price Sixpence each, application for which must be made to the undersigned.

The accommodation for visitors to the Swimming Bath is so limited that only about 300 can secure standing room at a time, so that there will be two separate exhibitions by the boys there—one at 4.30 p.m., terminating at 5.15; the other at 5.30, terminating at 6.15. As there is some expense in the arrangement, a small extra charge is made of 3d. for each person who desires to be present at the Swimming Contest.

On the evening of the same day (Wednesday, April 9), Rev. Walter J. MAYERS, will deliver a Musical Lecture at the "Edinburgh Castle," Rhodeswell-road, which is the headquarters of our Adult Mission work. As this meeting will not begin until 8 p.m., and as the festival at Stepney will be over by 6.30, visitors will have ample opportunity of reaching the Castle (which is within ten minutes' walk of the Homes), of obtaining suitable refreshments there, if desired, and of subsequently being present to hear Mr. Mayers. This will be a pleasant and profitable addition to the programme for the day, and will, we are sure, tend to stimulate interest in our work, as well as furnish our friends with a musical treat of a high order. If this suggestion can be practically carried out, we would strongly advise all who can to avail themselves of it. Admission to the Lecture Free.

Applications for Tickets for the Festival should be made in every case to

JOHN ODLING, Secretary.

The Christian.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of the late Sir Peter Coats, of Paisley.

As we have in another page taken notice of Dr. Marcus Dods' sermon as commended by "A Wesleyan Theologian," we commend to the attention of our readers "An Examination of the Sermon by Rev. Professor Marcus Dods, D.D., entitled, 'What is a Christian?'" by "Clericus." It calmly and briefly points out the erroneous and dangerous features of the sermon with which it deals. Few questions are more vitally important than that asked and answered, in his way, by Dr. Dods, and it is greatly to be desired that antidotes such as this pamphlet contains should be widely circulated. (24 pp. James Gemmell, Edinburgh.)

Many Christian officers in the army are anxious for the Christian public to know that the Military Exhibition to be held this year has been instituted solely in aid of Church of England Soldiers' Institutes. No benefit will accrue from it to such Homes as those of Miss Daniell, Miss Robinson, or those at Dover, Woolwich, Cork, Shorncliffe, Dublin, Edinburgh, and other places—Homes which are wholly undenominational, and have for their primary object the saving of souls. It is much to be regretted that the promoters should have placed such a limit upon the institutions to derive help from an exhibition which will doubtless be supported by visitors of every denomination.

In "Thoughts for Heart and Life," by Dr. John Ker, it is said that an objection is taken by some to services in which much is made of preaching and less of devotion, which should be the main thing. Dr. Ker replies, "Is not true preaching devotion?" This hits a great defect of present-day preaching. We observe that the restoration of the power of the pulpit formed one of the subjects of the annual address from the chair at a recent meeting of the Lancashire Union of Congregational Churches. This view of Dr. Ker, and this only, will restore the pulpit to the power it had in the best days of the Church's history. When topics fill discourses which go to kill devotion, and sermons are preached which do not attempt to awaken contrition, or kindle adoration and trust, then must the pulpit fail of its old efficiency, and the present complaint grow louder.

We have had many years of comparative quiet and rest, but the signs of the present time betoken impending social upheavals, of which perhaps few appreciate the significance and none can foresee the issues. The education of this generation has begun to produce results far beyond the anticipation of those who projected it, and the masses are within measurable distance of becoming the masters of the classes. We cannot but think that it is unwise for men of capital, for the sake of five or ten per cent. advance on wages, to bring the country to such a state of peril as we have just escaped through the settlement of the coal-miners' strike.

Mr. De Cobain, M.P., has, we are glad to see, introduced a Bill for the establishment of Courts of Arbitration for dealing with strikes and trade disputes. The Bill is backed by Mr. Reed, Mr. Cremer, Mr. Jordan, and Mr. Cuninghame Graham, but the measure is a somewhat vague one, and is perhaps somewhat too comprehensive in its range. It might be amended in committee, however, and we trust that all members who deplore the unhappy relations between capital and labour will support the endeavour to bring the matter within the range of practical politics.

Dean Lefroy's work, "The Christian Ministry: its Origin, Constitution, Nature, and Work," is a valuable contribution to pastoral theology. The substance of the goodly volume was delivered before the University of Dublin in 1887-8, as the Donnellan Lectures. It is well that one who writes from the Episcopalian point of view should see, as the Dean does, that the grace of God is not limited to Episcopacy. Scholarly and eloquent, the work will have a wholesome influence. The ministerial office is magnified because of its great duties, and some of the chapters are calculated to inspire with new zeal those who feed Christ's sheep. Sacerdotalism is shown to be utterly unscriptural. Dean Lefroy well remarks:—

> If every true believer in our blessed Lord devoted himself to the sacrifice of his time, of his talents, of his sympathy, of his substance, to the advancement of the kingdom of Christ, and in accordance with the needs and in sympathy with the labours of the ministry, the spurious claims of a caste clergy would be cancelled by the moral weight of individual and of corporate sanctification.

The lectures are practical as well as controversial, the moral sphere of ministerial work being discussed with fulness and power. (14s. Hodder & Stoughton.)

A Roman Catholic contemporary states that the priests attached to St. George's Cathedral in Southwark, have arranged to preach in the open air in various districts of South-East London. The writer states that "the practice is so associated with the proceedings of the Salvationists and Methodist revivalists that many Catholics have an unreasonable prejudice against it, but the first Catholic sermons ever preached, those of our Lord and his Apostles, were delivered to audiences in the open air." The experiment now being made in Southwark will, it is added, "as soon as its first successes are recorded, be imitated elsewhere, and very possibly there is in it the germ of a great missionary movement fruitful in the happiest results." We have been expecting this, and we must not be surprised if these very aggressive religionists claim the right to processions with Romish idolatrous accompaniments.

It is very gratifying to note Sir James Fergusson's statement in the House of Commons a few nights ago that the policy of the Niger Company was to check the spirit trade, and that "they had imposed a duty of two shillings a gallon on spirits imported into the river. The imports," Sir James added, "had fallen from 420,000 gallons in 1884 to 70,000 last year, exclusive of trade in native canoes." We can only consider this importation as 70,000 gallons too much, and we trust that by and by the Niger Company will see that not limitation but prohibition is what is required.

The announcement that Lady Howard de Walden has notified her intention of endowing, at a cost of £12,000, a wing of the West Kent Hospital at Maidstone, as a thank-offering for her recent recovery from an illness, is, unfortunately, noteworthy by reason of the infrequency with which gratitude for God's mercies in sickness takes so generous a form. We could wish to see the example followed, and we trust that it may be.

Commenting upon the recent meeting in regard to the unhappy condition of the barmaids our excellent contemporary, The Hospital, says:—

> Another resolution which the meeting passed, and which strongly deprecated the employment of women in bars and drinking-places at all, commends itself more to our judgment. In America it is the custom to employ men-waiters in drinking-places, and it would be much better if the same practice prevailed in this country. Women were never intended to face the coarse, vulgar, and often brutal orgies of a drinking-bar.

The two important papers recently written by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor for China's Millions, pleading that a thousand evangelists should be sent to China without delay, have been reprinted in pamphlet form. Mr. Taylor's well-supported contention is that Europe might easily furnish half this number of workers, and America the other half; and that the combined thousand might carry the Gospel message to every family in China within a very few years. Coming from a man of such large practical experience, the statement ought to carry great weight, and be studiously and prayerfully considered by the evangelical churches of both Continents. If every Christian congregation in the country would furnish a copy of this pamphlet to each of its members, great results would surely follow. Copies (6d. per dozen) may be had of the publishers of this paper, and of the Willard Tract Depository, Toronto, Canada.

The British Weekly, referring to Professor Robertson Smith's Burnet Lectures at Aberdeen, on the Religious Institutions of the Semites, says:—

> Dr. Smith is probably the one man in Britain who can elaborate a strictly scientific and historical proof of the absolute uniqueness of the Old Testament, and present the same in a manner alike convincing to scholars and the common people; and now he is doing it.

Our contemporary is more sanguine than convincing. We do not call in question the ability of Professor Smith to throw much light on the Old Testament. So far, however, as we have followed his teachings, they have had a tendency and effect which have been the opposite of reassuring. As to the "uniqueness of the Old Testament," we hold that it stands amply demonstrated already. If Dr. Smith wishes to impress that evident "uniqueness" upon "scholars and the common people," he need do little more than loyally expound the book, and let it advance its own claims upon the religious conscience. Those who have determined not to believe Moses and the Prophets will assuredly not be persuaded by any historical proof which the Professor may be able to add to that which devout research has already accumulated. We have no sympathy with those who tremble for the fate of the Old Testament; it comes to us with the unquestionable endorsement of Him who fulfilled the Law and the Prophets.

Mr. Gladstone's articles in Good Words on the Bible, the first of which appears in the April number, will be certain to attract world-wide attention. Judging from the tone and tenor of the instalment before us, the aged statesman means boldly to traverse the lines of modern criticism, and to show that the Scriptures have nothing to fear from the attacks to which they are being subjected. His main contention is thus stated:

> Though assailed by camp, by battery, and by mine, the Scriptures are nevertheless a house builded on a rock, and that rock is impregnable; the weapon of offence which shall impair their efficiency for practical purposes has not yet been forged; the Sacred Canon, which it took, perhaps, two thousand years from the accumulations of Moses down to the acceptance of the Apocalypse, to construct, is like to wear out the storms and the sunshine, and all the wayward aberrations of humanity, not merely for a term as long, but until time shall be no more.

While taking this high ground generally, Mr. Gladstone accepts the view that "the Scriptures are to be treated like any other book in the trial of their title," and that they "contain something of a human element," which, as a consequence, renders them liable to literary investigation and criticism.

Mr. Benjamin Scott's recently published book, "A State Iniquity: its rise, extension, and overthrow," should be studied by all earnest advocates of social purity. It is a concise history of the abominable system of State-regulated vice, and a review of a twenty years' agitation for the repeal of laws which once defiled the statute-book of the United Kingdom. It is not a work for indiscriminate circulation, as it deals with the medical as well as the moral branch of the subject. The pages bring to view a social scandal and a national sin; at the same time they show how impurity was condemned by the force of a healthy public opinion, and Christian morality was at last triumphantly vindicated. It is hoped that the book will prove of great service in countries where sin is still licensed.

The lessons of this sad chapter of our history are many, and very carefully enforced by statistics and other exact and detailed information. We in England do well even now to be on the alert, as in some circles there is a strong feeling in favour of re-introducing the obnoxious regulations. If the battle should ever be fought over again, which God forbid! we trust there will not be wanting such champions of high principle and honour as Mrs. Josephine Butler and Mr. James Stansfeld. An interesting feature of the volume is the lists of men and women throughout the country who exerted themselves in various ways to compass the overthrow of the iniquity.

John Wesley and Dr. Marcus Dods.

We often hear nowadays of specialists, on the one hand, and of many-sided men on the other. Dr. Marcus Dods must be of the latter sort. He has been accepted with acclamation by the Unitarians, and is now endorsed by the organ which leads the Methodist "Forward Movement." This journal declares that

> "'The Highland Host' is attacking Dr. Marcus Dods because he has tried to restate the fundamental verities of the Christian faith in modern language." "Dr. Marcus Dods is approximating to Wesley's teaching, and following Wesley's method of declaring in fearless language the many-sidedness of Scriptural truth."

While many will be surprised by this declaration, we imagine that none will be more surprised than Dr. Marcus Dods himself. The writer goes on to say that

> "Such liberal and generous thinkers as Dr. Marcus Dods bring Presbyterianism and Methodism so closely together that very intimate relations between these two communities appear to be among the golden possibilities of the future."

No doubt there are in these and all other denominations men who substitute Maurice's Gospel of Fatherhood for Christ's Gospel of the Kingdom, and who, seeking first philanthropy and humanitarianism, think they find the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. And these "liberal and generous thinkers" may unite together, but they will leave behind them those who "go their way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed their kids beside the shepherds' tents"; who "stand in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and find rest for their souls."

It is not true to imply that there is "a substantial agreement beneath verbal differences," between Dr. Marcus Dods' sermon, "What is a Christian?" and the views of "devoted and estimable Christians," who are said to "harp unduly on some of the controversial formulæ of the past." Nor is it candid to represent the truths for which they contend as "the theological verbiage of buried centuries." This age may think itself wise because of its discoveries in physical science, but it is a revelation of pitiful weakness to compare the learned shallowness of the present with the deeper thinking of the past.

We heartily agree with the assertion that

> "Nothing is more fatal than to insist upon the absolute necessity of any method of stating revealed truth which is not found in the Bible itself."

But it is not by any means characteristic of Dr. Marcus Dods and of his school rigidly to state revealed truth in Bible terms. Our protest against his notorious sermon is that it is a departure from revealed truth, and that its statements are not found in the Bible itself. We willingly admit that

> "We must not exaggerate the extent to which earnest minds have departed from orthodoxy because for a time many in these days are unable to accept truth in the modes of expression which satisfied previous ages, and which, perhaps, also satisfy those of us who have a vivid and happy Christian experience."

Nevertheless it says a great deal for "the modes of expression which satisfied previous ages," that they now "also satisfy those who have a vivid and happy Christian experience." This at least is primâ facie evidence that the teachers in the previous ages were right.

But the writer goes on to say:—

> The caveat which we have ventured to express is pre-eminently necessary in relation to our own educated children. It is to be feared that a great many of their parents and of their pastors have little idea of the extent to which our educated children have drifted away from the intellectual attitude of the past generation, and how vehemently, although silently, they rebel against the statements of truth which satisfied their grandfathers. They are saturated with the writings of George Macdonald, Stopford Brooke, Edna Lyall, Olive Schreiner, Mrs. Humphry Ward, and other writers of that class, as well as the more elaborate works of such men as Carlyle, Matthew Arnold, and Herbert Spencer. A generation full of the ideas and prejudices of such writers will not be won to Christ by the shibboleths of dead controversies. We must confront them with the Living Personal Christ rather than with any abstract plan of salvation. We must enlarge upon Facts rather than upon theories and explanations. And, in the first instance, we must be satisfied if they accept a smaller number of evangelical truths than we may deem desirable or ultimately necessary.

If the above caveat had been expressed on behalf of uneducated persons, or of those who, unfamiliar by early education with revealed truth, had yet been convicted of sin by the Holy Spirit, and were anxious to be taught the way of God more perfectly, we should indeed admit that "we must be satisfied if they accept a smaller number of evangelical truths than we may deem desirable or ultimately necessary." "Broken-hearted sinners" who have "received a crucified Christ" have received the Truth Himself, and his Spirit will lead them into all the truth, as they are able to bear it. But young persons, saturated with the scepticism of novelists and philosophers, and vehemently though silently rebelling against the statements of truth which satisfied their grandfathers, will not be won to Christ by anything in the Bible or out of it until they are convinced of sin. And when they know the plague of their own heart, and become humble and of a contrite spirit, and tremble at God's word, they will not wish to minimise the great salvation, nor to be taught the smallest number of evangelical truths consistent with escape from the wrath to come; but will receive the word with all readiness of mind, and search the Scriptures daily whether those things which they are taught are so.

We are glad to be able without qualification to endorse the last statement of the manifesto before us:—

> Every successful evangelist is well aware that many a man is truly and supernaturally regenerated long before his intellect has formulated with scientific precision even such a definite view of the New Life as human language can express. The fact in the heart constantly precedes the theory in the head; and, in truth, the theory in the head is of very little importance until it has a solid foundation in the experience of the heart.

Nevertheless, this would have more appropriately concluded an article based upon the aphorism of Murray McCheyne, that "only a broken-hearted sinner can receive a crucified Christ," than one on "The Silent Revolt of our Children." Surely John Wesley never contemplated that the children of Methodists should grow up saturated with George Macdonald and Mrs. Humphry Ward, with Carlyle and Herbert Spencer, and needing to be allured through the strait gate by an emasculated Gospel, which teaches that neither faith in Christ as the propitiation for our sins, nor in Jesus as the Son of God, is essential to their salvation. If that true and earnest man of God is conscious of present things said in his name, he must surely be crying, "Save me from my friends."

Perfectionism.

Dear Sir,—I hope you will believe that I write this letter in no captious spirit, but in sincere devotion to the truth, and love to all who name the name of Jesus, in spite of minor points of difference.

It was a source of sincere pleasure to read your paragraph announcing the late holiness mission in Rev. R. F. Horton's chapel, at Hampstead, conducted by Rev. F. D. Sanford and Mr. Reader Harris; and I was glad specially to hear from other and reliable sources that they distinctly disavowed, in their teaching, the eradication of sin. I have not their exact words; but we know the line of teaching which is generally intended by the words just quoted; and it was a relief to hear that men so excellent had disavowed it, not only because of its unscripturalness, but because it has had such a prejudicial effect on multitudes of seeking souls, who, having been disappointed in obtaining what they had been led to look for, but which God never promised, have been seriously hindered in their Christian life.

On hearing, however, that Mr. Sanford's little books were being largely circulated in Hampstead, and that many earnest people were beginning to believe in a kind of Adamic condition, so that they had come to be like Adam before he fell, with no innate tendency towards evil, I procured some of them. Much in them is very tender and spiritual, but I find also the very teaching which I understood, on good authority, had been distinctly repudiated.

In "Sanctified Wholly," Mr. Sanford says:—

P. 8: "The Thessalonians had been cleansed from former idols, but they were not fully cleansed from indwelling sin. They were living up to all the light they had, and thus in victory over every known sin, but there was this further work of grace to be done in them."

P. 15: "The Spirit of God here overthrows the theory of unbelief, that the suppression of sin is the acme of grace held out to believers in this life. Simply, to repress sin is to keep the ailment, the defilement, the fountain of sin within...Sanctification is the work of God, whereby He removes from the heart that which is the cause of the failure in our lives."

P. 23: "Sanctification removes the tendency to sin, but the susceptibility to sin still remains."

P. 21, and again "Steps to the Throne," p. 30, he suggests that when we are tempted, it is as Adam, or as our Lord was tempted, wholly from without: "There is a wide difference," he says, "between the temptation of a sanctified soul and the presence of indwelling sin." "If Satan can, by bringing these temptations on the soul, palm them off as the working of 'the old man,' and thus get one to discontinue his faith for a clean heart and to cease counting on the presence and work of the Sanctifier, his point will be gained."

Now, I venture to say that such statements are unscriptural and misleading. They do not distinguish between sin and sins. They say that there is something held out to us in the Word of God beyond victory over every known sin. They assert that in the sanctified soul there is no longer any tendency towards sin. They insinuate that we are in the position of Adam, in whom, before his fall, there was no sinful principle. They fail to take into consideration the fact, that we have inherited a body ("the flesh") which has come to us through hundreds of generations of people more or less depraved, and the appetites of which cannot but be therefore predisposed to sin, in a manner in which those of Adam's body could not have been, as it came fresh from his Maker's hand (see James i. 14).

I hold that our Lord Jesus can keep from all known sin all those who wholly trust Him. He can keep lip and life, speech and act, the thoughts and imaginations, and the heart; He can make us keenly sensitive of the distant approach of sin; He can lead us to loathe what we loved, and to shudder when it is presented. But, till we die and get the resurrection body, we must bear about the body of this flesh, with appetites and desires which have come down to us with a considerable bias towards evil. These, with their effect on our moral nature, constitute an innate tendency to sin, which could not have been present in unfallen Adam. And we all know how soon they run up into and inflame the mind, unless we are living in the Spirit which "lusteth against the flesh." It surely cannot be said that this sinful tendency is gone or can go, and, as long as it does not go, there is in us the evil bias, the unholy tendency—what the old divines were accustomed to call "original sin."

I am at a loss to understand how Mr. Sanford could disavow what his books teach. I think we ought to be straightforward in these matters. If he thinks that the views advocated in his books are Scriptural, then let him teach them openly: to his own Master he must stand or fall. But if he does not teach them, then let him withdraw the passages in question from his books.

In no unkind spirit, but in loyalty to truth alone I write these words.—Yours truly,

F. B. Meyer.

YOUNG WORKWOMEN IN LONDON.

In a pamphlet, entitled "Joyful Tidings from the Great City Harvest-field," Mrs. Fisher reports much earnest work last year in connection with "The Old Welcome," Crosskey-square, Little Britain, E.C. In a letter to us she says:—"Cheering results followed both the special services and our workroom readings, and we are expecting a glorious time of reaping this year. One mission, by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, proved productive of much blessing. We hope to have a week's services in May, for which we desire the prayers of those who know our work.

"Through the kindness of friends, both at home and abroad, we have been able to send many weary and sick ones to the seaside for rest and fresh air. We have also had valuable gifts in clothing and other useful things for our Christmas trees. Thus we were enabled to help many amongst the thousands of working women, who, during the year, have either passed through months of sickness, or been in trying circumstances through failure of work. We are especially thankful to the kind friends who send us flowers all through the summer, also text-cards, small books, lavender bags, pincushions, and scrap-books." A copy of last year's report will be gladly sent, with fuller details, upon application to Mrs. E. Fisher, care of the Hall-keeper, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

OUR VILLAGES.—From and about Calne two colporteurs with other local preachers spread the Gospel, and God graciously owns their efforts. Other villagers desire Gospel meetings, but the owners of land do not give nor sell for this purpose. The colporteurs visit from house to house and sell Gospel books; and tracts are given away freely, and much enjoyed. Will our readers pray that more openings may be found? There will be at Michaelmas at Bromham a house and land for sale, where a good Gospel work may be furthered by a godly man or lady devoted to the welfare of the people. This work is now led on by a lady of the village and others, and the accession of another helper would be a real blessing all round.

Calne, Wilts. John Chappell.

RESCUE WORK IN BOMBAY.

It may be remembered that Mrs. A. S. Dyer took charge of the Home of Hope, Bombay, established by the late Mrs. Gladwin. Mrs. Dyer writes to us that, in order to consolidate the work, she has handed over the care of this Home to Miss Richardson, who has hitherto superintended the Industrial Home. This step has been taken with the consent and approval of Mr. Gladwin, who is now in America.

The Home of Hope, says Mrs. Dyer, has been of great service in various ways, by affording a shelter to those in circumstances of moral danger. In the Industrial Home every endeavour is made to bring the inmates into personal vital relation with Jesus Christ, and in this matter the workers have been much encouraged. The majority of the European inmates have professed conversion, and they hold prayer-meetings among themselves. In India it is not practicable to any great extent to train the women in the Home as domestic servants, and they are taught various industrial occupations, such as will enable them to support themselves.

After much consideration, Miss Richardson has decided to have a larger institution, divided into sections, so that the inmates may be classified according to circumstances. She has purchased six acres of land, and proposes to erect four separate blocks of buildings, each in its own compound. Two of these will be for Europeans and two for natives. There will also be a workers' house, and accommodation for a few women of a superior class who need such a refuge. It is desired to continue a small branch institution in Bombay as a receiving home and temporary refuge. An English lady experienced in such work has this effort in India laid on her heart, and she would take charge of the Bombay Home as well as visit saloons and haunts of vice in the city. To complete the proposed buildings, the sum of £5000 will be required. Miss Richardson has hitherto sustained her work out of her own private resources; but for this larger undertaking she needs and asks for the help of Christian friends. Mr. George Gillett, of 9, Birchin-lane, London, E.C., will act as treasurer in England.

ZANZIBAR.—A little book setting forth the spiritual and moral condition of this island, and the need of a House of Rest for sailors visiting the port, has been issued. Friends who desire to help in establishing such a place of refuge should write to Mr. J. T. Isaac, Strangers' Rest, 163, St. George's-street, London, E., for copies of the booklet.

THE CHRISTIAN ARBITRATION AND PEACE SOCIETY.—Rev. Dr. G. Dana Boardman is president of this Society, the offices of which are at 310, Chestnut-street, Philadelphia, U.S.A. The Society is made up of members of evangelical churches throughout the world, and proceeds upon distinctly religious lines. Among those who attended a meeting held at Philadelphia on March 4 were several members of the Government, as well as senators, and other persons of influence. Mr. Justice Harlan, who presided, stated that during the last ninety years 5,000,000 human beings have died through wars in England and America. Dr. Boardman, in a powerful address, maintained that war is socially suicidal and murderous. The time is fast passing by when thoughtful men will cherish the sentimental tradition and barbarous fancy that a question of national honour can really be settled by an appeal to gunnery, however elaborate. Solemnly believing that the policy of Christ is a policy of peace, he as solemnly believed that the Lord is now summoning earth's nations to a policy of disarmament. He nowhere read in the New Testament a beatitude for warriors, but he did read, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." The secretary of the Society, Mr. J. B. Wood, expects to visit Europe in April, and to address meetings on the peace question from a Christian standpoint.

The First Epistle of Peter.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's Park Chapel.

XXVIII.—THE GARB OF THE HOLY SOUL.

1 Peter v. 5-6.

One of the chief signs of the unrenewed spirit is the haughty self-complacency with which it bears itself. To resent an insult; to stand upon fancied rights; to vaunt superiority; to show "the silver, and gold, and spices, and precious ointment" in the ostentatious and vain-glorious way which brought reproof and chastisement on Hezekiah—this is the manner of the world.

And this insidious sin of pride dies hard in the child of God; nay, it may be questioned if ever we shall be perfectly quit of it on this side the gates of pearl. It is Protean in its form, changing with every temperament, suiting itself to every mood, clinging as a Nessus cloak even around the flesh of the converted man. Christian men are proud of their houses, and carriages, and wealth, and position. Christian women are proud of their person, and dress, and rank, and children. Christian ministers are proud of their influence, and sermons, and the admiration they receive. A bit of flattery, a newspaper notice, a conscious success, are food enough for pride to grow fat upon, till it begins to fancy that all the world is thinking of it, and feels that the most extravagant praise is but a grudging tribute to its worth.

May I not press this upon my readers further, urging each to consider his own character and behaviour in the light of these words. We must be convicted of pride before we seek the grace of true humility. Pride is one of the most detestable of sins; yet does it find lodgment in earnest souls, though we often speak of it by some lighter name. We call it independence, self-reliance. We do not always discern it in the hurt feeling, which retires into itself, and nurses its sorrows in a sulk. We do not realise how much it has to do with our withdrawing from positions where we feel ourselves outshone by someone who excels us, and with whom we do not care to enter into comparison with the certainty of being second best. It would not be at all easy for us to be silent, to take the lowest place, to learn, where now we count it our prerogative to teach.

And sometimes, when we are clearly worsted, and obliged to step down, we begin to pride ourselves on the sweetness of our disposition in taking the affront so pleasantly. We are proud of our humility, vain of our meekness, and, putting on the saintliest look, we wonder whether all around are not admiring us for our lowliness. I fear me that Bunyan's shepherd-boy, sitting in the lowland glade, and singing, would have become proud of being so low, had he known that his lowliness was to render him immortal. There is at least one preacher whom I know, who has been proud of his sermons on humility, and ostentatious of his efforts to be meek. And thus, even if the soul should array itself in the garb of humility, however simple and plain it be, there is imminent risk of its becoming vain.

"Of all the evils of our corrupt nature, there is none more connatural and universal than pride, the grand wickedness, self-exalting in our own and others' opinion. St. Augustine says truly, that which first overcame man is the last thing he overcomes. Some sins, comparatively, may die before us, but this hath life in it, sensibly as long as we. It is as the heart of all, the first living, the last dying; and it hath this advantage, that whereas other sins are fomented by one another, this feeds even on virtues and graces as a moth that breeds in them, and consumes them, even in the finest of them, if it be not carefully looked to. As one head of this hydra is cut off, another rises up. It will secretly cleave to the best actions, and prey upon them. And therefore there is so much need that we continually watch, and fight, and pray against it, and be restless in the pursuit of real and deep humiliation, daily seeking to advance further in it."

The metaphor used in this passage is surely derived from that most touching incident on the eve of the crucifixion, when, though having present to his mind his origin and destiny, our Lord took upon Him the form of a servant. "Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that He was come from God, and went to God; He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments, and took a towel and girded Himself. After that He poured water into a basin, and began to wash his disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith He was girded." What a lovely vesture did that stripping, that towel, that lowly attitude between them make. Not even when He stood radiant on the Mount of Transfiguration did He seem to be dressed so fair. Surely Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as He. And so the injunction comes to us all, that we should adopt this same livery, and each one don his garb. "Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility." The question is how to be humble.

I. Recognise the Claims of those older than and superior to Yourself.—"Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder." In Athens it was held to be a matter of first importance that the young should pay deferential respect to their seniors. And even among the precepts of the New Testament, it would be hard to find one more salutary and beautiful than that of the old law: "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the Lord" (Lev. xix. 32.)

We need to repeat these maxims of wisdom and grace in the ears of each new generation. It is impossible not to notice the great laxity in such matters which is spreading through modern society, loosening its bands, and affecting its stability. Perhaps it is that children are taught too early habits of self-reliance, or are too precocious in their studies. But certain it is that they are more apt to dictate than to submit. Young shoulders are disinclined for the yoke. And yet how many bitter memories are being stored up for coming days. We remember how Dr. Johnson, in late life, stood bareheaded in the rain, in the market-place at Lichfield, in remorseful remembrance of boyish disobedience to his dead father. "Ye younger, submit."

Of course there are occasions when conscience forbids us to submit, and then we must respectfully state the reasons of our refusal, at whatever cost. But these occasions are comparatively rare. And in all doubtful cases, in all cases where a good conscience is not directly infringed, we should submit. Where young Christians have asked my advice as to the way they should behave, when their parents urge them to go to places which, if left to themselves, they would not choose, I invariably answer that, if their conscience absolutely prohibits them, as to the theatre, music-hall, or ball, they have no alternative but to refuse; but, where the question is as to questionable or indifferent things, so long as they are under parental control they should yield.

There are, however, other relationships in life besides that of parent and child. We are constantly thrown with those who have seen more of life, have lived more years, and acquired more experience than ourselves, and who have claims upon us. To all such, unless where their character has absolutely forfeited all their claims on our respect, there should be service without servility, meekness without meanness, consideration without cringing, politeness without a thought of policy.

And the cultivation of this habit of deference to those who are older and better than ourselves, with a distinct intention to acquire thereby some new tinge of humility, is to take a considerable step in that direction.

II. Take all the Occasions which Life affords of serving Others.—"All of you be subject one to another." Of course there must always be a diversity of function in society; but the very positions in it which we have inherited or acquired give us opportunities of exercising this constant life of self-denial for those around us.

To submit to discomfort, that we may promote their comfort. To submit to inconvenience, that we may make life easier for them. To submit to the cross, that we may save them, though at the cost of our blood. It is the same teaching as came out before in the injunction to "submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake."

Yield before wrong. Hold your mouth in subjection, choking back the proud, resentful words leaping up there for expression and chafing for utterance. Give up even your rights, rather than go to law to keep them. "If any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also." And submit in such matters, not from mean-spiritedness or cowardice, but because you will accept each opportunity which is put into your way of acquiring the grace of humility.

Let the servant take the rebuke of the master meekly, not careful to vindicate himself, save where the cause of God may be jeopardised by his fault. Let the employé receive the remonstrance of his employer quietly, eager to comply with any righteous demand, and to learn in silence. Let the believer who has said or done anything unkind and unjust to a fellow-believer confess it with shame, and put the scourge into his brother's hands, while he stands meekly to bear the inflicted strokes. Let us not shrink from humbling ourselves before our servants and children, if we have sinned against them. Strong as rocks and lions in our advocacy of the truth as it is in Jesus, let us be as the reed swept by the storm when it is merely a question of our good name, and prestige, and well-being. And let our single purpose be in all to learn the grace of humility, in all the occasions for its practice which our God throws in our way.

III. Accept all the Divine Discipline of Life.—"Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God." Ah, what infinite sorrow men lay up for themselves in resisting the Divine will! If you fret and chafe against his appointments, finding fault with Him because He has not given you another lot, some other partner for your life, some more congenial occupation, you cannot but be wretched. For at the bottom of all such dispositions, which fume as the waves of the sea, there lurks a feeling of disappointed pride, which thinks that it deserved some better treatment from God, and considers itself ill-used.

But who are we that we demand so fair and comfortable a lot—we whose first father was a gardener who stole his Master's fruit, who have sprung from the dust but yesterday, and who have piled Alps on Andes of repeated sin? Let us accept what God sends. The worst is ten thousand times better than we deserve. The hardest is the better evidence of a love which dares not spoil us. The whole is dictated and arranged by such wisdom as cannot for a single instant err.

The shadow cast by that mighty hand is dense and dark; its pressure is almost overwhelming. David cried, as he felt it, "Day and night thy hand was heavy upon me, my moisture was turned into the drought of summer." But bend beneath it. Its pressure may be felt in personal suffering, in rebuke, or shame, or persecution, or in loss of property, or in some other form of chastisement, yet take each as another opportunity of putting into practice this injunction to humility.

"Lie still my soul, whatever God ordains is right and good; thou deservest nothing better; what right hast thou to be sitting at the royal table at all, when thou hadst forfeited it for the swine's fare; if thou hadst thy rights, thou wouldst be now in the outer gloom."

IV. Other Methods may be Suggested.—Let us try to get a true estimate of ourselves. Let us judge ourselves now that we be not judged at the last:—

(1) Look into thyself in earnest.—"And truly, whosoever thou be that hast the highest conceit of thyself, and the highest causes of it, a real sight of thyself will lay thy crest. Men look on any good, or fancy of it, in themselves, with both eyes, and skip over as unpleasant their real defects and deformities. Every man is his own flatterer. But let any man see his ignorance, and lay what he knows not over against what he knows, the disorders in his heart over against any right motion of them, his secret follies against his outwardly blameless carriage, and it shall be impossible for him not to abase and abhor himself."

(2) Accustom yourself to look at the good in others.—Many of us compare ourselves at the best with others at their worst, and of course we come off with advantage, at least in our own esteem. We are so much keener to see the defects than the excellences of our companions. We look at the one with the magnifying glass, and the other with the reversed telescope. But if we were to be keen on their virtues as now on their vices, always looking for the compensating grace, always making such allowances as we can find, always magnifying what is lovely and of good report, and thinking of these things, then we should find the bubbles of our self-congratulation pricked and burst.

(3) Accept all kind good things from whatever source as the gift of God, and tune your heart in praise to Him.—It is very pleasant to be thanked and kindly spoken of, to be surrounded by dear friends with their honeyed words, and we may be thankful when such hours shine on us, as it is impossible for them to last, if only we are true to our Master. And whilst they tarry they will not hurt us, if only we pass on all kind speeches in thanksgiving and praise to God. When we can transmute all praises into Praise, all speeches into Speech, and gifts into Sacrifices, falling down to worship Him who is the giver of every good and perfect gift, we shall emerge from the ordeal, without having contracted guilt.

(4) Claim the humility of Jesus.—As you go through the world, not only set yourself to resist pride, but make every temptation towards it an occasion for lifting your heart to Christ to receive from Him something more of his own sweet and humble spirit. "Thy humility, Lord!"

There are many incitements to this:—

God resisteth the proud.—The Greek word here is very expressive. He sets Himself in battle array. Ah, miserable attempt to withstand God. Pharaoh perishing in the Red Sea is the perpetual evidence of the futility of the conflict. All things may seem to prosper for a time; but discomfiture is certain, and will be final.

He giveth grace to the humble.—"His sweet dews and showers of grace slide off the mountains of pride, and fall on the low valleys of humble hearts, making them pleasant and fertile. The swelling heart, puffed up with a fancy of fulness, hath no room for grace. The humble heart is most capacious, and, as being emptied and hollowed, can hold most." The vessels which are most heavily laden sink lowest in the water, and those which can sink lowest, without danger, are they which are most heavily charged with the freightage of the Orient. Oh for the humble heart which can hold most grace, and, as it obtains more, sinks still lower in its own esteem!

He will exalt in due time.—"The lame take the prey." The meek inherit the earth. The master of the feast bids those who take the lowest rooms to go up higher. Moses, the meekest man, has taught the principles of jurisprudence to half the world, and sits on the judgment-seat. The martyr's stake has ever been a throne from which the sufferer has ruled after ages. The men and women of gracious, retiring spirit wield the truest authority in town or village. Those who can die on the cross, pass through the grave to the Ascension Mount. Be humble, not only in outward mien, but in the inner shrine of thy spirit, and in due time, not to-day or to-morrow, but in his own time, He will exalt thee to inherit the earth.

The Book of Esther.

The valued contributor who wrote the Notes on "Esther" has adopted the usual method of treating the book. By this method, views and statements are read into the narrative which the inspired writer has not suggested. By fixing attention on matters extraneous to the story as recorded, the purpose of the writer is to some extent frustrated; conclusions are drawn which the Scripture does not imply, and the obvious lesson which it is evidently intended to enforce is obscured, if not altogether missed. This remark applies to a method (or want of method) of exposition not uncommon, but from which the book before us has suffered more perhaps than any other.

This divine story is both historical and typical—literal and spiritual. But these two distinct lines of revelation are vitally connected, and the purpose of the inspiring Spirit will be turned aside in regard to each, if we add to or take from the things which are written in the book. For example, a very evangelical commentator says that "the refusal of Vashti to obey an order which required her to make an indecent exposure of herself before a company of drunken revellers was becoming both the modesty of her sex and her rank as queen." This is an imaginative addition to what is written. The inspired writer certainly does not suggest either that "an indecent exposure" was demanded of Vashti, or that the guests had been reduced to a "company of drunken revellers." Vashti was simply required to appear in her queenly dignity and personal beauty before the princes and nobles of the land. Read i. 3, 4; what could be more fitting than that when the king showed his excellent majesty, his queen should appear at his side? She was "good of countenance" (i. 11, marg.), like, e.g., the Princess of Wales, whom the people always like to see, and who does not refuse to come when asked. And if the justification of Vashti falls to the ground, the charge that the king and his counsellors and princes were a party of drunken revellers falls with it. Even if the statements of the commentator had been true, it would still remain a fact that they do not come within the writer's field of view. Therefore, their assertion distracts attention from the purpose of the Holy Spirit in writing this section of Israel's history.

When a commentator proceeds without reference to the unity of design in the writer, he is not unlikely to contradict himself. The expositor above quoted goes on to say:—

"According to Persian customs, the queen, even more than the wives of other men, was secluded from the public gaze [But see Neh. ii. 6]: and had not the king's blood been heated with wine, or his reason overpowered by force of offended pride, he would have perceived that his own honour as well as hers was consulted by her dignified conduct."

If this had been so, surely there must have been developed among the guests, and particularly among "the seven princes of Persia and Media who saw the king's face, and who sat the first in the kingdom," some sympathy with Vashti, and some revulsion from the unconstitutional conduct of the king. But in his next paragraph our commentator says:—

"The combined wisdom of all, it seems, was enlisted to consult with the king what course should be taken after so unprecedented an occurrence as Vashti's disobedience of the royal summons. It is scarcely possible for us to imagine the astonishment produced by such a refusal in a country and a court where the will of the sovereign was absolute."

It is remarkable that a king heated by wine and overpowered by offended pride, with seven drunken counsellors, should have been in a condition to devise a plan based on a far-sighted view of the circumstances, a plan which raised no opposition throughout the kingdom, and was carried out to the letter!

If the king's summons to Vashti had been so dishonourable to himself and to her, surely the astonishment produced by Vashti's refusal would have been preceded by an equal astonishment that so glorious a monarch should so disgrace his excellent majesty (i. 4). But the sacred historian gives no hint of this. Moreover, Daniel shows us that the Persian kings were not absolute, and that their nobles were not necessarily and utterly subservient to their will. This indeed was the very difference between the head of gold and the breast and arms of silver—between the absolute autocracy of the King of Babylon, and the inability of the Persian monarchs to reverse a decree once made.

Our contention is that the above kind of comment on Inspired Scripture is futile and misleading; and if applied to uninspired writings would convert a coherent argument or narrative into a series of unconnected facts, or suppositions, or aphorisms.

"The main scope of Esther," says Canon Rawlinson, in the "Speaker's Commentary," "is simply to give an account of the circumstances under which the Feast of Purim was instituted." But this purpose alone scarcely accounts for the way in which the narrative is written. The very title, Feast of Purim—Pur, the lot (ch. iii. 7, ix. 24, 26, cf. Prov. xvi. 23)—indicates that the Spirit of God has designed to show the overruling providence of God in the deliverance, preservation, and exaltation of his people, for "the lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." This shines out through every sentence of the story, and ought not to be obscured by the introduction of references and surmises which, even if they were historically accurate, do not come within the writer's field of view, and only tend to confuse the issue which Divine inspiration makes the chief lesson of the book.

Even historically viewed, the symmetry of the story is marred by the introduction of the foreign matter; but in its typical aspect it is entirely subverted. For I believe, with some who have gone before, that this book is a microcosm of the Kingdom of God. The dramatis personæ are the Great King (Ps. xlviii. 2); the Faithful Servant—the Man whom the King delighteth to honour (Isa. xlii. 1); the Wife, Vashti—beauty—put away (Ps. l. 2; Ezek. xvi. 14, 15); an alien Maiden, a stranger and a foreigner, put into her place (Eph. ii. 12, 19); the Enemy and Adversary, who raises "a tree" for the Faithful Servant, and perishes thereon himself (Heb. ii. 14).

Those who have eyes to see will see much more; to those who have not, even this will seem foolishness. M.

The Hong Kong Inferno.

As an Englishman who reads the Bible with care, and who believes in the applicability of its standards to both national and individual life, permit me to utter an emphatic dissent from the closing words of a report by the Governor of Hong Kong, dated October 31, of last year, on the condition of that British possession. The report is addressed to Lord Knutsford, as Secretary of State for the Colonies; and is of interest, outside of official circles, to British Christians, because Hong Kong is one of the gateways through which British missionary enterprise (as well as British commerce) enters China. Governor Sir G. W. des Vœux says:—"It may be doubted whether the evidences of material and moral achievement, presented as it were (in Hong Kong) in a focus, make anywhere a more forcible appeal to eye and imagination, and whether any other spot on the earth is thus more likely to excite, or more fully justifies, pride in the name of Englishman."

The extraordinary conclusion of Governor des Vœux cannot be shared either within or without the colony by persons who understand English words in their pure, honest, Biblical sense. I doubt if the moral depravity of Hong Kong is exceeded, if it is equalled, by that of any other British possession on the face of the globe.

A Christian missionary once said publicly in Hong Kong that, if he thought the introduction of Christianity into China would lead to such a state of things as he saw in that colony, he would immediately give up his work. It is not urging anything in condonation of the blackness of heathenism in China to remark that its morality is higher than that of what the Chinese regard as Christian rule, as exemplified in Hong Kong. The Chinese Government revolts from licensing impurity, as it revolted from legalising the iniquitous opium traffic until forced to do so by British arms. By a strange infatuation, British authority in Hong Kong, not content with licensing immorality for English soldiers and sailors, is licensing it for the Chinese inhabitants of the colony, thus sinking to a lower level than the heathen around them. This is one of the "moral achievements" which are to excite "pride in the name of Englishman."

The Acting Registrar-General is the present head, under the Governor, of the Department of Licensed Infamy. A few days since he informed my missionary friend, Mr. W. E. Robbins, of Bombay, in my presence, that, as the universal official panderer to lust, he registers Japanese, European, and American women and girls, equally with Chinese. Japan has learnt from Britain, as one of the characteristics of our civilisation, the science of licensing sin; and increasing numbers of Japanese women, some having borne the Government licence there, transfer themselves, or are shipped by others, to Hong Kong and Singapore. Recently a consignment arrived at Ceylon; but, happily for that island, the authorities at once shipped them back again. The Acting Registrar-General at Hong Kong says that the Government possesses the power to banish any person; but it is not exercised against women who come from other lands to aid in corrupting the colony under a permit from his department. The European women are principally Hungarian, who, it is well known to the Acting Registrar-General, and the police, are largely brought to Hong Kong under false pretences.

Such is the universal corruption of this officially belauded place that no Englishman, no European, or American, who is not a member of one of the small Christian Churches, is expected to lead other than a life of gross vice. It is chastity and not sin that is boycotted in Hong Kong society. In the vast majority of cases it were infinitely better for parents in Great Britain to bury their sons than to send them to commercial or official life in Hong Kong, unless they are well-established Christians; and to bury their daughters than to allow them to become legally (what they cannot become morally) the wives of men who are engaged there in such pursuits. The young women who go out thus from pure homes almost invariably learn secrets from their maid-servants or others, soon following their arrival, which blast all the after-course of their lives.

Is it nothing to British Christians that such a Sodom under British rule exists in close contiguity to China and Japan, where so much of the consecrated energy of the Church of Christ is engaged in planting the white banner of the Cross? It is something to British Christians. They cannot prevent private immorality in distant possessions, but they can insist that in no spot under the British flag shall the reputation of Great Britain and the name of Englishman under the reign of Victoria be soiled by the prostitution of authority in the licensing of sin. It is something to British Christians that at this gateway to China and high road to Japan, British Government mocks at the Bible, and calls evil good and good evil.

The devil's emissaries, official and unofficial, will probably attempt to drown the indignant voice of the Christian Churches at home, by shouting professions of philanthropy. Among the excuses for this sin against God and humanity will, perhaps, be an alleged desire and design to protect women and girls, as though any work of philanthropy ever required the cold-blooded and persistent violation of the Divine law. I will leave it to every honest man and woman to judge of the depth of the philanthropic professions of the makers and upholders of a law which professes to save with one hand whilst it damns with the other. Beneath the white glove there is the flesh of a leper.

Yours for the salvation of the perishing,

Alfred S. Dyer.

UNION HALL MISSION.

Mr. Robert Bilke assembled workers and friends for the annual meetings on Thursday evening last week. It was cheering to hear in his report of marked blessing during the past year. The preaching of the Gospel of God's grace has borne fruit not only at Union Hall, but at the Kensal, Queen's Park, and Battersea Halls. Three tents were in use last summer, one was at Brentford, where it is desired to erect a small iron room, if £300 can be raised for the purpose. The large number of children who attend the Sunday-schools is a particularly pleasing fact; and much-needed class-rooms could be built in connection with Queen's Park Hall for £150. The homes of some of the poorest districts are visited with happy results.

Space does not allow us to name the many agencies connected with the Mission. It is saddening to learn that, like other beneficent enterprises, the work has suffered from the death of staunch supporters, whose places few come forward to fill. £1200 is required annually to sustain the Mission in its present efficiency; but the good man who, for twenty-five years, has organised and directed this work, closes his balance-sheet with a very small sum in hand.

There were some stirring addresses. Mr. Robert Paton was in his usual genial vein as chairman, and advocated plain, earnest, direct, comprehensive, intelligent, dealing with souls. Mr. George Morgan showed reasons against weariness in well-doing. Well-doing is founded upon well-being, and is not mere well-speaking. Mr. W. R. Lane told a pathetic story of a returning backslider. Mr. Finlay Gibson pointed out the sweet company, the steady course, the safe counsel, and the sound conversion of Malachi ii. 6. Other good things were in store as we left the meeting.

NOBLE WORK IN THE NORTH SEA.

By permission of the Duke of Westminster, a well-attended drawing-room meeting, to advocate the claims of the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, was held in Grosvenor House, on Wednesday afternoon last week. After Mr. W. H. Seagram had led in prayer, the chairman, Mr. T. B. Miller, made feeling reference to the recent sudden and lamented death of Mr. Thomas Gray, a member of the Mission's Council, and introduced Dr. W. T. Grenfell, lately back from the North Sea. The isolation and hardships under which the 25,000 men employed in the fishery pursue their calling were graphically sketched. They sleep in wet clothes on the floors of badly ventilated, dark, and box-like cabins, while seas of many tons weight are breaking over the vessels. Their visits ashore are few and short. They work in intense cold for poor remuneration, sometimes twenty hours a day; and take dangerous night watches, standing hour after hour on a small frozen space. The fishing is done at night, in dangerous shallows; and there are frequent, sometimes heavy, losses of life in boarding the fish. The fishers may only be evangelised on the scene of their labours by missionaries willing to share their dangers, and who carry to the toilers the Gospel, medical aid, warm clothing, and eagerly received literature. The "coper," bearing maddening drink, which is pressed upon those who want only the cheap tobacco not obtainable elsewhere, finds its evil occupation gone wherever the Mission's vessels remain. The Mission has eight vessels in the North Sea, one off the West Coast of Ireland, and one off Lundy Island. When the weather allows a service to be held, the smackmen come miles to attend it. Only one or two hands from each smack can be spared to attend service. On one occasion, 100 men were present, so that nearly every smack in the fleet was represented. Not only has the Mission effected a social revolution in the North Sea, but the civic authorities on shore are compelled to acknowledge the change in the men. Those with broken limbs tied up in pieces of old boxes and sometimes unset, have been brought aboard the hospital ships for attention, days after the accident.

Skipper Macdonald, amongst many interesting details of his experience, related the profound impression produced by the appear ance in the fleet of a lady who had left all her comforts to "come out and do us North-Sea dogs good." He mentioned some of the self-sacrificing deeds of men influenced by the Mission; and said that the gratitude of the fishers for benefits received finds expression in prayer for unknown benefactors on shore.

The Chairman mentioned that the Mission has now two hospital ships afloat; but each can work only in one of the six or eight fleets now in the North Sea. The extent, character, and completeness of the work must depend upon an increase of the widespread sympathy the Mission has already received. No class of men show better results from work among them. It was a common thing in his experience for converted fishers to spend five or six hours in the study of God's Word, and then show much unwillingness to separate.

DR. THEO. L. CUYLER writes from Brooklyn on March 10:—"My church yesterday was very crowded, and God is blessing us with many conversions. I trust that my beloved flock may be directed to the right man to occupy their pulpit after my resignation takes effect in April. The prospect now is that a large majority of our Presbyteries will vote in favour of revising our venerable Confession of Faith. No evangelical doctrine will be disturbed, and the only change will be a removal of a few clauses which seem to limit the offer of salvation through the redeeming work of Jesus Christ. While Christ invites all to come to Him, we wish to put no dogma in a penitent sinner's pathway."

Along the Tigris Valley.

We are favoured with the following extracts from a letter written by Rev. J. G. Wishard, an American medical missionary in Asiatic Turkey, to a friend in England:—

The valley along the Tigris is quite low and very fertile. Extending back from this valley is a beautiful plain, diversified by low mountain ranges, which becomes more and more elevated until it reaches the Koordish Mountains. This junction is in most places very abrupt, as the peaks rise to a great height, rivalling in grandeur many of the noted peaks of the Rocky Mountains. The climate is as diversified as the surface. In the valleys it is fearfully hot, while the mountains are at all times covered with snow.

The villages and homes in winter of the mountaineers are in these valleys, but the heat of summer drives them to the top of mountains. These valleys are so narrow that some of the villages extend several miles. The terraced fields and gardens on the side of the mountain, lying one above the other, and the villages built in a similar manner, ornamented by orchards of olive, fig, and other kinds of fruit trees, make these valleys appear very picturesque, especially when viewed from a neighbouring mountain peak. The people are extremely poor, and are kept that way by governmental oppression. This is particularly true of the people on the plain. No one is feared so much by them as the Turkish tax-gatherer. The Government sells the right to collect the tax to the highest bidder. The highest bidder, armed with this authority, sends soldiers in all directions in his district to extort from the people all they can. Nothing is too cruel or barbarous for these men to resort to if it will bring in an extra piastre.

When we were in Hassan, in the province of Bohtan, soldiers suddenly made their appearance, and told a number of our brethren that, unless they had a certain amount of money for them the following day, they would be taken out and severely beaten. To produce the amount was an impossibility, and the oxen, money, &c., had already been taken by these human leeches. That night the people came to us, and pleaded with us to advance them the amount (nine dollars) and thus save them from the beating. Of course we could not do this, for, should these soldiers learn they could in this way get money from us, the troubles of our brethren would only be increased. I was not in the village the following day, but I have learned since that the people were beaten. While this is the condition of things on the plain, it is quite different in the mountains. The mountaineers are really independent, and are prepared at all times to defend themselves. The Government is glad to accept from them a nominal tax without trouble.

From Bohtan we went through Supna, Tiary, and Tacoma. Everywhere except in Tacoma we were well received. The extended tours have given us, I think, a knowledge of the field, its needs and possibilities, that will always be of great value to us in our work. At different places, particularly down on the plain, our medical work seemed to be peculiarly blessed. Here we were well received, and much interest was shown in our work. Mr. McDowell received several into the church, and a still greater number seemed deeply interested. Tacoma, with its population estimated at 10,000, is a long narrow valley lying at either side of a small, beautiful, and rapid river. The people live in villages which are but a few minutes' walk apart. They are living under an independent government and ruled by chiefs. This little valley has been the scene, especially during the past two years, of much trouble. During this time Col. Bell, an English officer, Mr. Coan, and a French priest, have been robbed by them, besides many native travellers.

Before reaching Tiary we received from the Tacomians a cordial invitation to visit them, saying that if we would but notify them of our coming they would send an escort out to bring us safely into their country. We had, however, before receiving this word, decided to visit them, as the mission had work there. We reached their country after a hard week's journey over the mountains, and after having been attacked by a large number of Koords. Our guide, whom we obtained from the Koordish chief of that region, by reason of his position, saved us in this attack from any loss. On the following day, Sunday, our helpers were sent to the different villages of the valley to hold service. They all reported interesting meetings and good treatment, although it was with great difficulty that they could be persuaded to go. Subsequent occurrences showed their fear to be well founded. The meetings held by us were well attended. Indeed, the deep interest shown by several seemed to warrant us in spending a week with them at least. This we had decided to do. Word reached us early on Sunday that men had been sent out in all directions through the mountains to block every pass leading out of the valley. We also learned that the invitation to visit them was only part of their plan to get us in there, in order to rob us. We were not inclined to believe these reports at first, as we were continually hearing such things. By night, however, things had taken such a serious turn as to show us that it would be unwise to remain longer than the following day. Our helpers all urged us to leave in the night, and avoid the trouble the following day. This, of course, we would not do. Trouble was now so apparent that we had to keep several men on guard while we slept.

SHELTERING HOME, LIVERPOOL.

Our thirty-third band of trained children sailed on Thursday, March 13, in the steamship Polynesian, under the care of Mr. Drummond, our head teacher. It consisted of fine, strong, sturdy lads, and was the first band that has gone from the new Home in Myrtle-street. They had some months of careful and patient teaching, religious, secular, and industrial, with their future in Canada always in view. Unsatisfactory characters were weeded out, or detained for further training, with the result that we could recommend them all as obedient, orderly, willing to do their best, and anxious to get on and assist their widowed mothers or other friends left behind.

We are still receiving boys and girls, with a view to emigration later in the summer, and we trust friends will remember that it requires many gifts to meet the expenses of journey and outfit.—Yours faithfully, Louisa Birt.

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD is not in Word but in Power."—These lines, by "L. E. S. O.," which recently appeared in our columns, have been reprinted in leaflet form, and copies may be obtained from Miss Howard, 84, Guildhall-street, Folkestone.

NEW HALL MISSION, WELLINGTON, SALOP.—Dr. Cranage, of the Old Hall School, is hon. superintendent of this interesting effort. The report recently issued covers the past two years, in the course of which the Gospel has continued to be preached by earnest men. The members of the Christian Union have earnestly laboured in various ways, sustaining religious and temperance work among the young; while unwearying endeavour has been made to succour the weak in body, and help the poor in spirit. The offerings of the people leave much to be done by others to keep the Mission going, and we are sorry to see that the year opened with a balance of £155 due to the superintendent. The work of the Mission is of an all-round character, and pursued in the spirit of true solicitude for the souls of the people.

THE SALVATION ARMY ON THE CONTINENT.

The work in France and Switzerland takes no secondary rank among the many undertakings of the Salvation Army. The annual meetings of this particular division of the War are exceedingly popular among officers and soldiers alike, while those who have a general sympathy with the work of the Army find much to interest in the story of achievements in France, and struggles in Switzerland. A cheering report was rendered on Tuesday evening last week to an enthusiastic gathering which filled Exeter Hall to its utmost capacity. What has been done fully justified the joy that was displayed, to say nothing of the many grounds of hope that in the near future other victories will be gained in the battle against prejudice as well as Satan. A goodly number of workers from the Continent attended, and the proceedings were presided over by General Booth.

The General referred to the rapid growth of the Army. It is, he said, just twenty-five years since the work began. He had no notion at the time of the extent to which the enterprise would in so short a time develop. A trickling rivulet, the result of love to Christ and a simple desire to do something to command attention to the great concernments of eternity, flowed out of his own heart; but what has God wrought! The colours of the Army are now flying in thirty-five different countries; there are nearly 3000 separate societies, and getting on for 9000 sustained officers, with tens of thousands of volunteer officers, who, after their daily toil, do their best to help on the work. General Booth made an earnest appeal for consecrated souls to carry on the war. There was, he said, never such a loud cry as to-day for devoted men and women. Every mail brings requests for help. We want workers for Burmah, where a lady has built us a hall; we cannot lay our hands on officers for Japan and South America; while appeals from China have been so often repeated that we grieve not to be able to send out labourers in anything like sufficient number. In conclusion, Mr. Booth read a letter from his invalid wife, who besought the friends of salvation work to consecrate themselves wholly. She testified to the love and faithfulness of God, and, as one on the verge of the eternal world, she called upon men and women to take their stand for God and eternal things, rather than serve the world and Satan.

Commissioner Booth-Clibborn told the story of operations in the south of France and Switzerland. The persecutions in the latter country were a sad chapter, misunderstanding and prejudice finding expression in many cruelties and excesses. The Maréchale (Madame Booth-Clibborn) followed with an account of the work in Paris. Among the converts is a gentleman belonging to the Bourbon family, once in repute as a "finished infidel." The speaker pronounced a high opinion of the French character, saying that, when enlightened by the Gospel, the people will show to good purpose the enthusiasm which, as infidels, they now manifest against God.

In the course of the evening the Maréchale and her husband sang hymns, and among those who led in prayer were some French officers and a converted Mohammedan.

NORTH ITALY.—Pastor Matteo Prochet writes to us of the opening of a Protestant church at Pie di Cavallo, in the Province of Biella. Gospel preaching had been going on for two years, and a little company of believers gathered together. The church was opened on Feb. 26, and the two services of the day were very impressive. There was great joy among the people at having a place where they could meet to worship God and commemorate the dying love of the Saviour.

In Eastern Lands.—Palestine.

By GAWIN KIRKHAM.

The Holy Land offers a somewhat rude welcome to those who enter by way of Jaffa. The rough swell of the sea, if not actually dangerous, is sufficiently exciting to make the traveller glad to set his feet once more on terra firma.

One of our fellow-travellers seemed to me to enter upon this pilgrimage in the right spirit. Surrounded by a crowd of Arabs, there was a momentary halt at the entrance of the Custom House, and a Welsh minister took advantage of this pause to fall on one knee, uncover his head, and offer a silent prayer. We see here sad and painful examples of superstition on the part of both Latin and Greek Churches, especially the latter; but the tendency of some members of our party is in the direction of irreverence, and whatever we may think about the accuracy of the sites of sacred places, it is more becoming to listen and examine in the spirit of learners, than flippantly to ridicule what we see and hear.

The disadvantage of being one of a "personally conducted" party was experienced at Jaffa. Only two hours were allowed between landing and commencing the journey to Jerusalem. This was very disappointing to one who wished to see something of mission work. However, I managed to pay a hasty visit to the Mildmay Hospital, a substantial and roomy building erected on a hill at the south end of the town. Here I found eight deaconesses and nurses at dinner, and looked into some of the wards. Even so brief a visit was intensely gratifying to me, as I knew dear Miss Mangan, who sacrificed her life to obtain this boon in a place where it is so sorely needed.

I also paid a flying visit to Miss Arnott's school, and was sorry to find that she was too ill to be seen—another instance of overwork. But I saw the girls at dinner, and very happy they seemed. I also tasted their dinner, which I was assured was the same as the "mess of pottage" for which Esau sold his birthright.

As we rode on horseback to Jerusalem, many places were pointed out of interest to the Bible student. The extensive Plain of Sharon which we crossed is much more fruitful than most of the places I have yet seen, and the Rose of Sharon (usually now considered to be the crimson anemone) had just burst from the earth to welcome the new comers. For it is yet early spring, and vegetation has hardly put on its new garb. At Ramleh we met a flock of sheep following their shepherd, reminding us of our Lord: for "when He putteth forth his own sheep He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him." Then there was the extensive valley of Ajalon, with upper Beth Horon in the distance on a hill-top, from which Joshua commanded the sun and moon to stand still till the victory was complete. Further on we descended, amidst a heavy rain-storm, into the valley of Elah, where David's sling and stone, or rather his faith, gained such a signal victory over the Philistines in the death of Goliath of Gath. Passing Emmaus we came in sight of "the city of the great king," though the entrance to Jerusalem by the Jaffa gate is not the most impressive.

We have been a three days' journey to the Dead Sea and the Jordan, bathing in the former, and meditating on the banks of the latter. Nothing has struck me so forcibly hitherto as the exceeding barrenness of the country. It is very mountainous, so that rock and sand are the dominant features. No doubt this will be somewhat changed when the season is more advanced; but the question is perpetually arising: Can these barren valleys and naked rocks ever again become what they were in olden time? In some places efforts are being made to restore the old terraces, by which the soil was kept on the sides of the hills; but, unless there is a greater rainfall, the scant soil can bear but little. Now, at the end of the rainy season, nearly all the watercourses are dry: What will the land be like when summer is more advanced?

I am afraid to write about Jerusalem, as I am so deeply conscious of my own ignorance. Nor can I as yet say much about mission work, as I have only seen a little of the surface of it. But I paid an interesting visit to Mr. D. C. Joseph's Mission on Sunday morning. About twenty-five were present, including some unconverted Jews. But even in this small gathering my address was translated into German and Arabic to bring it intelligibly before the hearers. One lesson was read in Hebrew, and another in English, and the hymns were from Sacred Songs and Solos. Mr. Joseph has sustained a great loss in the recent death of his wife, and is only just recovering from a serious illness, so that he needs the sympathy and prayers of the Lord's people.

On the same Sunday afternoon, I got a pleasant glimpse of the work of the Church Missionary Society. I was invited by the Rev. C. T. Wilson to address his Sunday-school. The way to his mission-room was somewhat narrow, and up many steps, but the room itself was lofty and light. Between sixty and seventy children were present, chiefly belonging to the Greek Church, and about ten adults. The boys had the customary fez, but took it off during the service, and all the girls had coloured kerchiefs over their heads. They were remarkably well behaved, and displayed considerable intelligence. The service was in Arabic, and my address was translated by one of the teachers. From the school Mr. Wilson went to his church to conduct another Arabic service. The C.M.S. is doing a good work in Palestine and Syria.

I paid a visit to the English Deaconess' House, a branch of Mrs. Meredith's Mission, and found six ladies in residence. On entering, Miss Cavendish was showing her Greek Bible to three Greek priests, who, with others, had taken refuge during a hail shower. These ladies work among the Mussulman women, attending to the sick and preaching the Gospel. From an account Miss Cavendish gave me, I should think the most interesting part of their work is the visitation of the Mussulman villages round Jerusalem as far as Hebron. The women receive them cordially, sometimes offering them coffee and bread and honey.

But, doubtless, the most extensive mission work in Jerusalem is carried on by the London Jews' Society. There is a large, well-built stone church on Mount Zion, with schools for boys and girls, a medical mission and other agencies. The Rev. A. H. Kelk is the missionary in charge, who has two ordained assistants, Rev. J. E. Hanauer, and Rev. J. Jamal. The new Bishop of Jerusalem, Dr. Blyth, has the Episcopal oversight of all the Church of England Missions in Palestine and Egypt; but it is no secret that the relations between the missionaries and the Bishop are strained. The appointment was made by the Archbishop of Canterbury; but Dr. Blyth's High Church proclivities are a source of grief and perplexity to these evangelical clergy. I heard him preach on Ash Wednesday in this church on Mount Zion (Christ Church), and in an interview afterwards found him singularly cordial.

Bishop Gobat's schools for boys on the further side of Mount Zion, built on the foundation of the outer walls of the old city, were described by my guide as "the hope of the country." Here I found fifty-three boys from different and distant parts of Syria and Palestine receiving a good education, paid for in part by their parents or friends. They live on the premises, being both boarded and lodged as well as educated. When I entered they were in the midst of their Bible-lesson, and read English remarkably well. One branch of the school is a kind of school of the prophets, where young men are trained, not only for teachers, but also for evangelists.

LADS AND LASSES OF MARYLEBONE.

We rejoice to be able to report that the work which Miss Meredith Brown directs in Lissongrove, N.W., continues to be attended with blessing, which is very cheering to the friends of the Shaftesbury Institute, Harrow-street. The great need for Christian work in that part of London cannot be realised by the casual visitor to the degree in which it becomes impressed upon one living on the spot. Miss Brown knows what it is to reside in the midst of irreligious and thriftless multitudes, among whom, sad to say, young life grows up in grievous ignorance and shameless immorality.

The annual meeting of friends of the work was held on Friday last, having been deferred some weeks owing to the illness of Miss Brown. Mr. J. E. Mathieson presided, and gave expression to his cordial sympathy.

Miss Brown's address was at once encouraging and saddening. As a retrospect of effort, it was pitched in the tone of deep gratitude to God for the great things which his grace has accomplished among the factory girls and boys of Lisson-grove; on the other hand, as a statement of the need of the poor young people, it was exceedingly painful. The influence of the work is steadily growing among mothers and children alike. Factories are visited during the dinner hour, and the talks of the ladies are looked forward to with pleasure by some of the girls. The dangers to which these are exposed are many. Brought up in scenes of wretchedness, which often render respectability of life impossible, as soon as they are won by the story of God's love, the girls are willing to listen to counsel with regard to leaving their old associates and ways in order to serve Christ in holiness of life.

The difficulties are such that nothing short of an abiding consciousness of the love of Jesus and the power of God's grace could enable the workers to pursue it year after year. The various evening and Sunday meetings are well attended. Being unruly, the girls have to be brought under strict discipline; but once their affection is gained this is comparatively easy. To gain their affections is the important point, and to this the workers address themselves with special earnestness. Some of the roughest of the girls are now leading Christian lives; and at present there are seven in the Home in training for domestic service.

Speaking of work among the lads, Miss Brown stated that the club for them in another part of the premises is highly appreciated. The membership is about 100, and the general behaviour has greatly improved. The work demands increased accommodation, and it is hoped that it will soon be possible to secure the third side of the square in which the Institute stands. The outlay will be about £3000, over one-third of which sum has already been promised or paid.

Rev. Dr. Donald Fraser spoke of the great importance of the work, which he regarded as making the omnipotence of God's grace conspicuous to all. Lieut. Knox, R.N., who labours among the lads, emphasised the great need of Shaftesbury Institutes in all parts of London. He, moreover, thought that Lisson Grove had a special need. To meeting this he willingly devotes his own time and energy. We trust that, by the speedy addition of fresh premises, he will be enabled greatly to develop the work.

Clapton.—Rev. Thomas Jackson, Primitive Methodist minister, writes:—"During my thirteen years' ministry in East London I have not met with so much distress among the poorer section of the working classes as that witnessed by us this season, owing to the prevalence of influenza. Whole families have been nursed and supplied with nourishments by the members of our benevolent society. There are still many distressing cases that appeal for help, but we are powerless to respond to them owing to lack of funds. Will our friends further remember us in their prayers and gifts?" Mr. Jackson's address is 41, Powerscroft-road, Lower Clapton, E.

"JUST AS I AM."

VERSION FOR THE YOUNG.

JUST as I am, my youthful days
To spend in my Creator's praise,
Like a May morning's pure bright rays;
O Saviour dear, I come!

Just as I am, when hope is bright,
And life seems rosy with delight;
Yet needing Thee, the world's true light,
O Saviour dear, I come!

Just as I am, when habits twine
Round me like tendril of the vine,
To be at once and ever thine,
O Saviour dear, I come!

Just as I am; O take me now,
Jesus who died, thy love I know
Can wash me whiter than the snow,
O Saviour dear, I come!

Just as I am, that not a stain
On my life-story may remain,
That I the crown of life may gain,
O Saviour dear, I come!

R. TUTIN THOMAS.

A BRAHMIN CONVERT.

SAMUEL is a young Brahmin who has gone through many trials since his baptism. During the last three years he has been sheltered under the roof of one of the Basle missionaries on the west coast, far away from his own people. The following letter from Miss Reade, of Arcot, gives an account of his first interview with his own family after his return:—

"I am writing from Cuddalore, Travellers' Bungalow, whither Samuel and I had come for him to see his father, mother, brother, and uncle. His uncle, who seems to have been more a father to him than his own father, having heard of his being at Trivady, came to see him with his little brother, a boy of ten or twelve years of age. They came quietly, not to the mission-house, but to a little empty bungalow. This was a sufficiently trying ordeal, for his uncle wept silently the whole time. The one theme was to induce Samuel to come back, and he was told that his family and other Brahmins had raised a sum of money to obtain a paper from the chief priest at Mysore to enable them to receive him back into caste at any distance of time.

"His uncle having told him that his mother was quite ill on his account, poor Samuel could not rest, and begged me to accompany him next day to Cuddalore to seek an interview with her. We came in by the five a.m. train. The suspense was almost more than he could bear, for they did not come till between twelve and one. And now the dreaded interview is over. It has been terrible—not from any display of anger or violence, but the mother's love and grief poured out on him. His brother came first, then his father, who, to my surprise, greeted me in a most calm and friendly manner, and then his mother, sister, and cousin. I went to receive them, and gave his message: 'If you come calmly and without tears, I will see you; but, if weeping and wailing, I will not see you.' His mother, who seemed bursting with grief, said: 'How can I keep from crying? My very bowels are turned within me.'

"She and his sister passed me quickly into the room where he was waiting. He was most brave and steadfast; but, when on his sitting down, his mother pressed his head to her bosom, putting her cloth round him, he bent down his head and cried and sobbed like a child. On this his poor young brother burst out with tears, 'Brother is crying, oh, what shall I do?' It was enough to wring one's heart. His sister, a married girl of seventeen, was hard as a rock, and, looking at me with a scowl, she ridiculed him, saying among other things, 'Why, you have even forgotten how to tie your cloth.'

"At last, when we got them to leave, they only went outside the compound, and sat down under a tree, and nothing would persuade them to move, so at last we ordered the jutka (a native carriage). Poor fellow! he had a terrible breakdown in the afternoon, and again on our return to Panrūti; and ate nothing till the next day. His mother is a most sweet ladylike woman; my heart feels so drawn out to her. I think it was the change in her appearance, and being obliged to appear hard to her which tried him so much. It was a terrible and testing ordeal."

YOUNG MEN AT STAFFORD ROOMS.

THE new secretary of the Stafford Rooms branch of the Y.M.C.A. (Mr. Rogerson) has signalised his accession to office by securing a larger publicity for its operations, in the holding of the annual meeting at Marylebone Presbyterian Church. The well-known names of Donald Fraser, John McNeill, and Professor Gladstone, drew together a considerable company. The secretary's statement was as hopeful and complete as could be expected under the circumstances; it seemed meagre in the matter of figures, but, of course, there is a lot of work even in a healthy Y.M.C.A. that cannot be tabulated. The Sunday Bible-class appears to be one live item in the work; there is an average attendance of sixty to eighty. A good deal of outside aggressive effort is sustained in the streets, the lodging-houses, the parks, &c. The financial statement showed a small balance in hand, but that has since been wiped out, said the treasurer, and turned into a deficit of £20, and there is great need for more annual subscriptions.

The speeches were good. Dr. DONALD FRASER, after moving the formal adoption of the report, said some excellent and timely things about the importance of maintaining sound doctrine in the Associations. He could recall the history of the Y.M.C.A. from its very beginning, and to its fidelity to evangelical truth he attributed much of the undoubted blessing it had been to young men. Of course, it had not been free from imperfections any more than other human organisation; but he thought it was being managed with growing wisdom, and if it stuck to the good old ways he augured for it a bright and useful future. Dr. Fraser, in the latter part of his address, gave his young friends a sevenfold exhortation to action from the Epistle to the Hebrews: Let us draw near; let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering; let us consider one another; let us lay aside every weight; let us run the race; let us go forth to Him without the camp; let us render the sacrifice of praise continually. All these points were very profitably and suggestively amplified. Rev. J. E. SHEPHARD, of John-street, Bedford-row, spoke warmly of the good work these Associations are doing on behalf of the lonely young men of the great City.

Rev. JOHN MCNEILL's talk to the young men was marked by the striking excellencies as well as the defects of his peculiar mode of address. The customary number of Scotticisms were dragged in. He was discursive, dramatic, humorous, impressive, and pathetic by turns. He was himself a product of the Y.M.C.A., he said, and, therefore, he did not care to go in for picking holes in the institution to which he owed much. He was strong on the critical nature of a young man's first days or weeks in the great City, and on the need of giving him help in the right direction just then. Various types of young men were portrayed, and the need of studied adaptation to their peculiar temperament insisted on. He came down with sledge-hammer force on the unbending stiffness and lack of sociality that characterise too much of our church life and our Y.M.C.A. life. He contended that downright soul-saving work must be the foremost thing in the Associations, and that education and recreation, good as they are, must be held subordinate. In the course of his address Mr. McNeill told how he had recently, in Regent-square Church, drawn a bow at a venture. Addressing an imaginary young man in the audience, he told him that he had come up to London from the country with a letter of introduction in his pocket to the minister, but he had been led away by the glamour of the city, and he had deferred presenting his letter. The result of that remark was that two young men called upon him and delivered letters of introduction that had been kept back in the way described.

Professor Gladstone was the advertised chairman, but he was detained for a time. Dr. Donald Fraser and Mr. T. A. Denny successively fulfilled the easy task of keeping order till the Professor came and added his note to the general chorus of good wishes for the work at Stafford Rooms.

Dr. BARNARDO'S EMIGRATION WORK

DR. BARNARDO was present at the noon prayer-meeting at 186, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, with a party of 152 trained lads about to leave for Canada. In an interesting statement he mentioned that these lads would bring up the number who had been emigrated to the Dominion by the Homes to 4345. They were, as usual, picked boys from several of the Homes. Some of the older lads were designed to be placed in residence on the Manitoba Industrial Farm. For the smaller boys, situations, chiefly on farms, had been already secured in Christian households throughout Ontario. No fewer than 80, or over 53 per cent., of the boys had been gathered in from a homeless and friendless street life, while 72 were entirely orphaned, 42 had mothers only living, and only 19 had both parents alive. These figures indicated that the Homes were actually laying hold upon the very neediest classes, bringing them up amidst Christian influences, and then, if they passed their invariable test, of honesty, decency, and industry, giving them the opportunity for a successful life which perhaps they had never had before.

Dr. Barnardo was rejoiced to say there were not a few among the party whose hearts God had touched, and who had given unmistakable tokens of true conversion. They found by previous experience that the seeds of Christian faith sown in the Homes sprang up time, and again in the after life of lads sent out into the world, and it was their earnest prayer that this result would also accrue in connection with the present party. In conclusion, Dr. Barnardo stated that he hoped during the present year to send out at least 500 Canadian emigrants. He hoped at no distant date to ask his friends to join with him in bidding farewell to a batch of trained colonists for Australia, as negotiations with that country, which had been long pending, were showing favourable developments. The lads were briefly addressed by Mr. Robert Paton, who presided, and the party were earnestly commended to God in prayer by several friends.

ISABELLA MACPHERSON:

The Story of a Devoted Life.*

By her Brother, Rev. JOHN MACPHERSON, Dundee.

CHAPTER XV.—LAST DAYS.

(Concluded.)

ONE Sabbath in May, despite her weakness and pain, she went to the morning fellowship-meeting; attended church forenoon and afternoon; filling up the interval, as usual, with visits to the poor, the afflicted, and the unsaved. The weather was wet and stormy, and she returned home late in the afternoon in a state of utter prostration. That night her husband was to conduct a service at which her presence was desired, and she bravely faced the rain and storm once more. It was "the last straw." She returned wet, disabled, and ill, and lay down to die. During the remaining weeks of life she suffered much; but in the midst of alternate acute pain and deep depression she maintained her habitual tranquillity and fortitude.

"I am going home," she constantly said.

"It may be the Lord's will to raise you up yet," it was said to her.

"Whichever way, what the will of the Lord is, to go or to stay, I am pleased," was her reply.

"There may be still some work for you to do."

"Were I to live," she replied, "I should do less work; but I WOULD TRY TO DO IT BETTER."

Her love of Nature never left her. "You may be able yet to go to Deeside," it was said to her. "Oh, it would be pleasant to die there, and be buried among those glorious hills," she replied. The nearer one is to God, the dearer are his works. But the climbing of Craigendarrock and Morven and Lochnigar had now for her come to an end. The rambling among the birches and the heather in the Refrantrach was but a fading memory. The peaceful sauntering along the lily-bordered shore of Loch Kinnord, and the pleasant tea-making in the wood at Dinnet, where the Dee pours a crystal flood over its rocky bed, was past and gone for ever. She knew she never more would stand on the heights of Balmoral, and feast the eye on scenery of entrancing loveliness, or roam in the corries in search of curious stones and rare ferns and white heather. To her all this was fast vanishing away. Other and untrodden scenes were before her; and yet she wished to die among the heather, and be buried among the mountains.

Her passion for saving souls continued to the last. Our servant was inquiring for her one day when Isabella called her into her room and spoke to her about Jesus. "I am happy, happy," said she: "take Christ, Jemima, and you will be happy, always happy!" The girl was deeply moved, and every day afterwards managed to find her way into the sick room. One Sabbath morning the dying worker lovingly embraced Jemima, and urged her with many tears to close with Christ. All that day the girl was in great trouble of soul; at night she was enabled to acept Christ as her Saviour. Next day she went in and told her dying friend that she was now happy in Christ. Thus, in her greatest weakness, the earnest worker received power to win another soul for God. So, too, the one was beginning the Christian course just as the other was ending it; and it seemed as if grace and glory were touching and shaking hands.

As she entered the valley, she encountered the great adversary. About to be dislodged from the earthly tabernacle, she said to herself, "Where am I going? Am I to enter eternity a homeless wanderer? What if——?" Suddenly a rush of fearful thoughts swept through her soul; her faith was submerged; she was well-nigh overwhelmed. "You must go away, and you have nowhere to go to—and what then?" said the tempter. The conflict was severe; but victory came by faith. The enemy now left the field, and she had no more conflict. To her husband, on his return from the country, after an absence of three days, she said, exultingly, "Jamie, I am dying; but I have great peace." He was struck with the fulness of her assurance and joy. It was the victory of grace—manifest to all; and it continued to the end. For each one of the many who came to see her she had an appropriate word.

During her [illness] she often sang snatches of favourite hymns, that, too, amidst acute physical suffering, and when her voice was as feeble as a child's. Now and again, in tones sweet and low, she sang:—

When peace, like a river, attendeth my way,
When sorrows, like sea billows, roll;
Whatever my lot, Thou hast taught me to know,
It is well, it is well with my soul.

At a point in her illness when medical opinion did not forbid hope of recovery, she had been removed to my house, not far from her own, in order to be nursed by her sisters. When the disease began to develop with unexpected rapidity, and there was no longer any hope, she expressed a strong desire to be taken back to her own house to die there. This wish was gratified. The kind hands of the physician and two other friends bore her to the ambulance, and she was laid once more upon her own bed. This was the last night of her life; and though she was in the last stage of weakness, very bravely, after her own old way, she nerved herself for the removal, and bore up with her wonted heroic spirit.

"Now you are home," said the doctor, cheerily.

"Yes, doctor," she replied, "and I am going to a glorious home."

Then warmly, though with faltering speech, she thanked the Christian gentlemen who had rendered this last loving service. "God bless you all for it," she said; "God bless you now, and bless you in eternity."

In the silent hours of this, her last night on earth, she sang her favourite hymn—one she had often sung during those closing weeks of life:—

To God be the glory! great things He hath done!
So loved He the world that He gave us his Son:
Who yielded his life an atonement for sin,
And opened the Life-gate that all may go in.

Again and again she sang this hymn, asking her husband to aid her in recalling the words and in giving them voice. This was the last effort of full consciousness.

Her thoughts had been occupied during those last days of life in tender solicitude for others—for her husband, her sisters, her brother, her servant, even down to minute details in regard to their welfare:

THE LAST BEAT OF THAT LOVING HEART

was love. Even when the distance widened between her and us, as she went her solitary way into the valley, she looked at us tenderly as from afar, following with her eye our every movement. When we stood on the river's brink, and her feet were deep in the waters, she kept peering through the gathering darkness as if she caught the far-away sound of a voice, while one of us repeated portions of Scripture, among the rest and last her favourite text, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever." When her voice was finally hushed, and the last gleam was fading from that winsome eye, by a movement of her lips she signalled a loving farewell to each and to all, and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. This was on the evening of Monday, July 9, 1888.

On Thursday she was buried in the Eastern Necropolis, of Dundee; and on the following Sabbath a great crowd assembled in Bonnethill Church to solemnise the event, when a sermon was preached from Rev. vii. 14. It was deeply touching to witness the universal sorrow: it seemed as if everybody had lost a friend. "Such weeping," said an elder, "has not been seen in Dundee since the day when Robert Annan's funeral sermon was preached." From every quarter came sympathetic letters breathing admiration of her noble character, and bearing testimony to the grace that had been given her.

So passed away as sweet a soul as ever breathed. A more gentle spirit, a more gracious character, a more beneficent life it would be hard to find. Freely she received, freely she gave. For others she lived, loved, and laboured. When to bless others meant for herself a cross, joyfully did she take it up; and in her strong faith found it only "such a burden as wings are to a bird, or sails to a ship." Rich and bountiful was her life, because she had learned how to love and to suffer. To her was given grace to touch everything with grace; and all around a wide circle she left not a little of the beauty with which her Lord had arrayed her. With a step of heroic firmness she trod the thornier paths; and, although to us she seemed to die in the midst of her days, she lived a full term, seeing she not only won a crown for herself, but also mightily helped others to win crowns. To God be the glory!

MR. WAUGH'S MISSION AT POOLE.

MUCH blessing has attended a mission at Poole, conducted by Rev. T. Waugh. The meetings, though held in the Wesleyan Chapel, were entirely unsectarian, ministers of other denominations taking an active part. The spirit of prayer was poured out long before the commencement of the mission, and many Christians had been led to cry, "Search us, O Lord," and bring the tithes into the storehouse. Faith was given them to lay hold of the promise that the windows of heaven should be opened.

The work during the mission has been both quiet and deep; the living waters of the river of life have flowed down in mighty stillness and resistless power. On Sunday afternoon, when six hundred men were assembled, Pilate's question, "What shall I do then with Jesus?" was pressed home to the conscience, the word being accompanied with signs following. One noticeable feature has been the large proportion of young men who rose for prayer every evening, and afterwards went into the inquiry-room.

The Divine influence was manifested in an extraordinary degree on Wednesday night, when Mr. Waugh took for his subject, "Death-bed repentances." Again, on Thursday, when he delivered his last address to the unsaved, on "Quench not the Spirit," a large number of young men and women yielded themselves forthwith to the voice of God.

Letter to the Editor.

"APOSTOLIC WARFARE."

DEAR SIR,—In answer to the brotherly letter of "J. G.," I would ask, In what way, except the mere name, does General Booth differ from the director of any large and successful mission—our deservedly esteemed brother, Mr. Hudson Taylor, for instance? Why should one be stigmatised as an autocrat, and the other be accepted as "a brother beloved"? If Mr. Taylor's work became a hundred times as large and as successful as it now is, would he then be branded with the opprobrious epithet?

I ask this, not in any captions spirit, but simply for the sake of information. But I should suggest that anyone not acquainted with the practical working of the Salvation Army is hardly competent to give an answer, as I want facts, and not fancies.

Yours, W. F. H.

MR. HENRY TOYE,

Home for the Fatherless, Greenwich.

IN reviewing the lives of Christian workers, one cannot but notice how varied are the ways in which God leads them, first into the love and knowledge of Himself, and then into some path of fruitful service. To-day we place upon our page the portrait of one whose life experience is a dower to the Christian Church—so sorely has he been tried, so rich is he in faith, and so abundantly has he been rewarded. The circle of his duties is comparatively limited and obscure, but to those who have communed with him he is as a well-spring of blessing, a means of grace to re-assure and refresh the ready-to-halt on the heavenly way.

Mr. Henry Toye is in his seventieth year; he was born at Clifton in 1820. In Bristol he served his apprenticeship to the handicraft of shipwright. The wonderful manner in which he has been able to utilise the deft skill thus acquired will be seen later on. Attracted by the promise of work in the Deptford Dockyard he came to the Metropolis, and in Greenwich he made his home. The influence of early moral training served to make his life singularly pure and upright, but at the age of twenty-eight he came under the gracious and conscious influences of the cross of Jesus Christ. When passing the Congregational Church in Greenwich-road he was attracted by a name familiar to him—Rev. William Lucy, late of Bristol, but then pastor of that congregation. It was an arrow from Mr. Lucy's quiver, winged by the Divine Spirit, that found its way into Mr. Toye's heart. He soon discovered that the new life meant labouring for others. He employed his leisure time in visiting the poor and the suffering; he taught in the Sunday-school; as opportunity offered, he was ever ready to proclaim the message of salvation.

A visit to Bristol in 1850 was of considerable importance to him. He had met with a friendless orphan child, and found that Mr. George Müller would receive it into his Home at Ashley Down. Thither he took the little one, and had the pleasure of meeting with that large-hearted man. He received from Mr Müller one of his little books, which had for its subject, the duty of believers to exercise faith in the Divine government in all matters of daily life, and the privilege of seeking continual guidance. The book influenced Mr. Toye so much that he separated himself from the trade societies of which he was a member. He was also led to give up Government employment, as he could not believe that building ships of war was seemly work for a follower of Christ.

It is not necessary here to tell how the Thames was once the home of a thriving ship-building industry, or how competition carried the work elsewhere, and grass grew upon the once busy streets of Millwall. The suffering of the population in that locality became intense, and thither Mr. Toye was led in January 1867 to inquire into details of destitution, and to be an almoner of many friends who were anxious to relieve the starving population. He soon found his hands full of work. Children roamed about the streets, and for these he opened schools. This was before the days of School Boards. Sewing classes were formed for the girls; and to employ men out of work Mr. Toye went into business as a wood-chopper.

Two years were spent in these efforts, and 1869 found him preparing to accept heavier responsibilities. When parents died, and left a family uncared for, Mr. Toye made it his business to place the orphans in sheltering institutions; but, alas! his candidates were more numerous than were the openings for them. At this period he had ten orphans, absolutely friendless, under his eye, not knowing where to find homes for them. He had it in his mind to care for them himself, if he could only see how. His own words will best explain his position, and show the source whence came the needed help:—

> I was waiting upon the Lord to provide me with the means for procuring bedsteads and bedding. One day, whilst pacing an empty room in this destitute district, this verse from Hebrews xiii. was applied with much power to my heart: "Let your conversation be without covetousness, and be content with such things as ye have; for He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."
> At first I felt at a loss to understand what reference this passage could have to the subject upon which I had been meditating, inasmuch as I was not only without money, but as it seemed to me without means of any description towards carrying out the desire of my heart. After pondering, it appeared to me that it was the Lord's will, to signify by this text that I should make the required bedsteads out of some timber He had already given me; so at once I set to work to construct cots, and now, whilst writing, there are twenty-seven made by my own hands.

But what about the bedding? Still the Scripture said, "Be content with such things as ye have." What else could this mean but to utilise what lay closest to his hand? That was flour sacking which he shaped for his purpose. He had a goodly supply of newspapers in store. He found work for the little ones in tearing these into small pieces, and so the mattresses were supplied. Sheets, blankets, and quilts arrived and the place was furnished. On September 3, 1869, the "Home for the Fatherless" received its first occupants. The house for girls was fitted for twenty-two inmates, and the boys', next door, for sixteen. He wrote at this period:—

> If the Lord in his rich grace supply the means, I purpose gradually to increase the number, as there are hundreds of poor fatherless ones in London alone.

Thus was he led into the work in which he has since been engaged, and in connection with which he has passed through many a strange experience. He has known what it is to be exalted, and what it is to be abased; yet never once has he parted from that sheet-anchor given to him that memorable day, from Hebrews—"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Is there in all Scripture a more emphatic and unqualified promise? In the Greek it contains no fewer than five negatives, and it might well be rendered thus:—

"I will never leave thee, no; neither will I forsake thee; no, never."

It was Mr. Toye's resolve to honour God by accepting this text as a personal covenant. Accordingly, during all these years, he has never directly sought for aid of any sort for his large family or himself from any human source. To God alone has he made known his need, and it is with a face full of joy that he testifies:—

"Faithful is He that hath promised."

He did not long remain on the northern side of the Thames. In many respects the place was unsuitable. He was led to secure premises in Lewisham-road, Greenwich; and there for the past twenty years he and his large family have found a home. As the numbers increased he was obliged to add house to house; until to-day he has under his care an establishment where over a hundred and twenty children are comfortably housed, educated, and trained. Some six hundred children in all have had the advantage of his training, and are now, under God, a credit to themselves and to Mr. Toye.

Space will not permit our going into detail regarding Mr. Toye's personal labours in things material. Those who visit the Home, however, will be surprised to see what an old man with a willing heart and a ready hand has done. Not merely the children's cots, but the walls and roof of his fine schoolroom of two stories, 75 feet by 21 feet, were built and constructed by his own hands. He laid the floors and lined the walls, the only hindrance being that sometimes an empty treasury caused the builder and "clerk of works" to take a rest. But the great Master of intermediaries always caused the needed supplies to be forthcoming. The writer has heard him say:—

Look at my children, how healthy they are. Never once have we missed a meal; though very often we had taken breakfast without the slightest idea of where the dinner was to come from. But it always has come. We have spread the cloth for tea not having the needed bread; but it came just in the nick of time—cut up and buttered.

It is Mr. Toye's custom to publish annually "an account of the Lord's dealings" with him. Its pages indicate the life he leads—a life of simple dependence on his Heavenly Father. It shows how sometimes he has been sorely tried, and how the door of deliverance was opened. This series of "accounts" forms indeed a charming chapter in the history of faith. In the latest issue he writes:—

Many indeed have been the trials of faith, but great have been the deliverances wrought. Many, many times have I had to stand still and see the salvation of God; but I say to the praise of his name I have not waited for Him in vain. We have often been brought to the last penny, with the store-room nearly empty and coal-cellars swept up. Sometimes the supplies have come meal by meal, yet we have not had to go without food, nor without a fire when needed. The longer I go on in this simple pathway of faith, the greater is my joy; to be brought to the last penny and the last loaf, and then to see the hand of Him who upholds all things by his mighty power, and without whose knowledge not a sparrow falls to the ground, is worth having the faith tested. If the store-room and coal-cellars were always full, and the purse well furnished, there would be little need for faith—certainly not for its exercise.

Thus it is that this dear servant of the Lord and of his little ones is kept day by day. Thus it is that the great Father watches over the fatherless, and those who love to honour and magnify his name. Long may Mr. Toye live to be a channel of blessing to destitute children and a practical preacher of simple faith in the mighty love and unchanging faithfulness of God.

THE MILITARY CHURCH IN ROME.

It has from the first been the custom of the Evangelical Military Church in Rome to observe the anniversary of the king's birthday, and to hold a meeting in the evening. This year it has been a day of great joy, not only to the members of the church, but to all the strangers present at the gathering. The large Methodist Church, in which the meeting was held, was literally crammed with soldiers from all divisions of the service, and with foreigners from many different nations.

Dr. Grey presided, and spoke in warm terms of the royal house of Savoy, and specially of Umberto I. Sergeant Funari, in a speech which was much enjoyed, illustrating the statement of Giulio Carcano that "liberty of conscience is the first right of man," referred to the statue of Giordano Bruno, which, from the very spot where the "heretic" was burnt alive, points with menacing finger to the Vatican. The speaker earnestly prayed for the progress of the Gospel in the country. Junior Sergeant Salomone reviewed the story of the wars for independence. In conclusion, he said: "Oh, Papal Rome, we could give you the power to recover yourself, and that power would be the Gospel, if, treading your Paganism under foot, you would at last embrace the truth." Engineer Soldier Cifarelli described, in moving words, the comfort which the Military Church had been to so many soldiers, far from home and friends.

Rev. H. J. Piggott spoke in the highest praise of the work, saying that from day to day he saw it more flourishing—never stationary.

"SHALOM HOUSE," 134, Upper Parliament-street, Liverpool, is a pleasant Home of Rest for Christian workers, and a good training school for home and foreign missionaries. The classes are steadily increasing in numbers, and the instruction given is of a high standard. The work is entirely unsectarian, and in hearty accord with all evangelical Christians.

Gathered Gold.

Much of the glory and sublimity of truth is connected with its mystery. To understand everything we must be as God.—Tyron Edwards.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest and brave and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.
—Ellen P. Allerton.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the wing wherewith the soul flies to heaven, and meditation the eye wherewith we see God.—Ambrose.

I have been benefited by praying for others; for, making an errand to God for them, I have got something for myself.—Rutherford.

TRUE BRAVERY.

To be bold against the enemy is common to the brutes, but the prerogative of a man is to be bold against himself. To conquer our own fancies, and our own lusts, and our ambition, in the sacred name of duty—this it is to be truly brave, and truly strong; for he who cannot rule himself, how can he rule his crew or his fortunes?—C. Kingsley.

SAINTS.

This is one of the most glorious titles of the children of God, and so peculiarly their own, that the rest of mankind readily despise and renounce the name. But as there is scarcely a name so frequently applied to them in the Holy Scriptures as this, respecting their state both in earth and heaven, they must be content with all the contumely that can be thrown upon one of the holiest of denominations, and go forth without the camp of the world, bearing the reproach of Him who bestowed it upon them, with all the blessedness connected with it.—Ambrose Serle.

ROMANISM.

It really would seem as if a miserable endeavour to familiarise our people with Romish dresses, Romish gestures, Romish practices, Romish phraseology, Romish doctrines; as if this were the legitimate aim of English divines in these last days; instead of being, as it is, nothing else but a crime.

I entirely deny that the revival of Mediævalism is any outcome of faith at all—as seen among ourselves, it is notoriously the product of nothing so much as vanity and self-will—very lawlessness it is from first to last, an immoral and (what is singular) an utterly demoralising thing. But the worst feature of all is, that it is effectually paving the way for unbelief—making common cause with it—lending it a helping hand.

Oh, beware of this miserable counterfeit (this pitiful caricature rather) of true religion, "pure and undefiled," this unhealthy yearning after the corrupt method of a church which is branded in the Apocalypse with infamy and a most tremendous doom. "Come out of her, my people" (saith the Spirit), "come out of her, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues!"

This emasculated imitation of her method—this immoral reproduction of her teaching—ought to be abhorrent to every high and manly instinct of your nature.—Dean Burgon.

CAGE-LANE MISSION, PLUMSTEAD.—The new Hall will be opened shortly. Towards meeting the outlay some friends have contributed generously, but nearly £1000 has yet to be raised. A lady has promised to give £25, if nine more will do the same before the opening day, April 10. The work is as deserving of support as it is sadly needed. Communications should be addressed to Miss Russell, 1, Thames View-terrace, Plumstead. Our readers will, we are sure, join in praying that the new building may prove a great blessing in the district.

Miss Macpherson's Upper Room.

The workers' meeting at Bethnal Green-road last week was a season of much spiritual profit and solemnity. There was less than usual, perhaps, in the way of intelligence, but just enough to serve as a platform for the teaching and exhortation.

First of all Miss Child, of the Welcome Home, handed on some suggestive thoughts that had come to her in connection with her work among the seamen. The captain of a shipwrecked crew kept saying at one of the meetings: "We ought to be thankful we're alive." Should not the Christian be thankful for the gift of life, with its many opportunities of service? Another seaman, left alone on a sinking ship, was at last compelled to take to a boat, having with him some biscuits and a keg of oil. In his sore plight he cried to the Lord, and the thought was suggested to him to pour some of the oil on the raging waves. In a moment the waters around him were stilled. If we had more of the anointing oil of the Holy Ghost, what a calm would come into our lives. Miss Child also cheered the meeting with facts about the progress of the work, telling how "Rests" are being opened here and there, and how the converted sailors are becoming successful missionaries to the heathen by their simple testimony in the far-distant ports whither their business takes them.

A BIT OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY,

charmingly told by Miss Macpherson, was the next item on the unrehearsed programme. As she saw Mr. Reginald Radcliffe and Miss Clara Lowe sitting side by side, her thoughts were carried back to the year 1861:—"I was invited by Miss Lowe's cousin, Lady Rowley, to come up to London to see and hear Richard Weaver. I was then working amongst the navvies near my brother's place in Cambridgeshire, and they were being blessed. I did not know at the time as I know now how to go direct to God for guidance, and I consulted with man. The navvies gave me a lapful of their 'browns,' which I sent to Miss Lowe, and then came this invitation. I went to London, and heard Richard Weaver and Reginald Radcliffe preaching to the masses in a theatre. Mr. Radcliffe 'flew' over the place, from box to box and from seat to seat. He came to where I was, and said: 'Do you know the Lord?' 'I hope so.' 'Hope! Can you talk to these young women round about you?' They had come in from the streets without bonnets or shawls, and there they were, anxious about their souls. I very soon learned the lesson, and after I went back to Cambridgeshire we had a revival in the village amongst the navvies."

Then Miss Macpherson took a mental leap over the intervening thirty years, and gave us some pathetic touches relating to the last band of boys that had left for Canada under the care of Mrs. Merry, and were then probably in mid-ocean. Many of them have been soundly converted to God. From that she passed to the work in Bird Fair, and reported the conversion of a prize-fighter through the preaching of Mr. Merry. He has since been to the indoor meetings with his wife and child, and tells how his home is changed by this change in himself. Among the factory girls God is also doing wonderful things; scarcely an evening passes without some of them yielding their hearts to Him. They are becoming light-bearers to their sister-workers in the neighbouring factories. In the midst of all this toil the workers are constantly cheered by letters from those in China and elsewhere who once helped in the East-end, and who write saying, "It is such a joy to remember the old Home of Industry." Miss Macpherson did not actually tell the assembled friends that she had lately been suffering from rheumatism, but she hinted at certain "touches of pain and weariness," and even for these she was able to thank God, as they enabled her to carry sympathetic comfort to the afflicted ones round about her. A passing reference was made to the favour which God is giving to the work of the Flower Mission, with its stream of Gospel messages through the printed texts; and Miss Macpherson closed her very delightful talk by expressing a hope that the path of many young workers might be made plain for service abroad, and that from the East-end there might yet go forth men and women of mark for God among his heathen.

CHINA AND ITS MILLIONS

are never forgotten at the Home of Industry. Mrs. Hudson Taylor had an eagerly attentive and interested audience, while she imparted some cheering news from a letter sent by Miss Helen Mackenzie, at work in one of the cities of the province of Kiang-si. This young Scotch-woman had only been in China some nine months when she wrote, but she had been stationed in the city alone for three months and was able to make herself understood in the language to a considerable extent. Her letter gave most interesting details of conversion work and of the power of God shown in sustaining the native Christians through persecution and trial. The Chinese believers cheerfully endure "the spoiling of their goods" for the name of Jesus. Mrs. Taylor said the unvarying refrain in the letters received was: "I am so glad I came to China." She appealed to her sisters in the meeting to lay their lives on the altar for the same blessed service.

Yet another witness on behalf of China appeared in the person of Rev. J. H. Horsburgh, of the C.M.S., who is here on furlough. He said his heart was filled with sadness at the thought of the smallness of the home responses to the calls from the teeming and neglected populations abroad. Roughly speaking, there is only one efficient worker to a million of Chinese.

MR. RADCLIFFE'S APPEAL.

Last of all, Mr. Reginald Radcliffe delivered his soul of its burden, and a very heavy one it appeared to be. Indeed, the swellings of inward desire and of yearning were evidently so tumultuous that his usually ready and rugged speech seemed in some degree to fail him, and in the result he had to betake himself to prayer. His main thought was, if Jesus had such compassion when on earth on the multitudes that wanted bread, how much greater must be the compassion He feels for those vast multitudes of heathen that are without the bread of life. When the early believers were of one heart, and filled with the Holy Ghost, multitudes were converted. Is not that the kind of thing we ought to look for now? Peter was taught of the Spirit on the housetop to revolutionise his plans and his methods. May not the churches in our day be making profound mistakes? and do they not need to revolutionise their methods? Christ wept over Jerusalem, not so much because of the drunkards and poor lost ones in the streets, but because the people did not know the day of their visitation. So He weeps over the Church now, because in this day of her opportunity she does not put on her beautiful garments and go forth with his Gospel according to his command. God does not want to save men by units, but in multitudes. If we will but open our mouths wide in fervent desire, He will not give crumbs of blessing only, He will fill them.

By the combined testimony of these friends a very urgent message was given to the workers present, and it was with a feeling of chastened awe and increased responsibility that the little gathering dispersed. We ought to correct a slight misunderstanding caused by a recent statement in our columns that Miss Macpherson had left for Canada with the band of emigrants. Her sister, Mrs. Merry, has gone, and by the time these lines are read we trust the band will have safely reached the Canadian shore.

SONNET.

When I behold the suffering and the sin
That blight men's lives; and mark the hopeless doubt
Which saps the nation's life, and tramples out
Those aspirations pure, deep-set within
The individual heart; above the din
Of passionate cries that, echoing all about,
Strange creeds demand, but cast the old without—
I hear a voice say: "Fear not, Truth must win,
Confusion yield before God's order new,
Which, drawing to itself the old, the dear,
Fulfils at length the yearning of the few
Who stand, undaunted by the world's harsh jeer;
But, braving flood and fire and tyrant's sword,
In faith await the coming of their Lord."

Edward Henry Blakeney.

The African Exhibition.

During the next few months many a pilgrimage will be made to the Victoria Gallery, at 207, Regent-street, London, where a singularly valuable collection of relics and mementoes of African exploration and travel was opened to the public on Monday. The idea is a happy one, and has doubtless been suggested by the return of Mr. H. M. Stanley's expedition. The celebrated explorer of course is largely in evidence in it; but the scope of the collection is nearly as wide as Africa itself, especially those central portions of the continent that have been the hunting-ground of recent explorers, and the scene of modern missionary enterprise. The Baptist, the Church, the London and Universities' Missionary Societies have co-operated with leading travellers and others in furnishing articles. The amount of genuine living interest compressed into these few square yards of space is simply astonishing. Every corner of the gallery will afford material for a day's examination and study, and the whole exhibition cannot receive anything like justice by a single visit.

There are so many attractive features that we cannot even enumerate them in this brief notice. Many visitors will be strangely fascinated and moved by the three original Gordon telegrams from Khartoum—bold, brief, and pointed, framed in the firm and clear handwriting of the illustrious martyred General. Mungo Park's hymn-book, the sole trophy of his ill-starred journey, will be sure to detain eager attention. The portrait of Livingstone and numerous articles once in his possession carry, singly and collective, a pathos and interest that cannot be conveyed in words; so do the mementoes of Bishop Hannington, chief among them the two beautifully penned final pages of his diary. Many a sad and sombre page of Africa's past might be constructed out of the array of native weapons, evidently designed and used for the ruthless destruction of human life. To our mind the deepest and most tragic meaning of the entire exhibition is focussed around the little collection, in the upper gallery, of slave-trading relics—the whips, the leg or wrist-irons, and the other articles "illustrative of the methods in which the diabolical traffic in human flesh and blood is carried on." These are but a few of the more outstanding items, but they will serve to indicate something of the unparalled wealth of interest that now lies under the roof of the Victoria Gallery. The success of this remarkable object-lesson in African history is as sure as anything can well be under the sun.

The general arrangement of the exhibits reflects much credit on Mr. Joseph Thomson, the intrepid African traveller, who was himself present on Friday at the press view, and modestly explained the chief features of the Exhibition.

DR. PENTECOST IN PAISLEY.

The special feature of the third week of Dr. Pentecost's mission in Paisley has been the greater readiness of the people to come forward and make a public surrender of themselves to Christ. The word has been with power from the very start, but some who were brought by it to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus did not see their way until this week to make an open confession of Christ. Two men, for instance, called on their minister, and, after explaining to him how deliverance had come to their souls, asked: "Is it not enough for us to accept Christ in God's sight? Should we go forward?" The minister thus appealed to replied that by going forward they might preach the most telling sermon that it would ever be in their power to deliver, and encourage others to come to a decision. That night they were the first to rise, and they were closely followed by thirteen others. In all, ninety-eight have made profession this week, whilst there were sixty-five during the second week, and only twelve the first. The work is thus becoming increasingly productive, whilst the popularity of the meetings is also growing, as is evidenced by the fact that during the third week the Free High Church has been crowded every evening, whereas only the area was filled in the first two weeks.

A special blessing has come to the inmates of the Female Refuge, who have been regularly brought to the meetings by the matron, Miss Blue. Seventeen of these fallen women have professed faith in Christ, and some of their testimonies to the workers were most touching. One of them said with emphasis: "Drink was the beginning, middle, and end of the wretched life I led, and now Christ will be the beginning, middle, and end of my new life." That a rich outpouring of the Spirit has come to this Home is the occasion of deep thankfulness to the directors, who are devoted Christian men, who have all along shown a lively interest in the spiritual well-being of these women.

That many backsliders are being reclaimed is certain, and their explanations of their falling away given by two of these deserve publicity. This, briefly told, was the story of one: "I was converted eight years, but since my marriage I have been thrown among unconverted people in a strange town where no one has ever spoken to me of Christ and his great salvation." The other said: "I was brought to the Lord during Mr. Moody's last visit to Paisley, and I ascribe my backsliding to the fact that I never gave myself to any form of Christian work, but thought I could get along quite well by a regular attendance on the ordinary means of grace."

That many office-bearers of the church are being quickened is also certain, for we have heard of little gatherings where their responsibilities have been earnestly talked over, and vows made to be far more direct in their dealings with souls when visiting their districts. Among the young the work has also been specially blessed, and in one congregation nine of these professed converts have joyfully joined the young communicant's class, that they may in due time make a public profession of their faith by sitting down at the Lord's table. Their minister reports that he has never, in the course of a twenty years' ministry in Paisley, seen so many happy faces at his class meetings. The people now leave the after-meeting singing along the streets, with fine effect, warm Gospel hymns. Altogether, Paisley has been deeply moved by this aggressive work, and regret is being expressed by very many that Dr. Pentecost cannot prolong his visit for more than a month. A long petition, got up by the Christian people in attendance on the meetings, requesting him to stay for another fortnight, was forwarded to the Central Committee in Glasgow, but their reply is that araangements have been already made for him labouring in Saltcoats during these two weeks.

MAJOR WHITTLE IN LONDON.

"Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof." Truly this has been the case with regard to the mission at Greenwich conducted by Major Whittle. The last week was full of blessing. Our brother has wisely and well handled "the Word," and there has been "food convenient" and "meat in due season" for those who have gathered to the afternoon Bible-readings at the Congregational Church, Greenwich-road. Many have been the expressions of gratitude for the good received, especially after the address upon "Looking unto Jesus for comfort in affliction." With regard to the Gospel services which have been conducted in the Wesleyan Church, I rejoice to report growing interest and increased good.

On Sunday, Mar. 16, the afternoon was devoted to a meeting for women only, when a large audience of this class thronged the spacious church, and numbers decided for Christ. The late meeting at 8.15 was for men only. Again the building was filled, and the Spirit of God was present with convincing and converting power. Separate gatherings have been held as after-meetings for men and women—the Major conducted those for the former class, and his daughter took charge of the latter. Numbers have thus been dealt with personally by an earnest band of Christian workers. On Thursday evening, prior to the evening service, a tea was given to some 300 young women, and a special address was given by Major Whittle in the chapel upon "Woman, why weepest thou?" Grand results followed this effort to reach the young people.

Thanks be unto God, there has been a reaping after every service, and we believe that the bread cast upon the waters will be found after many days. Before closing my report, I must refer to the last meeting, held on Friday night, March 21. It was my pleasure to give expression to the feeling of gratitude and appreciation of the services rendered by our dear brother Whittle and his beloved daughter, in the name of the pastors and members of the five churches which had united in the mission; and the vast audience which thronged the church testified to their unanimity of feeling by rising en masse, and singing the Doxology. After a powerful address, those who had received blessing, and any who were desirous to obtain a blessing, were invited to come forward. A large number responded, and loving words of Gospel counsel and encouragement were given to them by Major Whittle. The united prayers of God's people are still ascending to the throne of grace that God will continue to bless this special united effort, and that Greenwich may be greatly the better for our brother's visit. Will every reader of this join us in the petition—"God grant the increase"?

Greenwich. C. Spurgeon.

On Sunday last Major Whittle commenced a mission for eight days at the New-road Presbyterian Church, Woolwich. His visit had been eagerly anticipated, and there is every prospect of a deep and successful work.

BRIXTON ORPHANAGE.—The annual meeting of the friends and supporters of this excellent institution was held a few days ago, under the presidency of Mr. T. A. Denny. During last year forty-one orphans were received; nineteen girls entered upon domestic service; and there are 300 now in residence. Since the commencement of the work in 1876, a hundred girls has been placed in domestic service, the greater number of whom are still creditably engaged. As the number of these increases, it becomes desirable that some Home should be provided for those temporarily out of employment. The cost of maintenance last year (exclusive of gifts in kind) was only £1780, all the officers, excepting matron, governess, and teachers, being honorary. Several warm friends of the work commended it to public sympathy and support.

Evangelistic Notes.

Y.M.C.A., Dundee.—Mr. Henry Thorne has concluded a seventeen days' mission in connection with this Y.M.C.A. Several have professed conversion and Christians have been quickened. Mr. Thorne's Bible-readings and addresses to workers have been much enjoyed.

Wandsworth-road, S.W.—A successful ten days' mission has just been brought to a close, in connection with the Howard-street Gospel Mission. It is gratifying to know that many of the worst characters of the neighbourhood have attended, and in several cases decision for Christ has been the result.

Ireland.—Evangelistic services in connection with the Railway Mission have been held in Cork and Limerick. In the latter place especially the mission was very successful. Similar services have been held in Tandragee by Mr. and Mrs. Brandon, and in Carlisle Memorial Hall, Belfast, by Revs. R. C. Johnson and Jas. Grubb.

Folkestone.—We have had Mrs. Amanda Smith, the coloured evangelist, among us for a fortnight, and have reason to praise God for answered prayer in the blessing many have received through her. Though weak in body, she is full of the joy of the Lord, and her clear testimony as to the Lord's power to save and to sanctify was most helpful, and has led many to trust Him fully.

Irish Gospel Mission.—A series of Gospel services in connection with this Mission were held on the islands Spike and Haulbowline, from March 9 to 22, by Messrs. Smith and Flook. It was a cause of much thanksgiving to see the soldiers and their friends attending these meetings. Many proved that the old Gospel is still the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.

Liscoed, Cheshire.—A series of enangelistic meetings, extending over three weeks, has been held in connection with Christ Church (Reformed Episcopal), Liscoed. The meetings were conducted by Mr. Rowland Sturt, of the Evangelisation Society, asissted by Rev. T. W. Bowman, incumbent. Mr. Sturt's work has been much appreciated, and the church is greatly encouraged by the results of the mission.

Leamington.—A very successful mission has been held at St. Mary's Church (vicar, Rev. Dr. Morgan) by Rev. F. S. Webster. He held services for believers every afternoon, which were largely attended, and his addresses on Psalm xxiii. at an early service every morning were also much appreciated. His children's services, held every afternoon, were attended by numbers of children who came quite voluntarily every day immediately after school.

Newmarket, Cambridgeshire.—A very successful mission, conducted by Rev. R. Balgarnie, has just been concluded at Newmarket. The attendance each night was large. Between fifty and sixty requests for prayer were sent in, and over a hundred persons went into the inquiry-room; amongst these were some of the jockey lads connected with the racing establishments. In the course of an address Mr. Balgarnie made pointed allusion to the hundreds of young horses now being trained for the races, and the eagerness of men to win prizes. He likened Sunday-school teachers to trainers of young people for the heavenly race, and the object of the mission was to start many of them at the cross that they might win the crown of life.

THE OPIUM VICE IN CHINA.—Mr. George King, of the China Inland Mission, Las-Hekeo writes to us:—"This is a thriving port on the Hau, River, 500 miles north of Hankow. Mission work was begun there two years ago, and a dispensary established, at which thousands have received medicine and advice gratis. I am desirous of adding a refuge for the cure of opium smokers, which can only be treated under strict supervision. The China Inland Mission is willing, as funds permit, to help in providing premises, &c. Having already the expense of the general medical work to bear alone, my small income (about £50 a year) will not warrant my undertaking unaided so heavy an extra expenditure as some ten shillings' worth of drugs each for fifty or a hundred patients annually." Mr. King adds that Mr. Broomhall, secretary of the Mission, 4, Pyrland-road, London, N., will gladly give information to friends desirous of purchasing and forwarding approved medicines.

MR. GEORGE MULLER.

THIS honoured servant of God arrived, with Mrs. Müller, in London last week, after an absence of two and a half years.

A large audience gathered at the Conference Hall, Mildmay, on Sunday evening, it having been announced that Mr. Müller would preach. But considerable disappointment was felt at the announcement that, owing to the indisposition of Mrs. Müller, he was unable to be present. In his absence Mr. J. L. Stanley conducted the meeting.

Should Mrs. Müller's health improve, Mr. Müller hopes to preach at the Conference Hall on Sunday evening next.

MILDMAY WORK IN EAST LONDON.

THE Mildmay Mission in East London with its hospital and dispensary in Turville-street, Bethnal Green, and numerous associated agencies, continues to carry on work of a truly excellent character. Dr. Gauld is the superintendent of the Medical Mission, with Dr. G. A. Wolfendale as resident physician. The report for last year shows that the hospital patients numbered 383; while the visits of out-patients to the dispensary, and of the physician and deaconesses to patients' homes, numbered 21,348. The work is carried on in the midst of the very poor, among whom, however, have been found some who are rich in faith, and live in the confidence of having treasure in heaven.

The cases of lives influenced for good by the Mission labourers include some interesting incidents. A man who had been serving in a public-house, on leaving the hospital found he could not continue his old employment. Throwing it up, he and his family faced starvation, but when in extremity other work same. His voice is now heard at the praise-meetings of the Mission, to which he renders such help as is within his power. A poor woman, with no definite hope, on hearing the way of salvation explained, expressed a readiness to "come" to Jesus without delay, believing that she would be received. "But you will help me," she said to her kind counsellor, "for I don't know how to pray." On kneeling down, however, the poor needy one did not wait for any encouragement, but burst into prayer, beseeching God to accept her because Jesus died for her. "Make me a child o' your'n, Lord, do," she pleaded, and she rose from her knees with beautiful faith that she had been graciously received by God. Children have breathed the warm and wholesome atmosphere of the institution, and have left with many happy memories. The Barnet Convalescent Home continues to be an immense boon to many of the poor from the hospital.

The general mission work is in the hands of a staff of deaconesses, who occupy as a centre the large building in Church-street, close to the hospital. House-to-house visitation is an important part of the work. There are fully a dozen special agencies, all well approved, for men, women, and children, and temperance as well as Gospel meetings are regularly held. The many friends of the Mission will find the report attractive reading, as it gives a detailed survey of the operations in their very interesting variety.

MR. G. H. LORD delivered his Palestine lectures in this city last week. The graphic account of scenes and associations, the realistic representations of habits and customs, and above all the copious Scripture references, were most helpful and stimulating to Biblical research. There was an attractive exhibition of curiosities from the Holy Land, and beautiful articles of Damascus manufacture. On the previous Sunday Mr. Lord preached to large congregations, afternoon and evening, in the Victoria Hall, and the Word spoken was in demonstration of the Spirit and with power.

Norwick. ROBERT ADCOCK.

THE GOSPEL IN SPAIN.

THE present is emphatically the time of seed-sowing in Spain. To help those who are engaged in this blessed work is the aim and object of the Association for the Diffusion of the Gospel in Spain, of which last year's report has recently been published. Mr. Arthur Evans, who is labouring under the direction of Mr. Armstrong, thus writes of the promising character of the work:—"Men with whom I have conversed in the fields tell me that the Church of Rome has hold only on the rich, the villagers love the Gospel, and would follow it if they dare. As it is, they drift off into indifference and unbelief, which makes it hard for them to believe that our message is one of light, life, and liberty. They will not enter the Church of Rome, nor allow a priest to enter their own houses."

The picture is twofold, as Mrs. Fenn well implies when she hopefully writes:—"In the midst of the awful indifference on the one hand, and superstitious and priestly opposition on the other, God is manifestly working in not a few hearts and consciences around us." Mr. Armstrong says:—"As a nation, Spain is going into the abyss. And yet, wherever the true Gospel is faithfully preached, there some souls believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and are saved. We have learnt that the simple methods of evangelising, as laid down in the Acts of the Apostles, are the best ones, and those which God recognises; and our belief is that what is complicated or costly in organisation, and in which man or money is the factor, is not suitable for Spain. The Church in the house, in the home, is what is needed."

At Marin, in the province of Galicia, there has been quite a reaping-time. Mr. Blamire describes a meeting held in January last: "We all wept before God. Many hands were held up asking for salvation. The people are coming to Christ. I do not remember ever being more hopeful about the work of God in Spain; it is opening up before us in a most remarkable way. We scarcely know where to begin. We have three or four new villages where we hope soon to open up work, and they are within reachable distance. God willing, we hope soon to send out twenty or thirty native preachers to the villages and small towns."

The Association is an auxiliary to agencies engaged in this good work. Copies of the report may be had from Mr. J. B. Hunter (J. Rew & Co.), Brown's-buildings, Liverpool; and Mr. S. Southall, 27, Crown-street, Leeds.

REVIVAL IN INVERALLOCHY.

THE remarkable religious movement in Inverallochy, already mentioned in your columns, still continues with unabated interest. Mr. Robert Cairns, of the London Evangelisation Society, preaches every night with great power and effect. During the eighteen days that the mission has lasted upwards of 300 have passed through the inquiry meetings. The ordinary attendance at the first meeting is about 900. There is no excitement, but there is a marked and deep impression, and many are still under great concern.

DUNCAN MACGREGOR, Parish Minister.

The Manse, Inverallochy, Lonmay, N.B.

"WELCOME HOME," RATCLIFF-HIGHWAY.—In a neat leaflet Miss Child has collected some extracts from letters received during the year 1889 from sailors and their friends, and sympathisers in the work, showing how God helped and cheered the workers, especially during the great strike. "Throughout the past year the Gospel and Gospel temperance meetings were continued daily without interruption. The monthly musters of the 'Christian Life-Boat Crew' are always seasons of refreshing and strengthening, while the visits of the 'Crew' to other meeting-places are mutually helpful. The Home has been made a great blessing to many hundreds of sailors of various nations. Drunkards have been reclaimed, prodigals restored to their homes, and wandering souls brought into the fold."

CONFERENCE AT CLAPTON HALL.

THE Salvation Army was in large force at the Congress Hall on Monday and Tuesday for "Two days with God." The purpose of the meetings was expressed as "increase of friendship with God." General Booth opened with a short prayer for the spirit of obedience to God's Word. The world-wide field of the Army's operations was evidenced by the appearance in the assemblage of dusky faces, turbaned heads, silky and flowing drapery. The very practical addresses were varied by frequent prayers and duets and solos.

The General delivered a characteristic comment on Gal. vi. Backsliders must never be given up. If any one of us were placed in a fallen brother's circumstances, we should probably fall as low as he. Some persons grumble at their own burdens; but we are to bear others' burdens as well as our own. There is a burden of individual responsibility which none may bear for us; but possession of the Holy Spirit will make us equal to every requirement.

Commissioner Tucker contended that introduction to God's friendship must be through Christ. The Maréchale said there is no neutrality between friendship and enmity with God. We are friends of God if we bear his likeness, especially in his pity for the lost. It is a friendship which involves sacrifice, but has compensations. The General closed the meeting by an exhortation heartily to seek complete deliverance of soul from mixed purposes, and from all sinful and fleshly bondage.

Monday afternoon's meeting was preceded by half an hour's "knee drill." The General said the object of coming together thus is progress onward and upward, into the realisation of the purity, liberty, and power of God's friends. A converted Mohammedan sheikh, a saved Buddhist priest, and two other dark-skinned converts sang and spoke in their native tongue. Commissioner Tucker mentioned that four such priests have been brought to God in Ceylon.

Commissioner Clibborn had lived to find his ideal of Christian character and power realised, and to prove that God is superior to circumstances and temperament. "Adjutant" Burr, a young woman from Copenhagen, related her experience in an Army meeting there, where the soldiers "spoke as if God were very near." Mrs. Bramwell Booth traced one cause of soul weakness—failure to obey God.

The crowded evening meeting was, like the previous gatherings, opened with enthusiastic praise and prayer. The General made some instructive comments upon the incident in Matt. xiv. 22—31. Believers, he said, may be fearful when they should be shouting for joy. He subsequently indicated five essentials of friendship with God—acquaintance, agreement, confidence, affection, and consecration.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—A mission at New Cross Public Hall.——Special services at the Wesleyan Church, Ashley-road, Bristol, by Mr. Opie Rodway, March 29 to April 2.——A week's mission at Wellington-road Baptist Mission-room, Orpington, Kent, commencing March 24.——Special services by Mr. Oscar Owers, at Jedburgh, N.B., till March 31.——A mission by Mr. Charles Inglis, at Hereford, till March 31.——A mission by Mr. J. Burnham, at Wynn-street Hall, Birmingham, March 25 to April 4.——An eight days' mission, to be conducted by Mr. Charles Bowers, of the Evangelisation Society, at Orford, Suffolk, from March 30 to April 6.——A week's mission, by Mr. Henry Lakin, at Lancaster, commencing March 29.——A mission by Mr. George Clarke, at the Y.M.C.A., Wexford, April 5 to 14.——A mission at Cannington, Somerset, by Mr. W. J. Taylor, of the Evangelisation Society, commenced on Sunday last.——For a church in an important country town, in which the minister and many of the members are strangers to the truths of the Gospel; that a speedy change may be effected.——A visit by Mrs. Todd Osborne to Gibraltar and Algeciras.

Central African Notes.

NEWS FROM NYASSALAND.

THE Conveners of the Free Church and of the Church of Scotland Missionary Committees have received several highly interesting and important letters which will go far to allay the anxiety felt regarding the position of our friends in Nyassaland since the Portuguese aggression. The dates of the letters are themselves a satisfactory feature, the oldest being December 26 and the most recent January 16, showing that the route which was for a time closed is quite open, and communication fully as speedy as it ever was. The Duke of Fife's pledge to establish a monthly mail will probably be soon redeemed.

It appears that the missionaries have suffered nothing worse than painful tension and anxiety, and their good work has gone on without interruption—for which earnest thanksgiving should be presented to God by those who were recently praying for their friends in much fear. Dr. Kerr Cross, who for two years has borne so much fatigue and danger in the prolonged conflict with the Arab slavers at the north end of the lake, has broken down and is on his way home. Attending to the sick and wounded on both sides, and at the same time keeping up mission work, the strain must have been very severe. He was helpless when put on board the steamer at Karonga's, but the voyage of about 150 miles to Bandawé had so far restored him and his companion, Mr. Fotheringham, of the African Lakes Company, that they were able to walk. Dr. Laws, who examined him carefully and pronounced his taking furlough at once an absolute necessity, says: "His heart is in the work; he has had an experience and gained knowledge which it would take years to gather, especially as Mr. Bain is now dead." There will be much earnest prayer for this noble and sorely tried worker.

Dr. Henry, writing from Blantyre on January 16, says that he was so far on his way to attend a mission council at Bandawé, the Free Church headquarters; and he mentions two significant things about Consul H. H. Johnson, who had come to Matope, the point where the navigation of the Shiré is interrupted by the Murchison Rapids, on his way to the coast. One thing is this: "Consul Johnson has evidently made treaties with most of the chiefs as far north as Lake Tanganyika," a piece of very good news. The communication will thus be open by the Stevenson Road to the stations of the London Missionary Society on that great lake. Probably those praying for the extension of the Kingdom of Christ in Africa have scarcely realised yet that now there is a waterway, with steam on it, all the way from the mouth of the Zambesi on the south to the head of Tanganyika on the north, a distance of fully 1400 miles. Consul Johnson's next despatches will be specially interesting.

The other thing that strikes us is, "The Consul reports that when Mponda was signing, he himself saw three French Jesuits in the village." We suppose this refers to what took place a year ago, when the Portuguese induced the slaver who holds the best strategic point on the Shiré to submit to them by liberal gifts of ammunition. Or it may refer to some more recent signing of an agreement with our Consul himself. The important thing is the presence of Jesuits. So far as Cardinal Lavigerie is a philanthropist we are glad, but it ought to be clearly understood that behind the recent aggression of Portugal there lay an organised plan for the introduction of the anti-Christian system which enslaves the souls of men. No secret was made of this: troops of priests were ready to march in and occupy the mission fields, had Serpa Pinto's attack been successful.

The remaining letters are from Mr. John Buchanan, acting consul in Mr. H. H. Johnson's absence. This gentleman went out in 1875 to prospect on behalf of the Church of Scotland, and has established important coffee plantations in the neighbourhood of Blantyre. We cannot go into the details of his very graphic reports regarding the hauling down and running up again of our flag. He pronounces Serpa Pinto's account of the conflict with the Makalolo "an abominable lie: there was nobody killed, no one wounded, and no one taken prisoner." It is worth while to quote his account of the situation on January 16:—"At the present moment the whole of the lower river is in their hands, and we are entirely at their mercy." (But the fact of the letters, with Dr. Kerr Cross and Consul Johnson, having reached the seaboard is pleasant evidence that that danger is at an end.) "I have kept the Union Jack flying here ever since I came down, and I have no intention of hauling it down without instructions from home."

We repeat that there is in these things reason for special gratitude to Him who, sitting in the heavens, holds those in derision that attempt to break asunder the cords and bands of his Anointed King—the first principles of righteousness and goodwill to men (Ps. ii. 1-6).

AFTER A DRESS REHEARSAL.

ON Friday evening last Mr. William Forbes gave one of his periodical tea receptions to the "ladies of the ballet." The place of meeting was the Whitefield Presbyterian Schoolroom, Wilson-street, Drury-lane, and here gathered a company of theatrical employés, three-fourths of whom were from the Alhambra, where a dress rehearsal of a new ballet had just been held.

Mr. Forbes, encountering many difficulties, has endeavoured to minister to the spiritual and temporal necessities of a somewhat neglected class of bread-winners.

It was authoritatively stated that a majority of the girls only get a miserable pittance of twelve to fifteen shillings per week, from companies paying dividends of nearly 40 per cent. The moral obligation under which the shareholders are laid, in relation to those who work so hard and create big dividends, need not be pointed out. The wonder is that, with the associations developing a love of finery, many of the girls lead such praiseworthy lives. Certain it is they need all the sympathy of Christian people, such as Mr. Forbes and his helpers, and it is incumbent on those who have means to support such a deserving work.

It seems doubtful, but it is just possible, that a few may be prejudiced against any attempt to reach these girls before they leave or decide to leave their present employment. But it is certain they will never do the latter until they have been reached, and we regret to find Mr. Forbes complaining of lack of support. There never was a time when help in connection with this work needed a readier response to reach, influence, and advise these dangerously situated girls. Mr. Forbes' address is 71, Tollington-road, Holloway, N.

COTTAGE HOME, KINGSTOWN.—We are glad to see from the last report of this Home for Little Children that the work continues to prosper. The Home is always full of babies and very young children of the industrious poor; the surviving parent is thus enabled to earn a living, and gladly contributes to the full extent of his or her power towards the support of their children. The committee have good news of the children who have left the Home, many of them for adoption in Canada. An annual income of some £600 is needed to carry on the work; of this parents or other relatives of the children contribute about a quarter, the remainder has to be met by subscriptions. Miss Barrett, 6, De Vesci-terrace, Kingstown, co. Dublin, is the hon. secretary.

MR. HAMMOND IN ILLINOIS.

REV. E. P. HAMMOND has been holding meetings in our little city for the last six days. There are 450 students here attending the Normal School, most of whom have been to the meetings, and many have been converted.

It is marvellous to see what a deep hold the work of God's Spirit has taken upon this institution. Many are awakened and converted the first night they attend the services. The truth preached by Mr. Hammond in many cases takes immediate effect. Several hundred of the students and townspeople have already professed conversion.

Last Tuesday forty-five young converts and earnest workers went with him to Cobden, Ill., to hold meetings. That town has for years been noted as the home of infidels, sceptics and agnostics. The Presbyterian Church was crowded the first night, many not being able to get in. A number of these non-believers were present, and at the inquiry-meeting they lost no opportunity to scoff at religion, and jeer at the Christians who spoke to them, but several were led to Christ the first night and at subsequent meetings.

One man who the night before had been a scoffer, making fun of the young lady who spoke to him, got up, and, with tears in his eyes, said that her words rang in his ears after he went home. Being unable to sleep, so deep was his conviction, he knelt down and prayed for mercy. God heard and answered his prayer, and he rejoiced in his new-found hope.

Another young lady spoke to an agnostic the second night. She asked him if he believed there was a God, a heaven, a hell; if this world were the end of all things; if there were such a thing as Christianity. To each of these questions he replied, "I don't know." He finally said that the belief and faith of the people known as Christians was due to their excitement or emotion. She said, "My friend, I will pray to God this night that He will endow you with your share of emotion," and then left him, fearing that she had done no good, but had made her religion a subject for his ridicule.

To her great joy she received a letter from Cobden to-day, saying that by her questions she had vanquished that man's doubts, and he is now overjoyed that he has found Christ. He says that every answer he made that night was a lie, for he does know now, and is happy.

The meetings are still in progress there, and many are being converted. There is no doubt that, if Mr. Hammond could have remained longer, he would have reaped a richer, more glorious harvest for the Master. As it is, the entire community has been aroused, and the Christians will not cease to labour until that nest of infidels is broken up, and it becomes a God-loving and God-fearing town.

It is impossible to realise yet the good he has done in this part of the State. The seeds sown will live and bear good fruit for years. Those who accompanied him to Cobden have had a taste of the blessedness of seeking to win souls to Christ, which will no doubt be of use to them in after life. SERVA SMITH.

Southern Illinois Normal University, Carbondale, Ill., March 8.

MR. J. A. STOOKE, of the China Inland Mission, Cheefoo, writes to say that he has lately met with much encouragement in tract distribution. He desires the prayers of our readers for God's blessing on such efforts; most missionaries, he says, do a good deal of this wayside scattering of the seed.

ON THE LOWER CONGO drunkenness among the natives is said to be increasing at a fearful rate. Even very young children are becoming victims of the drink fiend. In a town near Mpalabala a little girl about six or seven years old was found "dead drunk" by the missionary. The parents and friends of the child seemed only to regard it as a good joke.

"WHAT IS MAN?"*

f one may judge of the difficulty of the above uestion by the amplitude of the answer which Dr. nderson supplies, then "What is Man?" is one f the toughest problems that man has ever set imself to solve, and the aphorism of Socrates, Know thyself," is still a considerable satire on eneral ignorance. Dr. Anderson is too enlightened o treat the great issue he has raised with a light r superficial touch. His aim is to secure a theo- ogical solution of the problem that shall set the natter at rest alike in respect of the constitution, ne condition, and the destiny of man. The space t our command does not allow us to treat of this oluminous work in extenso. We can at most ndicate its scope and the main points wherein we gree or see cause as yet to differ.

The author is a strong believer in the inspired Word, and so far he is a safe guide. His aim is to lucidate what man is from Revelation only. Holy cripture is the terra firma here, and nothing else eside. And the results, so far as man's constitu- ion is concerned, are, in our judgment, satisfactory. Ve have never seen a better vindication of the ripartite nature of man than is furnished in this ork. Dr. Anderson has taken time and done this criptural analysis well, showing that all men re possessed of body, soul, and spirit. He fails, ather, in distinguishing what the spirit is as con- rasted with the soul, but the evidence he brings rom the Word in proof of the fact that man has a pirit as well as soul is conclusive.

We are surprised that one arriving at this find- ng should so largely favour the conditional im- nortality belief. We cannot go with Dr. Anderson n his reasonings here. It may be quite true that nan has no inherent immortality, that immortality annot be predicated of man as man; but neither an life, in its strict and proper use. It is only he hat hath the Son that hath life. If, then, the nregenerate have existence, though they have not ife; if their present condition now is death, and ot life, why should the final sentence of death be nterpreted as extinction? Dr. Anderson, unlike he advocates of annihilation hitherto, has per- eption enough to see that their definition of life s existence, and of death as non-existence, is Scrip- urally untenable.

If such definitions were correct, then the unre- enerate have no spirit, and the tripartite view of nan's nature would be exploded. The subject is ne which requires careful handling. If there are Scriptures, and we believe there are, as e.g., Matt. xv. 46, where the element of perpetuity is asso- iated with the state of the wicked, and the unishment they undergo, then it is clear that eath in the future, no more than in the present, ecessarily involves cessation of being. We sub- nit that "everlasting punishment" could not be spoken of what was absolutely inanimate or desti- ute of feeling. The Greek word kolasis, means such an application of the rigour or instrument of aw as the subject of it is sensible of. Those who go into "everlasting punishment," cannot surely go into everlasting extinction.

But Dr. Anderson is not shut up to that alterna- ive. While he despairs of the ultimate salvation of those who have deliberately rejected the Gospel in this life, he believes that all, in respect of whom this has not come to pass, shall yet have an oppor- tunity of hearing the Gospel, and of either receiv- ing or rejecting it. The principal Scriptures quoted to justify these daring speculations are 1 Pet. iii. 18-20, and iv. 5, 6. We fear that this author's descriptions of the wonderful and whole- sale deliverances from the subterraneous Hades, are not supported by a solid basis. According to the Master, the gulf is fixed between the upper and lower Hades. See Luke xvi. 26. It is true that Christ went down to Hades and led captive captivity. But the most reasonable explanation is that He led up from thence to the Paradise of God those who were resting in peace, and to whom He made known the good news which their faith had before dimly descried.

Dr. Anderson's work abounds in statistics, cal- culations, and speculations upon which we cannot, if we would, enter. There are also prophetic inter- pretations, such as that of the Virgins and the Judgment of the Nations, to which we take strong exception. But we leave the matter with the prayer that the light there is to be had we may all receive, and that we may in no case overstep the prescribed boundary by a wisdom wise above what is written.

The Book World.

A Keswick Memorial.

Those who remember the Keswick Convention when it was, so to speak, but a grain of mustard seed, and those who know it now that its branches are spread abroad, will welcome the Memoir of the late Canon Battersby, just published by Seeley & Co., price 3s. 6d. It is compiled by "Two of his Sons," with a preface by Rev. H. C. G. Moule. The leadings of the Spirit are distinctly traceable in the fragments of correspondence and diary which are here and there presented for the reader's perusal. The events that led up to the founding of the Keswick Convention in 1875 are detailed, and these show the ever-deepening longings for holiness which permeated his soul. It is a book whose teaching is practical and helpful, whose charm is in its simplicity, and whose interest dwells in the un- garnished facts that it recites.

MISCELLANEOUS.

How to Make Common Things: A Handy Book for Girls. Edited by Charles Peters. 1s. Religious Tract Society. Young people having time and inclination to use their hands, will here find instructions as to interesting and advantageous employment in making articles of utility and decoration. The book is fully illustrated, and we are sure it will have many readers.

Lily and Leander, a Poem of Life; and other Poems. By Rev. Sam. MacNaughton, M.A. J. Gemmell. Though the title sounds romantic, the chief poem in the book teaches, in the form of a dialogue, the difference between service partly re- lying on self and service done wholly in the power of Christ. Sweet thoughts occur in the shorter poems, but the lines do not always run smoothly.

The Messages of Christ. By Rev. J. J. Ellis. 2s. 6d. Authors' Co-operative Publishing Company. A book that will repay study. Christ in his various characters, as Master, Teacher, Brother, is faithfully and powerfully depicted. His dealings with the faithless, the prosperous, the tempted and tried, the tolerant, and other spiritual or mental conditions, are described with great skill and sympathy.

In His Name: The Record of the Ragged School and Mission Union.—The numbers of this monthly for the past two years have been bound in a volume which labourers among neg- lected children will read with great interest. The Ragged School missions in our towns and cities are doing a work, the value of which cannot be over- estimated. This book will, we trust, help on the cause, and encourage those who are giving time and strength thereto. Certainly no other book gives so much information as to ragged school work and its developments. (J. F. Shaw & Co.)

The National Temperance Congress, Bir- mingham, 1889. The addresses delivered at the memorable meetings held in October last are brought together in this volume. The Bishop of London, Dr. Norman Kerr, Sir William Collins, Dr. F. R. Lees, and Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., are some of those whose weighty utterances are pre- sented. Here is a statement of the temperance question in its scientific, educational, industrial, legislative, and other aspects, and, at the same time, due regard is paid to the problem of aiding reform in relation to the evil of intemperance. (3s. 6d. National Temperance Publication Depôt.)

Beneath Two Flags. By Maud B. Booth. Funk & Wagnalls, 44, Fleet-street. This book, which is written by Mrs. Ballington Booth, and dedicated to her mother-in-law, "Mrs. General Booth, and the mother of the Salvation Army," is an able and forceful résumé of the Salvation Army's operations on the other side of the Atlantic. The talented writer is an impassioned devotee of this modern institution, and her main object in writing is to make all Christians as ardent and sympathetic helpers as herself. She deplores "the non-committal attitude" which many Christians adopt towards her beloved Army, and seeks by a series of vivid descriptions and telling incidents to break down that reserve. That she may have a certain amount of success is very likely. But there is another side to the picture. Among the churches there are myriads who cannot bear self-laudation and who cannot take to measures that seem to them wholly irreconcilable with the genius of Christianity. The bravest soldiers are usually those who speak least about their battles and their conquests.

Messrs. Dyer Brothers have published a leaflet for distribution among boys, giving earnest counsel and warning as to the nature and effects of sins against the body. (1s. 6d. per 100).

Christ cannot be Hid. A Message for the Times. By Canon Fleming. 1d. "Home Words" Office. This booklet is already in its fifth thousand. The thoughts are beautful, and expressed with vigour.

Recent publications of the Protestant Truth Society include: The Gift of God, a discourse, by Father Chiniquy (1d.); and The Lord's Supper or the Mass? a very instructive lecture, by Rev. Dr. H. H. Wright (2d.). (John Kensit, 18, Paternoster-row.)

Springtide Booklets. Natural scenes and objects have furnished Rev. W. Frith with texts for a number of useful letter tracts. The sacred thoughts which he suggests are always worthy of perusal. 7d. per packet, post free, from the author, Manseville, Harringay, N.

A missionary service of song, entitled "White Unto Harvest," is compiled by A. W. Marston, containing hymns, texts, and brief utterances on missionary work from various sources. The words only are given and references to the appropriate music. (3d. J. F. Shaw & Co.)

Temperance Tracts. The National Temperance Publication Depôt has issued three instructive envelope booklets, entitled, Alcohol in Hospitals and the Sick- room, an address to nurses, by Dr. Thomas Savage; Our Young Women, an address on temperance, by Canon Wilberforce; and Waste, Want, and Treachery, the substance of a letter to a women's meeting, by Mrs. Hind Smith. The two first are a penny each, and the last 6d. per dozen.

Bright Words (½d. monthly). We commend this little paper for its point and fire. Now and again its teaching verges on the perfectionist and "eradication" position. But with its insistance upon "present com- plete heart-obedience to all that He says to us," we are in fullest sympathy.—A Pentecost for You. By J. A. A. Wallace. A fervent, pointed booklet that urges the attainment of holiness by the knowledge of God. The distinction between knowing about God, and his truth, and knowing Him, and the reality of the doctrine, is strongly insisted on; and surely there are few things more needed than such following on to know the Lord. These are both published in the interests of the "Faith Mission Pilgrims." (½d. Marshall Brothers.)

MANCHESTER.—June 9 is fixed upon by the Women's Christian Temperance Association for the proposed day of humiliation on account of the drink traffic. From the promises received the Committee are assured that in many places in England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland bands of men and women, in deep earnest about the removal of this terrible engine of evil from the kingdom will be humbling themselves before God.

VISITORS TO INDIA.—Lord Radstock, Canon Wilberforce, and Mr. George Müller have arrived in England from the East. Referring to their visit to India, The Witness, of Calcutta, says: "The cold season of 1889-90 has been remarkable for the character of the visitors who have looked in upon India. Lord Radstock and Canon Wilberforce make a team such as do not often strengthen the hands of Christian workers in India by their visits, and their eloquent presentation of the Gospel of Christ, and the moral and social reforms for which the Gospel calls, and which it makes possible. The influence of the eloquent Canon's fervid pleas for total abstinence will long be felt in the great centres whither he has gone, while the faithful testimony of the spiritual nobleman who accom- panied him will bear rich fruit." Mr. Müller, in company with his wife, was in India for nearly eighteen months, during which time he was con- stantly preaching. Mr. Müller is now in his eighty- fifth year.

MISSION WORK AT THE DOCKS.—On Monday evening, Lady Ashburton inaugurated a Sailors' Rest and Reading-room in connection with the mission-hall and coffee palace erected some months since at the Custom House, Victoria Docks, E. The Rest, which will be carried on under the auspices of the Victoria Docks Auxiliary of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, is in the centre of a vast sailor population, and supplies a long-felt want. The Rest will be open all day, so that the men can drop in at any time and make free use of the rooms, where every comfort will be provided for them. It is proposed to hold a daily noon prayer-meeting, and, it is hoped, a Gospel service every evening, besides which, the mission- ary, Mr. J. C. Wingfield, will hold meetings on board the ships lying in the docks. At the public meeting the Mayor of West Ham (Alderman F. Smith) presided, and brief addresses were delivered by Lady Ashburton, Rev. E. W. Matthews, Alder- man Phillips, Capt. Clarke, Mr. Dunn, and Mr. A. Wilké. Much earnest prayer was offered that this new Rest may be an unspeakable blessing to hun- dreds of sailors who may enter its doors.

Personalia.

Mr. Baynes, secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, is at present in Ceylon; he will leave about the end of the present month, expecting to arrive in England about the middle of April.

Mrs. George Muller is still unable to leave London on account of indisposition. If able to leave her, Mr. Muller will preach at the Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, on Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

Mrs. Travers Lewis lately addressed a meeting in Boston, U.S., on behalf of her work among young Englishwomen in Paris, and her statement was received with much interest. Speeches were also made by Rev. Phillips Brooks and the Bishop of Ontario.

Mr. Charles Cook, of the Hyde-park Hall, last week gave his lecture on the Prisons of the World to a crowded house at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Mr. Spurgeon presiding. Mr. Cook is about to spend a few weeks' holiday in visiting some of the European prisons.

Mr. D. C. Joseph, of Jerusalem, is about to visit England, bringing his motherless child to be placed under the care of friends in London. During his stay he desires to give lectures in connection with his work among Jews in Jerusalem and Hebron. He may be addressed care of Mr. R. Morgan, 138, Clifden-road, Clapton, London, N.

Miss Colenso has succeeded, during her stay in England, in forming a Zulu Defence Committee to obtain justice for the Zulu Chiefs and others now in exile. Mr. Caine, M.P., Sir R. N. Fowler, M.P., Dr. Gladstone, Earl Grey, and Mr. W. A. McArthur, M.P., are members of the Committee. Miss Colenso has spent £3000 in defending the Zulu Chiefs.

Mrs. Booth. — Although Mrs. Booth has rallied in some measure from the extremely prostrate condition of last week, the symptoms of exhaustion seem now to affect her whole system. The disease has spread and is spreading terribly all round the shoulder and neck and down the side. The arm has long been disabled, and is now the seat of great suffering.

MR. REGINALD RADCLIFFE'S call for special prayer, that believers may be so endued with grace as to live first for the Kingdom of God, has been taken up in some directions. After ennumerating many reasons why Christians should live as wholly belonging to the Lord, Mr. Radcliffe asks: "Has not the Lord placed on us the tremendous responsibility of making the enlightenment of the world depend upon its 'seeing our good works'?" The time specified for these meetings is the night. At Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A., a few nights ago, a meeting was held, lasting from eight to eleven. We should be glad to hear of similar gatherings being held throughout the country. Copies of the "Urgent Reasons" may be had from Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, Waterloo, Liverpool.

WORKING MEN'S LORD'S DAY REST ASSOCIATION.—The thirty-third annual meeting was held in Exeter Hall last Thursday evening, under the chairmanship of Sir John Coode. The report, an abstract of which was read by Mr. Charles Hill, secretary, stated:—The opening of the British Museum on every week-day evening from eight till ten o'clock, an object for which the Association has persistently laboured for twenty-four years, is now an accomplished fact. A memorial against the Sunday opening of the People's Palace was sent to the trustees last October, but no acknowledgment or reply has ever been received; and although 20,240 persons of the working class in East London, and 680 clergymen and ministers in and around London, have protested, and the seven Members of Parliament for the Tower Hamlets are pledged not to vote for the Sunday opening of museums, the People's Palace still opens on Sundays. The Metropolitan Railway servants, who work from twelve to seventeen hours on Sundays, have asked their employers that six days may constitute a week's work, and Sunday work be paid for at the rate of time and a half. The South-Eastern Railway Company has decided that six days shall constitute a week's work for signalmen. The income of the Association for the nine months ending December 31, 1889, has been £1068 19s. 5d., the expenditure £1136 13s. 11d.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

At the C.M.S. Committee meeting on Tuesday, last week, several missionaries were taken leave of. They included Rev. A. E. Day, who returns to his work in the Punjab; Rev. J. H. Keen, for some years curate to the present Bishop of Bedford at Spitalfields, who is going out to assist Bishop Ridley in North-West America; Rev. A. E. Dibben, late curate of St. John's, West Chelsea, who is proceeding to Ceylon; and Rev. J. W. Tims, who is returning to the Mission to the Blackfoot Indians of North-West America.

In Holy Trinity Church, Eastbourne, on Wednesday evening, March 12, a young woman renounced the errors of the Church of Rome and avowed herself a member of the Church of England. Rev. W. A. Bathurst, vicar, read, sentence by sentence, the prepared Form of Recantation, after each sentence of which the neophyte responded: "I do." The form was finally signed by herself and witnesses in the vestry, and deposited in the iron chest of the church. A similar public recantation took place in this church in the summer of 1884.

BAPTIST.

Mr. S. C. Gordon, of the Pastors' College, has been accepted by the Baptist Missionary Society for service on the Congo. Mr. Gordon is a native of Jamaica, and was formerly a student of Calabar College, Kingston.

Rev. E. G. Gange had accepted a call to the pastorate at Woodberry Down, Stamford-hill, N., but finding that he had underrated the strength of the ties formed with his church at Bristol during twenty years' ministry there, telegraphed withdrawing the acceptance.

During last week a series of meetings for the deepening of spiritual life, in connection with the Baptist Ministers' and Missionaries' Prayer Union, was held in City-road Chapel, Winchester. The speakers included Rev. F. B. Meyer, W. R. Skerry (London), J. B. Figgis, David Davies (Brighton), G. E. Thomas (Bath), J. T. Wigner, W. V. Robinson (Bournemouth), and others.

The annual congregational meeting of the Baptist Church at Rayleigh, Essex, was held on Wednesday, last week, when the pastor, Rev. I. Bridge, reviewing the past year, referred, among other facts, to the manifest presence of God in all the meetings, the peace and unity existing in the church, the frequent testimonies to blessing received in the services, and several recent cases of awakening and conversion.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Oak-street Church, Accrington, has decided to carry on two mission stations in new parts of the town. One was opened on Sunday week, with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. T. H. Williams.

The annual report of Union Chapel, Islington, N. (Rev. Dr. Allon, pastor), shows that there are at the present time 641 members in church fellowship, and 231 at the branch mission churches. During the past year £1341 was raised for home missionary work, and £738 for auxiliary agencies of the church.

A popular service has been started at Bridgwater, entitled a Service of Praise, following the ordinary Sunday evening worship. It consists of organ and vocal solos, choruses, and congregational singing, with a five minutes' address from the pastor. The service is much appreciated, and (says The Northern Advance) there are signs of distinct spiritual results.

The visitations of churches throughout the country, by deputations acting as messengers of the Congregational Church Aid Society, have been carried out with considerable success since the beginning of November. The churches visited are unanimous in their appreciation of this work, and in recommending that the visits should be annual, and be for two or more days. Those who have engaged in the work have been so encouraged and stimulated that almost all of them have volunteered further service.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The congregation of Martyrs' Free Church, Glasgow, expended £100 in aggressive home mission work, by means of their Gospel tent, last summer. The pastor, Rev. Lauchlan MacLauchlan, is an earnest evangelistic labourer. Mr. J. M. Scroggie has just completed a course of most encouraging meetings in the church, at which there were numbers of inquirers every evening.

Mr. J. T. Morton, in addition to his many donations to the Church in different ways, has offered to the Women's Missionary Association to pay the salaries for two years of two ladies to assist Dr. and Mrs. Kerr in the work of the Jewish Mission at Rabat. The Women's Association have accepted Mr. Morton's offer, and are now in quest of agents for this work, who must be chosen and reported to Mr. Morton in May, although they will not require to set out for Morocco till October.

The Central Hall, Holborn, has been secured for the Sunday afternoon services to be conducted by Rev. John McNeill. It is taken for four weeks as an experiment, the first service to be held at 3.30 on April 13. The hall, which seats 4000 people, is well adapted for such services, and may be secured for a longer period. The arrangements are in the hands of a committee of the London Presbytery. Mr. McNeill has an assistant minister at Regent-square—Rev. J. B. Thorburn—who attends to the mission and pastoral work, which Mr. McNeill himself cannot fully undertake with his many engagements.

METHODIST.

The Great Bridgewater-street centre of the Manchester Wesleyan Mission in eighteen months has increased its congregation from 200 to 1000. The Sunday-school contains 700 scholars; there are 350 meeting in class, and Temperance work is being conducted with great spirit.

The leaders of the West London Mission are just now embarrassed and distressed by the fact that a number of very eligible ladies have offered themselves for the Sisterhood—but both Houses are full. Some of these ladies would bear the entire cost of their own maintenance, but the opening of another House, with all the initial and other expenses, could not be undertaken with safety unless £1000 is forthcoming.

Rev. J. E. Clapham, speaking on behalf of the Wesleyan Home Missionary Society, reviewed the new advances made by this Society during recent years, dwelling on the number of closed chapels that had been reopened, and of partially deserted chapels which have been filled with congregations. He stated that several more old chapels in large populations would be set apart as centres for mission work at the approaching Conference.

At the annual meeting of the New Surrey Chapel, recently held, encouraging evidence was given of the great interest taken in this vigorous and enterprising movement. Rev. B. Senior said he was deeply grateful to God for the blessing upon his ministry during the eleven years he had been there. The report states that all the societies in connection with the church are making progress. The number of members is 270, twenty-seven being admitted in January. The young people's meeting on Sunday evenings, conducted in the school-room while service is carried on above in the chapel, attracts some 500 of the roughest class in the district.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Mr. James B. Wookey, of London, is addressing meetings in Ireland on behalf of Dr. Barnardo's Homes.

The anniversary meetings of the Belfast branch of the London Missionary Society have just been held. The deputation consisted of Revs. T. Rowlands (Madagascar), E. A. Wareham (India), and W. Johnson (Calcutta), and the services were more than usually interesting.

The Belfast Railway Mission is working vigorously. A weekly prayer-meeting is held, Bible-readings are given on Sunday evenings, social teas are given from time to time, house-to-house visitation is carried on, a railway mission choir has been formed, and a conference of the ladies' auxiliary was held last Friday, with the object of meeting Mr. R. Nixon, of London, and receiving the annual report.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes and Rev. W. D. Walters (secretary of the London Wesleyan Mission) are expected to visit Scotland in May.

A new Free Church has been opened at Fort William. The opening sermons were preached by Rev. Murdo Mackenzie, of the Free North Church, Inverness.

Holborn Free Church, Aberdeen, has sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. James M. Smith, who was ordained to the eldership in the congregation in 1839. At the celebration of his jubilee last year, Mr. Smith stated that in the course of the last fifty years he had delivered at least 700 religious addresses and 1200 speeches at social and temperance gatherings.

Kilwinning U.P. congregation have framed an address of congratulation to Rev. Hugh Goldie, of Old Calabar, on the attainment of his ministerial jubilee, he having begun his ministry in that Ayrshire town. The address refers to Mr. Goldie's unwearied labours in training young men for the ministry, and in translating the New Testament and providing other Christian literature for Calabar.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Rev. E. M. Griffith, for twenty-two years missionary of the Church Missionary Society at Jaffna, Ceylon.—Rev. Canon Hopwood, rector of Winwick, Lancashire.—Rev. Donald Macdonald, pastor of the Congregational Church, Sidmouth, Devon.—Rev. William Watson, U.P. minister, Langholm, Dumfries-shire.—Rev. Joseph Brown, for many years pastor of Grafton-street Baptist Church, and chaplain and registrar of the General Cemetery, Northampton.—Rev. John T. Beighton, Richmond, retired Congregational minister, who formerly held pastorates at Barnstaple, Bristol, and Bideford.—Rev. C. H. Prance, for many years vicar of Annesley, Notts., and recently of St. John's, Derby.—Rev. Jesudasen John, native pastor of the C.M.S. at Palamcotta, Tinnevelly, South India.—Mr. George E. Haycraft, an earnest worker connected with Lewisham-road Baptist Chapel, Greenwich.

Erratum.—In our note last week respecting "the closing decade" of the century, the figure 2000 should have read 1900.

The East-end Gospel Mission, of which General Sir Arthur Cotton is president, is sadly in need of funds. Books and texts for colporteurs will be thankfully received, also tracts and flowers for the Bible Flower Mission. Address the superintendent, Mr. George Fuller, Brunswick Hall, Brunswick-road, Poplar, E.

A band of Christian young men purpose holding meetings on Good Friday in several villages in the neighbourhood of Weston-super-Mare. Gospel tracts to be distributed by them will be gladly received from any who are in sympathy with work of this kind. They should be addressed to Mr. Downs, 9, West-street, Weston-super-Mare.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, MARCH 30.—Job II.

THE first attempt of Satan has failed. We have in this chapter:—

(1) Job's second trial (1-10).—The scene is again transferred to heaven. Satan, appearing again among the sons of God, hears once more God's testimony to the righteousness of Job, and to the failure of Satan's attack upon him (1-3). Job knew nothing of this. So far as he knew, there were few witnesses to his trial, and to the spirit in which he met it. But every man's conduct has a far wider influence than he supposes. Eyes that we see not are watching us (1 Cor. iv. 9). "God is not unrighteous to forget" any manifestation of the faith of his people. Note Satan's further slander (4, 5).—He does not accept defeat very willingly. His second slander is like the first, only worse. A stranger to unselfishness in himself, he cannot understand its existence in others. He would not serve God for nothing, and he measures Job by himself. If the first trial, which touched Job's property and family, has failed, another, touching his own flesh, and threatening his life, may succeed. Job in Satan's power (6-8).—There is a mystery about all such visitations of disease and pain. Satan seems to have more to do with such afflictions than we suppose. See Luke xiii. 16; Acts x. 38; 2 Cor. xii. 7. Yet his power is not absolute. He can only do what God permits; there is a limit beyond which he cannot go. In Job's case, he is allowed to do the worst he can, without destroying life. And it is terrible to see what Satan's worst is. The disease with which Job was smitten is supposed to have been that kind of leprosy called Elephantiasis. It was considered incurable, and its loathsomeness and painfulness are evident from many references throughout this book. The sores itched (ii. 8), bred worms (vii. 5), disfigured his countenance, so that his friends did not know him (ii. 12), made his breath fetid (xix. 17), so that he sat outside the village upon the heap of ashes (ii. 8); they caused gnawing pains in his bones (xxx. 30), and made him too helpless to rise (xix. 18). This much Satan did when Job's body was in his power.

The issue of the trial (9, 10).—His wife is used by Satan to tempt him, as Eve tempted Adam. To her it seems useless to serve God, if He allows his servant not only to lose everything, but to suffer such a loathsome affliction. Job's reply is significant. "A foolish woman is an ungodly woman, for all ungodliness is folly." Satan's part in the trial is all unknown to Job; but he knows that God reigns, and that even Satan can have no power against him, except what God gives him. His faith looks beyond any second cause. Whoever may be the rod of our chastisement, remember the Divine hand that wields it. "In all this did not Job sin with his lips" (10). "With his lips"? Was there a struggle within? Job has not yielded to it. Satan has again failed.

(2) The visit of Job's friends (11-13).—Eliphaz the Temanite was probably the son of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 10, 11). Teman, or Edom, was famed for wisdom (Jer. xlix. 7; Obad. 8). Shuah was one of the sons of Abraham, by Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2, 6). Bildad the Shuhite was probably one of his descendants. Of Naamah nothing can be stated with certainty. They came to Job from a desire to offer him real sympathy; but his appearance shocked them (12), so that they remained for seven days and nights in sympathetic silence in the presence of his awful grief.

MONDAY, MARCH 31.—Job III.

Job is the first to break the silence. "He opened his mouth, and cursed his day" (1). The words summarise the whole chapter.

The perfect man is not sinless.—If he is not actually rebellious, he is certainly bitter, impatient, murmuring. Possibly this spirit was struggling for utterance, even when he "sinned not with his lips" (ii. 10). But the continuance of the trial and the effect of the diseased body upon the mind lead him at last to speak. After Job's previous utterances, and after God's testimony concerning him, we should hardly have thought that there was that in Job which could speak so. But the trial has discovered hitherto unknown evil. It is because this lurks within us, even in our moments of victory, that the cleansing blood is constantly required (1 John i. 7).

Job speaks as a pessimist of the worst type.—His existence is regarded as a curse, and the greatest blessing he longs for is to escape from it. He curses the day of his birth (3-10), and wishes he had never been born. Or, if his birth were necessary, why did he not die from the womb (11-19)? Instead of living in misery, loathed and cast out, he would then have had rest among the great and small who have entered into the tomb. Or why continue a life that is so miserable (20-26)? His way is hid in mystery which perplexes and baffles him. Death would be a welcome relief. His affliction for the present discolours his whole life. God is only mentioned twice (4, 23) in the whole of this complaint, and then not as the object of Job's confidence.

There is some excuse for his pessimism. The same bitter complaints are sometimes heard from men living in luxury who have missed their way, and to whom, therefore, life is not worth living. With Job it is not a settled creed, but a passing thought suggested by his circumstances of unwonted trial. If he did but know what issues depend upon his trial, he would speak differently. Do not repeat his complaint. Remember that through the most mysterious circumstance God is working out a purpose. Wait for light.

TUESDAY, APRIL 1.—Job IV.

The three friends were probably as much surprised by the bitter complaint of Job as they had been at the severity of his affliction. Eliphaz, probably the oldest, was the first to reply to him. It is the complaint of Job, and not merely his suffering, that moves Eliphaz to speak.

His surprise at Job's complaint (1-11).—He had comforted and strengthened others (3, 4), why should he faint when in trouble himself (5)? It is not the righteous who perish in affliction (6, 7), but the wicked (8, 9), whose sudden destruction is described under the figure of scattering a den of lions (10, 11). Eliphaz suggests that as Job's fear of God was his confidence (6), he should not despair, but should expect a happy issue out of his afflictions.

His instructive vision (12-21).—He speaks with great delicacy, declaring a truth which had been taught him under most impressive conditions (12-16). God is holy, so that even his angels are marked with imperfection before Him (17). Still more imperfect in his sight must man be, so frail (19), so speedily destroyed (20), who does not attain unto wisdom before his "tent-cord" is removed (21, R.V.). For Job to murmur against such a God is sinful indeed in the judgment of Eliphaz.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2.—Job V.

Eliphaz applies his teaching to Job's case (1-7).—His murmuring is useless, for none of the angels would receive a complaint against God (1). The "wrath," or impatience, of a foolish man would only lead to destruction (2). The form of trouble with which God would visit the foolish resembles that which had befallen Job (4, 5). And, Eliphaz suggests, affliction comes as the result of man's sin (6, 7). Why then should Job murmur at that which his own sin had occasioned?

Eliphaz counsels Job wisely (8-16).—No better advice could be given than that Job should humbly commit his case to God (8). The description of God's power and goodness in providence (9-11), and in defeating the purposes of the crafty (12-16), supports the counsel just given. Though he had a wrong idea concerning the afflictions of Job, Eliphaz evidently had learned great truths, and could utter them wisely (1 Cor. iii. 19).

Eliphaz gives further reasons for his excellent advice (17-27).—Even afflictions are an evidence of God's goodness (17), and are followed by displays of his delivering grace. Prov. iii. 11 and Heb. xii. 5 repeat a similar truth. The truth is right, but the application Eliphaz makes of it is wrong. Immunity from all sorts of trial is nowhere promised to the man that seeks God. Yet that is what Eliphaz promises Job (19-27). No evil should befall him or his dwelling, his offspring should be great, and he should die in a ripe old age.

The speech of Eliphaz contains much that is good. The theory which underlies his argument is generally right, but not universally. He shows want of sympathy with Job's suffering in his application of his theory to Job's case. The effect of his speech on Job is not comfort, but still greater distress.

THURSDAY, APRIL 3.—Job VI.

Eliphaz had referred mainly to the impatience of Job manifested in his bitter complaint. Job, in his reply: (1) Excuses the impatience he had manifested (1-13).—His calamity was greater than his complaint (1). How could his words be other than rash, since the arrows of the Almighty were in him (3, 4, R.V.)? He suggests that Eliphaz might have judged the severity of his trial from the bitterness of his complaint (5-7). Even beasts do not cry without cause. Then Job breaks out into a still more impatient cry for death (8, 9). He would even exult in pain that would not spare his life (10, R.V.). He sees no prospect of relief in the future, and has no strength to endure (11-13); why then should he be patient?

(2) Expresses disappointment at his friends (14-30).—Even if he were forsaking the Almighty (14, R.V.), kindness should be shown him. They were to him rather as the dried-up brook, to which the thirsty caravan comes, hoping for water and finding none (15-21). To meet with such disappointment in them only increased his anguish. There is sarcasm in the words that follow (22, 23). Job had not sought their sympathy; yet already they had insinuated that he had sinned. Let them not insinuate, but speak boldly (24). To deny Job's innocence in order to complete their argument (25) was cruel. He was ready to their face to deny that he had sinned; would they charge him with falsehood? (26-30). Job was evidently right. He knew nothing in himself for which his affliction could be regarded as a retribution. The suggestion to him, and to the other sufferers since his day, is cruel, and can only aggravate the suffering.

FRIDAY, APRIL 4.—Job VII.

The cry of Job in this chapter is even more bitter than that in chapter iii. He begins by a complaint of the brevity and painfulness of life (1-10). It is a time of hard service imposed upon him by another (1-2). The weaver's shuttle (6), the wind (7), the cloud (9), express its brevity. The anguish Job suffered through his loathsome disease made life unbearable (3-5). He resolved, therefore, that he would not restrain himself, his bitter words should find utterance (11).

Then follows his complaint (12-21). Why should God deal with him as though he were dangerous to others as the sea, or the sea monster? Why follow him to his couch, and disturb his nights with horrible dreams (13-15)? Why not let him die, and so escape from a life which he loathed (16)? Why should such a puny creature as man be pained and persecuted by God (17-19)? There is a boldness, an irreverence in such utterances which startles us. These are the words of Job, who feared God and eschewed evil (i. 8)! When he says, "I have sinned" (20), he is expressing no repentance. It is rather, "What if I have sinned? What do I unto thee?" Nor is there a humble prayer for pardon in the words, "Why dost thou not pardon my transgression" (21)? They are all a part of the same bitter complaint, and of Job's desire to escape from the burden of life.

Do not judge him too harshly. Remember his condition, and the effect that such a bodily affliction must have had upon his mind, and his ignorance of God's purpose in his affliction. His self-control has gone, he utters rash words. We know God better through Job's experience, so may not utter similar complaints.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5.—Job VIII.

Bildad in his speech refers only to Job's direct complaint against God (vii. 11-21), and seeks to defend God's righteousness against the charge implied in Job's words.

Verses 1-7.—The questions of ver. 3 show the meaning which Bildad attached to Job's speech. Job appeared to him to have charged God with perverting justice! To this Bildad replies, with less gentleness and considerateness than Eliphaz manifested, affirming that Job's children had been cast away for their transgression (4). Their destruction was therefore an evidence of God's rectitude. He assumes also that in Job's case there was sin, not grievous enough to require his destruction, but certainly deserving his present chastisement. Bildad cherishes the hope that Job's affliction will lead him to God in true repentance (5, 6), and that God's rectitude will be vindicated towards him by giving him a happy issue out of his afflictions (6, 7). How contrary was this to the actual truth (John ix. 2, 3; Luke xiii. 4); and how it must have added to poor Job's agony!

Verses 8-22.—Bildad claims for his theory the support of the ancients (8-10). Surely Job would not refuse to learn from them? Their teaching is that, as the "rush" deprived of water speedily withers, so the "hypocrite"—the ungodly—should perish as swiftly as the spider's web is destroyed (11-15). Then another metaphor is used to present the same truth—a plant, growing luxuriantly beneath the sun, spreading forth its branches, and striking its roots deeply (16, 17), yet is immediately destroyed, so that no trace is left to mark its place (18). But Bildad again contrasts Job with the wicked. He refers to him as "the perfect man" (20), who has fallen into some sin for which Bildad hopes he will seek unto God (5), so that his mouth shall again be "filled with laughing" (21). By his closing reference to them "that hate thee" (22), Bildad claims that he and his friends were not among the number.

International S.S. Lessons.

Sunday Afternoon, April 6.

Christ's Law of Love.—Luke vi. 27-38.

Golden Text: Verse 31.

These words are substantially the same as Matt. v. 38-48, where they occur as part of the Sermon on the Mount. We need not discuss the question whether Luke is giving an account of the same sermon, or whether our Lord repeated more than once words that are certainly worthy of frequent repetition. The slight difference between the words in the two Evangelists is thus explained by Godet: "The prevailing idea, in Matthew, is certainly an exposition of the new law in its relations with the old. In Luke the subject is simply the law of charity, as the foundation of the new order of things." But the old law and the new are closely connected, for "love is the fulfilling of the law" (Rom. xiii. 10). To understand and to practise the teaching of this lesson is to be a Christian indeed. It contains Christ's law of love.

(1) Love in practical manifestation (27-30).—When Jesus speaks to those "which hear," does He mean simply to distinguish the "actual hearers" of his words from those "imaginary hearers" to whom his woes have been addressed?—Godet. Surely it is only to true hearers (Matt. xi. 15) that such a law can be spoken. It is significant that after Jesus has pronounced so many "woes," He enjoins only love upon his disciples. It is easy for us to utter solemn denunciations upon others and think we are exhibiting "righteous indignation," when we are simply destitute of the law of love. The manifestation of our love must be active (27, 28), passive (29), and benevolent (30). Our enemies must be the objects of our love—not only those who cherish a feeling of enmity against us, but who express it in act, and word (curse), and in efforts to resist and thwart us. And our love is not to be a mere sentiment. It must be expressed in act (do good); in word (bless); and in intercession (pray). This is a high ideal; yet the Apostle enjoins it (Rom. xii. 21); and our Lord exemplified it (Ps. cix. 4; Luke xxiii. 34); and so did the martyr Stephen (Acts vii. 60).

The passive and benevolent manifestations of love are closely joined (29, 30). Paul unites them also, "Love suffereth long, and is kind" (1 Cor. xiii. 4). The literal application of the words of Jesus is not always possible. Where the manifestation of love requires it, every right is to be yielded. Justice simply respects the rights of others; love prompts to the surrender of our own. To submit, to yield, is to triumph; to retaliate, to resist, is to fail. A Christian who contends for his "rights," without regard for the consequences of his conduct upon others, is disobeying the law of love. It is this love which makes inexpedient many things that are lawful. Let not our rights, but our love, guide our conduct toward those who oppress us, or are in need. "It is in charity that the disciple of Jesus yields, when he yields; it is in charity, also, that he resists, when he resists. Charity has no other limit than charity itself, that is to say, it is boundless."—Godet. We are touching great and blessed mysteries in these words. It was by love, thus manifested in the surrender of all, that Jesus reached the throne (Phil. ii. 5-10). "Let the same mind be in you."

(2) The law of love expressed (31).—It is to his disciples Jesus gives this law. The desires of unconverted men for themselves may be foolish and hurtful. Love does not give what is hurtful to others. When our desires are regulated by the teaching of God's Word, what an excellent rule this is! Not as others do to us—that is the world's method, expressed by its maxims, "Tit for tat," "A Roland for an Oliver," "Six for his half-dozen," &c.; but as we would that they should do to us. To live thus would be blessed liberty from the curse of selfishness.

(3) Love enforced by contrasts (32-35).—Our Lord calls others "sinners." We commonly apply the term to believers. It is significant that the New Testament does not use it so. "Sinners" are contrasted with "saints." Even "sinners" may do good and lend when it is to their interest to do so, but Jesus enjoins upon his people disinterested benevolence. They have "freely received," and are expected "freely to give." How much of our love may be selfishness and our generosity toward others only a means of advancing our own interests! In the presence of words like these, a godly man was constrained to ask: "Are we Christians at all?"

(4) The pattern of love (36).—"Having referred to the love which his disciples are to surpass, Jesus shows them what they must aspire to reach."—Godet. Our model must be nothing less than God Himself. His mercy is bestowed on the worthy and unworthy alike (Matt. v. 45). We must be imitators of Him (Eph. v. 1, 2).

(5) The rewards of love (35, 37, 38).—Though we may not hope for reward from those who are the objects of our love, and may be content to receive additional hatred in return, yet "great reward" (35) is promised. He "is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love" (Heb. vi. 10). If we forego those rewards which selfishness seeks, He will give us others. To be manifestly and consciously his children—is not that reward enough? Yet more than that. Love restrains from judging and condemning, and prompts to forgive and to give (37, 38). Both here and hereafter there shall be a return in the same kind made to us. Can any one who does not love so as to forgive expect to escape judgment and condemnation himself (Matt. xviii. 35)? But the reward comes here also, for "men shall give" (38). There is a sense in which man receives from others what he gives, as the echo sends back to us our own words. The law of retribution works even now. The harvests from our sowing are not all future. We are made to eat the fruit of our own ways even in this life (Prov. xix. 17, xxii. 9, xxviii. 27; 2 Cor. ix. 6).

Such is Christ's Law of Love. He gives it, not as the condition upon which we enter into his kingdom, but as necessary to prove that we are in the kingdom. Naturally, it is impossible for us to keep, or even to desire to keep this law. But when "born again," and thus made partakers of the Divine nature, we do learn to admire it, and long to keep it.

Christ has given us an example of it; to know how to give expression to the law of love, seek to follow his steps (1 Pet. ii. 21-23).

Yet imitation is not enough. Having given us the perfect example, Jesus died and rose again, and ascended up into heaven, that He might come again in the Holy Spirit, and take up his abode in our hearts, and live out his own life there. Such love can only be "the fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. v. 22). If the ideal is impossible to us, yet it becomes possible when we learn that "Christ lives in us" (Gal. ii. 20).

The teacher will be able to make many applications of this law of love to the lives of the scholars.

"WELCOME" MISSION, BELFAST.

A fortnight's mission has been held by Miss Bax in "The Welcome," Belfast, a mill and factory girls' branch of the Y.W.C.A. From the first night blessing followed the preaching. Many who had been long prayed for and mourned over appeared compelled to surrender to Christ. As the meetings went on, it was touching to see Christian girls pleading with their former companions, and telling them of the pardon and peace they had found. The second week of the mission, Miss Bax was joined by Miss Richardson, of Moyallon, who rendered valuable help.

The changed faces of many in "The Welcome" testify that God has been manifestly at work. A praise-meeting and a meeting for Christians concluded the mission. Great numbers stood up to testify of blessing received. K. S. M.

"WEEDING AND SOWING" is the title of a pamphlet of reminiscences of work by Mrs. Cunningham, hon. directress of the Shaftesbury Institute, Ragged-school, Infant Day Nursery, and Rescue Home, Brixton. The reminiscences are well worth reading, and in many instances very remarkable in character. Copies of the book (6d. each) may be had from the Shaftesbury Institute, 5, Railton-road, Herne-hill, S.E.

INQUIRERS' COLUMN.

"HOLD THE TRADITIONS."

Sir,—Others, with myself, are anxious to know the true meaning of 2 Thess. ii. 15. I was lately given a book which enjoined a steadfast belief in "The Church and Her Traditions as a Means to Salvation." Confession was also taught, and set prayers for intercession, acts of penitence, &c., were pointed out as the way to eternal life. The above text has been specially quoted as a proof that St. Paul desired us to keep the traditions of the Church before us as a matter of faith. Our Lord's own teaching is so much at variance with this that I cannot but believe another meaning attaches to the verse in question.—Yours, &c., R.

REPLY.

The Apostle does not use the word "traditions" in the sense which has become common in ecclesiastical literature, but rather in the sense of "instructions," as in 1 Cor. xi. 2, where the same Greek word is rendered "ordinances." In both passages the language is very definite—not specifying the Jewish traditions, nor those of a later period—"as I delivered them unto you," and "which ye have been taught whether by word or by our epistle." This latter clause, in the Epistle to the Thessalonians, makes it evident that the Apostle was referring to some particular communications on doctrine which he had made by word of mouth or in his former letter. As "truths handed down from Apostles," traditions are to be found in their purity only in the Written Word. Of tradition outside the range of Apostolic teaching, Paul could, as occasion called, speak as contemptuously as Christ Himself (Col. ii. 8, 22; Mark vii. 7-9).

SALVATION CONDITIONAL.

Dear Sir,—Can you help me respecting the following matter which has weighed upon my mind for several weeks? "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Jesus Christ came into the world and died for the sins of all men, or for the whole world. Is not therefore the debt cancelled, whether a person believes it or not?—Yours truly, J. W.

REPLY.

The reasoning here is faulty, because founded on a misapprehension of facts. The Scriptures which set forth Christ as "the Lamb of God that beareth away the sin of the world," also teach us that unless as individuals we believe that Christ is the Divine Saviour we "shall die in our sins" (John i. 29, viii. 24). The same Scriptures which tell us that God sent his Son, "that the world through Him might be saved," proceed to point out that "he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God" (John iii. 17, 18). God's provision is wide as the world, but we cannot benefit by it except we exercise faith in the Saviour.

Salvation is conditional upon our personal trust in Him, by whom, to employ the language of the question, "the debt was cancelled." That is a soul-destroying Universalism which says that the broad and the narrow way alike lead to glory. The Prince of Life who vanquished death declared in unequivocal terms that the broad way "leadeth to destruction," and that if we would attain unto eternal life we must "strive to enter in at the strait gate." The remedy must be adequate to the disease, and the restitution must be equal to the fall. Man's fall was from faith in God; the very essence of the work of Christ is to restore man to faith in God. If all his past sins could be blotted out, and he were not restored to faith in God, man would still be alienated from God.

CONGO MISSIONS.—Messrs. Adamson, Cole, and Luff, of the Congo-Balolo Mission, arrived safely at Mpalabala from England on February 4. They had with them the new steam launch Pioneer, which already has reached Matadi, the highest point on the lower river. They hope that this steam launch will greatly facilitate the preaching of the Gospel among the Balolo tribes of the Upper Congo. They have an arduous task before them and will need the constant intercession of God's people on their behalf. At Matadi there are three steamers for the Upper Congo besides the Pioneer; two of these are for the State, and one for the French house. One of the State steamers will be the largest on the Upper Congo. Miss Hamilton and Miss Royal leave for America, and Mrs. Glenesk and baby for England, by Portuguese mail.—Missionary Notes.

This Society has ministered for eight years to the Spiritual and Physical needs of the North Sea Trawlers, and the work is now being rapidly extended amongst Fishermen on the West Coast and in other waters.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN SOCIETY.

Patron—Admiral H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

THIS Society labours among the great seafaring population of our country, numbering upwards of 625,000 men, who man some 36,000 Merchant, Passenger, Emigrant, Light, and other Ships, and ,000 Fishing Vessels; not one of which carries a Chaplain. It also labours among the 60,000 Seamen the Royal Navy.

AFLOAT—Its work is carried on by holding Services or Bible Readings on board the ships when in ports or roadsteads, distributing Tracts, selling Bibles and Prayer Books, and giving Boxes or Books of sound reading to be taken to sea.

In 1888, about 6,000 Bibles were sold; 750,000 Disused Bibles, Tracts, &c., distributed, and 10,000 Boxes or Bags of Books given to ships.

ASHORE—Its work is threefold:—

I. Spiritual: In 51 Churches or Mission Rooms at various ports, at home and abroad, where seamen are ministered to on Sundays and week-days, by the Society's Chaplains and Scripture Readers.

II. Philanthropic: The men being rescued from publichouses and crimps, and induced to come to the Society's Institutes, where they are provided with good reading, newspapers, &c., with means of writing to their families, and harmless games.

III. Temperance: In 1888, about 8,000 Seamen signed the Temperance Pledge; and during the last 10 years 77,000 have signed it.

Information as to the details of the work is given in the Society's Magazine Word on the Waters.
Increased FUNDS are urgently appealed for, to enable this good work to be maintained and extended. Subscriptions and contributions should be sent to the Secretary, Commander W. Dawson, R.N., at the Society's Offices, Buckingham Street, Strand, London.

PASTOR CHINIQUY writes from Montreal: "The Master is blessing our work among Roman Catholics more and more every day. Here, last night, our church was too small to contain the multitudes of Roman Catholics who had come to hear the message of peace, life, and mercy I had to deliver them. Every day this movement takes larger and larger dimensions."

THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.—The Bishop of Liverpool presided over a meeting, held a few days ago, at the house of Mrs. Houldsworth, Queen's-gate. He enlarged upon the work of the Society: how the tracts and books have improved in style, while the simple truths of the Gospel are clearly set forth. The "Present-Day" tracts and some other publications were specially commended, because they meet the need of the day, in exposing and counteracting error. Canon Fleming, one of the honorary secretaries of the Society, remarked that he had been connected with the Society for more than thirty years, and his love for the work constantly increases. He explained that all contributions to the Society were devoted in their entirety to the missionary work, publications being issued, in nearly 200 languages, all over the world. Rev. W. H. Webb-Peploe gave his testimony to the power of small books when he related that it was through a four-paged tract that he was brought to a decision for God. He was on a racecourse, endeavouring to drive away religious impressions, when the tract was given him, and the result was that the entire course of his life was changed.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, MARCH 24, 1890.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

AN EASTER STORY.

NELLY SCOTT;

Or, The Orphan Child.

By L. F. P. M., Author of "Ruth's Christmas," "Jane Arnold," &c.

Price 1d.; 1s. per doz.; 7s. 6d. per 100.

"Our readers, we are sure, will get this Easter story and read it. It is a tale well put together, and of much interest both to children and adults."—Church Opinion.

"A touching little story, full of simplicity and reality."
Mother's Friend.

"Written with graceful simplicity and freshness. We can cordially recommend it for the purpose of distribution to young folks."
Hackney and Kingsland Gazette.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings.
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

OLD MARGARET:

OR, A SAINT AT LAST.

BY REV. J. ELDER CUMMING, D.D.

Tinted Covers, 6d.	WITH STRIKING PORTRAIT.	Cloth Boards, 1s.

"Dr. Cumming has given a most interesting little sketch of a very remarkable life. To those who knew the dear old woman no recommendation is needed. They will laugh and cry by turns as they read the humorous and pathetic incidents which the story tells: and others cannot fail to be interested in it. . . . Dr. Cumming has given us a most delightful little memoir."—Life of Faith, February, 1890.

IMPERIAL MISSION HALL, HANLEY.

A MACEDONIAN CRY!

DEBT, £2,800. RENOVATION FUND, £300.

Three months ago this important Mission was on the point of collapse. The work discredited; the workers discouraged; the premises in danger of falling under the auctioneer's hammer, to revert to the devil's use as a circus or theatre.

And the rescue is scarcely assured even now, although the dilapidation has been in part remedied, and the Great Hall re-opened by Dr. BARNARDO a fortnight ago.

Only half the £300 for repairs, &c., has come in, and the mortgagee's notice for repayment of £2,800 debt has now been received.

Liberal outside help is urgently required to deliver this poor and over-burdened, but most necessary enterprise.

The Hall seats 3,250, and a dense and neglected mission population of tens of thousands is all around.

Will generous stewards of the Lord's money kindly send to the President, Alderman BOULTON, Burslem; the Hon. Sec., Mr. MITCHELL, Hanley; or to Messrs. MIDDLETON & HOGBEN, 66, Harley-street, Hanley, evangelists loaned for the Resuscitation.

Author of "From Strength to Strength," &c.

WITH PORTRAIT, AND TWO OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

PRESS NOTICES.

"The sketch of the life of James Scott is interesting, and full of pathetic beauty. Mr. Scott seems to have been a man of intense Christian enthusiasm. . . . A helpful book for Christian workers."—Christian World.

"Many who knew him and loved him, and others to whom his name has been familiar, will welcome this biography of 'James Scott,' from the competent pen of the Rev. A. A. Bonar, D.D. . . . Dr. Bonar was peculiarly qualified to write this life of Mr. Scott, and has produced a very interesting and useful volume. It is elegantly bound, and has, among other illustrations, a good likeness of Mr. Scott."
North British Daily Mail.

"A loving tribute to a true disciple, who wrought 'with both hands earnestly' for Christ. . . . This book is fitted to give a gracious impulse toward fuller service. No hand could have written this inspiring biography better than Dr. Bonar's."
The Baptist.

GALVANIC BELTS

FOR the CURE of NERVOUS DISEASES

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

GALVANISM v. SCIATICA and LUMBAGO.

39, Union-street, Tranmere, Birkenhead, 28th February, 1890.

Dear Sir,—I feel I ought to thank you as the means, in the hands of a merciful God, of restoring me to health and strength. For upwards of four months I had been in a helpless condition, suffering from Sciatica and Lumbago, and was under three medical men; a fourth doctor was called in, and he informed me that my sciatic nerves and lumbar muscles were contracted, and the muscles of left leg completely wasted for want of circulation, and my sufferings were so great that they injected morphia to give me rest. One doctor advised electricity as a last resource, and I wrote to you, and from the first hour I wore your Galvanic Belt I obtained immediate relief, and day by day the cramps and severe pains gradually left me, and my muscles are perfectly restored again. I have now resumed business, believing my cure to be permanent. I have recommended your treatment to many of my friends and neighbours who have witnessed the wonderful cure effected in my case, and I consider your Galvanic appliances a marvellous scientific invention. One of the doctors called on me to know the result, and asked me what I thought of your Belt. I replied, I don't think, but I know, it has been my Salvation.—Yours faithfully, J. PHILLIPS.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. INDIGESTION and NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Melview, Clonmel, Ireland, February 21, 1890.

Dear Sir,—I have only worn your Galvanic Bands for two months, since which I have had no return of the ailments I suffered from in consequence of the damp weather (indigestion and nervous debility). I now feel strong and healthy, which I believe is due entirely to using your electric appliance, and shall feel obliged if you will send me some of your pamphlets for my friends.—Yours very truly, (Mrs.) L. MALCOMSON.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. EXTREME NERVOUS DEBILITY and SLEEPLESSNESS.

12, Henry-street, Rawtenstall, Lancashire, February 17, 1890.

Dear Sir,—You will be pleased to hear of the recovery of my apparently hopeless case. It is now some months since you persuaded me to try one of your Electric Belts. I was then suffering from nervous weakness, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and pain in the side. In fact, I was a complete wreck, and two physicians whom I consulted told me that I should never be well again. Before I consulted you I had lost 3 stone in weight, and was so completely broken down, I lost all hope; but after wearing your Belt for a short time I began to revive, and in two months the improvement was so rapid that one of my physicians told me I should get well again; and now that I am restored to health, you are at perfect liberty to use this letter as a testimonial.—Faithfully yours, J. NORTH.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

The distressing symptoms of NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, LOSS of MUSCULAR POWER, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, PARALYSIS, EPILEPSY, &c., are speedily removed by means of PULVERMACHER'S world-famed GALVANIC BELTS, which convey the electric current direct to the affected parts, gradually stimulating and strengthening all the nerves and muscles, and speedily arresting all symptoms of premature waste and decay.

CASE AT PORT ERROLL, ABERDEEN.

Recommended to me by Mr. JOHN REID, Merchant, of Port Erroll, Aberdeen:—the case of George Marson (fisherman).

Application to me in Feb., 1889: "First affected by cold (from exposure to weather at night), followed by blood-spitting, cough and expectoration, sharp pains in the chest, and palpitation. Had been told his lungs were affected and ordered to paint with iodine." Mr. Reid writes me for medicine and advice, which were duly sent.

In about a month the patient writes: "I have derived much benefit from your medicine. I feel a different person, and am gaining flesh daily.

Writing me July 22, he says: "Now I look as healthy as ever. I am now quite well, and am able to be at my work. I cannot thank you too much. I am telling it to all I know."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

MR. SAMUEL G. SHEPPARD AND DR. BARNARDO

INVITE all the Friends of Christ's Work among Children of the Streets to attend

A SPECIAL FESTIVAL at STEPNEY CAUSEWAY,

On WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9 (D.V.).

Doubtless many happy Boys and Girls home for the holidays will be glad to visit their poor little brothers, and to see something of their mode of life, and of the wonderful things they do, and we advise these to have early luncheon, so as to reach Stepney Causeway by 1.15 p.m. if possible.

The Programme contains several items of peculiar interest, such as:

(1) Military Drill in the yard at 1.15 p.m. precisely.

(2) Dulcimer, Mandolin, and Violin by small boys at 3 o'clock.

(3) Musical Drill by a squad of our trained boys at 2.30.

(4) Swimming Matches in the Swimming Bath at 4.30 and 5.30.

(5) Music by the Highland Pipers and the Hand Bell Ringers during the afternoon.

(6) All the new and enlarged Workshops will be open to view, and the following trades can also be seen in full operation:—

Bakers.	Harness-makers.	Wheelwrights.
Blacksmiths.	Matmakers.	Woodchoppers.
Brushmakers.	Printers.	And perhaps
Carpenters.	Shoemakers.	Tinsmiths.

(7) A GREAT MEETING will be held in the Gymnasium at 2.30 p.m., when Dr. Barnardo and others hope to be able to interest those present by the recital of some entirely new Narratives of Rescue of the boys and girls who are daily being added to the inmates of the Homes.

(8) Her Majesty's Hospital for Waif Children (exactly opposite the Home) will be on view the whole afternoon until 5.30.

(9) Refreshments provided at very moderate rates.

Admission will be by ticket only, price Sixpence each, application for which must be made to the undersigned.

The accommodation for visitors to the Swimming Bath is so limited that only about 300 can secure standing room at a time, so that there will be two separate exhibitions by the boys there—one at 4.30 p.m., terminating at 5.15; the other at 5.30, terminating at 6.15. As there is some expense in the arrangement, a small extra charge is made of 3d. for each person who desires to be present at the Swimming Contest.

On the evening of the same day (Wednesday, April 9), Rev. Walter J. MAYERS, will deliver a Musical Lecture at the "Edinburgh Castle," Rhodeswell-road, which is the headquarters of our Adult Mission work. As this meeting will not begin until 8 p.m., and as the festival at Stepney will be over by 6.30, visitors will have ample opportunity of reaching the Castle (which is within ten minutes' walk of the Homes), of obtaining suitable refreshments there, if desired, and of subsequently being present to hear Mr. Mayers. This will be a pleasant and profitable addition to the programme for the day, and will, we are sure, tend to stimulate interest in our work, as well as furnish our friends with a musical treat of a high order. If this suggestion can be practically carried out, we would strongly advise all who can to avail themselves of it. Admission to the Lecture Free.

JOHN ODLING, Secretary.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of the late Mr. W. E. Shipton, of the Young Men's Christian Association.

To meet the exigencies of the publishing trade before the Easter holidays, we have sent this issue to press a day earlier than usual. We omit this week the usual instalment of Rev. F. B. Meyer's exposition of the first Epistle of Peter.

In another column we record the greatly regretted retirement of Mr. James E. Mathieson from the superintendence of the Mildmay Conference organisations. It is not surprising that as years increase he should have felt it necessary to take this step, but as he has for ten years conducted the work, winning universal approval and affection, Mildmay will have lost one of its charms by the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Mathieson. We trust their mantle will fall upon, and a double portion of their spirit be vouchsafed to, their successors, Col. and Mrs. Morton, who were heartily welcomed on Friday night to this important sphere of work.

The month of special Gospel effort on Sunday afternoons by Rev. John McNeill at the Central Hall, Holborn, is an experiment that will be watched with much interest, and to which every friend of the masses will wish all success. Mr. McNeill is eminently fitted for such work, and he will doubtless throw his best energies into it. Earnest Christian workers in Central London, who are not specially engaged at that hour, might do well to attend these mass meetings, and help in such ways as may offer themselves in bringing the crowds under the practical influence of the Gospel message delivered by the gifted preacher. The first meeting is on Sunday afternoon, April 13.

A letter recently appeared in The Morning Post from the Secretary of the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, in reply to an Indian official, which though not containing much information beyond what is only too familiar to those who are labouring for the abolition of this baneful traffic, will yet serve a useful purpose by placing before the public the true bearings of the case. The Lancet is quoted as showing the medical view of the evil wrought by even a moderate use of the drug. The well-known testimony of Sir Thomas Wade is adduced to the effect that it insures "the steady descent, moral and physical, of the smoker"; and it is pointed out that the drug employed in medicine is totally different from that which is used for smoking. Moreover, it is only with great reluctance, and under the inducement of Government advances, that the Indian cultivator grows the poppy. The consideration, however, which will perhaps have most weight with the general public is the fact that the continuance of the trade has had a very bad effect upon British and Indian commerce with China in all other articles. British exports to China have only increased £600,000 in twenty years, whereas those to Japan, which rigorously excludes the drug, have increased nearly £3,000,000 in the same period. "Does not this," the writer pertinently asks, "show that in the long run national right-doing is followed by national prosperity?"

A striking article, by Mr. George Kennan, on "The latest Siberian Tragedy," appears in the April Century. He states that he has received eight separate and independent accounts of the transaction from reliable sources, and the combined evidence is such as would satisfy any unprejudiced jury of the cruelty and shameless mendacity of the Russian authorities. Mr. Kennan does not mean to let the matter rest. Citing a most pathetic appeal made in writing to him by one of the condemned men two hours before his execution, Mr. Kennan says:—

> The appeal to me should not be in vain. If I live the whole English-speaking world, at least, shall know all the details of this most atrocious crime.

If this exposure should result in the adoption of a more humane method of treating Russian prisoners, the blood of the martyred exiles will not have been spent for nought.

A case was heard at the Marylebone Police Court the other day which not only illustrates the scandalous condition of so many of the dwellings of the poor, but also shows how and why it is that the ample powers which the local authorities already have so often remain a dead letter. The owners of several houses were summoned by a member of the St. Pancras Vestry for allowing them to be unfit for human habitation. The prosecutor stated that no language could exaggerate the horrible condition of the houses:—

> Representations had been made by the Sanitary Committee in the strongest possible form to the Vestry, which body simply refused to do anything. The explanation of the whole thing was that the Vestry was full of house-farmers, and they would not employ a sufficient staff of inspectors to do the work properly.

The houses in question were ordered to be closed until the necessary alterations were made. But it is not in St. Pancras only that these "vested interests" stand in the way of reform; in other parts of London, as may be seen from the Report of the Commission on the Housing of the Poor, the same state of things prevails. Neither Acts of Parliament nor Royal Commissions will be of any avail so long as those upon whom is laid the duty of enforcing amendment are the very persons who are interested in keeping things as they are.

It is stated in some correspondence which has appeared in The Lancet that there are in Newcastle-on-Tyne three miles and a half of cellar dwellings, not by any means cheap, though the sun never shines into them, but of an average rent of nearly eight pounds per annum. What is true of Newcastle would no doubt apply to other of our north-country large towns where the housing of the poor has not been the subject of special attention.

It is not very difficult to see that a condition of things such as this must be a very potent factor in keeping the labouring classes away from our churches and chapels, and in developing the socialistic spirit which at present is so influential in widening the gulf between the classes.

It is gratifying to learn from recent paragraphs in the daily papers that Mr. Mackenzie, of the British East African Company, and Major Wissman have agreed upon a joint plan of action to prevent the sale of arms in their respective spheres of administration, with a view to checking slave raids in the interior. Also, that Mr. Mackenzie has concluded arrangements with the Arab masters on the coast for the redemption of from two to three thousand runaway slaves. Still more welcome is the news that he is framing a licence law to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors within British territory. So long as this latter traffic is unrestrained, no permanent progress, no general development of the country's resources, no civilisation worthy of the name, can be expected in Africa. If the utter destruction of the native races, both in body and soul, is to be averted, the "raging Phlegethon" of gin, rum, and gunpowder, which the "white man" is pouring down the rivers of Africa must be stopped. Only the other day, it is stated, two German vessels discharged at Zanzibar more than seven thousand cases of gin, or some horrible compound so called.

Two lessons may be learnt from the two public events of the latter days of the month. The decisions of the Berlin Labour Conference furnish proof that there are evils which Governments alone can adequately deal with. The regulation of children's labour in mines, in unhealthy and dangerous trades, in night work, and in factories; the prohibition of female labour underground; and the better securing of Sunday rest, are recommendations that must tend to substantial social ameliorations. On the other hand, the termination of the miners' strike points to that which must be done, not by Governmental, but individual agency. That the increase of wage and diminution of work might lead to more drinking is possible; and, therefore, lest the boon be thus turned into a curse, the watchfulness of temperance advocates, and of all Christian men, should be enhanced.

Charging the Grand Jury at the Liverpool Assizes, Mr. Justice Matthew said that the principle upon which the Recorder of Liverpool had acted in inflicting short sentences seemed to him to be perfectly right, and he added that in the calendar of the present Assizes there were persons charged with small offences who had been sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for stealing trifling articles. He considered such sentences barbarous, and he wished the Recorder success.

Perhaps Mr. Hopwood's plea for a more Christian-like treatment of those whom he termed, "these pilferers of something to eat, to drink, or to clothe, creatures who have never had a chance in life, and who only become dangerous when driven to despair," will now be further discussed; but, on the face of it, it would seem that the advocates of severity might be better employed in endeavouring to narrow the broad road leading to sin and crime, and in lessening the temptations which draw so many of our poor people upon it, than in crying out for drastic severity towards those who slip and fall.

Questions of social morality are forcing themselves on the attention of leaders of thought in Japan, and their views are finding expression in the native as well as the English press of that country. In a leading article, The Japan Gazette recently quoted from a native paper to show that a movement is needed for the rescue of lost women. When the Japan press thus plucks up courage to attack the evils that flourish most when outspoken public testimony is wanting, there is hope that decisive action of a curative and preventive nature will follow.

We are compelled to confess, with a sense of deep shame, that our own countrymen who visit Japan do not always exercise an influence on the right side in these matters. A correspondent sends to us from Yokohama some facts which cannot be repeated here, but which go to prove that Englishmen, when away from the social restraints of their home life, too often bring disgrace, not alone on the Christianity, but on the civilisation they are supposed to represent. Young Japan is largely copying the ways and manners of European communities. In doing so, we trust they will conserve the true interests of their nation by linking hands with all who are earnestly fighting those moral evils that sap the life-blood of society when they are left undisturbed.

CITY OF LONDON ABSTAINERS' UNION.

The annual meeting of this useful organisation was held last Friday evening under the presidency of Mr. George Williams, in the lecture hall of the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C. The secretary read extracts from the report showing a good year's work in the City warehouses, work-rooms, &c. On the whole the meetings have been well attended, and at nearly every one pledges have been taken. The greatest success in this respect was at the meeting of Messrs. Crisp & Co.'s employés, when twenty-six pledges were taken. The work of the Union is not to be gauged, however, by the number of pledges taken at these gatherings, but by the increased interest aroused in the temperance question. A number of pledges have been taken at the Union desk on the ground floor at the Y.M.C.A., where a pledge-book is always at hand.

Unfortunately, one or two of the expected speakers were unable to keep their appointments, but Mr. Williams, Mr. Joshua Rowntree, M.P., and Mr. Hira Singh Puri gave the friends of the Union some cheery words.

INDIAN LOW CASTES.—Rev. Dr. Peachy T. Wilson, of the American Methodist Episcopal Mission, Budaun, N.W.P., writes: "The Lord is putting it into the hearts of the lower castes, especially the sweepers, to receive Christ as a Saviour. Since my coming to this district two years ago, I have baptized over a thousand persons. There are seventeen thousand of these castes in this district, which contains an area of 2000 square miles. We need, among other things, 300 small village schools to give the people the rudiments of education and a knowledge of Holy Scripture. From £5 to £10 annually will pay for one such school."

CONVENTION AT REDHILL.

Meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life were held in this pretty Surrey town last week, and were very largely attended. They were the outcome of special Gospel missions in the district last autumn. On the third day the assemblies willingly contributed the entire expenses of the meetings, as a token of their desire that the Convention should be repeated next year.

Perhaps one of the most touching features of the Convention was the very large number of people, especially young ladies, who stood up at the early Friday morning meeting to confess the Lord Jesus, and to thank Him for blessing received at the Convention. Until the last morning meeting, Mr. Robert Wilson, one of the conveners, was the chairman. At midday on Friday, a numerous body of those who had attended the Convention partook of the Lord's Supper at St. Matthew's Parish Church, and in the evening there was a general missionary meeting in the Redhill Town Hall.

The principal speakers were Revs. T. J. Butlin, Evan Hopkins, J. B. Figgis, J. Gelson Gregson, and Brigade-Surgeon White. An esteemed correspondent writes:—

"We have had a glorious time, marred only by the illness of Mr. Robert Wilson, who bore up bravely till Friday morning, when he had to take to his bed. On the Friday morning we had a most marvellous time, the presence of the Holy Ghost being manifest in our midst. People stood up in twos and threes to testify to the blessing they had received, and to offer their hearty thanksgiving for it. At the meetings in the evening nearly as many as the hall could seat had to stand or go away, from the want of room. We bless and thank God for his goodness to us, and we look upon this Convention as only the beginning of blessing."

THE WORK AT MILDMAY.

Colonel J. F. Morton was welcomed by a very representative meeting here on Friday evening last. Sir S. A. Blackwood, chairman, said that in welcoming Colonel Morton all would heartily and prayerfully wish God-speed to Mr. J. E. Mathieson, who, in a growing work, had manifested catholicity, geniality, self-sacrificing devotion, zeal, energetic labour, and Christian wisdom, under difficulties. Increase of years had led him to resign. All connected with the numerous branches of the work keenly felt parting with a true friend, who has originated, guided, and ruled wisely, ably seconded by his wife. Their friends had that afternoon accepted farewell gifts in expression of fellow-workers' esteem.

Mr. Broomhall wrote, expressing appreciation of his friends' cordial and brotherly co-operation in the work of the China Inland Mission. Rev. John Edmond, D.D., said their friend would be missed by the whole neighbourhood, from close connection with its religious life. Rev. J. Wilkinson, missionary to the Jews, spoke of thirty-five years' association with Mildmay.

Dr. J. Maxwell, as a representative of home and foreign medical missionaries, was thankful for Mr. and Mrs. Mathieson's influence. After a few friendly words from Rev. D. B. Hankin, Mr. Mathieson said ruling amongst friends had been remarkably easy during what were the happiest years of his life. He had that day received a sympathetic telegram from Colonel Agnew, who conducted the Edinburgh daily prayer-meeting. He welcomed Colonel Morton in the spirit of Rom. xvi. 2. Mr. C. Russell Hurditch commended Mr. and Mrs. Mathieson to God in prayer. The chairman remarked that God's dealings with Colonel Morton's predecessor must give the latter courage for his untried sphere. The work is the same, though the workers change. Words of welcome were also spoken by Messrs. H. C. Nisbet and J. Herbert Tritton.

Colonel Morton praised God for thrusting him into Mildmay, counting him worthy of work, for which he deeply felt his dependence upon Divine power. The last few days there had been full of blessing, love, and cheer to him. He begged continuance of prayer. Rev. F. W. Rigby responded in fervent supplication for Colonel Morton and family.

MR. GEORGE MÜLLER.

This veteran servant of Christ preached on Sunday evening last to a large audience, in the Mildmay Conference Hall, from the words, "God my exceeding joy" (Ps. xliii. 4).

On this theme Mr. Müller spoke with vigour for over half-an-hour, contrasting first of all the superior privileges of Christians now, as compared with those of the people of God in the times of the Psalmist, who penned the words of the text; and showing the consequent responsibility to reach higher spiritual attainments. Very few, it was feared, however, could honestly say what David said. In our natural state we knew nothing of joy in God. When reconciled to God by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ we began to know a little of it, but its increase depended upon the entire surrender of our hearts to the Lord.

The exposition and appeal were blended with the speaker's own weighty testimony to the blessedness of the Christian life which he had experienced "for sixty-five years and four months." He was converted in November, 1825, but it was not till July, 1829, that his heart was fully surrendered to the Lord. Then he began to know true joy in God; then he bade farewell to theatre, ball-room, card-table, and worldly society, because he had found far higher pleasures. He encouraged his hearers not to listen to those who said that spiritual joy could not be maintained. It ought to be maintained, and it could be maintained, for it was God's will that his people should be as happy as they were capable of being. It was a great pleasure to all present to listen once again to this beloved friend, who furnishes in himself a living proof of the truth of God's Word.

WARNING.—We think it necessary to warn our readers against a pair of accomplished swindlers who have for some time past been preying upon Christian institutions and benevolent individuals. The man goes by the names of Fischer and Dr. Victor de Brandt; the woman by those of Madame Delaunay, Delankey, and Tréfort. Their description is as follows:—De Brandt, foreign Jew, age about 30, height about 5 ft. 5 in., fair complexion, light moustache, plausible address, fluent in speech, good linguist, well dressed as a rule. Madame Delaunay, age about 25, height about 5 ft. 6 in., well proportioned, auburn hair, well dressed, very lady-like in manner, speaks with slightly foreign accent. Both make great spiritual profession, and by various cleverly concocted stories endeavour to secure gifts of money and other assistance.

VIGILANCE ASSOCIATION, FINSBURY PARK.—The fourth annual meeting of this branch of the National Vigilance Association was held on Tuesday of last week. Mr. R. C. Morgan presided, and commended the bold, thorough, and efficient work it was doing in the district. Mr. Fish, the hon. sec., to whose energy the neighbourhood is greatly indebted, gave himself to this work when he was brought to God, and devoted himself to his service four years ago. Many infamous houses have been closed, as such. One had been owned by a member of a local sanitary authority. Mrs. Bailhache, as valuable an acquisition to a locality in her own sphere as Mr. Fish in his, said that many girls had been rescued, and something had been done to stir up the public conscience upon the whole question. Mr. J. MacDougall, L.C.C., was warmly received, as he deserved to be, for the part he has taken in putting down corrupt places of amusement; and the Rev. J. B. Meharry spoke with Irish warmth and enthusiasm on behalf of the deceived and oppressed.

THE AGONY IN GETHSEMANE.

By REV. GEORGE WAINWRIGHT.

The garden on the Mount of Olives was a place whither Jesus "ofttimes resorted." Before the "night on which He was betrayed" it had become sacred to Him by many memories of hallowed seasons of communion with his Father. Since that night of agony it has become a place of frequent resort to all his people. In spirit they often visit it, and beneath the shade of its olive trees find pensive pleasure in recalling the awfully momentous struggle which there took place, and the victory there obtained. Are doubts assailing? Is love growing cold? Does sin assume attractive forms, and lure with the charmer's voice? No better antidote can be found than in frequent visits to this memorable garden. The precious blood-drops that bespeak the severity of the Saviour's anguish are the best medicine for the soul's sickness.

Quietly and reverently ponder our Lord's mysterious woe. Thought cannot fathom its awful depths. Words cannot adequately describe its severity. He was "very heavy"—weighted with sorrow, filled with it, literally—"a Man of sorrows." Even a small portion is a burden to us; no wonder that when our Lord was "sorrow-ful" He should be "very heavy." He describes Himself as "exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," as though sorrow was not only within Him, but around Him on every side, shutting out everything else from his view. In their very fullest sense He could appropriate the Psalmist's words, "the sorrows of death compassed me." See how He is "withdrawn" from his three friends, as though He would fain have continued to enjoy their companionship, poor though it was, and only left them when impelled to do so. See how, having left them, the weight of sorrow seems too heavy for Him, so that He falls on his face to the ground. See how, after his agony, He returns to his disciples twice to seek their sympathy, and failing to obtain that, twice returns to his struggle. See how his agony increases, until his prayer is "offered up with strong crying and tears," and is accompanied by great drops of bloody sweat. Could severer sufferings be conceived? Surely Hart's words do not say more than the truth: He

> Bore all incarnate God could bear,
> With strength enough and none to spare.

He is an unparalleled sufferer. The worst that his people have known is less than the mere spray of that sea of anguish whose waves and billows overwhelmed Him.

As reverently let us inquire the cause of such suffering. All agree that the anticipation of the cross in some way explains it. In Gethsemane He was meeting and overcoming Calvary in anticipation. But the question is only partially answered when we have said this. What was there in the cross which adequately explains the Gethsemane agony?

Was it merely death that filled the Saviour with such fearfulness and trembling? To Him, as the Prince of Life, death cannot have been without some terror. But He had often spoken of it before: "I go to the Father." "And now come I to Thee." These words do not express terror. Surely if He could nerve his own followers to meet death not only without shrinking, but even with exultation, He would not thus tremble at the prospect of it Himself?

Was it the mental and physical suffering connected with the cross? To be rejected thus cruelly by his own nation; to be forsaken by his Apostles—betrayed by Judas, denied by Peter—was hard to bear, and the Saviour's sensitive spirit must have felt it. Besides this, there was the physical torture. Perhaps some preachers have made too much of this. But it must be remembered that Old Testament prophecy gave prominence to it (Isa. l. 6; Ps. xxii.); and Jesus Himself did not overlook it when He predicted the end (Matt. xx. 18, 19). Do not ignore his physical agonies; for they were fearful to endure. Yet it would not be too much to say that equal physical suffering has been courageously met by his people. Something more is needed to explain Gethsemane.

Nor is the mystery explained if we regard the cross as an atonement only because there the love of God found its highest expression. This is the view frequently expressed by advanced theologians. But it is defective, inasmuch as it offers no sufficient reason for the agony in the garden, nor for the dreadful cry on the cross, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" It is difficult, if not impossible, to conceive that Jesus should have been allowed to experience a sense of God-forsakenness while exhibiting in its highest form the love of God.

Let Scripture guide us. Here are some of its words:—"The Lord hath laid upon Him the iniquity of us all"; "He hath made Him to be sin for us"; "Who, his own self, bear our sins in his own body on the tree" (Isa. liii. 6; 2 Cor. v. 21; 1 Peter ii. 24). Any attempt to explain such words must only weaken their awful significance. They say that Jesus the Holy One became actually burdened with the sins of his people. Do you wonder that He shrank with horror from that? But that is not all. Here are other words of Scripture:—"He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with his stripes we are healed"; "For the transgression of my people was He stricken"; "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, to bring us to God" (Isa. liii. 5, 8; 1 Peter iii. 18). Note the words "for sins." The death of Jesus was not that of a martyr—for righteousness sake—but was the penalty due to sin. The curse of a broken law was borne by Him (Gal. iii. 10, 13). To die would have been comparatively easy; but to die for sin, bearing its punishment, this made the Saviour tremble in prospect of it. More awful still is the thought suggested by other Scriptures: "It pleased the Lord to bruise Him, He hath put Him to grief"; "Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, and against the Man that is my fellow" (Isa. liii. 10; Zech. xiii. 7). There is a sense in which Jesus died at the hands of men, and they became his murderers; but there were deeper wounds than man could inflict. The God who loved Him, and whom He loved, whom He had delighted to please, and who had been well pleased in Him, was to come into contact with sin in the person of his Son, and to judge it there!

This view of the cross is certainly Scriptural; and is sufficient to explain Gethsemane. It does not make less of the love of God for the sinner; but it reveals his righteousness in the punishment of sin.

The lessons of Gethsemane are many. (1) Do not belittle it by talking of "our Gethsemanes."—We have no experiences that can be so described. There is no curse in our sorrows; and it was only the curse that made our Lord's cup so bitter. His Gethsemane delivers us from the fear of ever knowing a Gethsemane of our own. (2) Learn what sin is.—Much of the theology of the present day seems designed to make little of sin. Do not judge of it by the attractive garb it wears. In Gethsemane see to what it leads. The prospect of suffering for sin filled even the Son of God with agony. (3) See the love of God—of God the Father in surrendering the Son to such agony; of God the Son in yielding Himself so readily to endure. The hardest heart ought to melt before such a revelation of love Divine.

By REV. WILLIAM GUEST.

No one view of the atonement of our Saviour can express that love which "passeth knowledge." Yet one aspect of the depth of that love may raise our hearts in adoring gratitude and trust on this day that commemorates the Jewish Passover and his great sacrifice. His was the closest identification with our humanity. He was born into our race, and loved to call himself the Son of Man. The greater and richer the nature of a mother, the deeper will be the unity between her and a suffering child.

This, in an infinite degree, was the unity with us of Jesus. His was not merely concern for us, but He made the burdens of man his own; made even the weight and consequences of man's sin his own. Beautiful is the phrase in the Nicene Creed: "Who for us men, and for our salvation, came down from heaven"; and fragrant is the memory of the fact that, since A.D. 325, the Church has repeated on successive Good Fridays these great words. They cannot, however, convey the full import of the Scripture that Christ was "made sin for us." He felt our sin as his own. Sin as the one all-comprehending woe of the world, the one all-darkening curse of human life, never defiled Him, and yet it was taken as his burden. Whatever was its awful weight, He took that weight upon Himself. He became so identified, by profoundest sympathy and oneness with us, as to lie prostrate, overwhelmed, agonised in Gethsemane, under the crushing shame and inexcusableness and guilt of sin; and, with the sense and confession of its righteous condemnation, went onward to the cross of expiation.

Nor was it, as some have said, that in the final hour this sense of unity with sinful men so swept over his soul as to obscure his sense of unity with God. This is inadequate. Dean Chadwick, in his valuable Exposition of the Gospel of St. Mark, has said, "In some true sense God forsook Him." He, the Holy One, was not a sinner, but He had in unsearchable love become the representative of sinners. Nevertheless, in the garden He said, "Abba, Father." With the cry of desertion He said, "My God"; still, therefore, in mysterious unity with God and with man, He offered the acceptable sacrifice for us.

Thanks be to God, the terrible errors of our modern negationists have not robbed us of this most precious and unfathomable truth. The true Church abides by its great annual confession. Let us, then, again to-day receive the reconciliation whereby we are the forgiven and accepted children of God; and let us make that reconciliation, not the resting-place, but the starting-point to a life of liberty and holy love.

By REV. NEWMAN HALL.

In what solemn, heart-thrilling, yet majestically few and simple words the Agony is described! We see our Lord kneeling, falling prostrate on the ground, uttering "strong cryings with tears," as He entreats his Father to let the cup pass from Him; rising from prayer to seek human sympathy, even God not enough without the responsive hand and tear and voice of human friendship; returning to his Father and praying "more earnestly"; in this heart-agony, his sweat stained with blood; and so much exhausted, his "soul exceeding sorrowful even unto death," that life might have failed, and He might have died of a broken heart before the time of sacrifice, had not an angel come to strengthen Him. What caused so great agony?

Was it apprehensiveness of the cross? He knew beforehand all the torture awaiting Him. He shared our humanity in its shrinking from pain and death. To be tempted as we are He perhaps shared the nature of the most sensitive, not of those of iron nerves. Yet women and children have voluntarily endured the tortures of persecution not merely with composure but with joy.

Was it caused by the ingratitude of the Jews, the slumber of the disciples, the treachery of Judas, the foreknown denial by Peter, and the being forsaken at his death? This was hard to bear; but many of his followers have calmly sustained such trial. Did it arise from some specially fierce conflict with Satan? It was the devil's special "hour," and "the power of darkness." Or was it some unprecedented depression of the nervous system, a mental gloom which has sometimes turned the brain?

Some have supposed it was the Divine wrath overwhelming Him, as the Bearer of the sins of the world. But this is repugnant to all we are taught of the Father's love and to the facts detailed. On the mount of transfiguration the conversation on "the decease He was to accomplish at Jerusalem" was closed by the Father's voice: "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." That Son, so beloved, when about to die, could not be in agony because of the displeasure of Him who was "well pleased." The intercessory prayer just offered has expressed the Saviour's joy in finishing his appointed work. His prayer of agony, not as to an angry God, but to his "Father," and his readiness to drink "the cup which his Father had given"; the angels sent from heaven to comfort Him; the strength thus imparted to enable Him to "pray the more earnestly"; and his expressed confidence that, had He so desired, his Father would send Him more than twelve legions of angels, forbid such an explanation.

May we not rather infer that it arose from his own sense of the evil of sin? Divine purity was incarnated in a frail human body, which had come into close contact with sin. Absolute perfection was brought near to absolute depravity in its blackest phase, the approaching murder of the Just One; revealing intense hatred of goodness, cruel repulse of love, resolute rebellion against God. As a person in perfect health might be shocked when brought into a crowded fever or small-pox ward, when the habitual attendants, accustomed to the signs of sickness and the fœtid air, might seem at ease: as one coming out of the bright sunshine into a darkened room feels it to be blackness, while those dwelling there can see around them: as a virtuous woman might shrink with revulsion from the talk and the conduct of the utterly fallen and shameless: far more might the absolute perfection of Divine holiness be in agony when brought face to face with depravity in its deadliest form.

Besides this, Divine love was brought into the presence of human misery. The Holy God, hating sin, was the merciful God, loving the sinner, and so grieved because of the evils sin was bringing on its victims. He who wept over Jerusalem, foreseeing the calamities their crime would bring on them, was grieving now for the self-same reason. Knowing all the evils sin entails in the present life, all the woes it causes in the future, all the damage it does to the immortal nature itself—how could Divine love do otherwise than grieve? If He had compassion on the lepers and the blind, if He felt for the weary and hungry, much more would He feel for the infinitely greater calamities and sorrows of sinners. This agony was a necessary result of Christ being both Son of God and Son of Man. Incarnate Holiness was shocked: Incarnate Love was grieved.

Why should the guiltless thus voluntarily endure agony fit for the most guilty? "Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows. The chastisement of our peace was upon Him. He bare the sins of many. He gave his life a ransom for many. He is the propitiation for our sins. Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

Sorrowing believers, pluck some of the olive leaves of healing that grow in this garden of grief. (1) Under the burden of guilt be comforted by the atonement of Gethsemane. We may well mourn for our own sin when He was in such agony because of the sin of others. Sin should be our chief sorrow; forgiveness by Christ our chief comfort. (2) Be comforted by help to conquer sinfulness. Love to Him who forgives at so great cost will promote hatred of that which cost such agony. Resemblance to Him in his abhorrence of sin will enable us to say: "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory." (3) Be comforted by the sympathy of a High Priest "in all points tried like as we are." He knows the full meaning of agony, physical, mental, social, spiritual, and therefore knows and enters into all the agony of his friends. "In all their affliction He was afflicted." He who needed the sympathy of his three friends comes as our Brother, and holds us with a hand human as well as Divine. He who needed the angel to comfort Him, will send us some angel in a friend, and, still better, will come Himself. "I am with you alway." (4) Be comforted by prayer. Jesus in Gethsemane found relief in pouring out his heart to his Father. Increased sorrow prompted increased supplication. "Being in an agony, He prayed more earnestly." Cold philosophy may suggest: "God knows, why tell Him? or, if you tell Him, do it calmly; and if once, repetition is useless." But human hearts find comfort in expressing their grief to one who sympathises, and in repeating their requests to one who can help. So let us pray "the more earnestly." More agony—more importunity! More cares—more cries! More pains—more prayers! More sorrow—more sympathy sought: and we shall receive more Divine help to say with Jesus: "The cup which my Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it?"

Gethsemane! most holy place,
With unshod feet I turn to thee;
With weeping eyes and reverent pace,
Human, Divine, Gethsemane!

O Man of Sorrows, why that groan,
That bloody sweat of agony;
Prostrate, convulsed, o'erwhelmed, alone,
In death-shades of Gethsemane?

Divine Perfection sank aghast,
Fronted by man' depravity;
Its basest token, blackest, last,
The murder near Gethsemane.

Divine Compassion grieved for men,
The death by sin, the misery;
He bore our guilt and sorrow then,
In awful, dark Gethsemane.

Unspotted Goodness, crushed by guilt;
Heart-broken Love, by enmity;
More than thy blood by sinners spilt
Combined in thy Gethsemane.

O Sacrifice for sinners' sin!
Priest perfected for sympathy!
Who didst by grief salvation win,
We bless Thee for Gethsemane.

O Thou whose agony of love
The deadly burden bore for me,
Look down with pity from above,
And save through thy Gethsemane.

Newman Hall.

By JOSEPH HART (1759).

[This hymn is more rugged than suits the present taste, but we have not thought it necessary to alter or omit any of the verses.—Ed.]

PART I.

Come, all ye chosen saints of God
That long to feel the cleansing blood,
In pensive pleasure join with me
To sing of sad Gethsemane.

Gethsemane, the olive press!
(And why so called let Christians guess)—
Fit name! fit place! where vengeance strove
And gripped and grappled hard with love.

'Twas here the Lord of life appeared,
And sighed, and groaned, and prayed, and feared;
Bore all Incarnate God could bear,
With strength enough—and none to spare.

The powers of hell united prest,
And squeezed his heart and bruised his breast.
What dreadful conflicts raged within,
When sweat and blood forced through the skin

Despatched from heaven, an angel stood,
Amazed to find Him bathed in blood;
Adored by angels and obeyed,
But lower now than angels made.

He stood to strengthen, not to fight:
Justice exacts its utmost mite,
This victim vengeance will pursue:
He undertook, and must go through.

Three favoured servants, left not far,
Were bid to wait and watch the war:
But, Christ withdrawn, what watch we keep!
To shun the sight, they sank in sleep.

Backwards and forwards thrice He ran,
As if He sought some help from man,
Or wished, at least, they would condole
('Twas all they could) his tortured soul.

Whate'er He sought for, there was none;
Our Captain fought the field alone;
Soon as the Chief to battle led,
That moment every soldier fled.

Mysterious conflict! dark disguise!
Hid from all creatures' peering eyes;
Angels astonished viewed the scene,
And wonder yet what all could mean.

O Mount of Olives! sacred grove!
O garden, scene of tragic love!
What bitter herbs thy beds produce,
How rank their scent, how harsh their juice!

Rare virtues now these herbs contain,
The Saviour sucked out all their bane.
My mouth with these if conscience cram,
I'll eat them with the Paschal Lamb.

O Kedron, gloomy brook, how foul
Thy black, polluted waters roll;
No tongue can tell (but some can taste)
The filth that into thee was cast.

In Eden's garden there was food
Of every kind for man, while good;
But, banished thence, we fly to Thee,
O Garden of Gethsemane.

PART II.

And why, dear Saviour; tell me why,
Thou thus wouldst suffer, bleed, and die.
What mighty motive could Thee move?
The motive's plain; 'twas all for love.

For love of whom? Of sinners base—
A hardened herd, a rebel race,
That mocked and trampled on thy blood,
And wantoned with the wounds of God.

When rocks and mountains rent with dread,
And gaping graves gave up their dead:
When the fair sun withdrew his light,
And hid his head, to shun the sight:

Then stood the wretch of human race,
And raised his head, and showed his face;
Gazed unconcerned, when nature failed;
And scoffed, and sneered, and cursed, and railed.

Harder than rocks and mountains are,
More dull than dirt and earth by far,
Man viewed unmoved thy blood's rich stream,
Nor ever dreamed it flowed for him.

Such was that race of sinful men
That gained that great salvation then.
Such, and such only, still we see;
Such they were all: and such are we.

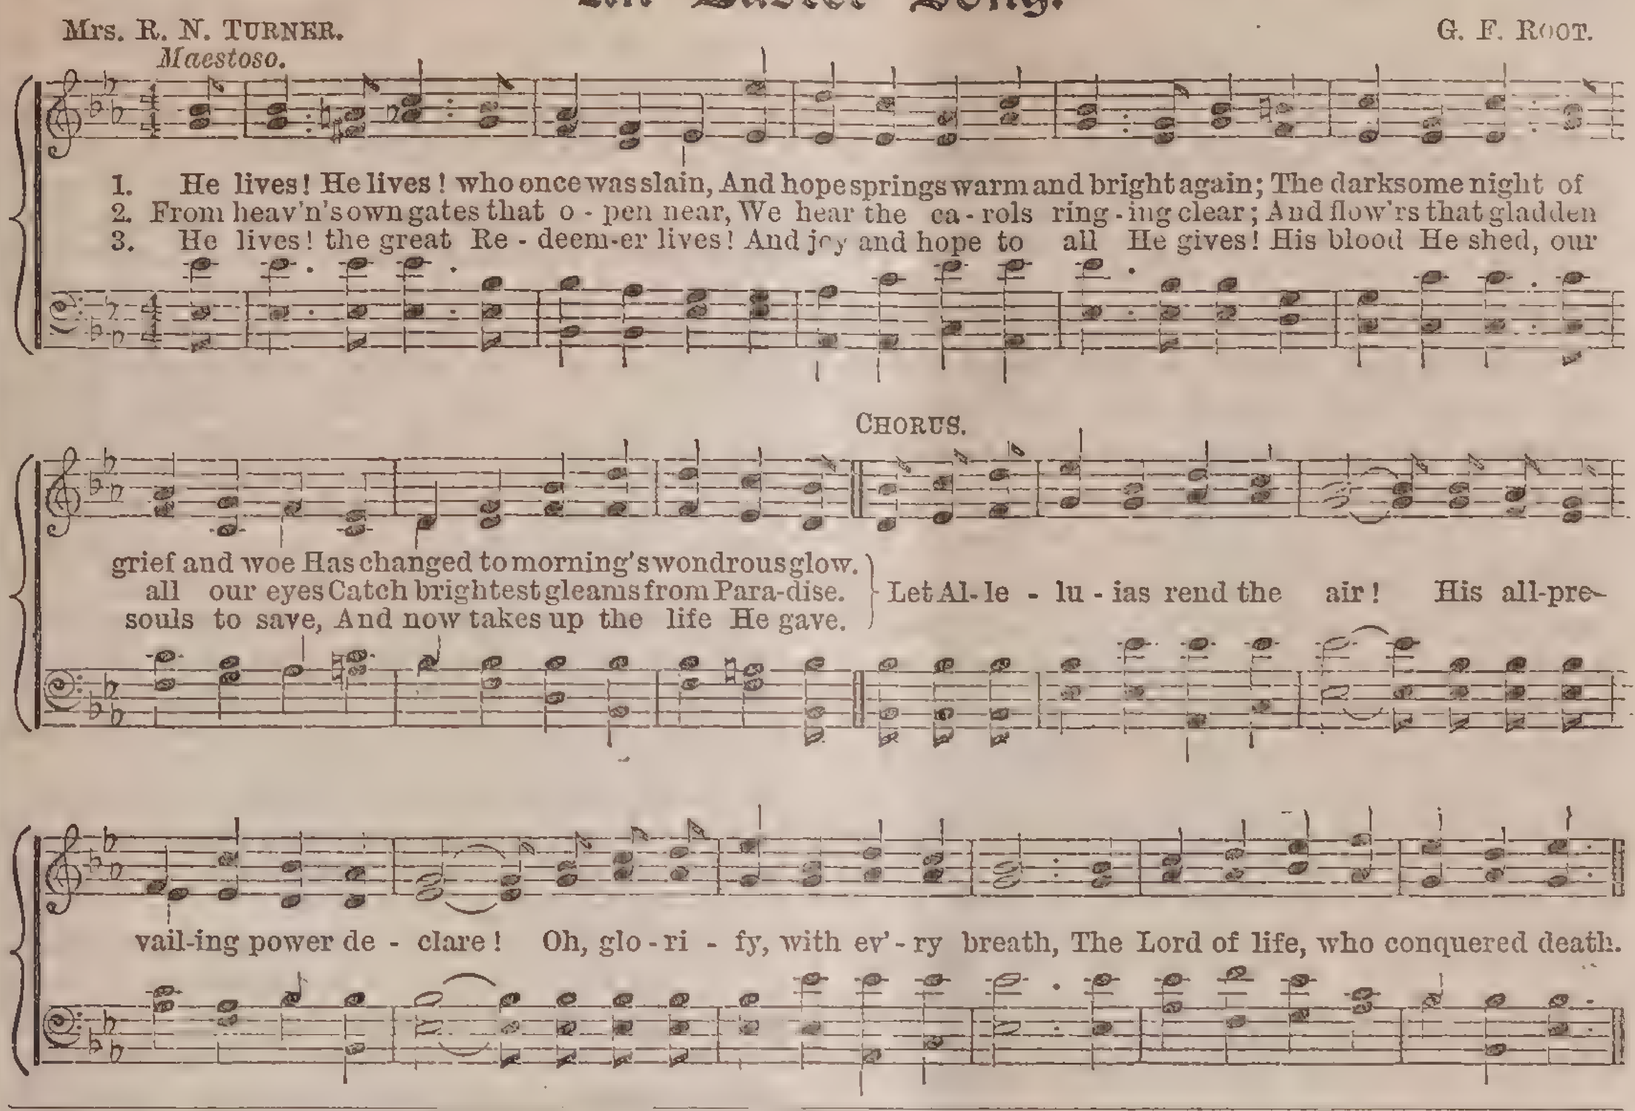
The Jews with thorns his temples crowned;
And lash'd Him, when his hands were bound;
But thorns, and knotted whips, and bands,
By us were furnished to their hands.

They nailed Him to th' accursed tree;
They did, my brethren: so did we.
The soldier pierced his side, 'tis true;
But we have pierced Him through and through.

O love of unexampled kind!
That leaves all thought so far behind:
Where length, and breadth, and depth, and height
Are lost to my astonished sight.

For love of me the Son of God
Drained every drop of vital blood.
Long time I after idols ran;
But now my God's a martyred Man.

An Easter Song.



The Resurrection of Christ.

A BIBLE STUDY, BY JANET CLARK.

THE Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ is:—

(1) The proof of his divinity.—"Declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. i. 4). "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son; that all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father." "He hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead" (John v. 22, 23; Acts xvii. 31).

(2) The proof of his acceptance as our substitute.—"If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. xv. 17). "He was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification" (Rom. iv. 25). "God...raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God" (1 Pet. i. 21). "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us" (Rom. viii. 33, 34).

(3) The pledge of our resurrection.—"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. xv. 20). "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him" (1 Thess. iv. 14). "Because I live, ye shall live also" (John xiv. 19). "Where I am, there shall also my servant be" (John xii. 26).

(4) The pledge of the believer's deliverance from the power of sin.—"That ye may know... what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead" (Eph. i. 19, 20). "Risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised Him from the dead" (Col. ii. 12). "In that He died, He died unto sin once; but in that He liveth, He liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof" (Rom. vi. 10-12).

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation" (1 Pet. i. 3-5).

MILDMAY MEN'S NIGHT-SCHOOL.

ONE of the many interesting adjuncts of the varied Christian work which has Mildmay Conference Hall for its centre is the Men's Night-school, the twentieth anniversary of which was celebrated on Wednesday last week. Many hundreds in number, the young men sat down to tea before the meeting. The proceedings gave much joy to the "scholars," and most assuredly the scene which the prize-distribution presented could not but suggest pleasant reflections to the visitors and friends who attended.

Mr. J. E. MATHIESON presided, and in a few hearty words intimated the high object which the workers have in view—the salvation of those who come under their influence. The examiner's report spoke of the general improvement. The Scripture questions had been answered in a better manner than in any previous year, the spiritual lessons of the Book of Joshua having been acquired as well as the facts.

Mr. P. S. BADENOCH, in a brief statement, said that 1012 men, representing 158 different occupations, had attended the classes. The average attendance was 357—only 14 less than the previous year, notwithstanding the many drawbacks, including the influenza epidemic. That the school has been a great blessing was proved by several incidents referred to by Mr. Badenoch. Men who have benefited socially by improved education have generously made thankofferings to Mildmay work; others will have cause to bless God throughout eternity for the spiritual light which has broken in upon them. The Bible is the great class-book every evening.

The prizes (94) and certificates (256) were gracefully handed to those entitled to them by Mrs. MATHIESON. The men were afterwards addressed briefly by Colonel J. F. MORTON, who has now undertaken the superintendence of the work at Mildmay. He expressed a hope that the school would, every successive winter, prove a more blessed agency in spiritual enlightenment.

The Crisis of the Churches.

By Rev. WILLIAM CROSBIE, M.A., LL.B.,
Brighton.

"Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles."—Acts xiii. 46.

That Scripture and the thoughts to which I am about to give expression were suggested by some words which I read the other day from the pen of one of the most distinguished theologians and religious thinkers and leaders of this age. The words were these:—"Should God listen to the prayers which are now ascending from the hearts of devout men in every part of the country, we cannot predict in what form his presence and power will be revealed. He may come in the wind—'in a great strong wind'—that shall rend the mountains, and break the rocks in pieces; or in the earthquake; or in the fire; or in a still small voice. From the history of the Church we learn that, in the highest and most impressive revelations of his power and love, God never repeats Himself. He came in one way to the Jewish people in the time of Moses; in a very different way in the time of David. When Christ appeared it was not in the form which even the wisest and most devout of the Jewish race anticipated. Till the descent of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, none of the Apostles could tell how the promises of Christ concerning the Comforter were to be fulfilled. The religious movement of the twelfth century, of which St. Bernard was the great representative, was altogether different from that of the sixteenth, of which Luther was the central figure. The Reformation of the sixteenth century again was very different from the Evangelical Revival in England of the eighteenth century. And so, should God answer our cry, as I trust He will, and reveal Himself as gloriously as in the noblest periods of the Church's history, we cannot tell where, or how, his power and his grace will be manifested. It may be—God forbid that it should—it may be that He will turn aside from all existing churches, though they are the trustees of the Gospel for mankind, and the living representatives of Christ upon earth, leaving them to perish in desolation and darkness, as the penalty of their unfaithfulness, and revealing his transcendent power in kindling religious faith and religious life among those vast masses of our fellow countrymen who are living in the open neglect of all religious obligations. Churches, as well as individuals, have their period of probation; and, inasmuch as we have known for many generations the very truth of Christ, and have so grievously resisted the Spirit of Christ, the power of the Gospel may pass away from us to others, who will receive it with more fervent gratitude, and with heartier joy."

It was these last words, almost prophetic, that suggested to me the Scripture at the head of this brief paper and the thoughts which follow. They are very solemn words; and they were well weighed, I am quite sure, before they were written down. They point to a

DANGER NOT IMAGINARY BUT REAL.

The position of God's visible Church in these times is very critical.

There is a sort of analogy, or parallel, I think, between the Church of the present day and the Jewish Church of the times of Paul and Barnabas. Like the Church of the present day, the Jewish Church had its opportunity, and it was a great opportunity. That Church existed to bless the world; and from it blessing had flowed to the world. And through it and by its means God would have sent the Gospel of his grace and love to mankind. That high honour was offered to it—was pressed upon it. God did not set aside his ancient people who were called by his name. They alone were to blame for their being set aside. God would have used them—He wanted to use them—for the accomplishing of his great redemptive purposes; but they would not. They might have headed and led the grandest and most glorious of all movements. The Church organisation that then existed, and was planted everywhere—the synagogue, with its few great rational principles, and with its simple service—God would have vitalised, and incorporated into his system of means and agencies for the propagation of the Gospel message, and for the salvation of men. He would have made it the "base," so to speak, of the new supernatural operations. But the Jewish Church was blind to her opportunity. She knew not the day of her visitation. She resisted God, closing her eyes to the things that belonged to her peace. And the consequence was, the movement that blessed the world passed completely away from her—was carried on without her, and independently of her—established itself altogether outside her pale. The mighty tide of life that flowed toward her, and would have floated her on to lofty eminences in the line of progress, left her stranded; and eighteen centuries have passed away, and that mighty tide of life has not yet returned to her.

Nations, and churches, and individuals, have their probation—have their opportunity; and, if that opportunity is not improved, it ceases. In the knowledge and improvement of opportunity alone is there continuance and progress and life. Not to understand and not to act when the grace and the privilege are near is to suffer awful and irreparable loss. The kingdom of heaven is taken away, and is given to those who bring forth the fruits thereof.

It was at "Antioch in Pisidia" that the long and merciful probation of the ancient Jewish Church terminated. It was at Antioch in Pisidia that the decree went forth,

"LET HER ALONE!"

The knell of opportunity was sounded, and the dread echo was in the words: "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles."

To the observant and thoughtful, who discern the signs, and read the lessons of history aright, the times that are passing over us are specially critical—critical politically, and socially, and religiously, and in every other respect; and certainly they are very critical for the organised churches. In the history of the organised churches we seem to be approaching, or perhaps to have arrived at, Antioch. The opportunities of the organised churches were never so great as they are now. And God wants to bless the world through these churches:—He can bless the world without them, as He has done before; but He wants to bless the world through these churches; He wants these churches to have the honour and privilege and joy. God's heart yearns with love and pity over sin-laden and woe-stricken humanity; and He is calling the churches into association with Himself for the accomplishment of the purposes of his great mercy. Oh, that they would hearken, and obey the call, ere it is too late, prostrating themselves in true contrition and humiliation before Him, and seeking with a great seeking the life and the mighty endowments of the Holy Ghost, that the "Antioch" to which we are coming, or to which we have come, may be a very different turning-point from Antioch in Pisidia, or Kadesh in the wilderness—not a spot that tells of a lost chance and of a closed opportunity, and where God "swears in his wrath, they shall not enter into my rest"; but the place of glorious manifestations of God and of the power of his Spirit; and so the starting-place of a grander progress than the churches have ever known.

POSTAL REFORM.—Mr. Henniker Heaton, M.P., the great Parliamentary champion of postal reform, has prepared an interesting pamphlet on "Ocean Penny Postage." He states the arguments very strongly, and all the friends of international comity will wish him speedy success in his crusade.

Two of Christ's Little Ones.

By T. J. BARNARDO, F.R.C.S.

Crippled Tim and Little Jennie are brother and sister, children who have been brought up in the company of tramps. Their father and mother were strolling musicians of the worst and most drunken type of beggar that one could encounter, the two children assisting them, by force of their woebegone appearance and winsome ways, to gain a few pence from the small crowds that gathered around them. Tim was the first applied for. He was twelve years of age. By falling downstairs, however, he had sustained injuries sufficiently serious to cripple him permanently. The story that then came to light of the parents' manner of living, and of the great dangers to which Little Jennie was exposed, induced me to say that I would only admit Tim if Jennie came too. That, however, was not attainable just then, for the mother and father had made up their minds that they could not afford to part with Jennie under any circumstances.

She was as good, they declared, as another musical instrument to them; it made a difference in the collection of as much as sixpence or eightpence each time, if Jennie were there to gather it, for her sweet childish face charmed the coppers from the pockets of passers-by. So it was not until some six months after the admission of Crippled Tim that Little Jennie was added to my fold. What means of persuasion the kind friend used who had watched over these children, and through whose eyes and ears I had seen and heard the history of the past, I know not; but he did succeed, even as, I may add, he, with a delightful vigilance not to be gainsaid, had previously done with dozens of other miserable children in the town where he dwells; and not once or twice, or a dozen times, but in scores of instances have I admitted some of the most doleful specimens of child life on his recommendation.

Crippled Tim and Little Jennie will together cost me £32 a year to maintain, train, teach, clothe, and bring up in the fear of God. Perhaps some reader of these lines will flood his or her own life with a new joy by sharing with me the financial burden which the admission of these two dear children imposes.

SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—Dear Sir,—Whilst thanking the many Christian friends in England who have assisted me with contributions of tracts and papers, I would ask for a continuance of these favours. From what I have seen in my daily visitation of the military hospitals, I can testify to the fact that the invalids value the papers and books distributed among them. In Umballa we are building a Soldiers' Chapel, in a central position, at an estimated cost of 12,000 rupees, or about £800. We shall be glad if any readers of your paper who can help us will communicate with Mr. T. Bateson, Bank House, Kendal, or directly to

Yours faithfully, J. H. Bateson,

POOR BOYS OF DUBLIN.—The thirty-second annual report of the Boys' Home, Grand Canal-street, Dublin, tells an interesting tale. During last year 117 boys enjoyed the benefits of the Institution, and thirty-seven passed out. For the most part the boys admitted during the year were children of Roman Catholics or of mixed marriages. Of the boys who emigrated, one belonged to a family of eleven, all of whom were, until two years ago, Roman Catholics. At that time the father was led to attend some mission services, and was so influenced that he gave up going to confession. Owing to the persecution to which he was aftewards subjected, he left for America. He had not been long there when he paid the passage of his eldest son, and he hopes soon to send for the other two, who are still in the Home. Communications may be addressed to Rev. Henry Fishe, superintendent of Irish Church Missions, Dublin.

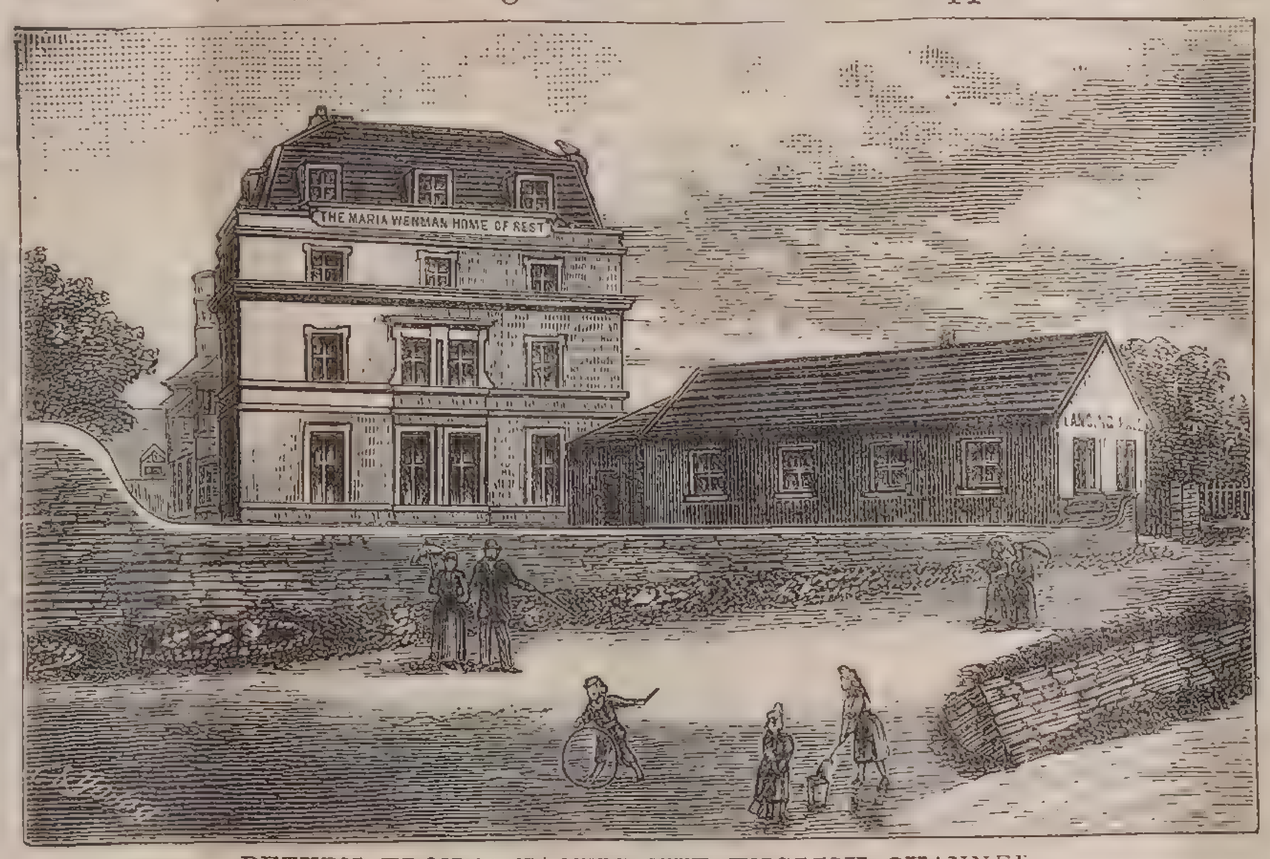
A New Home of Rest.

An important addition has just been made to the many agencies of the North-east London Gospel Mission, of which Mr. William Chorley is the director. The great utility of a seaside Home of Rest, to which weary women and languishing children of the poorest classes may be sent from the toilsome round of London life, is all but universally recognised. Last year a goodly number of such needy ones, known to Mr. Chorley and his fellow-labourers, were enabled to enjoy a brief stay at Lancing-on-Sea, through the kindness of Mr. T. H. Northcroft, who placed a cottage at the disposal of the Mission. Little did Mr. Chorley expect that this foothold in the quiet Sussex village would lead to such an increased responsibility as he has now right gladly assumed. He has accepted on behalf of the Mission a very valuable block of buildings, comprising three houses and a detached schoolroom; the property has been conveyed to the Mission trustees, without rent for twenty-one years, by the freeholder, Mr. F. Heathcote Wenman, for use as a holiday home for women and children. This act of generosity is in honour of the donor's deceased wife, so the institution will be called "The Maria Wenman Home."

The premises, formerly Lancing Grammar School, are admirably adapted for the purpose to which they will now be devoted. There is ample accommodation for eighty beds, many of the rooms being lofty and spacious. The beach is just in front of the house, so that, when unable to go out, the inmates will get the full benefit of the sea air, as well as views of the English Channel. Power is given under the lease to use the detached hall for Christian worship, accommodation for which is a distinct need in the village. In this department, Christian friends in Worthing and Brighton will render help. Mr. Chorley's experience in similar undertakings, on a smaller scale, at Enfield and Southend (Kent), will prove of much service to him in getting this Home into working order.

Some Lancing sympathisers will interest themselves in the oversight. It is quite certain that the Home, which will be a centre of Christian life and joy, will have effects of a high and far-reaching character to those who may enjoy its advantages.

A member of our staff recently visited Lancing, and was delighted with the capacity and promise of the new Home. In some cases the villagers are already looking forward with joy to the arrival of London women who "have never seen the sea," and weakly city children whom the happy surroundings will gladden into a new life. There will be no rule requiring eligible persons to provide themselves with subscribers' letters, but the beds will be placed at the disposal of visitors of the North-east London Gospel Mission and the missionaries of the London City Mission. It is proposed to receive inmates at the rate of five shillings per week (and reduced railway fare) for periods not exceeding three weeks. Mr. Chorley is at present battling with the furnishing problem. We sincerely trust that funds will, without delay, be available, not only to furnish, but to give the spacious Home a good start on its ministry of mercy. Mr. Chorley's address is: 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, N. Friends sending furniture may direct it to him at South Lancing, near Worthing.



RETURN FRONT: FACING THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

DR. BARNARDO'S twenty-fourth anniversary will take place this year on Wednesday, June 11, in the Royal Albert Hall.

Along the Tigris Valley.

II.

The following morning we started out as usual with our party, intending to come directly to Oroomiah. On entering the streets of the first village, we were attacked by the entire population, led by some chief men. They soon relieved us of our loads and forced us back to where we had spent Sunday. During the day we held a consultation with several chiefs, and tried by different ways to get our goods returned and our roads opened. They made us all kinds of favourable promises, but did nothing. We called on that evening; but, finding them on a drunken spree, we could do nothing with them. That night we decided, if possible, to push our way through on the next day. We therefore sent our watches, money, &c., out by a secret road late in the night. The next morning, on entering the same village that had been the scene of trouble on the previous day, we were again attacked, not by the same men, but by those who had failed to get anything the previous day. Those who had robbed us on Monday now came to our rescue, and helped us beat these new men off.

We did not go far before we were stopped by another band, who detained us until a party in the rear overtook us. After a scuffle, we were fortunate enough to free ourselves and get away, but only to be soon again intercepted. In this way we fought and ran for three hours. The road was very rough, and while in a narrow gorge we were compelled to abandon our animals and take to our feet. When near the line of their country the men left us, because they were convinced that we had nothing with us of value, and, moreover, because they feared the Koords, into whose country we were soon to enter. We had in our party several native helpers with their families, but they were not molested beyond having their property taken away. Neither Mr. McDowell nor myself was seriously hurt, although I cannot now see how we escaped.

Our road, from the point where these men left us until night, lay across a great field of snow and ponds yet frozen. This sudden change from the heated gorge made it very hard, especially for the children; and, as all the extra clothing in the party had been taken, it was impossible to protect the little ones from the cold. Besides the cold, we encountered on the top of the mountains a severe rain-storm, which thoroughly drenched us. Had it not been for the children in the party, we would soon have forgotten this, as night found us safely housed in the rude home of our muleteer with an open road to this city.

We have since been able by means of rewards to get many things returned. The robbery occurred in front of the house of Marcus, a former student at the school in Oroomiah, and he rushed out with the men when the attack was made, and took many of the most valuable things. After the trouble, he returned everything, having only taken them in order to keep them from being conveyed away by the real thieves. Through him we got much returned, and also very valuable information. During the second day's trouble, he acted as our guide and fought for us bravely at each attack. On his return to his village, he was severely beaten; yet he remains loyal to us. He was raised among these people and was one of them until he came to Oroomiah. He was compelled to go home last year before finishing his course. I cite this case to show you what a year in school and among Christians will do for these people.

On our arrival down here we forwarded to Minister Strauss a full statement regarding the matter, as we feel it to be an imperative necessity to get these men punished. There are many difficulties in the way yet, but we hope in time to reach them with justice. The whole thing was got up by a Nestorian chief, and two Nestorian priests whose object was persecution. I think the hope of gain is what inspired their followers, as their extreme poverty makes them act like mad men. I think the Lord has sent this upon us to guide us in the location of our station, and it will in the end prove a great blessing.

To my mind it clearly indicates the inadvisability of putting the permanent station in Tiary or any other of these places. These chiefs are your friends to-day, and your enemies to-morrow, and this makes it not safe to depend upon them for protection. A permanent mission station must have Government protection, I have thought for some time, and since this trouble I have been thoroughly convinced, that the station should go down near Mosul, in one of the large Nestorian villages near where the mountains cease and the plain begins. Elkoosh, a large village of 5000 people, about six or seven hours' journey from Mosul, would be, perhaps, because of its elevation, the most healthful place. My plan would be for the homes of a station to be down on the plain with the school and dispensary. Let the missionaries spend the winter here, and the summer touring in the mountains. They would then be with the people, and in a position to do most good. I feel sure that the Gospel is going to enter this field. The people certainly need it. We shall be blessed in many ways by this little trouble of ours. Native helpers, who now go up in the face of this, can be depended on as the right material. I have, ever since it happened, felt so sure that it would prove a blessing and aid in this enterprise that it has really been an encouragement.

SEDGLEY TEMPERANCE HOME MISSION.—Mr. F. A. Homer devotes both time and substance to carrying forward this good work. In the annual report just issued, he says:—"A marvellous success has ever attended our Mission, but the last year has been unprecedented—blessings all along the line; spiritual blessings, temporal blessings. Our hands have been much strengthened through our Father's loving care in providing an assistant in the person of Mr. J. Woolley, whose labours as an experienced evangelist and missionary, in conjunction with his wife, have been much owned of God." The agencies of the Mission are numerous, and all worked with vigour. Mr. Homer remarks that the Mission has absorbed the best thirty years of his life; it has been, and still is, the child of his prayers. We trust this will long be the case, to the glory of God and the good of the "Black Country" toilers. As a justice of the peace, Mr. Homer has great influence, which he wields powerfully for the cause of God.

For the Young.

A MALAGASY VILLAGE PASTOR.

His Story, written by himself, in November, 1889, for J. and A. P. Peill, of Ambohimanga.

I was born in the year 1837, and in the same year my father died. My mother did not long survive him, and I was brought up by my grandparents.

Grandfather was a slave-dealer, and travelled among the villages buying and selling. He had a friend named Portion, who sold idols, who sometimes travelled with him. When I was ten years old, my grandfather took me with him on a business journey, and Portion also accompanied us with his usual stock of "gods."

One day Portion set off from our headquarters, telling us to be careful not to touch the gods he was leaving behind, as he would not be back for a day or two. Finding myself alone in the house, I went to look at his gods, and found they were pieces of wood soaked with castor oil, and adorned with beads and silver rings.

I wondered whether they would burn, and as there was a fire on the hearth, and I was alone in the house, I thought I would see. So I threw them on the fire, and they flared up like gunpowder, and were quickly reduced to ashes. After this I had no faith in idols. I told the people of the house, when they came in, what I had done to Portion's gods, and they said, "You will certainly die." Grandfather, too, was afraid that Portion would kill me, so we left the place before his return, and grandfather gave him presents to secure his goodwill afterwards. Grandfather, being one of the head men of our town, had charge of the idols, but the idol priest lived at the Rock, a little way off. The names of our idols were:—(1) Maintainer of goodwill; (2) Preserver from injury; (3) Protector of ricefields (especially from hail); (4) Protector from firearms.

There were certain things tabooed by these idols, especially some kinds of food and fuel, which might not be used nor brought into the house they were in. I noticed that sometimes the ricefields were devastated by hailstorms, in spite of all the prayers and offerings made to the idol Rice-protector; and sometimes those who went to the wars did die of bullet wounds, notwithstanding all their gifts and promises to the protector from firearms, who, they were told, could make them bullet-proof. Thus my unbelief was strengthened. The idol priest, however, used to say to the people: "You have not observed the taboo, and that is why the gods do not protect you and your rice."

At that time, about 1850, there were two men in our town who did not pay the usual yearly tribute to the idol priest, for they were Christians. The tribute consisted of a bushel of rice from each house. Beef killed for a funeral feast might on no account be taken into the house where the idols were; it is known to the present day as "unlucky meat." When I was about thirteen years old we had a funeral in our compound, and Grandfather thought he might bring in some unlucky meat, if the idols were first removed. So he put them in a covered basket, and hid it among the straw in the yard, from which we boys had to feed the cattle. When I was next getting straw for the beasts I happened to pull out the basket along with it, and, having no respect for its contents, I pushed it with a stick down into the cattle-pit, where it and the idols were soon trampled down among the manure. But I said nothing to Grandfather.

After a few days he came to look for the idols in order to put them again in their place of honour in the sacred corner of the house. Of course he could not find them, so he asked us: "Have you boys seen anything of the gods I put amongst this straw, for nobody meddles with it but you?" I replied, "We havn't seen them," upon which he went off to the priest, and told him the gods were lost, and how it had come to pass. The priest said, "Oh no, they are not lost; they only came home to me because you broke the taboo. Here they are," giving him others like them, "mind you do not anger them any more."

When Grandfather came home he told us what the priest had said, and that we must all be very careful not to break the taboo, for fear the gods would leave us again. I was very much astonished, and took an early opportunity of looking among the manure to see if the idols had really got away. I took a stick and poked about with some misgivings. However, there they all were to my great relief; but I dared not say anything to Grandfather for fear of his displeasure. Reflecting on these facts, I finally decided that idols and charms were nothing at all, and that the priest was a mere deceiver. I also thought of the saying, "If the woodman loses his god, he can soon have another." But I knew nothing whatever of the true God.

The two Christian men above-mentioned began to take an interest in me about this time, when I was nearly fifteen years of age. One day, meeting me in the village, they said to each other: "What a pity for a bright lad like this to be growing up without the knowledge of God! Suppose we try to teach him?" "Knowledge of God?" I replied, "what! is there any other God besides those at our house?" "Those at your house are only bits of wood," they said, "but there is a God who made the earth and the sky, and if you come to my house," said one of them, "I will teach you about Him." I was very glad to go, and he taught me to read, and there I used to meet other Christians who were in hiding on account of the persecution. Grandfather was very angry with me for going so much with those rebel "baptizers," as they were then called. Finding me still determined to go, in spite of his rebukes, he tried a new plan, and said to me: "Now, my boy, you shall have a hundred dollars and two or three wives, so as to be a big man, if only you will break off from those baptizers who are defying the Queen and courting death. Some day they will be killed, and you along with them, if you continue so obstinate; but they could not persuade me to give up learning about the true God and his ways, for the man who first spoke to me about Him had taught me to know Him, and I went regularly to his house on Sundays to worship God. Grandfather and grandmother bewailed me with floods of tears, continually, for I was their only surviving grandchild. They said: "Alas, our child has lost his senses, and we shall have no one now to succeed to the property and be our representative."

On July 17, 1859, I went with others to see the execution at Fiadanana, south-west of the capital, when ten Christians whom I knew well were put to death by stoning. The next day, Sunday, I was returning home to our village with two other lads, a distance of about twelve miles. I had my Testament and two little books, "Come to Jesus" and "The Resurrection," with me, and my companions said: "Those books may get you into trouble"; but I replied: "I can't part with them; at any rate, I would rather run the risk of being taken." We had got to within about two miles from home when we met the officers and soldiers of a search party bringing two men to be tried as Christians. One of the soldiers knew me, and told the officers that I was one of the Christians. Of course I was searched, and my books found. Then they stripped me of my blanket, shirt, and waist-cloth, giving me an old rag in its place, and then they tied my hands tightly behind my back. In answer to questions, I told them that the books were mine, and that the other boys were only going the same way as I, so that we walked along the road together. The officers made them go back with us to the capital, however, though they did not tie their hands.

On the road they pressed me very hard to tell the names of the other Christians in our village, saying they knew there was a nest of them, and if I didn't tell I should be killed and thrown to the dogs, but if I would tell I should be set free. I answered: "Suppose I mention you as my accomplices, how would that do?" After that they let me alone until we reached the capital, when they sent up word to the judges about all the prisoners. An order was sent for my books to be burnt. My two friends were set at liberty, though the officers took their blankets, perhaps as a caution to be careful about the company they kept for the future. I was taken to prison with the other two Christians, and next day we were brought before the judges. They questioned me about the other Christians, especially those in hiding; but I gave them no information.

We were all sentenced to wear heavy irons, and, being still but a young lad, I was put with the female gang, and joined by the neck to five women, two of whom were behind me and three in front. Four of these women were Christians, and the other, though not herself a Christian, was sentenced for sheltering and hiding a relative who was one.

We wore heavy iron collars and anklets, and were fastened neck to neck in a line by bars of iron a yard in length, and as thick as a man's arm, attached to our iron collars and never removed. Thus we were held together day and night, and neither of us could move a step in any direction without the help of the other five. At first we could not support the weight of these bars either sitting or standing, nor get up from the ground on which we lay at night without the help of persons standing between us to hold up the bars. And when sitting on the ground we supported them with forked pieces of wood. But after a long time we grew accustomed to the weight, and found ourselves able to bear it. For eight months we were kept under guard near the Sunday market-place, in an enclosure, to which the entrance was through an underground passage. Here our friends brought us food, which the guards received for us, and when we lay down at night they made our hands fast in wooden blocks until morning. And on Sundays we were taken to be made an exhibition of in the market-place, being marched round and round the market in our jingling chains to be a warning to all the people. All who saw us hooted at and cursed us, and the boys threw dirt upon us, and some tried to stone us; but our relatives and servants, with the guards, kept them from injuring us. Thus did we suffer for the name of Jesus Christ during eight months at the Sunday (now the Monday) market. There was a seventh prisoner for Christ's sake, besides the five women and myself; but, being a nobleman of royal descent, he was bound with cords instead of the iron fetters that we wore.

HOW TO WIN THE CHILDREN.

At the central noon prayer-meeting, 186, Aldersgate-street, a most interesting and profitable address was recently given by Mr. Charles L. Boyer. He recounted his experiences in winning boys and girls into Sunday-schools, children's services, and temperance bands, extending over a period of fifteen years, principally in America, but during the last twenty months in East London. At the age of fourteen Mr. Boyer commenced work in his mother's kitchen in Harrisburg, Pa., with a party of seven lads; when seventeen years old he found himself leader of a band of fourteen hundred temperance boys and girls.

At Omaha, some years subsequently, he started work amongst a colony of Bohemians. People laughed at the idea of his gathering a Sunday-school out of these foreign-speaking children. However, he found a little girl who could speak Bohemian and English, and started out to form his school. His interpreter was so ignorant that, when asked about Jesus, she said she "did not know where He lived"; and all her associations with Christmas Day were with Santa Claus. One hundred and nineteen children were gathered in to the first meeting. As the result, three Sunday-schools, with 2,000 children, were formed in that city, out of one of which has sprung a strong and well-equipped church.

When he left America for England, to gain experience, it was with the assurance that many Christian friends were praying for him. On landing in London, he set to work in one of the poorest and most overcrowded districts. He visited from house to house in one of the streets and found a large number of the children attending no Sunday-school. He first decided to win their confidence, so arranged to take a party of the children to Victoria Park to romp and play. He had to put different-coloured sashes on to distinguish the children of different streets. By this means he raised a band of 800 children. He then proposed to them to join the Sunday-schools in the district. He found although they did so, they soon floated out again, because their clothes were inferior and they felt they were not wanted there. Mr. Boyer, not to be beaten, soon found a remedy. He arranged week-night meetings. He had kept the names and addresses and age of every child he took to the Park, and, by means of captains appointed to help, he could call them out in a very short time. Mr. Charrington lent him his small hall for a week-night meeting. He invited six hundred; but long before the meeting more than twice that number had arrived. To avoid confusion he filled up the interval by marching them up and down the Mile End Waste. The meetings have become so popular that now they have to be limited by the issue of tickets.

Mr. Boyer gave some very interesting testimony as to the positions gained in America by those who were first won to Christ through his children's bands. One is now president of a Christian Endeavour Society, one secretary of a Y.M.C.A., and another superintendent of a Sunday-school. One of these old pupils, in a letter, told how, in one of the American cities, Mr. Boyer had broken up a "Boys' Beer Club." On inquiry it transpired that the boys had put their money together weekly, bought a keg of beer on Saturday afternoon, secreted it in a timber-yard, and met together on Sunday afternoon to drink it. The club was broken up, because almost all the members joined the temperance band.

Some very pathetic statements were made about the wretched condition of the children's homes; how the poor mothers could not train up their children in such surroundings, some of them having evidently lost all heart. Unless somebody gets hold of them for Christ, what will become of them? He believed that in answer to his oft-repeated prayer, "Lord lead me where I can do most for Thee," he had been brought to London. He came over for a year, but has already stayed twenty months.

At the close of Mr. Boyer's address confirmatory testimony of the success and blessing attending the work was given by Mr. George Hamilton, Free Gospel Mission, Mile End-road; Mr. Yeadell, London City Mission; Mr. Ehrlich, missionary to the Jews, and others. Mr. Ehrlich said he did not think at first that Mr. Boyer would reach Jewish children, but now his hall is so packed that he is quite anxious, and still Jewish parents come and beg that their children may be taken in.

CHILDREN AT SUTTON, SURREY.

There are many friends who take an interest in the work done by the Children's Special Service Mission who will praise the Lord with us for the mission held here last month by Mr. T. L. Sayer, in the old Congregational Church, Beechill-street, kindly lent for the purpose.

We praise as we look back and see the loving interest shown by members of various denominations, who gathered as "one in Christ Jesus" to try and win souls for the one Master; and souls were won every night.

The meetings, while always bright and full of life, were never noisy, and were quite free from excitement. Various competitions were started, one for Bible-searching, another for portfolios, more than thirty of the latter being sent in and were returned to their makers filled with picture leaflets and small books. Telling incidents have fastened many Bible truths on young hearts, for the speaker was full of illustration of all sorts; and towards the close of the mission a blackboard lesson was given, a red heart appearing on the dark background and one by one the words temper, worldliness, greediness, folly, theft, impurity, evil thoughts, showed in clear type on the heart. The lesson will not be easy to forget, and the speaker went on to point his hearers to the Lamb of God whose blood "cleanseth us from all sin."

At the farewell meeting the heart was again shown, but the words were changed to those graces which the Lord Jesus will put in their place when He is given possession of the guest-chamber. We look back and praise, we look forward and pray, we look up and expect, nay, we know that He who hath blessed will bless and keep those who have committed themselves to Him.

As one result of our mission we expect a great increase to the Children's Scripture Union, a band of 274 members having been previously established in Sutton.

Laura A. Barter.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., April 6, Matt. xxviii. 1—20; Mon., April 7, Prov. i. 1—19; Tues., April 8, Prov. i. 20—33; Wed., April 9, Prov. ii. 1—17; Thurs., April 10, Prov. iii. 1—18; Fri., April 11, Prov. iii. 19—35; Sat., April 12, Prov. iv. 1—13.

KING'S CROSS Y.M.C.A.—The annual meeting of this branch was lately held at King's Cross Theatre. The report for the year shows that the varied machinery of the Association has been kept moving with fair success. The evangelistic department is carried on with vigour. We notice that books are needed for the library. Mr. L. Marks has recently conducted a Gospel mission, which has been attended with fruit. The rooms of the Association are at 91, Euston-road, N.W.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Tamworth Parish Church, April 3—11; Rock Ferry, 13—19; Moseley, 20—30. Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. Andrew's, Lambeth, April 10—20; St. Leonards, April 26 to May 5. Mr. J. S. Tyler, Lydbrook, April 13—20. Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Y.M.C.A., Claremont, Hastings, April 8—15. Mr. T. L. Sayer, St. Thomas's Church, Stafford, April 4—8; Park Church, Highbury, 13—23.

SALVATION IN THE SLUMS.

The third report of the work of the Salvation Army in the slums has been published, with the title "Slum Evangels." Mother Webb and Sister Redmead were the first two officers to make their residence in the slums; others followed, until now there are over eighty persons engaged in the slum branch of the Army work. With the exception of the superintendent, Major Cooke, and Captain Dad Webb, who works at his trade during the week, all the officers are women. They dress plainly, but wear Salvation Army badges, and spend their whole time in house-to-house visitation, nursing the sick, feeding the starving, and telling of Christ the Mighty to Save.

For a time the denizens of the slums treated the workers with coolness, and occasionally some opposition was shown; now, however, the officers are, as a rule, received with kindness, and allowed to tell their message, as well as perform deeds of mercy. About a hundred young women were rescued from lives of shame during the year. In this and other spheres the police force renders valued help. The day nurseries are highly appreciated; over six thousand children passed through them during the year. The slum stations number twenty-six, in London and large provincial towns.

ONE OF THE LIVERPOOL CONVERTS

was an infidel for nine years. Of him the report says: "He professed not to believe in either God or devil, heaven or hell. His infidelity, alas! did not cure him of drunkenness, to which, with smoking, he had been a slave for fifteen years. He used to half-starve his poor wife and children. Many times our lasses tried to visit him, but no—they did not want salvation in his home—they were miserable enough without religion to make them worse! The Lord heard the lasses' prayers, and Himself called one day, taking away the idol of the father's heart—a little boy. This, however, only made the man worse, and drove him deeper into drink. Again the Lord came, laying his hand upon the two-months'-old baby, and at the same time an abscess formed upon the mother's breast. The watchful officers heard of it, offered to nurse the sick ones, and so got in. Night and day they watched and nursed, putting in an occasional word for Jesus. Prejudice melted away, and so did the infidelity. At last he came to the meetings, made a full surrender, and got blessedly saved. His wife, too, with his crippled mother, are also saved."

The report is a story of devotion on the part of young women, of whom the Superintendent says: "Every one of our officers have come either from businesses of their own or respectable situations, and bore the highest characters from their employers, local Army Captain, and treasurer." Some of the figures given are very large: 120,000 families and 11,518 public-houses were visited; 70,000 were prayed with; and 4000 sick were visited and nursed. The general body of officers receive no salaries, only their food and clothing are provided. The report closes with an appeal for more workers. Candidates should be under twenty-six, strong, active, and able to sing. Major Cooke's address is, 36, Brooke-road, Stoke Newington, N.

LEAMINGTON SPA Y.W.C.A.—York House, Clarendon-place, the centre of the work, also serves as the Young Dressmakers' Home, which has now completed the fifteenth year of its existence. The Institution affords a Christian Home for young girls employed in business establishments, and is a place of resort open to such others as may need counsel or desire sympathetic contact with godly women. The number of residents during last year was ninety-two. Evangelistic work occupies a large place in the heart of the hon. lady superintendent, Miss Bagster, 7, Heath-terrace, Leamington Spa.

Postal & Telegraph Servants.

The Christian Association in connection with these Services held its annual gatherings on Wednesday week at the City Temple, afternoon and evening. In one of the basement rooms a conference was held in the afternoon, when reports of work were given by delegates from the provinces. Before the conference, Mr. Fox Butlin, of Stratford, gave a stimulating address on the blessing that comes into the Christian life when the soul is filled with the peace of God. Mr. H. Maynard, having taken the chair, called on the delegates to tell their story.

A young friend from Glasgow had an encouraging report to give of the work there; especially that among the lads, many of whom have given their hearts to Christ. The work among the young women is rather uphill. A "Mission Band" is fully occupied with evangelistic work, and blessing follows its efforts. As an instance of what a postman can do, the delegate said that God had honoured him to be the means of the conversion of twelve persons with whom he had been brought into contact.

York was next represented. The post-office friends there have been at work some years, but from the delegate's account it appears there has been a decline in aggressive power, largely because there is no practical leader to organise the work.

Another speaker, who said he had been converted through the Association, reported a membership of fifty at Nottingham, but they were not satisfied with that. A mission band has been started there, and is doing good service. Then followed a youth from Leicester, who spoke very hopefully of the work. Out of 200 employés in the town there is a membership of 40, mostly letter carriers.

The flow of testimony was interrupted so as to allow of a little address from Sir Arthur Blackwood. He referred to the remarkable development of Christian enterprise during the last twenty-eight years, directed to special classes of the community, and to the great success that God has given to these efforts. The special circumstances of the postmen, scattered about as they are through the community, enable them to become effective home missionaries, not only in their own ranks, but among society. Sir Arthur referred to the curious fact of the Bible and Prayer Union chapter in Esther for the day containing reference to the postmen of ancient times.

A very excellent and intelligent report from Tunbridge was given by one of the indoor clerks of the department; he wound up his narrative by an earnest Gospel appeal to his fellows. In the neighbouring town of Tunbridge Wells it is as yet the day of small things, but the few members are expecting growth. A lively and voluble young fellow from Eastbourne next took his stand, and told of the activities of the Association in that town. A new idea has been put in operation—"a coffee supper" on the Saturday evenings; this has drawn in a good many who might otherwise have been led away by the temptations of the drink.

The Portsmouth delegate spoke of some very real conversion work done in the early days of the work; but, owing to the failure of the health of the lady secretary, it has lately gone down. Southampton is but a year old in the work, and is not yet very flourishing; the postmaster has recently joined, and they are looking for greater results. The Bournemouth representative spoke of difficulties and discouragements, as well as of some successes. Last of all, a Kingston young man appeared on behalf of that Association, and testified very warmly to the blessing that the members had received through the devoted labours of Miss Edmonstone, one of the originators of this work among postmen.

Mr. Howland (late Mayor of Toronto) told a very interesting story of how the work of the Association was last summer introduced into Canada and the United States by Miss Synge, another of the leading spirits of the Association. Mr. Howland was extremely hearty in his commendation of the zeal and energy shown by that lady in laying the foundations of the work on his side of the water. She was able to enlist the sympathies of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which had control of the telegraphic system throughout the country. The postal officials in New York also showed her no small kindness, and she was able to organise several centres of Association work in that city. Mr. Moody had promised to give an address to the postmen during his visit to New York, and Mr. Howland read a telegram he had received, to the effect that the gathering had been a glorious time. He exhorted the members to thoroughness, both in the individual Christian life and in hand-to-hand work among their comrades.

A GREAT MEETING

was held in the evening in the City Temple, under the presidency of Sir A. Blackwood. It seemed very fitting that he should read out to the meeting congratulatory telegrams from Birmingham, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and other places, wishing God-speed to the Association. In his opening remarks he said he thought that probably next year they would have to arrange for an all-day anniversary, and to secure either St. Paul's Cathedral or the Metropolitan Tabernacle. He commented gratefully on the fact that the Association is now International, and that, despite many hindrances, branches had been opened in New York, Washington, and Philadelphia. There are now some seventy branches of the Association. Sir Arthur said he looked forward to the time when the postal services of this and other lands would be fully embraced within the membership and influence of the Association. He earnestly counselled the members to unity of spirit, and to zeal in furthering the true work of the Association, which is, to lead to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ all who are connected with the post-office and the telegraph service.

Gospel addresses followed from Mr. Fox Butlin and Mr. Reader Harris, the latter of whom "drew the net" at the close of his address, and secured a good many responses to his appeals for decision.

A MISSION IN DUBLIN.

On the invitation of the Friends' Irish Home Mission Committee, Howard Nicholson, of London, visited Dublin early in March, and conducted a series of evangelistic meetings which continued into the second week. The interest appeared to increase from night to night, and was maintained to the close. The spirit of prayer prevailed in a remarkable degree, and many testimonies were borne. A thorough visitation of the neighbourhood was made (many visits being paid by Howard Nicholson also). Each evening the workers sallied out into the neigbouring streets with notices and large canvas-covered lanterns bearing invitations to the meetings.

The results have been most encouraging. The fortnight's work was concluded by a meeting for praise and testimony, attended by about 150 persons, when quite a number, both old and young, testified as to the blessing received. It was a remarkable meeting and fittingly terminated a mission in which the Divine presence and power were strikingly manifested.

THE ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION OF THE LORD'S DAY.—It is hoped that the calls to prayer which have been issued by the Committee of the Sabbath Observance Prayer Union Society will this year be distributed in London and suburbs by many thousands. Contributions in aid may be addressed to Mr. Joseph W. Leng, 33, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Christ comes with a blessing in each hand—forgiveness in one and holiness in the other; and never gives either to any who will not take both.—Thomas Adams.

SELF-CONCEIT.

Self-conceit is the very daughter of self-will, and of that loud crying out about I, and me, and mine, which is the very bird-call for all devils, and the broad road which leads to death.—C. Kingsley.

What are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life without the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer,
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

CONSECRATION.

What folly to fear giving yourself too entirely to God. It merely means that you are afraid of being too happy, of loving the will of God in all things too heartily, of bearing your inevitable crosses too bravely, of finding too much consolation in the love of God, and too much relief from the passions which make us miserable.—Fénelon.

Send a sweet breeze from thy sea, O Lord,
From thy deep, deep sea of love; [height,
Though it lift not the veil from the cloudy
Let the brow grow cool, and the footstep light,
As it comes with holy and soothing might,
Like the wing of snowy dove.

EARTHLY VOCATIONS.

Forty years was Moses a courtier, and forty years after that a shepherd. That great men may not be ashamed of honest vocations, the greatest that ever were have been content to take up with mean trades. The contempt of honest calling in those which are well born argues pride without wit. There can be no fitter disposition for a leader of God's people than constancy in his undertakings, without either weariness or change. He that hath true worth in himself and familiarity with God finds more pleasure in the deserts of Midian than others can do in the palace of kings. While he is tending his sheep, God appears unto him. God never graces the idle with his visions.—Bishop Hall.

PERPLEXED PRIDE.

It may be a hard saying, but it is probably true, that Christ's person and revelation blind the proud and unbelieving, just as much as they enlighten the submissive and believing. Take, for example, his incarnation. What a thick veil of mystery it is to some! Instead of revealing God, as it was meant to do, from how many does it seem only the more utterly to hide Him. Take the resurrection of the body. How it coarsens and complicates the doctrine of the future life to many who had no trouble with the philosophic doctrine of the immortality of the soul. Or take the doctrine of vicarious atonement, which the Son of God reveals as God's method of forgiving sin; what a scandal it is in the eyes of many who had settled the whole question of pardon on the ground of the infinite Fatherhood of God! These are illustrations of revelations that blind by their excess of light, and in them we seem to catch a glimpse of the meaning of those most solemn words, "that seeing they might not see."—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

THE LATE SIR PETER COATS.

THIS devoted Christian and eminent philanthropist was born in Paisley on July 18, 1808. His father, James Coats, who was well known there for his practical ingenuity and great force of character, had, in his early life, owing to the depressed state of trade in the town, enlisted as a soldier. After serving his time in the army, he walked from London to Paisley, reaching his native place with only 2s. 6d. in his pocket. On entering his humble home, he found his aged parents at tea; and he never forgot the salutation given him by his father:—"You are welcome, James, if you are here an honourable man." He, thereafter, settled down to work, and it was soon apparent to his relations and friends that he had lost nothing, but had gained much, by his connection with the army.

He turned his attention, first, to a branch of textile manufacture; but, on trade getting dull, he determined to give himself to thread-making, thinking that a machine which he had invented, or at least greatly improved, for his old business, would be equally useful in the new one. A small factory was accordingly erected in the west end of Paisley in 1826, and this was the beginning of the colossal structures which are now known all over the world as the Ferguslie Thread Works. It was only sixty-three feet long and two stories in height, whilst the machinery was driven by an engine of 12-horse power.

Finding that this new venture was to be a success, he, in 1830, assumed as partners his two eldest sons, James, and Peter the subject of this notice. James, the eldest son, died soon afterwards, and in 1835 Thomas, a younger son, became a partner. From that date onwards the business prospered in an extraordinary degree, necessitating constant additions to the original building, until now forty acres are occupied by the works at Ferguslie, and between five and six thousand workers are employed attending machinery driven by twelve large engines of seven thousand indicated horse power; extensive mills have also been established at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, U.S.A.; Montreal; and St. Petersburg.

For forty-eight years Mr. Coats toiled incessantly in watching over the development of this prosperous business, and many an anxious day did he have, because of the necessity of providing additional buildings and machinery to meet the orders which came pouring in upon the firm. The strain was so severe upon him at times that it told upon his health; but, as he had a wiry, vigorous constitution, he was never long away from business. The mercantile training which he had received in an office in Glasgow now stood him in good stead, whilst he was ably assisted by his younger brother, Thomas, who had served an apprenticeship as an engineer at Johnstone. As their father died in 1857, he had the satisfaction of seeing his sons at the head of a business which, resting on solid foundations, was evidently destined to have a great future. Shortly after the death, in 1877, of his wife, a daughter of Lieutenant Daniel Mackenzie, of Gloranna, Sir Peter retired from the active management of the business, although he remained the head of the firm; purchasing at the same time the beautiful estate of Auchendrane, on the banks of the Doon, in Ayrshire, whither he and the unmarried members of his family removed, to the great regret of the inhabitants of Paisley, in whose welfare, however, he continued to take a lively interest to the close of his life.

This brief sketch of his business career will lead the reader to infer that Sir Peter soon came into the possession of a large fortune. This was the case, for many years ago the saying of an old connection of the family was often repeated in Paisley, that whilst there was a proverb about lucky people being able to "gaither gowd in gowpens," the brothers Coats were able to lift it in shovelfuls. On some this inflowing of wealth would have had an evil effect; but these two brothers from their earliest days knew how to use the ample means they acquired. Brought up in a home where living religion was a power, they acquired tastes and habits which they never lost. They must have early consecrated themselves to the Lord, for when young men they enrolled themselves as members of the Storie-street Baptist Church, where their father worshipped.

In 1844 Sir Peter, however, left this congregation and attached himself to the Secession Church, in Oakshaw-street, of which his mother was a member. Although he joined a Presbyterian Church he still retained the distinctive principle of the Baptist denomination, and none of his children were baptized in infancy.

Because of his Baptist principles, he did not accept office in the United Presbyterian Church, but its good he uninterruptedly sought through life. He contributed very handsomely to its funds, and spoke warmly at many a meeting in favour of its schemes of usefulness. When any big financial difficulty had to be faced, he was among the first to show how it could be overcome. Frequent references were made in the Synod of this Church to his magnificent liberality, and were its manses searched for testimonies to his private kindnesses to their inmates, these would be heartily given. He had, indeed, a particularly warm interest in ministers of all denominations, whom he honoured for their work's sake. No pastor raising money to build a church or manse was ever sent empty-handed from his door. When the Paisley congregation with which he was connected had to build a new church his subscription amounted to £3000; and, when declining strength kept him at Auchendrane, or sent him to winter at Algiers, he built at both places beautiful churches in which he and his neighbours might gather to worship God. He was an ardent friend of missions, and took special delight in circulating the Scriptures. The National Bible Society of Scotland owed much to him, and honoured his services in a fitting way by appointing him to the President's chair, and retaining him on the Board of Directors.

But his interest in Christ's cause did not manifest itself only along Church lines, for he was imbued with the spirit of the Good Samaritan, and literally went about with this question ever present to his mind, "To whom can I show myself neighbourly?" No society that sought to grapple with the want and woe around him appealed in vain for help, and, if it was in his power, he assisted them by acting on the board of management, or commending them from the platform in speeches which were always characterised by clear thought and fine feeling. Hence in the West of Scotland there was scarcely an Association of a philanthropic character but had his name on the list, either of its acting or honorary directors. He never tired of this work; and it is not too much to say that his never-failing enthusiasm in well-doing largely explained that bright cheerfulness of manner which was his to the very last. Here, too, the extent of his benefactions will never be known, as he gave away much privately to help friends and acquaintances through times of difficulty, or to lighten the lot of the poor.

What brought him most prominently before the public as a philanthropist was the gift to his native town of a free library and museum, to which was afterwards added a picture gallery. This beautiful building, which adorns the main street of Paisley, must have cost him £30,000, and in its erection and equipment he took the liveliest interest. It is proving a great blessing to the town, 52,000 volumes having been issued to readers last year, whilst the visitors to the reading-room averaged 500 a day, and to the museum and picture gallery 3000 a month. For this splendid act of beneficence he was knighted by the Queen; and some years afterwards he and his brother Thomas were presented with their portraits, subscribed for by their grateful fellow-townsmen.

For a few years back he has been in the habit of spending the winter at Algiers, where he died of paralysis on Sunday, March 9. The stroke affected his speech, and all that he was able to articulate were the simple yet suggestive words, "Pray," and a little later, "Nearly Home." His was a sudden call, but it came to him at a ripe old age, for he had entered his eighty-second year. It found him prepared to go home, after a singularly beautiful and useful career, in which he had commended the Gospel to all who came within the sphere of his influence by his winning gentleness of manner, loving regard for the will of his Master, and unceasing acts of disinterested kindness.

CROYDON Y.M.C.A.

On Tuesday evening last week the annual meeting of the Croydon branch of the Y.M.C.A. was held; Mr. George Williams presided. The report read by Sergeant-Major Morris, the new secretary, showed that the work had progressed steadily and favourably throughout the year, especially in reference to the prayer-meetings, mission work, and educational classes. A new branch of the Association has been formed at South Croydon.

Mr. Williams having briefly spoken, Rev. G. C. Fisher gave a soul-stirring address, urging young men to be faithful to duty and conscience. General Sir R. Phayre gave some personal testimony. Rev. J. F. Lepine also spoke.

The Croydon Association rooms are now open all day, instead of, as hitherto, only during the evenings.

Dr. Pentecost in Paisley.

Paisley will not readily forget the last week of Dr. Pentecost's mission, for during it the town was thoroughly moved by the Gospel, and a large number came forward to make public profession of their faith in Christ. They were of all ages, and came from all parts of the town. Some were rich and others were very poor; on the same seat were found a young man belonging to one of the best families of the town, who was there, as he said, determined to be out and out on the side of Christ, and another who had been met in the street by a sister and brought to the meeting, after he had spent six years wandering about the world, until his pocket was empty and his clothes bare. They were brothers now, though the one went home to a beautiful villa, and the other spent the night in the Model Lodging-house.

The most memorable of the meetings was, undoubtedly, the last one, which was held on Wednesday. Long before the hour of meeting hundreds were turning away, unable to gain admission even into the lobby, which was thronged, as were also the stairs leading to the gallery and all the passages. The pulpit even was packed with people, Dr. Pentecost preferring to speak from an extemporised platform on the floor of the house. The evangelist preached a very able and powerful discourse. When the people were asked to retire who did not wish to remain to the after-meeting, few left, and the Doctor saw that those who might wish to make a profession of their faith would have great difficulty in reaching the seats which had to be cleared for them. At the close of his short address, which as usual was very pointed and persuasive, he again entreated the people to leave; but, as he phrased it afterwards, "they clung to the floor," and he was obliged to ask those who had decided to be the Lord's to find their way as best they could to the front seats. Pressing through the throng they came one by one until they numbered over seventy. After they had been solemnly consecrated to God in prayer, and the Doxology, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," had been sung, the great congregation dispersed, and the work of registering the names of the professed converts began.

When all had left except two or three ministers who were engaged in connection with Dr. Pentecost, he was asked to speak to a young man, who was in an agony of spirit because of backsliding. He at once responded, and the last sight to be seen in that church, where he has spoken the word of life to thousands for four weeks, was a very beautiful one. He sat beside that young man, whose head was bowed low in grief and shame, and spoke tenderly and lovingly of the grace of God. Ere long, the young man dried his tears, and went away with a face beaming with joy.

Thus ended Dr. Pentecost's remarkable mission in Paisley, during which more than three hundred persons have come forward and publicly professed their surrender to Christ, and Christians have frankly acknowledged that they have been greatly quickened and refreshed.

A very successful thanksgiving service was held on Sabbath evening in the George A. Clark Town Hall, at which addresses were given by Dr. Fergus Ferguson, of Glasgow, and Rev. J. B. Sturrock, Paisley.

LEICESTER Y.M.C.A. MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Conference on Foreign Missions recently held at Leicester was an occasion of considerable interest, and was accompanied by Divine power and blessing in a marked degree. It was under the general guidance of Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, and consisted to an extent somewhat unusual on such occasions of meetings for prayer.

The opening session was, with the exception of an address by Dr. McFarlane, of New Guinea, entirely devotional. The spirit of prayer was largely bestowed, and the blessing of God on the conference was assured and realised. The second session was given to addresses from those engaged in mission work; amongst others Dr. Baedeker gave a description of his mission to the Russian prisons, and excited much interest by his tale of the ready welcome of the Gospel message by prisoners and officials alike. Mr. H. Richards, of the A.B.M.U. Mission on the Congo, told the story of the great revival which, after four years of nearly fruitless labour, broke out at his station, and in a short time resulted in the conversion of a thousand of the natives, and the formation of strong, active, and intelligent Christian churches.

In the evening Mr. Radcliffe led another meeting for prayer, when, with an entire absence of form, Christians, without distinction of class, sex, or religious denomination, unitedly poured out their hearts' desire for the gift of missionary zeal and a blessing on missionary work. At the meeting which followed, the Mayor presided. Dr. Baedeker again spoke, and Mr. Roscoe, of the C.M.S., described at length the work of that Society in Eastern Equatorial Africa. Fröken Berg, a young lady connected with the Salvation Army's work in Denmark, powerfully appealed to Christians for entire devotion to the will and service of God, and to "be quick" in responding to his claims, and Mr. Radcliffe closed with a few earnest words of personal application.

In the after-meeting a number of young men responded to Mr. Radcliffe's invitation, and publicly declared their willingness to devote their lives to foreign mission work.

CREED AND LIFE.—When shall we see among "Evangelicals" as much vigilance for correctness in the details of life as for correctness in the details of creed? Surely it is of as much importance how a man lives as how a man thinks. Yet many who are believed to think right as to creed are known to live wrong. And the right thinking counts as against the wrong living. Paul pronounced a curse alike upon those who preached another Gospel and upon those who loved not the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Ecclesiastical authorities have nearly always dealt more severely with so-called errors in creed than with errors in life. Whence came all the martyrdoms at the stake; creed or life? Holiness was more detested if outside of the Church than was unholiness if within. A faith that does not change the heart is a faith that will not save the soul. The world and the "Broad" Church, disbelieving the life, disbelieve also the creed. Let us keep the faith, but the faith according to godliness.—The Reaper.

Dock Labourers' Mission.—A Christian gentleman has kindly undertaken to assist in the Lord's work among the labourers. Communications should therefore be sent to Mr. Frank Jacob, 32, Chamber-street, London Docks, or to Mr. C. Coleman, 150, Boleyn-road, Upton Park, West Ham.

Among Jews in Egypt.

Mr. David Baron, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, accompanied by Dr. Dixon, has been distributing copies of the Hebrew New Testament in Egypt. We make some extracts from his journal:—

At Milan, where we arrived on Feb. 6, there are scarcely ten Jewish families, all wealthy, and indifferent to religion. The wife of Pastor Longo related to us the story of the conversion of a young Jewess, who has confessed the name of Jesus in baptism, and is living a consistent Christian life. There were six Jews on board the steamer in which the journey was made from Brindisi to Alexandria. The Gospel was made known to them, but several would not receive copies of the New Testament. One, a very intelligent man, confessed that he was personally indifferent to religion, but boasted that the strictness and orthodoxy of his father, who was a famous Rabbi, was sufficient to make up for all his laxity. He received a New Testament; also a copy of my "What Think Ye of Christ?" in Judeo-German.

There are about 10,000 Jews in Alexandria, a good proportion of them Arabian, hundreds Russian, and some Spanish and Italian. They have seven large synagogues, one or two of them being of great antiquity; and there are many smaller meeting-places. Mr. Kestin, who labours in connection with the Church of Scotland Mission to the Jews, took us to a café chiefly frequented by Jews. We joined a table at which many were absorbed in card-playing; but very shortly the game was stopped by a discussion as to whether the Saviour of the world. Jews from the other tables soon gathered around, so that we had quite a large audience. One Jew said: "Jesus may be the Messiah for you, but he is not for us. What has He done, what can He do, for us Jews?" We told the man that he was right; for it was only to as many as receive Him that the Messiah gives power to become the children of God. The secretary of the chief Rabbi of Alexandria was in the café, and, before leaving, we had a conversation with him. He was very cordial, and wished us God's blessing, and "a safe journey to the land of our fathers." The poor man was afraid to accept a New Testament. One old German Jew to whom we spoke accepted a New Testament and a suitable tract, saying: "By God's help, I will seek Him with all my heart; for my time is short."

At Tantah we conversed with a rich Jew, a genuine Pharisee, great in Talmudical quibbles. He had read the New Testament, and quoted, or misquoted, whole passages by heart; but his study had been to no spiritual advantage. He endeavoured to dissuade us from calling upon the other Jews, but his wish was not followed. Some of the people could not believe that the books were given without money. They asked: "Do you do it for God's sake?" When informed that it was even so, they seemed greatly impressed with Christian kindness.

THE CHIEF RABBI

engaged in a hearty conversation; he would not take a New Testament, but his attendant took one, so doubtless it will be read by the Rabbi.

Mansurah, a great cotton centre, has a large Jewish colony, about half of them speaking German. One argued that Judaism was the oldest religion, and therefore the best, illustrating his contention by saying that old coins are more likely to be genuine than new ones. I pointed out to him that his illustration was unfortunately chosen, for old coins, however genuine, are often withdrawn from circulation. So Judaism is old and true, but in the working out of God's purpose it has given place to the blessings of the "new covenant," which was foretold even in the old. On all hands we were received kindly, one man of business letting a lad accompany us to show us where the Jews lived.

We conversed several times with an old Rabbi whose son was brought to a knowledge of Christ while on a visit to Beyrout about two years ago. The father, hoping that the young man would keep his new-found faith hid in his heart, prevailed on him to return home. But the son brought the Saviour with him to Mansurah, not only in his heart, but on his lips. He would speak of the Christ, and held private meetings to reason with Jews on the claims of Jesus. The old Rabbi, with tears, besought the young man to be quiet; not succeeding in this, he ordered him not only to leave home, but to quit the town. The Rabbi expressed himself as greatly embittered against the New Testament, which he said his son had "preferred to his old father."

Mr. Baron visited several other places, including Cairo. In the latter city, where there are 18,000 Jews and no one to tell them of the Lord Jesus, a grand piece of mission work was done, many New Testaments being distributed.

FROM THE TELUGU COUNTRY.

Dear Sir,—Perhaps I need not inform your readers that the Government of the Nizam's Dominions is Mohammedan. The incoming of missionaries is not looked upon with favour, and the wide open door made by the late Sir Salar Jung and the young Nizam when he became king is gradually being narrowed under the present Minister of State, Sir Asman Jah. Within the last month an order has been verbally given, we hear, that no foreigner shall receive a foot of land in the Dominions without the Minister's personal sanction, and this is to be obtained under such conditions as justify us in saying the door to a permanent settlement is practically shut. Persons already in are not interfered with. This will be better understood when we explain that the district officers usually give land to applicants under revenue rules.

I am thankful to the Lord that I acquired the village I was able to secure for twenty-three years before this order came out. We do not believe the Nizam's Government can long bar out the Gospel.

During the years gone by God has helped me and my wife to care for and feed the flock committed to our hands by our own earnings, supplemented by the freewill offerings of those who loved God. We have now a little colony of nearly one hundred souls, a church of about fifty believers. This is worth our ten years' toil in this heathen land. The village we have secured had been ruined for perhaps one hundred years, as are hundreds of others all about. Petty wars, oppression, and bad government above one hundred years since nearly depopulated this fertile district. With a railway, a coal company, and improved government the desert begins again to bloom. But everywhere tanks, irrigation channels, and wells are in ruins. Ten per cent. of the original cost will restore many of them. The ancients certainly did grand public works in these parts.

We have two tanks, two irrigation channels, a number of wells and small koontahs to restore, and make a grand home, where native Christans can learn and work for God among their fellows. They can build their own homes, and by their own labour earn their own living. But the capital expenditure for the restoration of this village, situated only two miles from the railway-station and Deccan coal mines, I estimate at about £300. God helping us to this amount, we shall make this village a home for a thousand souls, and the Antioch of missionary evangelistic pairs and bands. We solicit the prayers of all God's people that the Gospel be not hindered, but mightily blessed, in these Dominions.—Yours in the Lord,

C. B. Ward.

Secunderabad, Deccan.

STRATFORD CONFERENCE HALL.

The Conference Hall and Y.M.C.A. continue to be a great power for good at Stratford, E. Those who direct the various agencies seek above all things to magnify the grace of God, and we rejoice to learn that the work commands increasing sympathy on the part of the ministers of the many churches in the locality. The hall, seating 1900, is well attended every Lord's Day, and sometimes crowded. The Men's Mizpah Band has 400 members, and a branch for women has been started. Taken as a whole, the work is educational in the most comprehensive sense, and evangelistic in a true missionary spirit.

The fifth annual meeting was held on Thursday last, Mr. H. M. Matheson presiding. There was an interesting fitness in this arrangement; the work arose out of Mr. Moody's memorable mission, the committee of which had Mr. Matheson for its chairman. A number of ministers attended. In the course of a hearty address, Mr. Matheson referred with joy to the excellence of the work done, as set out in the report. The open-air meetings have been much blessed, backsliders having been recovered as well as sinners aroused. On one occasion a man told one of the workers that for three months he had tried to become an infidel, and had attended the Hall of Science, but that each time he had come away more than ever convinced of the existence of God. Inquiry disclosed the fact that the man had a praying mother in Wales. During the year not a few young men have been brought to a knowledge of Christ through attending the Y.M.C.A. meetings. Six were introduced to one church alone, and are now engaged as Sunday-school teachers. The report sets out engagements for every day in the week, for some days many engagements.

Financially, the work has not been so free as could be hoped. The debt on the building has been added to by expenditure in cleaning and repairs. The local authorities are requiring further outlay in the making of roads on either side of the hall. Money matters were pressed upon the audience by Mr. T. A. Denny, who delivered a cheery address. Mr. John McCall followed with a few earnest words on the privilege and duty of helping forward work for God. Mr. C. Boardman, who is the life and soul of the work, spoke of the high aims and objects of those who conduct the various operations. The choristers sing the Gospel in the hope that souls will be touched, as in the past they have been; and the prayer-meetings are seasons of supplication that God will bless all endeavours everywhere to make known the message of salvation.

Rev. H. E. Noyes, of Walthamstow, delivered a stirring address to Christian workers, enforcing many lessons from a study of the Book of Nehemiah. About £150 was raised by a collection towards the extinction of the debt, and £50 promised in the form of subscriptions to carry on the work. A considerable sum is yet required, however, to relieve the building of the incubus of debt. Reference was made to the inadequacy of the library, and it is hoped that by friendly gifts the books will soon be much more numerous, so as to meet the needs of the young men. The meeting was a happy one throughout, several allusions being made to the devotion of the general secretary, Mr. E. Fox Butlin.

THE CHURCH ARMY has now 200 parishes officered by its evangelists and mission nurses. The Training Homes and other efforts, such as Labour Test Shelter, Rescue Shelter, Cabmen's Evangelist, Poor Parishes' Fund, Summer Tent work, and Indian work among the Natives, cost £4500 annually, in addition to the voluntary work.

Prospects in Brazil.

Various communications relating to Brazil, and the prospects of Christian work there, have lately reached us. Mr. M. Dickie, Methodist Episcopal missionary at Piracicaba, writing to a friend in England who sends him The Christian, expresses great thankfulness for the help and stimulus he receives from the perusal of the paper. As touching his work, he says that in a Roman Catholic country like Brazil progress is slow. The separation of Church and State under the new Republic means, however, fuller religious liberty for all. Hitherto, Protestant teaching has only been tolerated; but now it will be possible to take a more aggressive line of action in spreading the pure Gospel. The idolatry, ignorance, and superstition that prevail, says Mr. Dickie, are almost incredible, and much patience will be needed. His church has a membership of 90, and there is a good college for girls. It is hoped soon to establish a boys' school. The great need is an intelligent native ministry. Mr. Dickie is specially anxious to secure a supply of good anti-infidel literature; scepticism is very prevalent, and hinders the propagation of the Gospel.

THE JESUITS IN BRAZIL.

It is becoming more and more apparent, says The Converted Catholic, that the revolution in Brazil was a rebellion against the Roman Church quite as much as against the Empire. The New York Tribune sent a correspondent to give a report of the causes of the revolution. Senhor Ruy Barboza, one of the Ministers of the Provisional Government, said, in an interview: "The Emperor's daughter, Princess Isabel, was the real head of the State. Surrounded by Jesuits, she had no will of her own. Priests were always about her and clericalism was threatening to become a menace to Brazilian liberty."

It is the same story as in European countries in the past. The Jesuits wanted to rule, and the people rebelled. A correspondent of The New York Herald says a decree has been issued by the new Republic abolishing "Saints' Days," and establishing secular holidays, such as May 13, the anniversary of the abolition of slavery, and November 15, the declaration of the Republic.

The correspondent of a Spanish paper wrote from Brazil on Feb. 8, stating that no one could have dreamt of the change that has taken place in two and a half months since the Republic was proclaimed, and that without any shedding of blood or disturbance of social tranquillity. There is a vast improvement also in the conduct of Government business. Formerly, the corruption of officials was rife; now the ruling powers are active in seeking to help on the general good, and the Ministers of State personally attend to their duties without any suggestion of bribery. Before the revolution the Imperial Government contemplated the establishment of a national guard to be at its back in carrying out repressive measures. This proposal is now suspended and will probably be heard of no more. There is widespread gratitude to God for thus delivering the nation from a Papal and Jesuit régime.

A PASTOR'S APPEAL.

Writing to The New York Observer, Rev. G. S. Mott, D.D., says:—"There is much to admire in the Brazilian character, and God is developing the nation in a most wonderful manner. Since the Republic was declared, Brazilians are more anxious than ever to establish first-class schools. The whole country is open to the Gospel. In every part we are asked to establish and send ministers to preach the Gospel. A gentleman said, yesterday, we ought to have twenty ministers for the State of Sao Paulo. We need as many first-class teachers. The religious condition and wants of Brazil are likely to be overlooked, and for these the serious thought and deepest concern of Protestants should immediately be awakened. For the nation can be established in the enjoyment of rational liberty, to the extent that the people receive and retain the Bible, the Sabbath, and the Gospel."

UNION WORK IN BRISTOL.

The Bristol Union of Evangelistic Missions and Mission Workers, started by a few earnest workers in 1887, was the result of the strong feeling that, if any great aggressive work is to be done by the various mission bodies in our large centres of population, there must be a laying aside of jealousies and opposition, and the establishment of a vital union of all interested in such work.

Although the idea is but young, it has been productive of great good. Some thirty missions are now banded together, and by various means help and strengthen one another, while, as opportunity offers, work is undertaken which would be quite impossible without the strength afforded by union.

On Monday, March 10 last, a special consecration service and observance of the Lord's Supper was held for mission workers at the Old King-street Baptist Chapel. Stirring addresses were delivered by local ministers and others to a fair congregation, representing several of the evangelical bodies of Christians. It was a very hallowed time, and can only be productive of lasting good. Though we must agree to differ about non-essentials, it is well that whenever we can we should show the world that Christians of whatever name are indeed one in their Lord and King. It is proposed to hold similar services periodically.

The work the Union has done may be briefly summed up as follows. Special indoor and outdoor evangelistic services at the various mission stations lasting for a week or fortnight, bands of workers from different missions being engaged each night, conferences and special meetings for the quickening of workers and the improvement of methods of work, the supporting of the regular work of weak missions, united prayer for the whole work, and any and every form of aggressive mission work that necessity and opportunity demands and that can best be done by united forces. It is hoped that the evangelical churches will be brought more into touch with the missions, and efforts are being made to establish a band of workers, who, not being attached to any regular work, will be free to undertake special work as the need requires. Any further information concerning this work will be gladly afforded by the secretary, Mr. Jas. Silcox, 93, Egerton-road, Bishopston, Bristol, who would also be glad to receive suggestions for future consideration from any who have experience of similar work.

"BABES IN THE WOOD" is the title of a booklet in which Mrs. Kerwin tells of an effort to give some London children the advantage of a short summer stay on the confines of Epping Forest. During last year forty weakly little ones from the East-end spent a holiday at Leytonstone. Most of them were from very poor homes, and some had to be clothed before they could be conveyed into the country. Mrs. Kerwin's address is Inchcolm, Wallwood-road, Leytonstone, E.

MANCHESTER WOMEN'S POLICE-COURT MISSION.—The annual meeting was recently held in the Mayor's parlour. Lady Henry Somerset and Mrs. Henry Kingsley were the principal speakers. Accounts of the work done in connection with the Police-court Mission were given; many have been induced to start afresh, and take heart again for life's battle, by the kindly aid afforded by this Mission. At the evening meeting Lady Somerset spoke on the Christian duty of total abstinence, and urged all present to give up alcohol entirely for the sake of Christ. Her address was most telling, as was that by Mrs. H. Kingsley. Several afterwards joined the Association.

WORK AT THE CAPE.

Last week, at the noon prayer-meeting in Aldersgate-street, Mrs. Osborn (a portrait and sketch of whom appeared in a recent number of The Christian) narrated many instances of blessing in connection with Christian work at the Cape. She told of a soldier who rented a small room, out of his pay, and regularly preached the Gospel to the poor, until laid aside by mortal sickness. The people went to the hospital to inquire for him; when he died, they followed him to the grave. This soldier was only twenty-two years of age, and had been converted but a year before his death. Another soldier in a little detachment quartered in Zululand, the only professing Christian in the band, is acting as Presbyterian chaplain, and holds services regularly "by authority." His light is shining too in the midst of the heathen population. Oh that each soldier on foreign service were a Christian missionary.

The difficulties of travelling through the colony at first seemed insuperable; but, as they were faced, they all vanished. Mrs. Osborn was able to pass through Natal and Zululand, and had found that visits to mission-stations by Christian friends were much appreciated. The workers stand greatly in need of fellowship and revival. Mr. Howe is doing this visitation work now, and writes that he has been marvellously helped. Some workers have been able to preach the Gospel to the natives in the "compounds" at Kimberley.

Mrs. Osborn testified that it was possible to travel the country, going from kraal to kraal, preaching through an interpreter, and living with the people. This testimony was confirmed to the meeting by Dr. Robertson, of the Army Medical Service, who said that during three years' residence in Natal he had preached the Gospel in this way. All that is required on landing in Natal is £20 to purchase two ponies and saddle-bags. He laid great stress on the necessity of sending the best men as missionaries; at the same time he urged that the work can only be fully undertaken by the raising of an army of native evangelists. Continued prayer was earnestly sought for the work in South Africa, for the workers of the Cape General Mission, and for other missionaries.

KINGSTOWN Y.M.C.A.

This institution recently held its annual meeting in the Assembly-rooms, Kingstown, Mr. John C. Fowler in the chair. Members of all Protestant denominations attended. Two resolutions expressive of gratitude for mercies of the past year, and pledging confidence in the catholic, evangelical, and missionary spirit of the Association, were unanimously adopted. The speakers were Pastor Hugh D. Brown, Rev. James Ervine, Rev. George Hanson, and Mr. George Williams (hon. sec. Rathmines Y.M.C.A.).

The annual report contains a record of solid work done, and the Association seems specially strong in evangelistic agencies. A large open-air mission was conducted in the summer months; two of its members have gone to Missionary Colleges in London, one of whom has since been engaged in connection with Mr. Fegan's Boys' Home.

A USEFUL TRACT AGENCY.—The British and Foreign Evangelical Tract Society and Prayer Union exists to enable tract distributors to help one another in their work. Tracts are supplied to members according to their using, the cost being covered by monthly free-will offerings. Missionaries abroad and workers at home have connected themselves with the Society, which is strictly evangelical, and so organised that those who have money and cannot do much work may render welcome help to others, who, though without material resources, are able and willing to distribute many tracts. Pastor Frank H. White is president of the Society, concerning which detailed information may be had from the superintendent, Mr. S. E. Roberts, at 26, Paternoster-row, E.C., where the office of the Society is now located.

Christian Policemen.

THE seventh annual meeting of the Christian Police Association was held on Friday last in Exeter Hall. Delegates from all parts of the country attended, and many friends of the work joined them in their deliberations at the conferences and in the public meetings. The Association has nearly two hundred branches, and exercises a very beneficent influence abroad as well as at home. In the morning and afternoon there were conferences at which inspiring reports were rendered of the progress of the work. The men evinced a good knowledge of Scripture teaching, some of them bearing remarkably intelligent testimony to the grace of God as they had experienced it.

Christian policemen are a credit to the force, alike for sobriety and gentleness of manner. Both these virtues are exhibited more commonly among them to-day than was the case a short time ago. To a large extent this blessed change results from the influence of godly women, who in many places, we are glad to say, make the interests of the Association their personal concern. Several of the delegates rejoiced to dwell upon the advantages of the Bible-classes which have been established, and of the Bands of Hope by which their children are being educated in the ways of safety and wisdom. From what was said, it became very apparent that the operations of the Association go far to protect young men on their joining the force.

Dr. A. B. Stoney presided in the morning, and Captain Tottenham in the afternoon. Mr. E. Fox Butlin delivered a helpful address on "The Greatest Thing in the World." He showed that in order to give place to the love of God, and exhibit its great power, we must be filled with the Holy Spirit. He strongly urged the importance of Bible-reading, constant and prayerful, and showed that if we would obey God we must love Him. Rev. F. D. Sanford spoke on being fishers of men. Except Christ make us fishers of men, our work will only end in "fishermen's luck"—we shall get nothing. If, however, we allow Him to purify us, He will fill us with his Spirit, and teach us how to bring men to Him for salvation. Moreover, if we are fishers of men we shall have a God-given love which will enclose in its embrace friend and foe, even the most unlovable. Captain Tottenham drove home the duty and privilege of Christians showing a perpetual solicitude for the eternal welfare of others.

A meeting held in the evening was presided over by supported by a number of chief constables and friends of the work. The large hall was crowded, many policemen being accompanied by their wives. Remarking that members of the force are continually answering the questions of pedestrians as to the way to this or that street or place, the Chairman asked a higher question of each and all the constables. Do you know the way to heaven? From members of the Association he expected a confident reply in the affirmative, and he praised God that, owing to the operations of the Association, the faith of Christ is no longer regarded as a strange thing in the breast and upon the lips of policemen. Mr. Tritton maintained the essential importance of communion and contact with God, and of constables so living Christ that those around may discern their discipleship: on these conditions being realised, the Association will be more widely and deeply blessed to the force and the community.

REV. H. W. WEBB-PEPLOE

delivered an address, which was as practical in character as it was really earnest. He set himself to encourage the policemen in fighting the battle of life, and right well he estimated the strength and weakness of those to whom he spoke. The keynote of the address was "Doing the will of God," and this Christian duty and privilege was enforced by many illustrative citations of Holy Writ. Men are prone to think of God's will as something exceedingly trying and distressful, but really it should be done with pleasure. The hearts of naturally minded men may shrink at the thought, but doing the will of God should make rich and strong, as it is the absolute salvation and complete glorification of those who trust in Christ.

Policemen may often feel, perhaps, that they have a harder time of it than anybody else. He commended to their notice the fact that some of the most beautiful exhortations of the Apostle Paul were made to servants or slaves, as when he urged them to be obedient, "not with eye-service, as men-pleasers, but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart." Members of the force are subject to many and strong temptations; but let it ever be remembered, "This is the will of God, even your sanctification." Alluding to the extent to which the patience of policemen is tried, the speaker called attention to the words of Peter: "So is the will of God that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." This will, of course, bring suffering, but that also is according to the will of God regarding those who commit their souls to him (1 Pet. ii. 15, iv. 19). In conclusion, Mr. Peploe urged the men to cultivate communion with God in the solitude of their nightly round, as well as while discharging their other duties.

delivered an address well suited to the occasion. He was at times humorous, as is his wont, but never lost hold of the large audience, for whom he had many words of excellent counsel. His address was really a sermon without a text, starting with the proposition that it is well for a policeman to be a Christian. Needless to say that many cogent reasons were given for this, not the least being that it makes such a constable active and intelligent, renders him proof against temptation, and promotes in him restfulness of mind and gentleness of manner. Secondly, Mr. Spurgeon maintained that a Christian who is a policeman should be very much of a Christian. Having to deal with so much that is depraved, the policeman needs to follow Christ fully—to let his heart go up to God, that the evil may not get into his soul. A man does not become a Christian nowadays without people watching to see what kind of character he bears.

Regretting that policemen in London have few privileges, Mr. Spurgeon expressed a hope that it would soon be possible for them to enjoy Sabbath worship to a greater extent than at present. He recommended them to become associated with one place of worship, rather than to wander from church to church with unprofitable results. He would have policemen to be strong Christians, because living in a world of doubt. If answering to that description, he was sure they would seize upon their opportunities of doing good. In conclusion, Mr. Spurgeon impressed upon the policemen that they become Christian in a very curious way—by being apprehended. If the Lord gets a grip of a man, he never relaxes his hold. Then the business and pleasure of the captive is to decide at once to be the Lord's. Such a prisoner must not try and get away, but willingly surrender and quietly follow Him by whom he is so graciously taken in charge.

The addresses were listened to with rapt attention. Mr. Middleton delighted the audience with a cornet solo, "What shall it profit a man?" There was also singing by the police choir, and 150 children from the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage. Later on another meeting was held. The day is now looked back upon as a season of blessing and joy by many members of the rank and file of the police force.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. E. J. Parker has held a fourteen days' mission at Sholing, near Southampton. Believers were refreshed while sinners accepted Christ, and are now rejoicing in his great salvation.

Mr. C. Inglis has closed a six days' mission at Pontymoile in connection with Mr. Wintle's work. The meetings were well attended and many have professed conversion. A service was held for the factory girls in the tin works during the dinner hour.

A fortnight's mission has been held at the Shaftesbury Institute, Harrow-street, Lissongrove. Mr. Skidmore, of Brighton, assisted Miss Meredith Brown and Mr. F. H. Leybourne; and several sinners expressed repentance and sought the pardoning Saviour.

Mr. J. H. Crawford, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, has concluded a month's mission in Kilrush, co. Clare. The interest in the work was deep and the attendance remarkably good. Many have been awakened and not a few led to decision. The requests for prayer and praise were numerous.

Ireland.—Gospel mission services have been conducted in the Methodist Church, Glenady, co. Antrim, for the past fortnight, by Mr. Jas. Dixon, an ex-soldier, and several decided for Christ. Similar services have been held in Killylea, co. Armagh, by Rev. W. E. Burroughs, of Kingstown; at Ballymote and Blacklion, by Mr. and Mrs. Powers; and at Bush and Coagh, co. Tyrone, by Rev. John Elliott, and Messrs. Donnelly and Poolton.

Mr. G. Sage, of the Evangelisation Society, has closed a three weeks' mission in St. Dominick, Cornwall. The Gospel message, scripturally and earnestly preached, has resulted in reviving believers and converting sinners. Although the evangelist suffered from an attack of influenza the last week, he kept on till the close, speaking with power, and the workers hope to see many more brought to Christ as a result of his labours.

D. C.

Mr. G. R. Cairns has held a ten days' mission at Fabius Chapel, Liverpool. His testimony has been owned of God, and many tokens of blessing have been manifest. Some have been reached who have been living in utter carelessness, and many have been spoken to in the inquiry-rooms. Some of the tender hymns sung by the evangelist were blessed abundantly to the hearers, and we feel thankful to God for sending our brother to our midst. Mr. Cairns labours next in Liverpool, and thence goes to Manchester.

Charles Green, Pastor.

Rev. W. A. Meaton, of the Christian Instruction Society, has conducted a mission in Holbury Church, Kensington. The Bible-readings were given by Miss Mason, Rev. C. S. Horne, M.A., and Rev. John Stevens. In spite of heavy rain, and the gratifying fact that five other missions were being conducted during the same period in the district, the services were all well attended, and the mission was extended to twelve days (March 15-27). The united communion service held on a very wet evening was very large, and the hallowed season will long be remembered by all who were present. Children's services and drawing-room meetings were held and much blessed.

LETTERS TO SCHOOLBOYS.—Dear Sir,—Through your kind notice of my "Letters to Schoolboys" in a recent issue of your widely read paper, I have received many applications from scholars attending such a variety of schools, that I should esteem it a favour if you will allow me to state that the "Letters to Schoolboys" are specially written for the young gentlemen of our public schools, and to them only I am prepared to send them.—Yours very truly, John Shrimpton.

Westminster Chambers, 3, Victoria-street, London, S.W.

MR. F. S. ARNOT'S CENTRAL AFRICAN MISSION.—Ekwikwi, chief of Bailundu, has commenced his long-talked-of raid, and stopped all communications between Bihé and Benguella. A native has reached the coast with information to the effect that the members of Mr. Arnot's party at Bihé were all safe. Of course, Ekwikwi may be unsuccessful in his endeavour, as he has been on previous occasions, yet things are likely, for some time to come, to be much disturbed. During the lull the missionaries have been able to get an unusually large supply of goods from the coast.

SERMON LANE MISSION.

The annual meeting of this Mission was held at the Myddleton Hall, Upper-street, Islington, on Tuesday week. Mr. John McCall presided, and was supported on the platform by a number of representative ministers and laymen.

Mr. D. Cooksey presented a detailed report of the year's work. The important change that followed the death of the late superintendent, Mr. George Fuller, whose self-denying, earnest labours did much to promote the success of the Mission, was a source of deep anxiety to the Committee; but his successor, Mr. W. West, has endeavoured to supply his place, and, it is believed, has obtained the confidence and respect of the people of the neighbourhood.

The Mission must indeed influence the whole district, owing to the thorough organization and lengthy record appealing to the sympathies of the people. Unfortunately, as in connection with so many of these deserving agencies, monetary help is urgently needed.

MAJOR WHITTLE AT WOOLWICH.

The striking results of the mission in November last, induced the Christian friends in Woolwich to desire a second visit from Major Whittle. Again the blessing of God has rested on the word of his servant. Overflowing audiences have assembled from night to night in the largest available church in the town, and overflow meetings have been twice addressed by Dr. Moxey, who has been assisting in the work, by reading the Word, and some of the hymns, and addressing two children's meetings in All Saints' schoolroom. Blessing has followed these meetings, as also the meetings for young women, held by Miss Whittle, and the Bible-readings given by the Major in St. James's schoolroom each week day at three o'clock. This large room was crowded on every occasion almost, showing how deep was the interest awakened, and how the Lord Himself was at the helm.

Major Whittle's addresses have been often closely-argued doctrinal expositions of God's truth. Yet so simple has been the language employed, and so earnest and loving has been the bearing of our beloved friend and brother, that the youngest child's attention was secured, and conviction and conversion have resulted among all classes, all ages, and, praised be God, all sects.

We must not forget to mention that the clergy, nonconformist ministers, and laymen of all classes, did not rely on the success of the former visit, but, commending the evangelist to God, they went directly, in a whole month's nightly prayer meetings, to God Himself, asking Him to bless his own work.

This week the evangelist conducts evening meetings in the Town Hall, Bermondsey. It is expected that a large number of dock labourers will attend these meetings. This day (Good Friday) there will be services at 11 a.m., 3 and 7.30 p.m. Major Whittle will greatly value the attendance of Christian workers who can help in dealing with anxious inquirers.

It is an interesting fact that the friends attending the Major's Bible-readings at Greenwich contributed £10 for the McAll Mission in France, and those present at the readings in Woolwich have also sent a contribution. As already stated, Major Whittle will spend April on the Continent with Dr. Pierson and Dr. Moxey. He expects to return to London by May 1, and will conduct his closing mission in London (during this visit) at Mildmay, commencing May 11.

The Banner of Asia says:—"We are constantly receiving information from various parts of India showing that the lock hospital system is being very widely put into force. The lock hospital system in India always means the flagrant licensing of vice."

Obituary.

MISS JANE WILSON,

Miss Jane Wilson, who died on March 14, at her residence, 2, Belgrave-place, spent a life of quiet and unostentatious benevolence. Her gifts of charity were without number, and she was a constant and liberal contributor to many societies. By her will the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts benefits to the extent of £24,000, and St. George's Hospital has £5000.

REV. T. ATKINSON.

The death is recorded in the George and Knysa district, Cape Colony, of the Rev. Theophilus Atkinson, at the age of 65. The deceased gentleman left England many years ago for Africa, having undergone a course of study and preparation at one of the seminaries of the London Missionary Society. He was accompanied by Mrs. Atkinson, who proved a true helpmeet in his labours, and who died in 1873.

MISS MALDEN.

Miss Malden, of the Percy Institute, King's Cross, one of the most devoted workers in connection with the London Young Women's Christian Association, has just passed to her rest. She was one of the earliest workers to go forth from the Barnet Conference, and for three years laboured as a missionary in India, but failing health compelled her to return to England. Her health being restored, she became a worker in the Y.W.C.A., and for some time travelled in its behalf, organising auxiliaries and raising funds. Being at heart a missionary, she afterwards became superintendent of the Percy Institute, and there for upwards of eight years laboured with truest consecration and singleness of purpose in winning souls to Christ.

After a very short illness, the call came to her early on Monday morning, March 24. She was 59 years of age.

A funeral service was held at Vernon Chapel, King's Cross, on Friday last. Many friends of the Y.W.C.A. attended. Rev. C. B. Sawday, of Leicester, who for many years was Miss Malden's pastor and friend, gave the address. Not alone amongst girls did she labour. Even Roman Catholics and infidels believed in Miss Malden. Drunkards she sought to save. There were few fallen girls in the neighbourhood whose faces she did not know, and many of them felt her sympathy. Hundreds of souls had she won to Christ. Her worn and marked Bible revealed one great secret of her piety and usefulness. The remains were interred in Abney Park Cemetery.

JAMES PILLANS WILSON.

This servant of the Lord entered into rest on Wednesday, March 26, in the 74th year of his age. He was a member of the Established Church of England, but Christians of all denominations shared his sympathy and help. He wrote and published several books, one of the last being "Scriptural Proofs of full Salvation from Sin." He was emphatically a man of prayer, and the study of God's Word was his special delight. During the last few days of his life he was full of thankfulness to God for all, even the weakness and suffering.

In business life he did not distinguish between sacred and secular, doing all to the Lord. He was one of the founders of Price's Patent Candle Co., and was for over fifty years connected with that firm. He instituted morning prayer at the works, and every day the Bible was read and prayer offered. The poor and needy were the objects of his special care and thought, and whenever in his power he was glad to give practical help.

Mr. Wilson took special interest in all open-air work, going out with others as long as health and strength permitted. For more than two years he had not been able to take part in active work, having suffered from chronic bronchitis; but he was always busy with his pen when the state of his health permitted, and ever rejoiced in hearing of what God was doing through others. The exact time of his conversion is unknown; he believed that God really saved him when quite a boy, and very early in life he began to care for the souls of others, and showed a strong desire for their salvation, never losing an opportunity of winning them for Christ.

MR. H. N. CROWELL.

We regret to record the death of this gentleman, son-in-law of Rev. Dr. Pentecost. He died at Santa Barbara, California, on Friday last.

REV. ALEXANDER CUSIN.

We deeply regret to record the death of Rev. Alexander Cusin, of Edinburgh. Mr. Cusin, says The British Weekly, was a man of fine spirit and very high accomplishments. His ministry was of a rich, spiritual, and elevating kind, but owing to the weakness of his health, he was unable to take the place of prominence which his brethren would gladly have accorded him. He did some excellent work in translating French and German books for the Theological Library of Messrs. Clark, and all who knew him hailed his appointment as Cunningham Lecturer, assured that he would do justice to his great and varied ability and attainments.

MR. JOHN GRUBB RICHARDSON.

Religiously and commercially, no name was better known in the North of Ireland than that of Mr. J. G. Richardson, of Moyallon, who passed quietly away last Friday night, from congestion of the lungs induced by an attack of influenza. For more than half a century, Mr. Richardson occupied a foremost position in Ulster, and for many years his family have been prominently identified with the linen industries of Ireland. Some years ago, he built Bessbrook Mills, where there are thousands of spindles and hundreds of looms constantly at work, and around which has sprung up a town of about five thousand inhabitants, in which there is neither public-house, pawnshop, nor police-station.

Mr. Richardson gave employment to nearly 5000 workers. He was a member of the Society of Friends, but took a lively interest in all religious and philanthropic movements, and his beautiful home at Moyallon, overlooking the picturesque valley of the Bann, was a rallying place for Christian workers of all denominations. He was always ready by word, pen, or purse to support a deserving cause, and in every good work he was cordially seconded by his devoted wife and amiable family. In his yard at Moyallon he built a large mission-hall, in which for many years an interesting unsectarian Gospel work was carried on.

He was president of the Irish Temperance League, and some years since declined a baronetcy offered him by Mr. Gladstone. He was an earnest Christian, whose great wealth and widespread influence were always used on the side of evangelical Christianity. Such men are too scarce, and his loss is therefore all the more to be mourned.

THE LABOUR CONFERENCE.—The resolutions of the Conference at Berlin are thus stated by a daily contemporary:—"As regards children, the resolutions condemn their employment under twelve, or under ten in Southern countries, where the body is matured at an earlier age. Children under sixteen are not to work at night or on Sunday, while the labour of children under fourteen should be restricted to six hours a day. Youths between sixteen and eighteen should also have some protection against excessive labour. Married women and unmarried women over sixteen should not be allowed to work at night nor on Sunday, nor at any time over eleven hours a day. Courts of arbitration and working men committees are suggested for the settlement of disputes, and this Labour Conference is to meet periodically for an exchange of views."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—A mission at Leith, under the auspices of the Leith Christian Fellowship Union, conducted by Mr. John M. Scroggie, beginning April 6.——A mission, from Sunday, April 27, to Sunday, May 4, at the Bow and Bromley Institute. ——A mission at Newbattle, Midlothian, April 6 to 13, conducted by M. Steedman.——A mission at the Barn, Southall, by Mr. G. Hefford.—— A mission at Watchet, Somerset, April 8 to 20, by Mr. J. Burnham.——A united Church mission at Wellington, Salop, conducted by Revs. J. W. Dann and T. Graham, April 12 to 21.——Two missions, to be held during April, at Ashbourne and at Cheltenham, by Mr. John M. McAuliffe. ——A mission by Mr. W. Mapstone, at South Shields, commencing on Easter Sunday, April 6. ——Special services at the Bethel, Callowhill-street, Bristol, by Rev. A. T. Jones, of Maindee, from April 8 to 13.

SOME APRIL MAGAZINES.

CONTROVERSY AND SOUL-WINNING.

Amid the growing din of ecclesiastical and theological conflict, there is no small danger that Christians may be diverted from, or unfitted for, that which is their special work on earth, viz., the seeking of the salvation of the lost. No doubt there are times, such as the present, when it is the Christian's duty to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," but the contending thus enjoined is vastly different from the contention which is Satan's counterfeit of it. It is often difficult to distinguish between the two, but there is one test which may be applied with much certainty, viz., the contending which makes soul-saving effort unpalatable or unfruitful cannot be of the right kind, even though it be for the right object.—The Reaper.

"THAT BLESSED HOPE."

The very word Parousia, always used in the New Testament to describe our Saviour's Second Advent, of itself implies that which we do not always realise. It is not always his coming to us, but his presence with us; and this not as He is now present, invisibly by the Holy Ghost, but in the completeness of his nature. He came once and departed. When he comes again, He will never depart until He gives up the kingdom to the Father, and God is become all in all. But may not the several manifestations of his power and glory, the several operations of judgment, the several steps to the establishment of his kingdom, take place in order, and with due regard to season, and time, and place? The common notion, that the second coming of Christ is one great catastrophe, may be a misconception. Many passages of Holy Scripture imply that everything belonging to his second coming will be as much in order as the events which were accomplished "in the days of his flesh."—Rev. C. H. Waller on "Unfulfilled Prophecy," in "The Theological Monthly."

WEST AFRICA.

An interesting letter from Rev. S. A. Selwyn, giving some account of his West African mission, appears in The Church Missionary Gleaner. As to the people he writes: "Polygamy, drinking, and lying are the three great sins here; of course there is slavery, too, to a frightful extent. Slaves are even pawned, as well as bought and sold. Yesterday we saw a large number of devil-houses and devil-stores, where offerings are made to Satan of palm oil and shells to appease his wrath. O, the misery of these poor folk! No laws, hardly any government, and that quite according to the will of the chief or head man of the little township. Never talk about home heathen any more in the same breath with heathenism as it is here. And then compare the so-called home heathen with the heathen in Africa only, let alone those in other parts of the world. And is there no call to leave the comfortable home-nest and to "come over and help" those who have already gone forth, their lives in their hands, to obey the dear Master's last command?"

THE CHURCH AND PEOPLE.

A most valuable symposium on this topic of perennial import appears in The Free Church of Scotland Monthly for April. The abstinence of the people from church ordinances, and the causes thereof, are discussed by four members of the Free Synod of Fife. Rev. A. B. Campbell, of Markinch, takes a roseate view. He believes that church attendance is better now than at any former period of Scottish history. Such neglect as there is he attributes to the Church not adapting itself to the circumstances of the time. He advocates one regular congregational service on Sunday, which would give more time for the training of the young and systematic evangelising. Rev. A. Macmillan, of Abbotshall, regards this as a period of transition and disintegration, marked by loosened views of the Sabbath and revelation, and a superficial religious spirit. The Church is partly to blame by reason of past and present neglect of social problems. Rent by internal dissensions, the Church fails to impress and attract the world. Rev. J. F. Macrae, of St. Andrew's, thinks the pulpit is much to blame, because it lacks conviction and sympathy. Fresher, more practical preaching, and brighter services are needed. There should be constant visitation of non-church-goers. Rev. Dr. N. L. Walker, of Dysart (editor of The Monthly), winds up the symposium. He is of opinion that the increased worldly prosperity of the industrial masses has fostered in them the love of pleasure, and formed a channel for the prevailing currents of scepticism. As to remedy, he recommends more arresting and attractive preaching, while "salvation by grace" must be kept to the forefront; better congregational oversight, and more aggressive endeavour, both in town and country. He desiderates a well-conducted weekly newspaper of religious tone, and adds that the supreme need is that of a fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

PREACH THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

St. Paul evidently regarded his conversion as equivalent to a death and a new birth. By "suffering the loss of all things" for Christ, he acted out the saying of his Lord, and left the dead to bury their dead. He left, that is, those who were dead to the changes which the Gospel demanded, to torment themselves with spiritually useless observances—The Jews who said, "The old is better"; and the Christians who poured the new wine into old bottles. He went his own way, and preached the kingdom of God, which "is not eating and drinking," not mere forms and ceremonies, "but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." And is not this the duty, in some degree, of we who have tasted that the Lord is gracious? To preach in heartfelt, unconventional language the great spiritual truths which God has made known to us? To be positive, and not, as a rule, negative, whenever we are called upon to contribute our share to public opinion on religious questions? The "Kingdom of God" is too grand an object for us to trouble ourselves overmuch about the controversies of fashionable theology.—Canon Cheyne on "Luke ix. 57-62," in "The Homiletic Magazine."

WHAT IS IT TO BE A CHRISTIAN?

The numbers of The Young Man for March and April contain brief replies to this question from well-known and able pens. There are in all eighteen replies. We may summarise some of the leading answers in as many sentences. Rev. R. F. Horton says in effect, he is a Christian who has sincerely repented of his sin and been born again of water and the Spirit. Rev. W. J. Dawson thinks the Christian is simply one who loves Christ and tries to be like Him. Rev. J. E. C. Welldon, the Head Master of Harrow, considers a Christian to be one who finds his chief motive to seek the highest good, in the example and doctrine of Christ. Rev. G. S. Reaney's response is that a Christian is one who trusts and loves Jesus Christ according to the knowledge he has of Him. Rev. H. C. G. Moule: "To be indeed a Christian is to be a living and loving disciple of our Lord Jesus Christ." Dr. Cunningham Geike thinks that to imitate Christ is the sum of Christianity. Rev. D. P. Macpherson says that "it is to articulate, incarnate, reproduce the Christ in our lives." He deems it possible to be a "saved" man, and yet not necessarily a Christian man; the former is negative, the latter is positive. Mr. W. T. Stead says: "The man who acts as Christ would do under the same circumstances is the true believer."

ALDERSHOT CAMP.—In this large military Camp there are at the present time about 14,000 troops; the number will shortly be increased by eight militia regiments. There is a very large field for tract distribution, personal conversation, &c. Infidel tracts are scattered very freely, especially in the South Camp and Barracks. Many of the regular troops, after a stay at this Camp of one or two years, are sent to foreign stations, so that those that are brought to the knowledge of the Lord carry the good news out to the heathen. The needs of the work include Bibles, Gospel books, tracts, leaflets, &c. The work is under the care of Mr. John Poate, Sherbourne-road, Farnborough, Hants.

PORTSMOUTH AND GOSPORT SEAMEN'S MISSION.—Mr. Henry Cook, of Gosport, writes that he has lately visited the new mission house at Deanville. The service held during his visit were of a deeply interesting character. Returning to Gosport, he was in time to assist at a special evangelistic service at the Bethel, which was blessed to not a few. "There is a good work before us now," says Mr. Cook, "in preparing to send to Paris the Herald, for work among the French there. The novelty of the vessel will attract many to hear the Gospel. We ask the prayers and sympathy of your readers in Bibles, Testaments, &c. The Mystery will take the place of the Herald on the Cornish coast, for the two months' work amongst the fishermen."

Personalia.

Sir James Tyler has given £1000 to the Bethnal-green Free Library New Building Fund.

Mr. George Williams is sketched by Mr. Wm. Main in The Guide for April, in one of "The Saviours of Society" series. The sketch is tolerably complete and deeply interesting.

Miss Mittendorff, we regret to know, is still abroad in feeble health. We hope that many friends of her good work among the orphans will show their sympathy by attending the annual meeting of the Homes, at 17, Old Cavendish-street, W., on the evening of April 29.

Mr. Stanley has completed his new work "Darkest Africa," and has decided to leave Alexandria April 7. He will travel to Brindisi, and overland to Naples, Rome, Genoa, Nice, Marseilles, Paris, and Brussels, in order to visit the King of the Belgians, and thence to London.

Rev. J. G. Gregory has completed the eleventh year of his ministry at Emmanuel Church, Hove, Brighton. On Friday last his congregation presented him with an illuminated address, a rosewood harmonium, and a purse of 110 guineas. Gratitude was expressed for the evangelical simplicity and Protestant vigour of the work Mr. Gregory has carried on.

Lady Aberdeen.—In a letter that appears in The Free Church of Scotland Monthly, Rev. Dr. Rainy tells that in her voyage from Australia by the Alameda two or three years ago, Lady Aberdeen went among the steerage passengers, got the children formed into a class, and made its daily meetings an attraction and enjoyment for them as long as the voyage lasted.

Mr. Matthew Burnett, who has long been styled the "Father Matthew of Australia," by his marvellous labours has exhausted his strength, and he has determined on visiting this country. During the past five and twenty years he has been diligently advocating the cause of temperance in Australia, and it is stated that he has administered the pledge to no less than 176,000 people, and has given the blue ribbon to 140,000.

Rev. J. Guinness Rogers has been minister of the Congregational Church, Clapham, for a quarter of a century, and a few days ago a "silver wedding" celebration was held, by way of showing the love and respect of the people for their pastor. An illuminated address was presented to Mr. Rogers, with a cheque of eleven hundred guineas. The occasion was rendered specially interesting by the presence of Revs. Dr. Dale, C. A. Berry, Dr. Allon, and H. Arnold Thomas, who delivered hearty addresses.

Mrs. Booth experienced a considerable amount of relief during the three or four earlier days of last week, but on Friday night the anguish came back in all its old force, and Saturday and Sunday were sad days indeed. Every alleviation yet tried has failed to soothe the pain, and nothing seems to stop the onward ravages of the dreadful malady. Mrs. Booth desires to thank the readers of The Christian who have prayed for her, and to answer their messages of friendship with the assurance of her gratitude, urging all alike to work while it is called to-day, and to live for the glory of God and the salvation and benefit of those around us.

BROMPTON Y.M.C.A.—The annual meeting of this Association was held on Tuesday week. Mr. F. A. Bevan presided. The report told of good work done during the year. Young men should call at the rooms, 112, Brompton-road, S.W., and make the acquaintance of the secretary, Mr. Gedny. The Chairman, Messrs. Seagram, Mills, and Pearce spoke.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.—It has been decided to convene the ninth œcumenical assembly in the city of Florence during April, 1891. Judging from the interest that is already awakened in the proposals, it is quite certain that Protestant Christians throughout Italy will hail with joy such a gathering of Evangelicals from all parts of the world. In the early history of the Evangelical Alliance its influence was claimed on behalf of religious liberty in Italy, and the Madiai, after suffering long imprisonment in Florence on account of their evangelical faith, were released through the earnest appeals of the same Society, which will now hold its conference on the soil of free Italy, and on the very spot which witnessed its successful efforts nearly forty years ago.

Jews in Germany.

THE VIEWS OF DR. STÖCKER, COURT CHAPLAIN, BERLIN.

The report of a remarkable conversation between this well-known ecclesiastic and a representative of The Pall Mall Gazette appeared in that journal on Friday last. The interview took place at the close of a warm debate in the Prussian Diet on the question of Jewish influence in Germany. We give the conversation so far as it bears on Dr. Stöcker's attitude towards the Jews:—

"I know very well," said Dr. Stöcker, "that I am represented as the hater and persecuter of the Jews, and that just now, while the school debate has been on, my opponents have once again done everything they could to revile me. But that does not alter my views in the slightest, and whenever I feel that I ought to speak I shall give my opinion on this subject of the Jews in Germany.

"'Judenhetze' they call it. It is nothing of the kind; it is only a protest against the harm that is done by the Jews to my country and to my people. Shall I, a servant of God, and a representative of the nation, be silent when I see and hear and know what endless mischief is being done in the whole country, and especially at Berlin, by the Jewish element, which has all the money, and therefore all the power, in its hands? You in England cannot realise what harm is being done, because there are more Jews in Berlin alone than there are in the whole of England.

"I had known it for years when, twelve years ago, I first got up in Parliament, and pointed to the evil. But because I saw what was coming—because I warned the public against the dangers into which they were running—was I, therefore, a Jew-hater, an enemy of the race? Far from it. I have not even that physical antipathy against the Jews which is felt by so many people, and the Old Testament is as dear to me as the New.

"Nor do I hate them, as has been said, because they are rich. It is not their wealth to which I object, but to the way in which they accumulate and in which they spend it. Surely it must be evident to all seeing men that it is not by fair means that the Jews acquire their great wealth. In the country they cheat as tradespeople, and in the town they grow rich by their money transactions, which are anything but honest. Then, when they have accumulated their riches, what use do they make of them? They buy the press—for is not nearly the whole of our daily press in their hands?—and influence it according to their ideas; they buy the theatres, the places of amusement, and they get trade into their hands; and I say it again, what I have often said before, that commercially, socially, politically, and morally they lead the country to ruin.

"Here is an instance of what is done in trade. A Berlin firm of manufacturers of ladies' and children's coats is in the hands of two Jews, and one of the heads of this wealthy business-house told the manager not long ago that he must keep the wages of the women and girls as low as possible. If they could not live by their earnings they could easily earn more by going into the streets. You can say this on my authority; I have the name of the firm, and I can vouch for every word."

"But, Dr. Stöcker, are not men like these rather the exception than the rule?"—"No, they are not; they are the majority, without a doubt. There are individual men among the Jews who are as high-minded and as honest as you may wish for, but it is these who are the exception, and the others are the rule. Christianity in Germany is at a low ebb just now; new life, new love, new faith, and new charity ought to be infused into the nation. Instead of this the press, which is as the daily bread to the masses, holds up to ridicule and contempt all that is holiest and dearest to us in our religion. And why? Because the Jews have bought the press, and it suits them to do so. Shall I tell you what one of their widely read papers said after the general synod had been held in the Reichstag, where the representatives of 20,000 Protestants had been gathered? It remarked that the place ought to be disinfected after the meeting was over. The remark in itself was nothing, but this way of sneering at our Christian religion does infinite harm.

"What object could I have in persecuting the Jews? It is only when I see what a fearful danger we are running as a Christian nation that I oppose them. As long as they were our guests, and were content to be our guests, I had nothing to say against them; but they have defiled our sanctums; they have soiled and dragged into the mire what we hold highest; and when a guest turns round on his host and acts as the master of the house you show him the door, and treat him according to his deserts."

"Then, is it an authenticated fact that they are becoming the rulers of the people?"—"It is indeed, and in some places it is even worse than here at Berlin. For instance, I have a friend in Silesia, a land-owner. He is an old man and wishes to make his will. Now, the only judge in the place where he lives is a Jew, and the only two solicitors are Jews also. Is it right that in a Christian country a man who is perhaps ill and near his end, should have as legal advisers two men whose religion is entirely opposed to his own? In such cases we want Christian men at our bedside who advise us for good, and who do not belong to a race that is known all over the world for its greed for money."

"But tell me, Dr. Stöcker, why are you so very strongly opposed to having Jewish children educated in the same schools as the children of Protestant parents?"—"As long as the Jewish children are in the minority I have no objection whatever to their being educated together with other children. But when it comes to this, that two-thirds, three-fourths, or even nine-tenths of the pupils are Jews I object for this reason, that it is quite impossible for a master or mistress to teach on those principles which, if taught wisely and well, are the foundation-stones of our national well-being. How can the religion of the Cross be taught in a school where there are, let us say, twelve Jewish children and five Protestants? And yet, if we would foster true patriotism in our children we must teach them true religion in our schools. Secularism won't do—we want something besides; and religion—Christian religion—must be the power which keeps Germany great and good. It is not because I hate the Jews that I oppose them, but because I love my country and my nation, and because I see too much of the inner workings of things to be able to close my eyes to the fearful danger, which, if not stopped, will lead us on to certain ruin."

The following is the translation of an inscription, written by Dr. Stöcker on the back of his photograph given to the interviewer:—

"A single man, with God, is the majority. A. Stöcker, on the birthday of Emperor William I., 1890."

THE CAMBRIDGE MISSION TO DELHI, established twelve years ago, is earnestly commended to the sympathy and support of Cambridge men by Dr. B. F. Westcott, as Chairman of the Cambridge committee, in a letter to The Times. At the present time the Mission is building a new college at the suggestion of the Indian Government, who have given the site, the higher education of the Southern Punjaub having, "by a series of most unexpected events," been entrusted to the Mission.

LYDIARD TREGOZ, near Swindon, is a large, straggling parish, in which a good work is being done by the rector, Rev. H. G. Baily, and his wife and daughter. There are Bible-classes and meetings for mothers and children; temperance work is also carried on. As the parish stretches 7½ miles by 8, these operations are only rendered possible by the use of a mission cottage. The people are very poor, and the rent of the cottage has to be paid by outside friends. An occasional look in upon the quiet village might prove a means of grace alike to interested visitors and resident workers.

FEMALE STRANGERS IN MANCHESTER.—We recently noticed the work of an excellent institution in Manchester, near the London-road railway station. A second Home of a similar type is the Victoria Station Lodging House for Female Strangers, 53, New Bridge-street. The eleventh annual report states that 432 women and girls enjoyed the protection and accommodation of the Home last year, occupying the beds 3100 times, for which they paid £85 12s. About £60 per annum is required to be raised by friends to support the work, which is definitely moral and unobtrusively religious. In these days of constant migration, such lodging-houses are an important preventive agency, and we could wish there were many more of them. The hon. superintendent is Mrs. Tolmé, Melrose House, Higher Broughton, Manchester.

Central African Notes.

A SLAVE DEALER HUNG.

"Zanzibar, March 23.—A short time ago a Swahili slave dealer secretly conveyed by night a small cargo of slaves on board a dhow at Bagamoyo, for transport to Zanzibar. The German officials discovered this the next morning, took the dealer and the slaves from the dhow, handed over the slaves to the French Mission, and tried and hanged the slave dealer. The incident has caused much sensation."

Such is The Times telegram, representing a fact a fortnight old. It is not pleasant, certainly, to hear of a fellow-creature being executed either in Africa or at home, but there are other things suggested by the brief record. For one, we learn that it would be a serious mistake to assume that the blockade and the recent changes in Zanzibar have put an end to the slave trade. There it is at Bagamoyo, in full operation two week ago. For another thing, there is plainly so much demand for slaves on the island of Zanzibar as to make it worth while for this man to fill his dhow with them. Seventy per cent. of the population of Zanzibar is still enslaved.

The chief thing is that there is now a Power on the Zanzibar littoral which is watchful and effective in crushing the slave trade. Hanging may be very rough work, and the motives of the Germans may not be the very highest, but now there has come into operation for the first time a power which refuses to recognise that a man can hold any property in his fellow-men, and visits on him the penalty of the murderer he is. Much more will need to be done before the inhuman traffic is rooted out, but such lessons will tell on a class of degraded persons whom hardly any other teaching would affect.

SLAVERY IN ZANZIBAR.

Bishop Smythies has written to The Times correcting a mistake into which the friends of Africa in this country might excusably have fallen. A proclamation was issued by the late Sultan that after November 1, 1889, slaves landed on his territory would become free, and another proclamation was promised to the effect that the children of slave parents born after January 1, 1890, would also be free. But the former was soon taken down, and the latter was never issued. "To our bitter disappointment," says the Bishop, "these promises are entirely illusory, and are likely to remain a dead letter, in spite of urgent representations on the part of the British Government and its representative here."

MISSIONARY PROGRESS.

The following appears in The Free Church of Scotland Monthly for April:—

"Dr. Laws reports the baptism of thirty-two converts at Bandawé—teachers, scholars, and grown-up men—on an intelligent profession of their faith in Jesus Christ as their Saviour. Women are expected to follow."

"Her Majesty's Consul, Mr. Johnston, F.L.S., has hoisted the British flag at the north end of the lake, after peacefully disposing of the Arabs who have so long afflicted the country and the African Lakes Company, on terms which we have yet to learn."

A Dutch section of the Livingstonia Mission has also been founded by Rev. Andrew C. Murray, from the Cape. Thus the work of Christ has been going on amid all the alarms and bloodshed of the last two years.

OUR SOLDIERS ABROAD.—Mrs. Osborn writes from 39, Alexandra-road, Wimbledon:—"You will be touched to hear that one of our soldiers, Gunner Field, R.A., who once or twice appealed for tracts to your readers, is now at rest. Before leaving the Cape for Mauritius, he came to the Soldiers' Home quite overjoyed with a parcel of tracts, which he had just received through The Christian, and divided them among his comrades, to be carried to the sick in hospitals, and to others. At Port Louis, in spite of fever and weakness, he worked, as he had done at the Cape, with true missionary zeal. His comrades, who were brought to Christ at Cape Town, send urgent appeals for tracts to distribute among the French and natives of India on the island. Through the kindness of friends I hope to send a supply."

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 6.—Job IX.

BILDAD'S speech had been an assertion of the discriminating justice of God, and an attempt to prove it in Job's afflictions. In his reply, Job begins by granting something like an ironical assent to Bildad's principle, but asks how that can help him. Man cannot prove himself innocent if God has determined to hold him guilty (2, 3). The power of God renders it vain and foolish for man to contend against Him (4).

Then follows a description of God's power—in earthquakes (5, 6); in eclipses which hide the sun, and dark clouds which conceal the light of the stars (7); in the firmament, and the tossing, angry sea (8); and in the starry constellations, among which he mentions the Bear in the north, Orion in the south, and Pleiades in the east (9). These exhibitions of power are regarded as occasioned by God's "anger" (5).

Passing from the physical world to living beings, Job sees further displays of God's irresistible might (11-13). The conclusion is still the same—it is useless to withstand Him. "The proud helpers" could not do it; how should Job (13, 14)? Even if he were righteous, he would not attempt to maintain it before God (15). Then Job describes the probable result of any attempt to justify himself (16-21). So far from hearing Job's plea, God would only destroy him with his power. His might would give Him the best of the controversy.

To a still lower depth does Job descend. He affirms that instead of God dealing with men in discriminating justice, He destroys good and bad alike (22); yea, He even makes the wicked to triumph (24). Again Job recurs to the brevity of his life (25, 26), and justifies his complaining (27). To him it appears that God has determined to hold him guilty, so that every attempt to prove his innocence is "labour in vain" (28-31).

Then from this lowest depth to which Job descended comes a cry for a Mediator (32-35), which finds its answer only in the Gospel. The "Daysman" who can speak to us for God, and to God for us, is provided in Him who is Son of God and Son of Man.

MONDAY, APRIL 7.—Job X.

This is a terrible complaint. Job refuses to restrain himself—he "will speak in the bitterness of his soul" (1).

An inquiry (2-7).—He would know why God contends with him. Knowing no reason for his affliction in any sin of his own, he seeks to discover what there is in God to explain it. Could it please God (3)? Or was He liable to mistake the innocent for the guilty (4)? Or could He fear that his enemy should escape Him (5-7)? These are questions which the New Testament enables us to answer for every season of trial now.

A contrast (8-12).—Job was himself the work of God's hands (8); who had fashioned him as the potter fashions the clay (9); who had prepared for his life even in the womb (10-12); and whose providence now maintained his life (12). Yet it appeared that this same God was destroying the creature He had made (8, 9), and, so far as Job could tell, for no justifiable reason! What a contradiction this appeared.

A suggested explanation (13-17).—What a terrible one! It is worse than none at all. The thought occurs to Job that God had shown all this mercy and goodness towards him in order to visit him with treatment so cruel. Whether righteous or wicked in himself, God had resolved to hold him guilty (15), and "hunted him as a fierce lion" (16). This was unhappy reasoning. The mind was so affected by present affliction that even former mercies were misunderstood. Have we not, even with less reason, been gullty of similar folly?

An appeal (18-22).—"Oh, that he had never lived at all" (18). But if he must live, it can be only for a "few days" (19), may he not have a little ease before he passes into the land of darkness (20-22)? How utterly we mistake God's dealings with us!

TUESDAY, APRIL 8.—Job XI.

Zophar was probably the youngest of the three friends. He had not the prophetic spirit like Eliphaz; nor was he a sage like Bildad. He speaks with greater dogmatism than the other two, and more boldly charges Job with guilt; his speech is therefore more irritating to Job. Yet he has a reverent conception of the Divine wisdom; and closes with excellent counsel, which is faulty only because misapplied to Job's case. Note

His charge (1-6).—In his judgment Job's speech was empty talk—babbling (2), and empty boasting (3, R.V.). Job had professed himself innocent (ix. 21, x. 7). To this Zophar refers with the desire that God would speak (4, 5). Eliphaz and Bildad had only hinted with some delicacy at Job's possible guilt; Zophar does not mind speaking more boldly. The wisdom of God would discover secret sins, which would prove to Job that his affliction is less than he has deserved (6). Poor Job! Heavy as was his affliction, it was easier to bear than such painful charges as these.

The wisdom of God extolled (7-12).—It is beyond man's power to fathom it (7); immeasurably high and unfathomably deep (8); and incomprehensible in its length and breadth (9). This is just the truth which, rightly applied, would minister to Job's comfort. But Zophar uses it only to emphasise his charge of guilt. Job had said that God's omnipotence would render it impossible even for a righteous man successfully to contend against Him (ix.). Zophar argues that God's omniscience would discover secret sins even without searching for them (10-12).

An exhortation to return to God (13 20).—There is much that is beautiful and helpful in these words. The way of return is excellently described:—first, preparation of heart, then prayer (13), with the putting away of sin in the life and in the home (14). The result of such a return would be unwavering confidence before God (15), and full deliverance from trouble (16-20). As applied to Job, however, this counsel was cruel, inasmuch as it assumed on his part "hands smirched with iniquity, his face foul with ignominy, and his tent defiled with wickedness." Zophar's earnest words have not proved any comfort to Job.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9.—Job XII.

The irritating effect of Zophar's speech appears in Job's reply. As in the two previous cases, he begins by replying to the man; but ends by an appeal to God (xiv.).

His first words are full of sarcasm (1-6).—What the three friends had said was well known to him as to them (2, 3). To attempt to assuage his grief by such platitudes, was but to mock him in his misery (4). It was another proof that even the righteous man who has enjoyed real fellowship with God (4) is contemned when in misfortune. Those who are at ease show no real sympathy with the severely afflicted (5, 6).

In proof that his wisdom is not inferior to that of his friends, Job appeals to nature, where everyone could learn all they had declared (7-10). And, as Bildad had appealed to the wisdom of the ancients, Job shows that he too had heard, and carefully considered their words (11, 12). Then follows a description of the power of God as the sages had taught. It appeared in breaking down cities, imprisoning captives, in droughts and floods (14, 15); among all men—wise (17), rulers (18), and others (19-22); and among nations (23-25).

THURSDAY, APRIL 10.—Job XIII.

Looking back upon what he has just said, Job repeats his assertion that his wisdom is not inferior to theirs (1, 2), and again expresses his desire to speak with God (3). Certainly he would not misunderstand him as his friends did.

The friends rebuked (4-12).—Before appealing to God, Job turns aside to administer this sharp rebuke to his friends. They were "forgers of lies," "physicians of no value," whose only wisdom would be to "hold their peace" (4, 5). In their ignorance they had spoken wickedly (7), wrongfully for God (xlii. 8), and had reason to fear his judgment (10, 11); and when He should appear to reprove them, their "remembrances"—their wise sayings—should be "proverbs of ashes" (12, R.V.).

An appeal to God.—Job's appeal continues throughout this and the following chapters. He commences with strange alternation between fear and confidence (13-16). He is conscious that it is a daring thing, and that his life is in his hand if he does it. Several authorities reject both the Authorised, and the Revised rendering of ver. 15, and adopt the margin of the R.V. But the ordinary rendering seems more suitable to Job's difficulty at the time. Whatever might result from an appeal to God, yet Job had confidence in Him, and would make the appeal. He knew he was not a hypocrite (16); and why should he fear to approach Him? Having got rid of his fear, Job next bids his friends hear him pleading (17); and, if they have any real charge against him let them make it, and he will acknowledge his guilt and hold his peace (18, 19). Two conditions also he asks of God (20-22), and then proceeds with his plea.

The first part of the plea concerns Job himself (23-28). For what iniquities did God hide his face (23, 24). Why pursue one who is as a withered leaf (25)? Why recall thus the sins of his youth (26)? He is as one in the stocks, who cannot escape, and who wastes away as a motheaten garment (27, 28). Job's mind is getting into a better condition. There is none of that bitter irony which was so manifest in his former passionate appeals to God.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11.—Job XIV.

Continuing his appeal, Job looks from his own personal case to the condition of mankind generally (1-6). All men are frail and full of, trouble (12); why should God bring a creature so weak into judgment with Him (3)? The sinfulness of man is universal—not one can be proved clean before God (4). Since man is so frail, Job pleads that he may not have such unwonted affliction, but may get some pleasure (6, R.V.) out of his brief day.

The anticipation of death as total extinction strengthens Job's appeal (7-12). Of a tree there is hope that, if cut down, it will sprout again (7-9). But at present Job sees no such hope for man. He dies, and is done with, as waters fail from the sea (10-12). This is a gloomy, despairing thought, and one against which Job's mind seems to rebel as soon as it is uttered. Against the thought that death is the end of all things every man's better nature revolts. Hence the picture of another life beyond the present immediately rises to Job (13-15). It may be only a yearning desire, for Job still asks the question (14). Yet this desire, as that for a Daysman (ix. 32-34), both suggested by the heart's despair, is equally answered by the Gospel.

The hope for a future life is made stronger by the apparent injustices that exist now (16-22) God's treatment of Job appears to be so severe that He is finding out his transgression (16, 17), and that Job must perish under his hand (18-22). A future life is surely necessary to remedy the inequalities of the present. Evidently this is not the place and time of judgment.

With this speech of Job, the first colloquy ends. Among the most important results to Job are: (1) The defeat of Satan. His calumny is disproved. Dark as is Job's mind as to the purpose of his affliction, bitter as have been some of his complaints, yet he has not renounced God. He holds on to faith in Him, and continually appeals from his mistaken friends to God. (2) Job's misery has given him a glimpse of two important Gospel truths. As in the darkness of night stars are rendered visible, so in Job's despair he has uttered his cry for a Divine and human mediator; and for a life beyond the present. Thanks be to God for Him whose incarnation and resurrection answer this cry.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12.—Job XV.

The second colloquy, like the first, is commenced by Eliphaz.

He begins by rebuking Job (1-16). Job had claimed to be equally wise with his friends (xii. 3, xiii. 2). Eliphaz complains that the words of Job proved him to be unwise (2, 3), and even impious (4). His very speech testified to his iniquity (5, 6). With something of irony Eliphaz asks upon what Job's claim to superior wisdom rests. Was he the first man (7)? Or had he access to the secret counsel of God (8)? In refusing the counsel of his friends (9, 10), and the consolations of God they had offered (11, R.V.), had he not proved his want of wisdom? He had even proved his folly and his impiety, by attempting to assert his innocence before God (12-14), in whose presence even the heavens were unclean (15, 16). It is clear that Eliphaz and his friends did not believe the sincerity of Job's protestations of innocence.

Eliphaz then attempts to instruct Job (17-35). His theme is almost the same as that of his former speech. It is the righteousness of God as specially manifested in the punishment of the wicked. He claims that his doctrine is that of the wise men (17-19); then proceeds to describe the wicked man as troubled in conscience, and full of fear (20-24); attributes this to his bold impiety (25-28); and predicts his fearful doom (29-35). The application of such teaching to Job must have been very painful. Job's terrible affliction were God's testimony against his sin.

International S.S. Lessons.

Sunday Afternoon, April 13.

THE WIDOW OF NAIN.—LUKE vii. 11-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: VERSE 16.

THE exact site of the city of Nain cannot be determined. "Robinson found a hamlet named Nein to the south-west of Capernaum, at the northern foot of the little Hermon." In this locality, about a day's journey from Capernaum, the little town was situated.

Only Luke narrates this incident. The wonderful works of Jesus were much too numerous for any one evangelist to record (John xx. 30 and xxi. 25). Luke introduced Jesus as the fulfilment of Isa. lxi. 1-3. This manifestation of our Lord's compassion is appropriately recorded by him.

The two processions (11-12).—Note who composed them. In one, the Lord Himself, his disciples, and much people (11). All were following Him. Without Him the multitude, though increased a thousand-fold, can minister no comfort to the sorrowing widow coming out of the city. The other procession follows the victim of the dead (12). It is composed of the sorrowing mother, and "much people" expressing their sympathy with her. A young man dead! We associate strength and vigorous life with young manhood. For the aged and infirm to die seems less startling, but we do not expect to see young men thus laid low. Learn that death is no respecter of age. As leaves may fall even in springtime, as flowers may wither before the bud has opened, so even the young may die. There is a sense in which all are dead until conversion (ix. 60; John v. 25; Eph. ii. 1). True parents sorrow more over children dead in sin, than over those who are laid in the grave. An only son. This makes the sorrow all the heavier. If death must have a victim, why not take one from families where children are many? If difficult for the poor man to spare his one ewe lamb (2 Sam. xii. 2-4), much more difficult was it for this mother to lose her only son. This made Abraham's trial especially severe (Gen. xxii. 2). Does it not help us better to understand God's love to the world (John iii. 16)? A widow. This exonses the heaviest grief. To a widow an only son is especially valuable. She may justly look to him to fill the place of the departed husband. An awfully desolate future seemed to open before this poor woman. With neither husband or son, whence should she get support? Even the presence of "much people" can minister no real comfort to a heart so full of grief.

The meeting of these two processions was not accidental. Jesus would not fail to recognise his Father's hand in it. For what other purpose could the Prince of Life be brought thus into contact with death's victim, if not to display his life-giving power?

The miracle (13-15).—Jesus "saw her." He had then, and has still, a quick eye for discovering those who are in grief. Their cry, even when not addressed intelligently to Him, reaches his ear (Gen. xx. 17; Exod. iii. 7). Near at all times, He is especially near to the broken-hearted (Ps. xxxiv. 18). How often what Jesus saw moved Him to compassion (13). His heart always yearned to relieve the sufferings of others (Matt. ix. 36, xiv. 14). Was it not his compassion that moved Him to come upon his great work? He is "full of compassion." As our great High Priest He can have compassion on the ignorant (Heb. v. 2). We may lay bare our wrong before Him, and be assured that He will not reproach us, but will have compassion. "Weep not" (13). Perhaps many of that company had said the same words to her, but none had wiped her tears away. Only He who atones for sin which causes death, and who has power even over death itself, can really say, "Weep not." Not only in heaven, but here, "He wipes the tear from every eye." He "touched the bier" (14). Not to communicate by the touch any mysterious power, but to arrest the procession to the grave. The bier was a simple plank, with a raised edge. The body, wrapped in a shroud, lay upon it uncovered. The Prince of Life thus stood with death's victim lying helpless before Him. Oh, to bring those who are dead in sin into similar contact with Him! What must be the issue? "He said, Young man," &c. (14). Why speak to the dead? If the tramp of the multitude and the wailing of the mourners have not disturbed Him, why should He hear this quiet word? But this is the word of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life (John xi. 25); the Son of God (John v. 25), who now calls to eternal life all who hear his voice, and who will yet call all from their graves (John v. 28, 29). All will hear the quickening voice of Jesus—either now through the Gospel calling to life, or hereafter calling to judgment. Which shall it be for us?

"He that was dead began to speak" (15).—Proof of life immediately appears. The miracle is not of so doubtful a nature that it needs long investigation to verify it. He was one moment a corpse on his way to the grave, the next was seen to move and heard to speak before the astonished people. Let those who have received spiritual life through the word of Jesus not fail to speak for Him. How differently that procession returned into the city! The son is restored to his mother; her tears are wiped away; death, the great vanquisher of all, has been defeated, all because they have met with Jesus!

The effect (16-18).—"Fear," not in the sense of terror, but of worship and reverence. "Glorified God"—by praising Him, and by recognising in Jesus the visit of God to men (Luke i. 68). The rumour reached not only to all parts of Galilee, but even to "all Judea," and to the lonely John in prison (18).

Letter to the Editor.

UNSECTARIANISM.

SIR,—May I say a few words in reference to the article in your last under the heading "Unsectarianism," signed "George Wainwright"? Especially do I refer to the passage where he says "One of the most important results of their (the Brethren's) movement, is the warning their present divisions give against the idea of securing a manifestation of Christian unity by separation from other believers."

My word is this: The object of the movement was originally not to secure "a manifestation of Christian unity." And the method of the movement was "not separation from other believers." The object was to secure the enjoyment of the fellowship of all true believers upon ground open to and common to them all, whatever their sectarian positions might be.

Separation from the existing sects was not made a condition of such fellowship. The grand and beautiful idea that prompted the movement (however grievously it has been departed from) was that the Christian people in each place should meet in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ for fellowship, with no other bond of union than their common discipleship, and no other qualification than life in Christ.

Is there any good or Scriptural reason why this platform should not now be resorted to by all who, like Mr. Wainwright, desire to give expression to the spirit of unsectarianism?

Let the meetings be held, as at the inception of the movement, at hours other than those at which the several denominations gather, and let the Lord's Supper be the "feast of charity," at which in his promised presence, we, the many, shall have fellowship as one body, by all the common partakers of the one loaf (1 Cor. x. 17, R.V., margin).

That first efforts were marred by the inroad of the old spirit of sect-making, should not discourage us. It will rather serve to mark the place where the ice is thin and "dangerous."

That it will possibly result in some separating themselves from their several "denominations" and assembling themselves only in the name of Christ the centre, need not deter us; provided always that such separation is not to be made a condition of the new fellowship, which would inevitably stamp it with the character of a new sect.

The great aim should be not to manifest anything, but to feel and to do right. Not merely to encourage an unsectarian spirit, but to have true Christian fellowship among those believers who are now divided. For this there must be no disqualifications to those who profess to have life in Christ and to be truly converted to God, except evil walk or the denial of the faith at its foundation.

The idea of "indifference to all form of Church polity," which Dr. Dale has quoted as commending, must be shocking to all who love the revealed will of God, for the Bible is clear upon the subject. But, at the same time, to set about to realise the original Scriptural idea of the Church under present circumstances is, indeed, but vain and presumptuous folly.

There is, nevertheless, a way as happy in its pursuit as it is Scriptural in its conception, open to all who love the Lord, by which, however few their numbers, they may enjoy the presence of Christ among them, and the true communion of the saints. To that platform of unity will the hearts of earnest men and women be more and more drawn, as the evils of Christendom become intensified, if only those who occupy it are kept free from the errors of their predecessors, which, with Mr. Wainwright, we must all most deeply deplore.—Yours truly, J. V. TRIND.

"APOSTOLIC WARFARE."

DEAR SIR,—In your last issue your correspondent "W. F. H.," referring to my letter, inquires: "In what way, except the mere name, does General Booth differ from any large Mission—our esteemed brother Hudson Taylor, for instance?" In reply, may I say that these two eminent servants of Christ are both "brothers beloved"—both zealously seeking the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom; but that their principles of working are essentially different. The China Inland Mission, in which Mr. Hudson Taylor so successfully labours, is, I believe, under the direction of a council or committee, meeting every week for the general management of the Mission, as is the case in most, if not all, other missionary societies: but General Booth has the entire control of the Salvation Army, and is quite independent of a committee of management. This the author of "Apostolic Warfare" made perfectly clear, speaking of General Booth's absolute authority as a very remarkable and distinguishing feature of the movement. Now, the question before us is simply as to the Scriptural warrant for the exercise of this independent authority.

In a former letter it was pointed out that Christ most emphatically commanded his disciples to abstain from appointing a chief, or independent ruler, in his Church; also forbidding the use of titles, such as "Master" or "Rabbi," &c. Christ's word is decisive—"It shall not be so among you"; for He well knew the tremendous evils that would arise in his Church through the exercise of irresponsible power; leading on, as we know, to all the darkness of Rome and all the horrors of the Inquisition.

It is right to ask—especially is it right that the soldiers composing the Salvation Army should ask—"On what Scriptural basis does all this rest?" What does God's Word say about it? There is a zeal which is not founded on God's Word—is not according to knowledge; but is like the house built upon the sand, which, when the storm arose, and beat upon that house, it fell, and great was the fall of it. Bnt "he that is of God heareth God's words." He is subject to his great Captain, and his prayer is ever, "Lord, show me thy way; lead me in thy truth; thy word is truth."

General Booth may be a wise and good ruler; but who shall say what will be the character of his successor! How will he bear his exalted position? How will he use the vast power committed to him? These are questions which should awaken very serious thoughts in the minds of reflecting Christians, and should lead the true friends of the Salvation Army to seek, by every means in their power, to place the present system on a more Scriptural foundation. This would be a work well-pleasing to the Lord, and would meet with an abundant reward. Yours in Him, J. G.

FRIEDENHEIM.—The Home of Peace, 133, Mildmay-road, N., continues to be a veritable house of mercy. Twelve patients died during the year, their last days being spent in restful surroundings. Miss Davidson writes in the report:—"The growth in grace as they neared the end has been very observable in all those who have been in the Home, making one thankful to be permitted to surround them with Christian influences, the very texts on the walls seeming to speak to their hearts as they lay days and nights in pain, and weariness, and weakness."

THE PEACE SOCIETY.—The Committee of the Peace Society, 47, New Broad-street, E.C., have addressed a memorial to the International Conference at Berlin on the Labour Question, inviting their consideration of the injurious influences of the great armaments of Europe upon the working classes in particular, and suggesting the special relief to those classes which would be secured by a mutual disarmament. Mr. William Evans Darby, the secretary of the Peace Society, has left for Berlin in order personally to promote a favourable reception of this memorial, and also with a view to interest influential persons in Germany in the great questions of Peace and Arbitration

Information has been received in London which leaves no doubt of the extent of the horrible traffic described as "the Madras slave trade," the existence of which has hitherto been only suspected. Evidence is given to show that at Rangoon the importation and selling of girls go on systematically. The facts have been sent to more than one member of Parliament.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Canon Saumarez Smith has been finally elected Bishop of Sydney and Primate of Australia. Dr. Smith for twenty years has been Principal of St. Aidan's College, Birkenhead.

A new church at Dunton-green, near Sevenoaks, Kent, was opened last week. The church holds about 250 persons, and has been built for the accommodation of a working population that has sprung up since the construction of the railway from Dunton-green to Westerham.

Rev. Alfred Robert Tucker, the new Bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa, hopes to start for his diocese on April 25, and expects to reach Mombassa on May 17. He will stay but a short time on the coast before starting up country for Uganda, where, especially in view of recent events, he is anxious to be as soon as possible.

The authorities of the Church Army have decided to train and send forth a certain number of well tested young men as colporteurs. Gentlemen or ladies willing to act as local superintendents are invited to correspond with the hon. sec., 130, Edgware-road, London, W., to whom young men wishing to offer themselves for such work should write.

An anonymous friend of the Church Missionary Society has promised, as a substitute for personal service, a subscription of £1000 a year for ten years. An "In Memoriam" benefaction of £1000 has also been received from "a member of the congregation of St. Paul's, Onslow-square." This sum is to be devoted to the development of the Victoria Nyanza Mission.

An interesting missionary week, in connection with the C.M.S., was recently held at Walthamstow and Leyton, under the auspices of Rev. H. E. Noyes, vicar of St. Stephen's, Walthamstow, and Mr. Eliot Howard, J.P. There were daily services and meetings of all kinds, and a loan exhibition. The chief speakers were Revs. J. B. Whiting and G. Ensor; and Revs. J. Bates (China), H. P. Grubb, and R. A. Pelly, Mr. Eugene Stock, and others also took part. There were large attendances at most of the meetings, and about 3000 persons were reached altogether.

METHODIST.

A travelling car is being constructed for use in connection with the Free Methodist evangelistic movement. It will accommodate two men, and will carry a good stock of books, the sale of which it is hoped will defray the current expenses.

Rev. T. Champness has delivered a series of Gospel addresses in the Secular Hall, Rochdale, during the winter months. In bringing the series to a close, he announced that a gentleman had offered £500 to enable him to secure a meeting-place more in the centre of the town when the addresses are recommenced next winter.

A new Primitive Methodist Chapel in King-street, Camden Town, N.W., was recently opened, the inaugural sermons being preached by Rev. John McNeill, of Regent-square Church. The new chapel is a substantial building, seated for 830 people, the cost, including site, being £5360. It is provided with a lecture hall and several class-rooms.

BAPTIST.

Rev. W. Barker has resigned the pastorate of Wellington-square Church, Hastings, after a ministry of twenty-six years.

Having been asked to assist in a Baptist "pioneer movement" to embrace the whole of England, Rev. Geo. Goodchild will resign the pastorate of the Pole-street Baptist Church, Preston, in June next.

Rev. W. H. Burton, the pastor of Dalston Junction Chapel, and formerly pastor of Kingsgate-street Chapel, Holborn, died on Thursday last week at his residence, Stoke Newington, after a long illness. He studied for the ministry in Mr. Spurgeon's Pastors' College.

Rev. J. S. Morris has relinquished the pastorate of the Baptist Church at Leyton, to enter upon a sphere of work at Harley House, Bow, E. (Dr. Grattan Guinness's missionary institution). He is to be theological lecturer in the College, superintendent of the evangelistic work carried on in connection with the institution, and pastor of the church at Berger Hall.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Henry Barron, late of Batley, has entered upon the pastorate of Hanover Chapel, Peckham, in succession to Rev. G. Buchanan Ryley. At the Sunday morning service, Mr. Barron has introduced a special children's hymn and a short address to the young.

A new Ragged School and Lads' Club, in connection with Richmond Chapel, Salford, has been opened. The school was started by Mr. John Lee twenty-two years ago, in an old mill. The Lads' Club began with one class of nineteen boys, held on one evening a week; it has now an average attendance of 230 on three evenings weekly.

Rev. J. Haigh, in the presidential address to the Sheffield Congregational Association, said the want of the time was a high-toned, earnest, consistent life throughout the churches. A pious sentiment or a sentimental piety would not do the work of piety. By running in the ruts a man's conscience was satisfied, or at least appeased; but that which was most visible was a famine of grand results.

SALVATION ARMY.

A notable feature of the programme of the Salvation Army in Bombay is the work done by the "Prison-gate Brigade" in rescuing and reforming discharged prisoners whom they meet at the gaol gates. To carry out the work to greater advantage, it is desired to purchase or build a permanent home in the neighbourhood of the prisons.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Alex. Lee, of Nairn, N.B., will preach at Regent-square Church next Lord's Day morning and evening; he will also preach, in Gaelic, in the afternoon at Whitefield Church, Drury-lane.

At the last meeting of the Birmingham Presbytery a conference was held on the spiritual state of the work of the church. Several speakers testified that much earnest work is being done, that many tokens of the Divine presence have been given during the past year, but that on the whole the ingathering has been comparatively small.

The Synod of the Presbyterian Church of England meets this year in St. George's Church, Myrtle-street, Liverpool, on Monday evening, April 28. The Moderator elect is Rev. John Thompson, of Newcastle. On Tuesday evening, April 29, in the same place, the annual missionary meeting will be held, when several missionaries will address the meeting. The meetings of Synod last for five days.

Rev. Theo. Meyer, the superintendent of the English Presbyterian Church's work amongst Jews in London, reports that during the past year there have been sixty-two inquirers at the mission in Whitechapel, of whom sixteen have been baptized, and four still remain under instruction. In addition to these four, seven new applications for instruction have been received, four of them with a view to baptism. An interesting and encouraging report is also given of the work of the mission in Rabat, Morocco.

The office-bearers and Christian workers connected with the Free Church, Nairn, recently invited to a conference on religion and morals all their fellow-workers in the country round. Over two hundred assembled. The subjects discussed were Sabbath-schools and the youth of the Church, temperance, parental control and family worship, and Christian literature. Rev. W. Ross, of Cowcaddens, Glasgow, concluded the meeting by an address on Consecration.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Dr. Walsh, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, has inaugurated a vigorous crusade against drink.

The family of the Presbyterian Orphan Society has been increased by the addition of 193 children to its roll of membership.

The well-known Christian Jew, Dr. Rossvally, is in Ireland at present. He last week delivered to large audiences in Lisburn addresses explanatory of Bible customs; this week he is in Banbridge.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At York, Rev. Canon Atkinson, for some years rector of Fakenham, Norfolk.—Rev. Dr. Edgar, parish minister of Mauchline, Ayrshire.—Rev. James F. Broughton, Wesleyan minister at Manningham, Bradford.—Rev. G. B. Kidd, of Welton, near Brough, Yorks, for over sixty years in the Congregational ministry.—Rev. Dr. Maclaren, parish of Houston, N.B.—Rev. J. B. West, retired Wesleyan minister, Devonport.—Rev. Peter Thomson, minister of Crawfordsburn Free Church, Greenock.—Rev. James Milroy, senior pastor of the Established Church, Dreghorn, Ayrshire. — Captain Henry J. Ward, of Neston, Cheshire, the friend of religious and philanthropic effort far and near, but especially at Liverpool.—Mr. Isaac Whitwell, of Ivy Garth, Kendal. — At Bournemouth West, on Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Porter, widow of the late Rev. J. Porter, of the London Missionary Society.

Appeals.

Mr. Duncan Robertson, Pitcairn-green, Perth, N.B., asks for books or magazines for a ploughmen's lending library in that district.

Anti-Infidel Tract Enterprise.—During the recent National Congress at Bombay Rev. A. W. Prautch and others distributed large quantities of Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh's anti-infidel tracts among the English-speaking natives. For many years past Mr. Bradlaugh's anti-infidel literature has been widely circulated in the Indian Empire, and the consequence is that every mail brings some pressing appeal for free grants. These, however, must stand over for the present, as the enterprise for the year 1889 is more than £100 in debt. Contributions sent to Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, 70, King's Cross-road, London, W.C., will be gladly acknowledged.

LUTHERANS IN THE BALTIC PROVINCES.—Rev. J. D. Kilburn writes in Evangelical Christendom:—"Though a change in some respects seems now to be passing over the Baltic Provinces, there remains very much that saddens and grieves one there. It is surprising to see the suspicion with which some in high positions appear to have regarded the Lutheran pastors. Interested people, to gain their own ends and accomplish their own purposes, have sought to spread the report that they were not so loyal as they ought to be. This has been far too readily believed by some. Careful and searching inquiry would show how utterly unfounded it is. There is no class of men in Russia whose teachings and influence tend to make more loyal and more useful subjects than do those of the Lutheran pastors of the Baltic Provinces."

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

The Irish Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most desirable that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

MRS. HILTON'S CRECHE.—To augment the funds of Mrs. Hilton's Institutions, which have been somewhat depressed of late, a three days' sale of useful and ornamental goods was held at the Friends' Meeting House, Brook-street, Ratcliff. The sweet voices of the children, and pieces performed on the piano by some young ladies, enlivened the proceedings during the three days, and we understand that the results of the sale have been pretty satisfactory.—Eastern Post.

HAM YARD SOUP KITCHEN AND HOSPICE.—This well-known West-end charity is situate in Great Windmill-street, St. James's. During last year 4459 nights' lodgings, with suppers and breakfasts, were given to the destitute. The inmates of the Hospice came from almost all counties of the United Kingdom, and many from other parts of the world. The system of relief by recommendation and registration continues to work well. Some 3150 families were registered last year, chiefly for a month each, and 163,571 meals were given away. The superintendent of the institution is Mr. W. Stevens.

NATIONAL PROTESTANT CONGRESS. — A project is on foot for calling together a "National Protestant Congress," which is proposed to take the form of an annual meeting of orthodox Protestants of all denominations, differing so far from the Churchmen's Protestant Alliance, which is limited to the Church of England. There is, says Evangelical Christendom, certainly great need for more co-operation on subjects relating to our common faith between true-hearted Christian Churchmen and Nonconformists, and we welcome every effort to draw them more together, especially on the ground of an united opposition to the alarming advances of Romanism in our land. It is to be feared, however, that such a movement may fall short of the somewhat pretentious title of a "National Protestant Congress," and so tend rather to expose the weakness of the Protestant cause than to advance its interests. It certainly will need to be wisely inaugurated, and to be largely accepted by representative men of all churches, before it can at all answer to its title.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, MARCH 31, 1890.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY, since this work began, 21,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual severity, arising from the recent Dock Labourers' Strike and other causes; and from present appearances an unusually severe season is most certainly apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the Secretary; or Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by the Editors of "The Christian."

SUITABLE FOR

BIBLE READINGS AND GOSPEL ADDRESSES.

By CHARLES INGLIS,

EVANGELIST.

Price 2s. Cloth, bevelled boards.

"If Mr. Inglis has in reserve more of these helpful PEGS and POINTS he would do well to bring them forth for the use of others. Preachers and teachers everywhere will find in this little book a store of suggestive thought in searching out the treasures of the Word of God."—Word and Work.

"Mr. Inglis has had long experience in the work of evangelising, and here, with consideration for his less furnished brethren, he opens his portfolio for their benefit."—Footsteps of Truth.

"Most of the reading will be found suggestive and helpful. Many a worker will have reason to thank Mr. Inglis for the issue of this book."—The Christian.

Scripture Readers' Society FOR IRELAND.

INSTITUTED 1822.

Funds greatly needed to extend the Itinerant work.

The Scripture Readers are placed under carefully selected Superintendents, and not only located in Towns and Cities, but also sent into remote districts where they are generally well received by all denominations.

Irish speaking Readers are sent where required. Sailors in Seaports are visited, and Bethel Services held.

The work is carried on in a spirit of love and not of controversy.

Reports and all particulars sent post free on application to Captain James Kearney White, Secretary, Offices, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin, and 9, Paternoster-row, London.

Donations may be sent to the above addresses, or will be received by the Proprietors of The Christian.

Please notice exact title of Society as above.

And all Booksellers.

WORKS ON THE TABERNACLE.

THE TABERNACLE, THE PRIESTHOOD, and the OFFERINGS,

WITH THE SPIRITUAL LESSONS DERIVED FROM THE RITUAL AND CEREMONIES OF THE OLD DISPENSATION.

By HENRY W. SOLTAU,

Author of "The Holy Vessels of the Tabernacle," &c.

Cloth, 5s.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 6s.

WITH FOUR BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED ILLUSTRATIONS, AND NUMEROUS SMALLER ENGRAVINGS.

Cheap Edition: Tinted covers (without coloured plates), 3s.

THE CHRISTIAN PROGRESS says:—

"A most minute inquiry into the deep significance of the Tabernacle, its Priesthood, and Offerings. It will be a most helpful guide to the student of these subjects, and lets in a flood of Gospel light upon the old dispensation. It is also a Marvellous Volume of scriptural exposition; and all who study it will find much to learn in its pages."

FOOTSTEPS OF TRUTH says:—

"We heartily commend this work to all students of the Bible; and especially to young Christians. Its teaching is calculated to root and ground them in the faith."

THE TABERNACLE AND THE TEMPLE,

THEIR SYMBOLIC TEACHING AND SPIRITUAL IMPORT.

By ARABELLA E. WEBB.

Tinted covers, 6d.; Cloth boards, 1s.

WORD AND WORK says:—

"Bible class teachers and students will find this little catechism helpful and suggestive."

THE IRISH BAPTIST MAGAZINE says:—

"Intelligently and lucidly written, and manifests much careful study of the Scriptures."

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MOSES:

AS SEEN IN THE TABERNACLE AND ITS VARIOUS SERVICES.

By REV. G. RODGERS.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.;

WITH FRONTISPIECE AND NUMEROUS SMALLER ENGRAVINGS.

Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s.

THE BRIGHOUSE NEWS says:—

"This volume is a beautiful, charming, and able exposition of the ceremonial economy of the Hebrews. Priests, sacrifices, tabernacle, are all made to tell their doctrinal and symbolical significance. . . . . A pleasant and profitable exposition of a very important part of God's Word."

THE CHRISTIAN says:—

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."

THE GOSPEL IN LEVITICUS.

TYPES AND FORESHADOWINGS OF THE GREAT REDEMPTION.

By REV. JAMES FLEMING, D.D.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

WITH FRONTISPIECE ILLUSTRATION OF THE TABERNACLE.

THE PRIMITIVE METHODIST MAGAZINE says:—

"The author interprets the book from the standpoint of the New Testament, and finds it full of Gospel truths. The style is simple, clear, and Scriptural. The lessons are pointed, and enforced with great earnestness and tenderness; and the spirit breathing through the book is that of one earnestly desiring the salvation of his readers."

THE BAPTIST MAGAZINE says:—

"This book is fitted to be eminently useful as a plain and faithful commendation of the work of Christ as foreshadowed in the Mosaic types."

JOHN WESLEY:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By JOHN W. KIRTON, LL.D.

WITH PORTRAIT

Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 6d.

Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"It is wonderfully complete; pleasant to read; and leaves a most delightful satisfaction in the mind. We most heartily commend it. A copy should be in every home. The publishers and author deserve universal thanks for placing within the reach of every one such a gem of a book."

The Irish Christian Advocate.

Scriptural Holiness not Sinless Perfection.

By Rev. CHARLES GRAHAM.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"We are glad to see that Mr. Graham does not come forward as an advocate of what is called 'sinless perfection;' and his arguments in favour of striving towards the attainment of a higher life than any of us live are sound and Scriptural."—The Rock.

"His treatment is simple and Scriptural, and not the least satisfactory point in his argument is his refutation of the idea of 'sinless perfection' from the writings of that very apostle who is supposed by some people to teach it."—The Baptist.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By J. R. ANDREWS.

Cheap Edition: Tinted Covers, 6d. WITH PORTRAIT

Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"We cannot imagine a better sixpennyworth of human authorship. Oh that every minister in the three kingdoms possessed this 'Life of Whitefield,' and would read it through. Why, it would set the Church in a blaze."

(THIRTY-THIRD SERIES.)

THE PREVAILING EPIDEMIC—INTERESTING LETTER from a WELL-KNOWN WESLEYAN MINISTER.

The following letter has just been received by Mr. G. T. CONGREVE:—

"Wesley Manse, Appleby, Westmoreland, Feb. 7, 1890. To Geo. Thos. Congreve, Esq.—Dear Sir,—Having received your 'Biographical Sketch'* to-day, I am moved to give further evidence of the efficacy of your marvellous medicine, in addition to that which I gave you when at Ebbw Vale, and which appears in the sketch." "My wife suffered severely from asthma, the result of a bad cold. She could not lie in bed, nor walk any distance without much distrsss. Two small bottles of your medicine not only relieved her, but restored her to her usual health.

I myself had an attack of influenza; a few doses of your medicine softened and checked it. Before I was half way through a second size bottle of your medicine, I am thankful to say, I was as well as ever, and without the effects of weakness and prostration that others have experienced as the result of the epidemic.

My wife, like myself, everywhere recommends your treatment, and prays God that you may be long spared to serve your generation." (Rev.) J. HARRIES.

* (It must be mentioned here that a capital "Biographical Sketch" of Mr. Congreve has been recently published, with portrait and picture of the Church buildings, &c., at Brighton, in which Mr. C. has been deeply concerned. The sketch is by the late Editor of "Sunday Words," and will be sent, post free, to any friend who may wish for it, and who will write to Mr. G. T. Congreve, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, London, S.E.)

John, Whom Jesus Loved.

A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY, AND INFLUENCE OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Views.

Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."—The Sword and Trowel.

"Behold, I stand at the Door, and knock."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.
Superior Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"This very handsome volume on a subject of perpetual importance will be welcomed, especially by those who are acquainted with Dr. Culross's other excellent works. Dr. Culross has here pre-eminently exhibited his usual excellence as a religious writer. Clear in style and eloquent in argument, striking in illustration. Never wordy or tedious, never flat or cold, but always exhibiting great Christian affection, with the obvious sense of the fidelity his subject so solemnly demands. We are sure this work will be useful wherever it is read."
Baptist Messenger.

"Thy First Love."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT EPHESUS.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.;
Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. Because we may honestly use them in this case, we heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."—The Sunday School Chronicle.

THE LARGE TYPE MISSION HYMN BOOK.

CONTAINING 100 SELECTED HYMNS IN BOLD TYPE.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

YIELD not to temptation, for yielding is sin,
Each victory will help you some other to win;
Fight manfully onward, dark passions subdue,
Look ever to Jesus, He 'll carry you through.

Ask the Saviour to help you, comfort, strengthen, and keep you;
He is willing to aid you, He will carry you through.

THE ROCK says:—
"Hymns printed in large type on good paper are a great comfort to those who have not good eyesight. In fact, the book provides one hundred STIRRING MISSION HYMNS at the cost of ONE PENNY, printed so that everybody can read them."

THE ROCHESTER DIOCESAN CHRONICLE says:—
"The LARGE TYPE MISSION HYMN BOOK consists of one hundred selected hymns for use at Special Missions, and also at ordinary services in mission rooms."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of Signor Luigi Capellini, of the Italian Military Church, Rome.

The Bishop of Peterborough took occasion a few days ago to condemn the insurance of children's lives as one of the worst evils of the present day, and he alleged that the crimes resulting from the practice were simply appalling. We have frequently in these columns called attention to what we believe to be the radical defects of the system, and it is to be hoped that by and by the matter will be deemed of sufficient importance to entitle it to the attention of Parliament. To utterly sweep away the "burial societies" of our large manufacturing towns would create much misery, but it is very evident that those which trade largely in the direction of infant life insurance certainly ought to be repressed, in the interests of public morality.

The report of the Commissioners on Welsh Sunday Closing has now reached Parliament, and it is gratifying to note that it is pre-eminently disappointing to the publicans and their supporters, who were looking forward to a recommendation in favour of the repeal of the Sunday Closing Act. The Commissioners allege that in temperate districts the measure has had a great effect in still further diminishing drinking, but that in other localities, where it has been evaded, it has not had a good effect. This, however, it would seem from further remarks, might be overcome and reversed by more stringent action on the part of the police. Among other suggestions of more or less value, it is recommended that a record should be kept of each Sunday customer.

At a recent meeting of "sweaters' victims," held in the East-end of London, the chairman commented severely upon the fact that a House of Lords committee upon the sweating system had been sitting, and had put and received answers to no fewer than 32,476 questions; yet matters were just as they were before; although in July, 1888, the committee had reported that the evidence then taken indicated sufficiently the existence of great evils in connection with the sweating system. It is much to be regretted that our legislators cannot find time in which to deal with such pressing questions as these, and it leaves room for the fear that our growing national wealth is dulling the sense of those who ought to be most keenly alive to the wants and needs of the struggling and starving poor.

A Bill has lately been introduced into Parliament which proposes numerous and important alterations in the present Poor Laws. Special provision is made for certain aged and deserving poor of good character who have been rendered destitute through ill-health, accident, misfortune, or some other cause not being their own fault. These it is proposed to term "State Pensioners," and they (together with their wives and children, if advisable) are, at the discretion of the guardians, to be allowed either out-door relief or accommodation in the workhouse. In the latter case, however, they are to be kept separate from the paupers. Such a provision is a most desirable one. Under the present system the destitution produced by idleness, drunkenness, and vice is relieved at an immense cost to the country, while the really deserving poor are neglected, or left to precarious private charity.

Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, again makes an earnest appeal in the daily press on behalf of the gipsy and van children in whose cause he has laboured so long and so unselfishly. He say, after describing some scenes which he has recently witnessed:—

> If Parliament only knew a tithe of the evils of our present gipsy and van child-life, that is to say, the unsanitary condition of their wretched homes and surroundings, their shockingly ignorant and neglected state, with other evils that follow in their train, one moment would not be lost in passing the Movable Dwellings Bill...Driving the gipsies about the country with a policeman's truncheon and a "move on" will not improve their condition. The only lines on which our present-day gipsies and van-dwellers can be improved and their children lifted upwards and forwards are laid down in this Bill.

There is practically no opposition in the House of Commons to this simple measure for these children's relief; its principles have been already approved of, and the preliminary expenses are absolutely paltry, when compared with the immense sums often voted away in a few moments; but it has hitherto always been swamped by the flood of useless talk on other matters. Will no Christian or philanthropist at St. Stephen's make it his business to pilot this modest, but sorely needed, Bill safely into port?

In a recent number of The Forum, a leading American magazine, an able writer, Mr. H. C. Lea, discusses the important problem of the relations between the Roman Church and the American Republic, finding a grave element of danger in the fact that the Roman Catholic Church is not either independent or American, but is foreign. The Republican idea, of course, is that, as under the American Constitution the State resigns all control over religion, there should be no attempt on the part of Rome to control the State. Instances of contrary action on the part of the Pope are, however, not difficult to find in recent American national records; and in that fact, and in its counterpart that Rome is persistently endeavouring to lead the Government to send a minister to the Vatican, Mr. Lea finds something very threatening, which must result either in a new declaration of independence, or in the formation in America of a Church of Old Catholics.

Wherever Rome gains a footing, she takes into the civil life, not peace, but a sword, and Papal autocracy in America is only a part of that system which in this country endeavoured to enslave the bodies as well as the souls of the race; and failed, as doubtless by and by the attempt will be declared a failure, in that great Continent to which our Puritan fathers voyaged in search of liberty.

The Catholic Review, an influential American Romanist publication, says:—

> One of the curious facts about the ordinary Catholic, whether cultivated or not, is his inability to pray. He may be able to read the Prayer-book through, but the idea of making prayer the expression of his feelings and his convictions, the means of union with God, seems foreign to nine persons out of ten. The cause, of course, lies in the training of the young. Even in our academies and colleges the teaching how to pray in its best sense is very rare.

This is indeed a remarkable utterance, and it is one which is not unlikely to bring down reproof upon the writer and upon the journal which has ventured to publish it. The doctrine of union with God, without the mediation of half a score saints, would not fit in with modern Roman theology.

One of the weekly chroniclers of Le Temps has lately contributed to that paper some painful particulars respecting the alarming progress of alcoholism among the young in Paris. The head doctor of the Infirmary for Deranged Patients states that the number of these has increased thirty per cent. between the years 1872 and 1888, "alcoholic dementia" being twice as frequent now as it was fifteen years ago. The result is to be seen in the records of crime: murders and murderous assaults are largely on the increase, the benches of the police and assize courts being filled with criminals yet in their teens. None of the plans, however, which have hitherto been proposed are at all adequate to remedy the evil. Last year's Alcoholic Congress at Paris passed a resolution that prison-hospitals should be established for inebriates, but this is locking the stable door when the steed has been stolen. It is now suggested that there should be a more rigid inspection of public-houses and the granting of licences. Some much more drastic measure than this, however, will be required to check the free trade in drink which is now bearing such terrible fruit in France.

Some little time ago we had occasion to comment upon the development in French society of a wretched habit of indulgence in an opiate drug, and it is very painful to find a Belfast physician stating in the columns of an Irish contemporary that a similar widespread practice "is filling some of the northern asylums very fast, and that there are probably more asylums for the special care of those put mad by these drugs than there are for the victims of alcohol." The matter is a difficult one to deal with; but, as there is room to suppose that in only too many instances the habit takes its rise in the medical prescription of such drugs, there would seem to be a claim upon all Christian medical men to exercise more than the usual caution in the selection of their palliatives and remedies.

It is to be hoped that one result of the Berlin Labour Conference will be in the direction of making Sunday a day of rest to thousands upon thousands of workpeople upon the Continent of Europe, to whom it is now only a seventh day of toil. Even if nothing else were gained than this, the Conference would have achieved a great work, but it is evident that many other important results will be the outcome of the gathering, especially in regard to limitations as to the labour of children and women and girls. Indirectly, as Mr. George Howell has wisely remarked, the very bringing together of the delegates must advance the interests of peace, by showing how the interests of the people in the various countries are bound up together.

Events are moving rapidly in Germany under the personal régime of the young Emperor. He has dispensed with the services of the iron chancellor, Prince Bismarck, apparently with a light heart, and has surrounded himself with a set of new, and presumably more pliant, counsellors and administrators. In the case of some men such a step would mean a fresh departure in high-handed absolutism, but the Emperor's well-ascertained sympathies with popular freedom remove all fear of such a result in Germany. M. Jules Simon, one of the French delegates to the Labour Conference at Berlin, has expressed the strong opinion that the young Emperor's heart is too much set on internal reforms to admit the possibility of warlike ideas.

This is an encouraging fact for the prospects of peace in Europe; but not the only one. We pass by as unlikely the rumour that William III. is to propose to the European Powers a scheme of general disarmament; at the same time no living potentate could undertake that task with better chances of a success that would enshrine his name within the heart and memory of the entire Christian world. The Emperor, however, is evidently desirous of obtaining some modus vivendi between his own and the French nations, and the favourable impression he has made on Jules Simon will help to awaken reciprocal feelings among the Gallic race. If the ghost of the standing feud between France and Germany were laid, a prolonged European peace might reasonably be looked upon as certain. All true disciples of the Prince of Peace will pray that this may be brought about.

In the Russian Empire there are no such hopeful signs. Recent intelligence from St. Petersburg reveals a plot to kill the Czar, and announces that he had suddenly been taken ill. Meanwhile, the disaffection among students is on the increase. Some of them are reported to have said, in reply to remonstrances from one of their Professors:—

> They had gone too far to turn back, and now they would continue the agitation until something came of it, good or bad. They had sent delegates to other Universities, which would doubtless make common cause with them. They are indignant with the Government for encouraging drunkenness, gambling, debauchery, and other personal and social vices, merely in order to wean them from the consideration and discussion of political questions. In like manner they complain that the scientific teaching is sacrificed to political expediency, and that a graduate, after four or five years of so-called "study," has no more real knowledge than a "freshman;" and is generally wholly demoralised by the system of espionage, false witnessing, and administrative punishment. Moreover, it is impossible to study calmly and profitably while helpless women are being flogged to death in Siberia, and unoffending Jews throughout the country treated like condemned felons.

The Czar is no doubt the inheritor of a pernicious bureaucratic system of rule, but it would be better for him to imitate his German ally than to court revolution.

It is stated that the Russian Government, influenced by the feeling which has been expressed in regard to the recent atrocities in Siberia, have requested Colonel Heath, a distinguished American writer, to accompany the Grand Duke to Siberia, to visit the prisons. This is better than nothing, as it shows that the Russian Government are not insensible to public opinion; though they seem to be largely oblivious of the ordinary promptings of humanity. We should much prefer to find the Government taking active measures to prevent similar atrocities to those which have shocked the civilised world.

Few writers have done more to direct popular attention towards the horrors of exile in Russia than "Stepniak," whose volumes upon Russian questions have from time to time stirred public indignation. Those who are interested in recent discussion concerning Russian cruelty will find in a paper in the current number of The New Review, under the heading of "Exiled to the Arctic Zone," revelations of exile life in Northern Siberia which, if possible, exceed in interest and painfulness almost everything of the kind that has previously appeared in print. Into the district described the American traveller, Mr. Kennan, did not penetrate, or probably his terrible narratives would have been still more intensely painful.

The writings of those who profess to expound Theosophy are, as a rule, so exceedingly vague that they generally leave the reader more ignorant of the subject than they found him. It is, therefore, quite refreshing to find, in a recently published "Key to Theosophy," what professes to be "a clear exposition, in the form of question and answer," of the ethics, science, and philosophy for the study of which the Theosophical Society has been founded. The writer of this handbook deserves thanks for unveiling the unbelief which lies at the root of Theosophy as shown in the following extract:

> Inquirer.—Do you believe in a God?
> Theosophist.—That depends upon what you mean by the term.
> Inq.—I mean the God of the Christians, the Father of Jesus, and the Creator, the Biblical God of Moses in fact.
> Theo.—In such a God we do not believe...The God of Theology, we say—and we prove it—is a bundle of contradictions, and a logical impossibility. Therefore we will have nothing to do with Him.

This is clear enough to satisfy those who have been deluded into some sort of interest in and sympathy with Theosophy by the very vagueness of its professions and pretensions. Speaking of vagueness, what shall be made of the following?—

> Whatever the sin and dire results of the original Karmic transgression of the now incarnated Egos, no man (or the outer material and periodical form of the spiritual entity) can be held with any degree of justice responsible for his birth.

Dr. Lyman Beecher used to protest vehemently against the custom of leaving the training of young men for the Christian ministry in the hands of professors who had neither been successful preachers, nor had experience of the cares and responsibilities of the pastoral office. The New College Committee, Edinburgh, now appear to have realised this. The Professor of Pastoral Theology has invited ministers of standing to address fourth-year students in his classroom. Drs. Walter Smith, J. H. Wilson, and Alexander Whyte, with Mr. Martin, of Morningside, have given addresses on preaching as a method of turning men to the Lord, on the demand for sympathetic prayer, and on modes of effectual dealing with the young. The experiment has been remarkably successful. Surely it ought not to be an exceptional experiment.

Doubtless there are educated young persons who read Mrs. Ward and Matthew Arnold, and are strong in their prejudices against evangelical religion. They have no heart for it, and there have always been such. But let any man go to churches and chapels where evangelical truth is plainly, earnestly, and prayerfully preached; or to meetings where there are Gospel addresses of the most pronounced character; or to associations of young men and women which are unambiguously Christian; and he will find there educated young persons in large numbers who are in touch with Christ and with all that is decided in power upon the lives of men. Nothing so much awakens the attachment of the very best young men in English cities as the Gospel their fathers loved. 1 Cor. i. 20-25 will still justify itself to those who go with its inspiration to meet the requirements of the times.

MAJOR WHITTLE AT BERMONDSEY.

Six years ago this greatly honoured evangelist conducted a never-to-be-forgotten mission in this densely populated district. At that time he was accompanied by his faithful fellow-labourers, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, and assisted by Dr. Moxey, of Edinburgh, and Mr. Thorne. The meetings were held in the Bermondsey Town Hall, and that immense auditorium was crowded night after night. The Gospel was so preached and read and sung that the Holy Spirit used the human instruments, and great was the company of those who believed.

The Messrs. Stone, of Peak, Frean & Co., were the Lord's stewards at that time, and on the present occasion they were again active in the work. As in the former mission, Easter was the time selected, and once more Dr. Moxey was associated with his much-loved friend, while Miss Whittle took the place of Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan. The meetings commenced on Tuesday, and were continued nightly. On Good Friday there were three meetings, one for children.

All were well attended, and some were crowded; but the Major's last meeting on Friday night was filled to overflowing, and the address was one never to be forgotten. The text was, "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into thy kingdom," and our blessed Redeemer was so lifted up that in the after-meeting about fifty souls professed to have found rest in Him.

The Major and his family left for Paris on Saturday morning, and Dr. Moxey continued the mission on Saturday night at Rouel-road Chapel, and on Sunday in Bermondsey Town Hall and Haddon Hall.

The closing meetings were held on Easter Monday in the form of a great open-air gathering in the afternoon in Southwark Park, the final meeting being in Rouel-road Chapel in the evening. Dr. Moxey, and some of the band of earnest ministers of Bermondsey, addressed the meeting; and thus came to a close a short mission, but one whose blissful issue only eternity will reveal. The earnest co-operation of the ministers in the three daily prayer-meetings and at all the services, and the invaluable support of the large choir, under its excellent leader and his wife, greatly aided the labours of the evangelists.

CARE, AND WHAT TO DO WITH IT.

1 Peter v. 7.

Every word of this precious verse is golden. And the fact of its standing here as a Divine command is a proof, not only of what is possible for us to do, but of what God is prepared to enable us to do. His commands are enablings, his words are power-words, his light is life. If only you are willing to live this glad, free, uncareful life, and dare to step out on the waves of his carefulness, you will find that, with the resolve to obey, there will come from Him the wondrous power that makes obedience possible.

And it is in the highest degree necessary to obey this precept. So only can we be peaceful and strong. We cannot stand the strain of work and worry both. Two things come between our souls and unshadowed fellowship with God, sin and care. And we must be as resolute to cast our care on the Lord as to confess our sins to Him, if we would walk in the light as He is in the light. One whelping dog may break our slumber on the stillest night. One drop of water may spread into the impalpable mist that hides the fairest landscape. One care may break our peace and hide the face of God, and bring a funeral pall over our souls. We must cast all our care on Him, if we would know the blessedness of unshadowed fellowship.

But, besides the blessedness we lose in giving way to care, we must remember that such behaviour sorely grieves and dishonours God. It grieves Him, as love must grieve when suspected of insincerity. But it also sorely dishonours Him. We judge a parent by the report given of him in the words and behaviour of his children. If they seem half-starved and miserable, or look wistfully to us for a dole of help, or complain bitterly of the hardships of their lot, we conclude, however wealthy he may be in his income, or munificent in his gifts, yet that he is hard and cruel, and we withdraw from him as far as possible. So, if the world judges of God by the looks and words of many of his professed children, is it wonderful that it is less attracted than repelled? Either there is no God, or He is powerless to help, or He does not really love, or He is careless of the needs of his children—such must be the reflections of many, as they look on the weary, careworn, anxious faces of God's professed people, and remark in them the same long deeply ploughed furrows as the years have made for themselves.

We are either libels or Bibles; either harbour-lights or warning signals; either attractions or detractors; and which we shall be depends very much on what we do with care.

Of course there must ever be the discipline and chastisement of life. Our Father deals with us as with sons; and what son is he whom the Father chasteneth not? And these strokes of his rod, these cups mingled by his hand, must be bitter to the flesh. But all this is very different from care. There may be pain, but no doubt of the Father's love, no worry about the issues, no foreboding as to the long future, which to the eye of faith shines like the horizon-rim of the sea on which the sun is shining in its utmost splendour, while dark clouds brood overhead.

Care, according to the Greek word, is that which divides and distracts the soul, which diverts us from present duty to weary calculations of how to meet conditions which may never arrive. Fret; worry; anxiety; the habit of anticipating evil; crossing bridges before we reach them; the permission of foreboding fears about the future; all that attitude of mind which broods over the mistakes of the past and dwells on the shadows which coming events may cast, rather than on the love and will of God—this is care.

I. Our Treatment of Care.—Casting all your care upon Him.—The Greek verb indicates not that we must keep doing it, but do it once for all.

Who does not know what it is to awake in the morning with a sense of heaviness and depression, and, before one is well aroused, to be conscious of a voice whispering a long tale of burdens to be carried, and difficulties to be met, as the hours pass on.

"Ah," says the voice, "a miserable day will this be."

"How so?" we inquire, fearfully.

"Remember, there is that creditor to meet, that skein to disentangle, that irritation to soothe, those violent tempers to confront. It is no use praying, better linger longer where you are, and drag through the day as you may. You are like a victim in the tumbril going to be guillotined."

And too often we have yielded to the suggestion. If we have prayed, it has been in a kind of hopeless way, asking God to help, but not daring to think He would. There has been no assurance, no confidence, no calm within, no tranquility without. Alas! for some. They always spend their lives thus. One long, weary monotone of anxiety—struggling against winds and waves, instead of walking over the crests of the billows; treading a difficult, stony pass, instead of being borne along in one of the twenty thousand chariots of God.

How infinitely better to cast our care upon the strong, broad shoulders of Christ! Treat cares as you treat sins. Hand them over to Jesus one by one as they occur. Commit them to Him. Roll them upon Him. Make them his. By an act of faith look to Him, saying, "This, Lord, and this, and this, I cannot bear. Thou hast taken my sins, take my cares; I lay them upon Thee, and trust Thee to do for me all, and more than all, I need. I will trust, and not be afraid." As George Herbert says so quaintly in his sonnet, put care into Christ's bag. There is no surer path to rest than to pass on to Jesus all the anxieties of life, believing that He takes what we give at the moment of our giving it; that it instantly becomes a matter of honour with Him to do his best for us; and surely it is a sacrilege to take back any gift which we have put into his hands. "Blessed be the Lord, who daily beareth our burdens" (Ps. lxviii. 19, R.V.).

There are two or three preliminaries before this committal of care is possible. We must have cast our sins before we can cast our cares; in other words, we must be children in the Father's home. Then also we must be living in God's plan, sure that we are where He would have us be, camped under his brooding pillar-cloud. And, in addition, we must have yielded up our lives to Him, for Him to have his way in them. Nor must we neglect to feed our faith with promise. Without her natural food she pines. But when these conditions are fulfilled, it is not difficult

> To kneel, and cast our load,
> E'en while we pray, upon our God;
> Then rise with lightened cheer.

The cup may still have to be drunk, the discipline borne, the work done, but the weary ache of care will have yielded to the anodyne of a child's trust in One who cannot fail.

II. Different Kinds of Care.—There is care about our growth in grace.—It is very unreasonable, and yet how common. We fret because we fear that we are not getting on fast enough, and run to and fro in our anxiety to pick up something from other people. As well might a lad in an infant class fret because he may not enter the higher classes of the school. But surely his one business is to acquire the lessons set before him by the teacher. When those are learnt, it will be for him to give the scholar other and harder ones, and to advance him to positions where quicker progress may be made. And it is for us to learn each day the lessons which the Lord Jesus sets us, and to leave to Him the responsibility of leading us forward in the knowledge and love of God. Cast the care of your growth and attainments on the great Leader of souls, and be content to sit at his feet, learning the lessons He assigns.

There is care about our Christian work.—How to maintain our congregations? How to hold our own amid the competition of neighbouring workers? How to maintain the efficiency and vigour of our machinery? How to adjust differences between our fellow or subordinate workers? How to find material enough to supply the incessant demand for sermons and addresses? How to shepherd a large flock of souls? What elements of care are hidden in each of these! And in what numberless cases the look of weary anxiety betrays the heart-ache within!

But one is inclined to ask sometimes, Whose work is it? If it is yours, resting on your shoulders only, there may be some reasonableness in the carrying of care. But if, as is surely the case, the work is your Master's, the burden should be his also. The prime worker is not you, but Christ. He is working through you. You are but his servant. All that you are responsible for is to do what He bids to the uttermost of your power, and He must bear all the cost and responsibility beside. If things are not going smoothly, go and tell Him, and cast all the anxiety of it back on Him, leaving it to Him to extricate or reinforce you.

There is care about the ebb and flow of feeling.—Our feelings are very changeable. They are affected by changes in the weather and temperature, by the state of our digestion and liver, by over-weariness, by want of sleep, by a thousand nameless causes. No stringed instrument is more affected by minute changes than we are, and we are apt to worry when the tide of emotion is running fast out, defying our efforts to retain it. But, if we are not conscious of any sin or negligence to which this subsidence of emotion may be attributed, we may cast the care of such an experience on our Saviour. He knows our frame; and, as we pass down the dark staircase, let us hold fast to the hand-rail of his will, willing still to do his will, though in the dark. "I am as much thine, and devoted to Thee, in the depths of my being now, as when my heart was happiest in thy love."

There is care about household and commercial matters.—Servants, with their frequent changes; employers, with unreasonable demands; customers and clerks; creditors and debtors; children, with the ailments of childhood, and the waywardness of youth. To mention any one of these is to touch a bitter spring of care. There are some whose businesses are specially liable to cause anxious, worrying thoughts. Many Christians always think that they must come to beggary; they refuse to enjoy the good things within their reach, because of certain dreaded possibilities. Alas! for that phantom workhouse which bounds the pathway of so many lives, but which is never reached! But each of these sources of worry may become a means of grace, a bond between Jesus and the soul, if placed at his feet, and definitely entrusted to his care.

Do not be satisfied with rolling yourself on God, roll your burden also. He who can carry the one can carry the other. When a tiny boy, trying to help his father move his books, fell on the staircase beneath the weight of a heavy volume, his father ran to his aid and caught up in his arms boy and burden both, and carried them in his arms to his room. And will God deal worse with us? He cannot fail or forsake. He can smite rocks, and open seas, and unlock the treasuries of the air, and ransack the stores of the earth. Birds will bring meat, and fish coins, if He bid them. He takes up the isles as a very little thing; how easily, then, your heaviest load, while there is nothing so trivial but that you may make it a matter of prayer and faith.

So Leighton sweetly says:—"When thou art either to do or suffer anything, when thou art about any purpose of business, go, tell God of it, and acquaint Him with it—yea, burden Him with it—and thou hast done for matter of caring. No more care, but sweet, quiet diligence in thy duty, and dependence on Him for the carriage of thy matters. Roll over on God, make one bundle of all; roll thy cares, and thyself with them, as one burden, all on thy God" (Ps. xxxvi. 5).

III. The Reasonableness of this Method of Life.—"For He careth for you." Of course, if we persist in acting only for ourselves, we must do the best we can for ourselves; but if we can hand over all matters to God, we shall find that He will do infinitely better for us than we had dared to hope. Such is God's love to us that He always goes far beyond our farthest anticipations. "Exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think."

If the father is providing for to-morrow's needs, why should his little boy leave his play, and lean pensively against the wall, wondering what had better be done? If the pilot has come on board, why should the captain also pace the deck with weary foot? If some wise, strong friend, thoroughly competent, has undertaken to adjust some difficult piece of perplexity for me, and if I have perfect confidence in him, and he assures me that he is well able to accomplish it, why should I fret longer? The thing is as good as done, since he has taken it in hand.

Doubtless there seems a marvellous chasm between Him and you. But it is bridged by the silver arch of Divine care. God cares for you so much that He came Himself in the person of his Son to redeem you; there was never a time He did not love you, brood over you, and care for you. He cares for you so much as to listen to your least sigh or cry amid the beat of heavenly music and the acclamations of the blessed. The mighty heart of Deity itself is full of a fathomless carefulness for all that concerns you. No mother cares over her sick child as He over you. Each movement and need and desire is read long before expressed or even felt.

Let us trust Him. Tongue cannot tell the completeness, the delicacy, the tender thoughtfulness of the care that will gather and shelter us as the nervous, careful hen gathers her brood under her wing. "I would therefore have you to be without carefulness."

"IN THE TEAPOT WITHOUT THE HANDLE."

A widow who lived in Annan had a son whose name was Tom. Tom, who was a joiner, maintained his mother; but, work becoming slack, he emigrated to America.

Before leaving, however, he told his mother that he would regularly send money home for her support.

Some time afterwards she became embarrassed in circumstances, was unable to pay her rent, and at last the landlord came and told her that if she did not pay he would sell off her furniture. This put her greatly about.

One day a neighbour came in, who said, "Weel, Nanny, hoo are ye the day?"

"Oh! I am bad, for the landlord has been here and threatened to sell a' off."

"I cannot understand this of Tom in that he has not sent you money, for he was always very kind to you. Do you never get letters from him?" asked the neighbour.

"Oh, yes," answered the mother.

"Where are they? Will you let me see them?"

"Oh yes," said the mother. "Just go into the corner cupboard and you will find them in the teapot without the handle."

The neighbour took down the teapot, and in it found, first, a letter which the mother had received only the day before. The letter began: "My dear mother, I hope you received the £7 10s. which I sent you in a post-office order."

"Have you got the money?" was asked.

"I have not," was the answer.

"Have you any more letters?"

"Oh yes! you will find the other in the same teapot."

The next letter contained the post-office order. Holding it up, the visitor said, "Here is the post-office order."

"I don't know what that is," said the mother. "I saw a picture when I opened the letter to be sure, but I did not know what it was."

How stupid of the old body! She would have had plenty of money to pay the rent as well as to live upon had she cashed the order. And why did she not do it? Because she did not know its value.

How many Christians are there now not less stupid, because, being unacquainted with the value of some of the many promises in the Bible, they are groaning and moaning, instead of "always rejoicing in the Lord"—talking about the beautiful pictures of the Bible, but never cashing the promises and living on them.

"Now," said the kindly friend, "put on your shawl, and come with me to the post office."

On getting to the post office, and laying the order upon the counter, the postmaster remarked, "You ought to have got this three weeks ago," and he was very angry.

During this time the mother was in great fear that her friend was about to perpetrate a swindle, and was in considerable agitation about the matter, but when she saw the postmaster lay the money upon the counter, and when from the counter it was transferred to her pocket, and she became acquainted with the present and its value, she was at peace. "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace" (Job xxii. 21).

AN APPEAL FROM WALES.—Rev. Edward Icke, Primitive Methodist minister, Briton Ferry, appeals for funds on behalf of a chapel on which there is a debt of £700. He writes:—"The Roman Catholics want to get the place from us, but we shall be able to retain it if we can pay the sum of £100, which is now called in. The dreadful pit explosion in the neighbourhood, by which 88 men were killed, leaving 69 widows and 200 fatherless children to be provided for, debars me from asking for help among the poor people." Mr. Icke's address is St. Clement's-terrace, Briton Ferry, Glamorganshire.

McALL MISSION IN FRANCE.

The story of the McAll Mission in France is well known, but yet it will bear repetition, so instructive is it as showing that whole-hearted work for Christ must bring forth fruit to the praise of God. On Monday evening, last week, the story was rehearsed from various points of view in Exeter Hall, in the presence of a large assemblage of friends of religious effort among the French people. The wonderful blessing which has attended past efforts, justifies the belief that France is waiting for the dawn of a new era in her religious life. It is hoped that the result of the meeting will be the awakening of new interest in the work of the Mission.

The proceedings were presided over by Mr. George Williams, who is one of the many firm friends of the Mission. Alluding to the persecutions of centuries now happily past, he said that God must greatly love France, and have much blessing in store for the country. Mr. W. Chater sketched the familiar history of the Mission from its inception, over eighteen years ago, when Mr. McAll and his devoted wife gave themselves single-handed to reaching the working classes of Paris, down to the present time when the stations number 129 in 64 cities and towns of France. Last year 21,600 meetings were held, attended by 1,121,446 persons, who gave an attentive hearing to the Gospel message. The Mission has a long list of agencies, involving a large amount of labour and anxiety. Hundreds of earnest Christians, of many nationalities, have devoted themselves to the work, many of them, like the venerable founder, giving their services freely.

delivered an address which was well punctuated with expressions indicating the joy he feels in the work with which his name is so honourably associated. The many well-approved agencies include the Sunday-schools, of which there are about a hundred, attended by 11,000 children, whose parents are for the most part nominal Roman Catholics or infidels. An interesting feature of the work is that the evangelists are continually called upon to speak to people who have never before heard the story of God's love. Ofttimes the Gospel comes to such as a new discovery, and something for which they were waiting, but knew not of. Touching upon the very prevalent impression that the French people are so light and frivolous that no religious impression can be made upon them, the speaker remarked that, though there is some foundation for this view, there are nevertheless scattered throughout the masses, and especially among the industrial classes, a great number of men who are conscious of some void within, which neither self-indulgence on the one hand, nor cold scepticism on the other, can ever fill. They may be described as waiting ones—the Lord's hidden ones, and to them especially the messengers of Christ go.

Having shown that those who are commonly stigmatised as "free-thinkers" have simply broken away from Romish superstition, and not renounced evangelical truth, which they have never heard, Dr. McAll spoke of the largeness of the field and the pressing character of the work. His memory failed him in reviewing the labours of others in the country, but his heart embraced them all. Yet there are whole departments of France in which no evangelistic endeavour is being put forth. Having stated that there are everywhere signs of growing seriousness among the people, the speaker appealed for more labourers, ladies as well as gentlemen, to enter the harvest, and for renewed support to the work upon which his own heart is set.

PASTOR THEODORE MONOD

made a hearty speech. He declared the work to be wonderful, and clearly saw God's hand in it. It gave him pleasure to bear testimony to a deepening seriousness among the people; the working classes are, he said, becoming disgusted with that form of immorality and blasphemy with which the country has been flooded for the last twenty years. The work among children is one of the most interesting of all, and in some parts the Roman Catholic clergy greatly resent the influence of the evangelicals. Yet the people, though personally indifferent, send their children to the mission schools, not a few of them being of the same mind as a man who told the pastor, "I had rather they learned your nonsense than that of the priests." The educated classes also are seeing the folly of their ways, and cultured writers have only recently been sighing for a faith for which to suffer and die, and a social fabric based on such principles as the Sermon on the Mount. The speaker rejoiced to report that converts of the Mission are allying themselves with the churches, and thus adding strength to the Protestant cause.

Rev. Dr. L. B. White, secretary of the Religious Tract Society, spoke in high terms of the work. Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia, followed, pointing out that the door is now wide open in France for the preaching of the Gospel in its purity, displacing the crucifix by the cross of Christ. The speaker was much impressed with the singularly economical character of the work, some of which he was glad to have seen with his own eyes.

POVERTY IN CHINA.

Dear Sir,—The accounts of distress and want in England make one sick at heart, and yet how much is done to alleviate all forms of misery at home. Out here the distress is not less, and it is chronic; but there are no newspapers to publish it, no philanthropists to search it out, and no institutions for its relief. True, some spasmodic attempts at relief are made here and there, but they generally prove abortive. The winter is a hard and bitter time for the poor. Their houses, or hovels, are so wretched, clothing scanty, and food of the meanest kind. It is a rare thing for many of them to get a meal of wheaten flour. Rice too is beyond their purse in this northern latitude.

Only a few days ago I went to see a poor beggar who was dying on the stone flags in front of the city temple. I was told he had been lying there more than a month. He had a little straw underneath him, and a piece of rush matting he was holding round his shoulders for a covering. His legs were skinned with the cold and frozen stiff. I had bought him some hot food during the day, which he had eaten, and tried to get him taken into the beggars' shelter, but no one, not even the other beggars, would touch him. Their one verdict was, "There is no help for him, he must die." The frosts are very severe every night, and what that poor man must have suffered night after night lying out in the open is awful to think of. Yet his is by no means a solitary case, every day in the winter numbers perish in this great empire of cold and hunger. I got some straw and sacks and tried to make him somewhat more comfortable. He also swallowed a hot supper, but the next morning he was dead. When I saw him it was already too late to save him, even with the greatest care and attention.

Any endeavour to show kindness to the poor out here is beset with innumerable difficulties. We need great grace and much wisdom to go in and out amongst this people. Pray for us, and if possible interest others to do likewise.—Yours in his service, Ed. Tomalin

SOLDIERS' HOMES.

Dear Sir,—As the time is drawing near when we hope to transfer the London Soldiers' Home from 170, Buckingham Palace-road, to its new quarters, a few details about my work generally may be interesting to your readers who have helped it for so many years by their prayers and their gifts.

More than a quarter of a century has passed away since my mother, in the Providence of God, was led to Aldershot, and started the first Soldiers' Home (if I may except Miss Papillon's reading-room at Sandgate which has since developed into a Home).

One great desire of Mrs. Daniell's heart was to establish similar Homes in other garrisons, and many were the requests from officers and men that she should do so. But ill-health and at length the summons to "come up higher" hindered her from carrying out her wish.

Since her death, in memory of what she longed to do, God has enabled me to add Branch Homes in six other garrisons, namely, Colchester, Manchester, Plymouth, Chatham, Windsor, and London. In most places the work has been begun in small buildings, and then transferred to larger and more commodious premises. This is just what has happened in London. For some years the London Soldiers' Home was carried on by a committee of gentlemen, mostly officers.

At their request I took it over in August, 1888, and have continued the work in a house occupied by them, awaiting the completion of the new Home, which, I trust, will now soon be ready. The new building is situated in James-street, Buckingham-gate. It contains a good refreshment bar, coffee-room, cubicles with comfortable beds, bath-rooms with hot and cold water; reading, smoking, and game rooms, prayer-room, class-room, and lecture-hall. Accommodation is also provided for the staff and for the ladies who kindly act as honorary superintendents.

Did space permit, I should like to tell how marvellously God has supplied the means for this building. It has come to me in sums varying from one shilling to £1000. One friend alone has given upwards of £1700; another, an officer, who looks on one of the Soldiers' Homes as his spiritual birthplace, has with earnest, self-denying efforts collected £1000. The same friend who gave the £1700, added to her goodness by buying the ground, allowing me to rent it of her. This enabled me to use the funds we had collected for building. Altogether we have received £5400. £1000 more is needed to complete payments to builder and architect, and to fit up and furnish the Home.

Some friends might like to give the cost of one cubicle in the sleeping quarters, which could be named as they think fit. Several have already done this, but there still remain three or four to be thus appropriated. The cost of a cubicle is £15, not including the furnishing. I am also anxious to raise the sum (upwards of £3000) which my friend paid for the land, that this Home, like all my others, may be a freehold.

I have written chiefly of this, the latest development of the work Mrs. Daniell started. The story of the outward growth of these seven Homes can be told in a few lines; but how thankful I am that it is quite impossible to give any such brief record of the spiritual stones that have been added to the glorious temple of the Lord. Hundreds of saved souls all over the world can point to one or other of the Homes and say, "I was born there." The stream of blessing has flowed continuously for the last twenty-seven years. I would earnestly ask your readers to plead that this stream may widen and deepen year by year, to the glory of God, and the unspeakable joy of numbers of redeemed ones.—Yours faithfully,

G. F. S. Daniell.

MR. VARLEY IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

MY DEAR FRIEND,—I fully intended writing you on my return from New South Wales, but really the weather has been so fearfully hot that for nearly two months the disposition to serve, work, or write, has been practically wanting. The weather interfered with the numbers attending the services in several of the towns and cities, but on the whole we had much cause for gratitude. Many thousands heard the word of life, a considerable number professed their faith in Christ, and believers were enlarged and established in their "most holy faith." I need not say more save to indicate in some remarkable cases the power with which the Holy Spirit wrought through the word.

A young German who had left home and the German navy, and joined an English merchant ship, attended the meetings in Sydney. With scarcely any knowledge of English, and amid companionships utterly opposed to godliness, he became deeply interested in spiritual truth. Amid strong cries and tears he passed into the liberty of Christ. Keenly did he feel the practical undoing by sin of that natural affection for home and love of parents which now again possessed him; and it seemed wonderful that he should come all the thousands of miles to the city of Sydney, and there find the Christ of God. He has returned through San Francisco to his home.

There were two cases of engine-drivers, both powerfully wrought upon. One of these came to me saying, "I cannot work longer, this matter must be settled; I have obtained leave of absence for this day. I came to the Bible-reading in the hope of seeing you. How can I obtain rest and peace?" Blessed indeed was it to see the power of the Divine Word in this case. He had brought his Bible, and his interest and gratitude, as I led him to Christ and to confidence in his Word, were delightful to witness.

Another case was that of a notorious bookmaker and betting man. The reality of the change in his case was such that he was constantly spoken of, and some of the sporting papers attempted by ridicule and jest to make light of his conversion; but when in loving obedience he was baptized into Christ at the hands of our estimable brother A. J. Clarke, and at once gave up all connection with racing and gambling, his testimony told upon many of his former companions.

Time would fail me, and your columns forbid, that I should go into many individual cases. The Lord is working, and souls are "delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the Kingdom of the Son of his love."

Yours very sincerely,

Kew, Melbourne. HENRY VARLEY.

A WOOLWICH CONVERT.—A correspondent writing with respect to Major Whittle's missions at Woolwich, says:—"The growth of life in many of the young Christians since the November mission has been very marked. 'The Apostle of Woolwich,' for such the Major has almost a right to be called, was asked to go out and visit a dying man. There he lay on a bed of pain, racked with incessant suffering, his case from the medical point of view hopeless, scarce able even now to swallow, quite unable to speak, his very tongue having been removed in the vain hope of removing the disease. What can such a one as this care for missions? What can he do to further the coming of the Heavenly King? Listen! gurgling up from his throat comes the sound of one mangled word, 'Happy.' That is all, but is it not enough? Happy, because on November 18, in one of the inquiry meetings, he gave himself to God; happy, because he is now exchanging the dusty streets of Woolwich for the golden streets of Zion. His very face preaches Christ as his friends gather round him."

FAREWELL TO MISSIONARIES.

A HAPPY meeting was held on Tuesday last week at Harley House, Bow, for the purpose of saying farewell to a third party of missionaries about to join the Congo-Balolo Mission, and several brethren and sisters about to leave for other spheres. Operations on the Upper Congo are going foward vigorously, Messrs. Haupt and Whytock having founded a second station at the confluence of the Lopori and Maringa rivers. Mr. Charles Harvey, of the American Baptist Missionary Union, who has been six years in Africa, has just joined the Congo-Balolo Mission, and will be senior labourer at a new station, which will, it is hoped, be opened in the course of the summer.

Dr. Eccles presided over the meeting. Dr. H. GRATTAN GUINNESS, jun., rejoiced to report that fifty-two men and women had left the Institute during the year for the foreign field—the "outgoing" rate being still one every week. The Pioneer steamer has reached the Congo, and the parts are now being carried on to Stanley Pool by about 750 natives. Mr. Adamson, assisted by Messrs. Luff and Cole, will put it together. Dr. Guinness intimated that the third station will be founded in memory of the late Sir John Wallis Alexander, a warm friend of the work of the Institute; and another will be named after Mr. W. T. Berger, of Cannes, whose benefactions have been numerous and munificent. The initial difficulties of work in Balololand have now been surmounted, and, thanks be to God, though the missionaries have, some of them, had typhoid fever, there has been no malarial fever, and no case of death.

The new missionaries included a party from the Presbyterian Church of the Southern States of America—Messrs. Lapsley and Sheppard. The former is a white, and the latter a coloured man. They go to form an entirely new mission in some untouched district, probably the Mobangi or the Ikatta or the Lunda country, as may seem most suitable. These earnest young men, who have left home in response to the appeals of Rev. Dr. Grattan Guinness during his tour last summer, testified their love for the work of the Gospel. It is the intention of the Southern Church which they represent to send agents by twos—one white man and one black—and thus to show that the Gospel knows no distinction of race or colour.

Three Swedish missionaries, representing a party of seven, some en route for China, and others for the Congo, were present. Their names were Mr. and Mrs. Tuveson, and Mr. Jons Larsson. The last-named spoke a few words, which disclosed an excellent spirit.

Miss Dalgarno, a student from Doric Lodge, who has already had four or five years' experience in South Africa, is about to join Miss de Hailes at Lulongo's town. She was unavoidably absent from the meetings. Messrs. Scarnell and Sulley are leaving the Institute to form the Sir John Wallis Alexander Mission. The first-named young man, formerly a member of Highgate-road Chapel, delivered a brief address, in which he expressed the hope that the friends of the missionaries would pray that their spiritual life may be fully sustained. Mr. Sulley has had valuable experience as an engineer, and he goes out to take charge of the Pioneer after her reconstruction.

These brethren and sisters were commended to the Lord in earnest prayer. The reflections of the evening were such as to prompt special praise to the God of all grace. Whereas twelve years ago there were no missionaries in all Congoland, save two or three pioneer workers in connection with the Livingstone Inland Mission, now there are no fewer than twelve different Missions. May the rate of progress be increased, to the glory of God.

MR. AITKEN AT LOUTH.

REV. W. HAY AITKEN has held a fortnight's mission at Holy Trinity Church, Louth, Lincolnshire, from March 15 to 28. The Spirit of God was present to bless the word spoken, both at the morning addresses on the spiritual life, and at the evening evangelistic services. The latter were very well attended, and many anxious ones remained each night to be spoken to.

The blessing amongst Christians has been very marked, many having been led to a more definite surrender of themselves to God, while a large number have professed to find peace. Over 200 people have applied for cards commemorative of blessing received during the mission. The increased congregations the Sunday after the mission testify to the reality of the work, many being seen in church who had never been there before.

Mrs. Crouch's meetings for women were also very well attended, and much blessing has followed her daily addresses. Altogether the town of Louth has had such a stirring as it has never had before, the results of which will only be known in eternity. H. S. S.

MISSION WORK ON LEBANON.

FOR the last ten years a very interesting Mission has been carried on at Baakleen, an important Druse town in Lebanon, where many families of rank and influence live, with the sheikh of their religion. The people are less bigoted here than elsewhere, and are desirous to have their children educated. There are two large day-schools with an average of 150 children under five native teachers, superintended by Rev. W. Bird, American missionary of the district. Two services and schools averaging 60 children are held on Sundays, and one week-evening service, which sometimes numbers 25, of Druses as well as Christians.

Three English ladies reside in the place, and are doing much good amongst the Druse ladies and girls, by holding Bible and working meetings, and by a dispensary for which they have engaged the services of a doctor, a graduate of the Beyrout Medical College, who goes there once a fortnight. A lady who visited the place lately writes:—"I had been asked to conduct a Bible-reading at the close of the afternoon; and our hostess made the novel proposal of having the reading on the housetop. Upstairs we went, on to the flat roof of a sheltered wing of the building which lay in shadow. Chairs had been placed around the battlemented edge and a table with Bibles on it in the centre.

"Never before had I held a meeting where all the natives present were Druses, and that too from families of rank. Such an opportunity is rare. We opened our Bibles at Luke xv., and nearly half of the sixteen girls were able to read their verses in turn. Never did the story of the Shepherd seeking the lost sheep, the Father welcoming his returning child seem more precious. Then we retired into an adjoining room and closed the meeting with prayer, all uniting at the end in 'Our Father.' While visiting in this pleasant English home I called on seven of the principal houses, in every one of which some of the children either were or had been pupils in the schools."

Means are urgently required for carrying on these schools. The treasurer is Alexander Melville, Llandaff Deaf and Dumb School, S. Wales.

MRS. GRATTAN GUINNESS is publishing a new work entitled, "The New World of Central Africa: with a history of the first Christian Mission on the Congo." It will contain maps, portraits, and illustrations, and will be published by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.

Mrs. Smyly, of 35, Upper Fitz-William-street, Dublin, writes to us:—The present state of the work of the Dublin Visiting Mission, including the Schools, Homes, Bird's Nest, &c., encourages me to give a little information about it. We can truly say the prayers for Ireland are being daily answered; a very remarkable change has taken place within the last few years. A friend who is a competent judge told me a short time ago that public opinion is quite changed in Dublin through the work of the Irish Church Missions. It is now generally felt that Roman Catholics are earnest to hear. Is it not our duty to seek to bring the light to them while yet there is time?

In Dublin there is a wide open door, and the missionaries have entered in. There is scarcely a house where they are not welcomed for reading and prayer with the people, who gladly send their children to the mission schools and Homes, and attend the evening meetings themselves. Deeply prejudiced at first, they are surprised and delighted at the novelty and simplicity of the teaching, and often give their hearts to the Lord, and become missionaries to their friends and relations.

Numerous cases of interest come to my mind. Here is a sample:—Visiting in a remote lane, I knocked at a door. A trembling voice said, "Come in." The room was almost dark, and I hesitated to approach the bed; but the woman beckoned me over. I repeated some texts slowly, and explained simply the way of salvation through the finished work of Jesus. She thanked me, and feebly said, "Come again." I did so, and got such a welcome. She said she had never before heard such words. She received and rejoiced in the truth all new to her, and died soon afterwards trusting only in Christ Jesus.

But I must not pass over the Homes and schools, such an inestimable blessing to the poor children of town and country. We have now three Boys' Homes: (1) Grand Canal-street, eighty-five boys; (2) in the Coombe, sixty boys; (3) the Helping Hand, lately opened to receive twenty big lads—poor fellows that have failed in life, in most cases utterly ignorant of God's Word, and unfit to company amongst the younger lads of the other Homes. We longed to give them a helping hand, and God has blessed the effort in a marvellous manner. We have in the mission schools about 1400 children, who otherwise would grow up in utter ignorance of the Bible. A young man called on Mr. M—— the other day, and asked him did he not remember him. Mr. M—— said he knew his face, but could not recall his name. "Well," he said, "fourteen years ago I attended your day-school. I was a Roman Catholic, deeply prejudiced against the Bible, but wanting education. I held on after I enlisted, and my regiment was sent to the West Indies. I entered upon the so-called pleasures of the world for a time, but somehow I could never get rid of the teaching. My health began to break down, and I had to come home. I got a high character from my regiment, and best of all I came home a child of God, trusting Him to provide for me, and I am now settled in a good position where I have opportunity of serving Him."

The work is great, and the time is now. We have had a hard struggle this last year in rebuilding the Institutions (pulled down by the loop line of railway) at a cost of over £3000. We hope some more friends will "come to the help of the Lord against the mighty," and have the great privilege of a share in this glorious work.

REV. F. C. SPURR has resigned the pastorate of the church at Longcross-street, Cardiff, to take effect in July next. He has accepted an invitation to work in connection with the new Baptist "Forward Movement" in London, commencing in September.

KANAKAS IN QUEENSLAND.

Our readers may recollect that in Sept., 1888, we gave some account of Christian effort on behalf of native Polynesians employed as labourers on estates in Queensland. The narrative was written by Miss F. Young, who had been led to commence a good work among those engaged on her brother's estate at Bundaberg. Subsequently she secured the services of Mr. C. F. Johnson (then working at Sydney) as a missionary among the blacks.

In a recent letter, Mr. Johnson tells of considerable progress made in bringing these Kanaka "boys" under Gospel influences. They were gathered into classes at the close of the day's work, and the elementary truths of the Bible patiently instilled into their dark and untutored minds. By kindness their attention was won, and gradually the light of the Gospel found its way into their understandings and hearts. As they come from different islands and speak varied dialects, verbal communication is difficult, and the medium of teaching is a sort of pigeon-English. Line upon line, and lesson upon lesson, enabled them at last to grasp the simple story of a Saviour's love. When it has taken hold of their affections, they express much gratitude to God for the manifestation of his mercy in Christ.

The Christian "boys" hold evening classes on the plantations, and not a few have made public profession of their faith in baptism. Their well-thumbed Testaments witness to their regular study of the Gospels, especially such favourite passages as John iii. 16. The converted blacks have a great desire to go back to their island homes that they may teach their countrymen about Jesus. No matter how dark and degraded a man may be, says Mr. Johnson, the Gospel can change his heart. After the present year no more Kanakas will be permitted to come to Queensland, as the Government wish to encourage white labour. The opportunity that now exists of teaching those who are there may therefore pass away, and it is very important to make the most of it. Mr. Johnson asks for an interest in the prayers of Christians that God's blessing may follow this effort among the dark-skinned sons of the South Seas.

THE KILBURN HOUSE OF REST.

Dear Sir,—I have for some time been looking about for a house suitable for the London centre of the House of Rest, in order that these premises in Cambridge-gardens, Kilburn, may be appropriated for the much-needed Aged Workers' Home, for which they are well suited without any further alteration. I have met with a house which is admirably suited for my purpose, which can be purchased for something less than £5000, including the freehold and fixtures. It is not far removed from this neighbourhood, so that the Aged Workers' Home would be under my own supervision, and there would be the accommodation which for years we have sorely felt the need of—viz., a greater number of bed-rooms, and a larger room for our meetings.

As both the Kilburn and Eastbourne houses are purchased, the latter including the freehold, and are entirely free from debt, I am very anxious not to have a mortgage on this new house. In fact I do not feel that I can take such a burden upon myself. One kind friend has generously given the first £1000 towards the purchase, and I shall be very grateful if some others who have large sums at their disposal will give a like amount; or any other sum they may find convenient. The property is offered to me at a price considerably below its actual value, in consideration of the purpose to which it is to be appropriated.

DEACON ABRAHAM'S WORK.

The work of Deacon Abraham at Geogtapah, Oroomiah, Persia, is full of interest. Through the enmity and interference of two or three wicked men, the village "Master," or general, has been playing the part of Sanballat. He was once a friend of the orphanages, but in his anger, a little over a year ago, he ordered that its inmates should be dispersed. The second report, recently issued, gives details of the struggle, in which the Deacon had the sympathy and support of several prominent members of the Nestorian Church, as well as the American missionaries. Ultimately, the order was withdrawn, and the work proceeds as formerly.

The report, copies of which may be had from the Deacon's firm friend in England, Mr. H. Tasker, Brookside, Andover, Hants, gives interesting particulars of life at the orphanage. The boys are dressed in blue, and the girls in red. The living-rooms are of unbaked bricks, with unmortared stones at the bottom; the other premises are built of mud. In the summer all sleep on the roofs.

In a recent letter to England, the Deacon says: "Our work is not a small one; to keep as we do thirty-eight orphans is not easy in a country where people are not accustomed to care for them or to give attention to such work for God. The Lord has privileged me to carry it on now for full ten years in the midst of many trials and difficulties. The expenditure last year was in excess of the income by £120. The boys' teacher, Absalom by name, was formerly an inmate of the Institution, and he teaches better than all his predecessors."

In winter and summer alike the Deacon carries the Gospel into the surrounding villages. On the last Sunday in January, when making for a distant village, accompanied by one of his eldest orphans, his horse stumbled at a bridge. The Deacon was thrown into the water, but he sustained no serious injury. Ever since November snow has lain thick upon all the low lands, and the poor and destitute have suffered much from the severity of the weather. The condition of the strangers who come down from the mountains of Kurdistan is specially pitiable during the winter. They find shelter in stables and other places, spending the day-time begging from door to door. Four families of about twenty souls, depend more or less upon Deacon Abraham, who writes: "Poor folks; they are nominal Christians, but quite ignorant of the doctrine of Christ. We continue our work in its various spheres, in confidence that the Lord will supply our needs."

AN EVANGELISTS' TRAINING CLASS.—Christian young men desirous of qualifying themselves to engage in mission work around London may profit by membership of the North London Evangelists' Association and Training Class, which meets on Saturday evenings, at 7.30, at Highbury Corner Mission (first floor). The members engage in friendly discussion, and criticism of addresses, sermons, papers, &c. Weeks of special services are undertaken by selected members of the Society. Communications should be addressed to the hon. sec., Mr. J. A. Munkett, 8, Thornhill-crescent, Barnsbury, N.

THE CENTRAL VIGILANCE SOCIETY exists for the repression of immorality of all kinds, by both legal and moral means, and the protection and reclamation of the weak and fallen. The duties thus taken in hand involve many difficulties, but the Society has done good work, both by direct effort and indirect agency. The law was last year put in motion for the suppression of several houses of ill-fame, and a number of cases of rescue was undertaken. Particulars are given in the sixth annual report, in which it is stated that the offices, 15, York-buildings, Adelphi, W.C., are open daily for consultation with those who desire to co-operate.

SCUTARI MEDICAL MISSION.

The third annual report of the work of Dr. and Mrs. Alexandrian tells of unwearying toil amidst the sickness and sin, degradation and darkness of Scutari. The report is most encouraging, and, to adopt the words of Dr. H. Grattan Guinness in the brief introduction, "a warrant and plea for hearty co-operation" on the part of those who have at heart the cause of the Gospel in the Turkish Empire.

During last year over a hundred Gospel meetings were held in the waiting-room of the dispensary, attended by men and women of various nationalities. A great change on the part of the people has of late been noticeable, the workers being much cheered to witness the withdrawal of the veil of ignorance and prejudice which has hitherto hindered the entrance of the Gospel into their hearts. The number reached last year at the dispensary was two thousand, while over five thousand out-patients were treated. Such is the public esteem in which the Mission is held that, when, in August last, a fire broke out near the doctor's house, the people came eagerly to the rescue.

A Turkish officer in the crowd several times said, "It is impossible that this house should burn, while so many poor people are praying for it to be spared." The house was spared, for the third time in three years.

The old institution for lepers is still a house of mercy. The Home for Orphans has met a great need. In the course of sixteen months from the time of opening, over one hundred girls applied for admission, but only twenty-five could be received. Of these, thirteen are Armenians and Greeks, two Syrians, and two Nestorians. The Y.M.C.A. at Broussa has now fifteen members; the Y.W.C.A. in Scutari is also the source of much thankfulness. Copies of the report may be obtained from Dr. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow, E.

A MISSION IN MOAB.

Dear Sir,—Those of your readers who have taken an interest in the truly apostolic mission of Mr. and Mrs. Lethaby in Kerak will be glad to know that a Committee has been formed for carrying on the work in future on undenominational lines, and that help has already been despatched to the sorely overwrought labourers, a lady, Miss Arnold, having been sent out about two months ago, and already, we trust, arrived at Kerak. A medical missionary, Dr. Mackay, has also been accepted by the Committee for the work, and we need funds to send him forth, if possible, next month.

For the information of those who may perhaps not have heard of this Mission before, I may mention that Mr. and Mrs. Lethaby, who are Wesleyan Methodists, impelled by a truly Christ-like compassion for the utterly neglected people of Moab, and depending largely on their own means for support, took up their abode some few years ago in the principal town, Kerak, which is the ancient Kir, or Kir-hareseth of the Old Testament, situated in the mountains on the east side of the Dead Sea, and containing some 8000 inhabitants.

With the exception of a small body of Greek Christians, the Moabites are all Moslems. They are a wild lawless race, and the Lethabys' life has been from the first, and still is, one of constant alarms, occasional outrages, and much suffering. Having, however, obtained help from God, they continue to this day, enduring no little personal discomfort and hardship, seeking by all means to win these outcasts of Moab to the Saviour.

Reinforced as they will now be, we hope that the work will be carried on with still greater vigour. I must not trespass further on your space, but may say that either I or the secretary, Rev. G. Piercy, 276, Burdett-road, E., will be glad to send to any applicant my "Notes of a Visit to Kerak," and further information. Contributions may be sent to Mr. Piercy. Begging the prayers of your readers for this Mission which is carried on under extreme disadvantages, owing to the difficulty of access to Kerak, and the lawless character of the people,—I am yours obediently,

F. T. Haig, Major-General.

Redhill, Surrey.

CENTRAL AFRICA.

GERMAN ACTIVITY.

Emin Pasha (says The Times correspondent at Bagamoyo) has entered the German service on a salary of £1000 a year, abandoning all thoughts of returning to Europe. Accompanied by several German officers, and 200 Soudanese soldiers, he will leave Bagamoyo with a large caravan for the interior about the middle of April. His rescue (as the Zanzibar correspondent of The Times remarks) which was effected at so great an expenditure of time and money is absolutely resultless regarding himself. Within four months of reaching the coast he returns as a paid subordinate officer of a German company to the very latitudes where he so recently lived as the heroic governor of an immense province. The caravan is leaving at the worst season of the year, and it is evidently intended to anticipate, if possible, the English plans. Its success, however, is very doubtful.

The German Consul-General, says the same correspondent, has published a proclamation by Major Wissmann, prohibiting the entry of all caravans into German territory lying between Tanga Pangani and Kilima-Njaro, unless with his special permission. This sweeping and unexpected measure practically closes all trade routes into Central Africa for the British Company, who have as yet had available the trade route through Masailand. The Germans are everywhere displaying the utmost activity. They are evidently endeavouring to adjust all differences with the tribes on the coast, in order to husband their energies for their extended enterprise further up country.

Arab letters received from Uganda represent Karema and the Arabs with him as seeking the assistance of the Soudan Mahdists to dislodge Mwanga, who has declared himself a Christian.

THE ANTI-SLAVERY CONFERENCE.

The report of the labours of the maritime committee of the Anti-Slavery Conference, drawn up by MM. Martens and Bourée, is a very lengthy document, and shows that, thanks to the earnest desire of the various Governments to arrive at a settlement, all difficulties have been happily surmounted, and an agreement has been concluded on every point. If the recommendations of the committee be adopted, the repression of the slave trade by sea will be regulated henceforth by a complete code which respects the views of the various Powers, and at the same time forms a code, the efficacy of which cannot fail to make itself felt.

REV. JOSEPH COOK in one of his recent Boston lectures said:—"A large amount of travel has convinced me that the necessity of the hour is to impress the fact of evangelical unity in the Orient. What does Japan want? Peace, purity, deliverance from the love of sin and the guilt of it. This is the desire of all nations when you probe to the heart of humanity." He scouted the idea of a successful Unitarian or Universalist propaganda in Japan. Another lecture was devoted to "the Pope's veto in politics," in which he protested against Papal domination in America, and counselled "eternal viligance against the wiles of the clerical party." "America, young as she is, has thrown off the yoke of kings, has put down a great rebellion, and we are not to be subject to her who rules 200,000,000 of the earth's population."

JEWS IN THE MINORIES.

Mr. Colin Young, though a Gentile of the Gentiles, has for many years devoted himself with singular fidelity to mission work among the children of Abraham according to the flesh. For a long time his Sabbath days were spent in Whitechapel, where he conversed with all the Jews he could "buttonhole," and sought to persuade them that Jesus was the promised Messiah, and that they need look for no other. His success was varying, but our Ross-shire friend has the gift of continuance in well-doing, and he persevered, in season and out of season, supplementing his testimony with such practical help as he could render.

At length he was able to obtain a mission-room as a centre from which the effort could be sustained. He has somewhat curiously, as it seems to us, called it the "Wild Olive Graft" Mission House of Homeless Jews. However inappropriate the title may be, this mission-room in the Minories is certainly a place where real work for God and for his chosen people is being done. Mr. Young believes in having the thing done well, by doing a good deal of it himself, though this imposes on him no small self-denial. He receives destitute Jews—a strange and uncertain quantity—and helps them all he can, and in every way he can. They sometimes requite his kindness by the grossest ingratitude, and even by something more positive. But our friend, in the spirit of his Master, accepts the buffeting and the disappointment meekly, and goes on his way, ready to open his house accommodation to the next needy Israelite that comes along. They come from far and near—adult waifs on the rough ocean of East-end life. Where it is possible, work is found for them; at any rate, they are sheltered and fed, and taught out of the Old and New Testaments the things concerning that salvation which "is of the Jews," but of which, alas, so many of them count themselves unworthy. During the past year there have been three baptisms.

On Mr. Young's part this is emphatically a labour of love, and some kind Gentile friends have put their hands in their pockets and helped him. But we should much like to see him have many more helpers. Since January last, we believe, he has sheltered and instructed over 1200 sleepers, some of them the saddest and neediest of Jews. Since Mr. Young is willing to lay out his life in showing kindness to those who are "beloved for the fathers' sake," others may surely count it a privilege to sustain his hand by prayer and by practical assistance in defraying the necessary outgoings of the work. The mission-room is at 4, Vine-street, Minories, London, E.C.

BOOKS FOR JAPAN.—Miss McLean, 57, King's-road, Chelsea, S.W., has received a letter from a Japanese pastor, telling of the need of good books in his country, especially such as will counteract the effect of the rationalising and infidel literature that is being disseminated. Miss McLean appeals to our readers to aid her in an effort she is making to send a supply of useful books to this pastor. Parcels should be addressed to her as above.

NATIONAL BIBLE SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND.—At the last meeting of the Western directors in Glasgow the first appropriation was made to a Union committee in Japan, which in future is to direct the General Bible Society work in that country on behalf of the three Bible societies. A grant was made to assist colportage work among the French-speaking people of the Dominion of Canada. The Evangelical Society of Geneva reported the sale last winter on the Bible Society's behalf of 10,374 Bibles and Testaments. Two colporteurs employed for the first time in Algiers had met with encouragement. It was agreed to maintain an additional colporteur in Ireland. Large grants of Scriptures were made to various home agencies.

For the Young.

A MALAGASY VILLAGE PASTOR.

His Story, written by himself, in November, 1889, for Rev. J. and Mrs. Peill, of Ambohimanga.

[CONCLUDED.]

Finding that we were all alive at the end of eight months, the authorities had us removed to a fever district, three days west of the capital, near Lake Itasy, where it was expected the malaria would soon carry us off. On coming to bid me farewell, my grandparents wept over me, and said, "The God you worship save and help you, child, in that far country you are going to!" Then they wept again, and repeated, "May God bless and keep you, for you will never see us again, nor we you!" At the end of our long journey we were handed over to the head man of the district, in the presence of a great gathering of the people, and he made a vehement speech to the returning officers, saying: "Tell Queen Ranavalona that I have received these rebels of baptizers, and I'll take good care they none of them ever see Antananarivo and Ambohimanga again, for our western dogs shall devour their corpses." He then took charge of us and placed us in a separate enclosure, near the place where some men who were in chains for highway robbery were guarded. There were 666 of these robbers, and, except a few who managed to escape, they all died in chains.

When Prince Radama and the Prime Minister heard of the head man's speech about the Christians they were very angry, and sent him word that if the Queen had wished the baptizers put to death, she would have had them executed in Antananarivo. But such was not her will. She had ordered them kept in irons, "and if you should attempt their lives," he added, "you will find yourself in disgrace." This frightened him so much that he fell ill. While here we were cheered by the visit of two Christian men, husbands of two of my companions, who were in hiding from the persecution, but were not known to the soldiers at that distance from the capital. Thus they were able to stay some time with us, and one of them baptized me there, for I had not yet been baptized.

After a few months in this unhealthy place, one of my dear companions in bonds took the fever, and died. A few days before her death she told us of a beautiful vision she had had of the glories of heaven, which greatly cheered her. Soon after her death, the wife of the man who had baptized me was taken ill. She, too, had a bright vision, in which she saw Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Jones, Mr. Johns, and Mr. Freeman in the clouds, sitting upon white horses, and singing hallelujahs with great joy in their hearts. She said:—"I was so glad to see them, for it was they who taught me about God." In a few days she died.

Then a third had a vision of the heavens opened, and One sitting in glory who signed to her to come up higher. She said:—"I wanted to take you all with me to look, but you would not come. It gave me such joy to look." Soon after this she died of the fever.

The guards cut off the heads and feet of those who died, leaving their heavy irons still attached to us. We three survivors could not drag this weight, nor move under it, without assistance in lifting it. (This was probably the work of the slaves who attended the sufferers from their various homes.) After this I had a dream, in which a beautiful white person sat beside me, as I lay on the ground, and said, "Be of good courage; you will not be much longer chained to these women, nor they to you." When I told the two women they said, "Perhaps you are going to die, or, maybe, we shall be set at liberty." There were some criminals in chains at the same place, one of whom was very bitter against Christians. He tried to get us still further punished by accusing us of fattening up a fowl in order to keep Christmas Day. He also said he would find a lot of the Christians that were in hiding if the Queen would but set him free, which was not done, however.

In the year 1861 Ranavalona I. died She was succeeded by Radama I., who sent out a proclamation granting liberty to those of us who still lived. On the 18th of the month Alahasaty, our irons were removed, after two years and five months of our bearing that heavy affliction for the name of Jesus Christ. We were quite unable to walk any distance; we staggered like a fowl that has been stunned. We were thus obliged to have bearers to take us to the capital. We had to pass near Lake Itasy, and close to the tomb of that head man, who had spoken so cruelly about our dead bodies being eaten by the dogs. He had been dead and buried some time; but, shortly before we passed there, robbers had broken into the tomb, which was a good way from the village, and carried off all the valuables that were buried with him. The robbery was not discovered for three days, by which time the dogs had found their way in and devoured the body. Thus his curses came upon his own head.

On reaching Antananarivo, we were welcomed with joy by all the brethren, and I stayed in the house of the man who was my first teacher. There was a long out-building, which had been used for stabling horses, that was now done up for a meeting-house for the Christians, and my friend and his wife were put in charge of it. After a short time, I came home to my native village, and was welcomed with tears of joy by my dear old grandparents, who had despaired of ever seeing me again. They soon paid off the persons whom they had appointed heirs in my stead with various sums of money, and re-instated me as their sole representative. Grandfather, in his joy, turned out the idols for others to find accommodation for, and gave me a new name: "Great is God the Creator." He also took a wife for me, who has borne me twelve children, ten of whom are now living (1889). We have also four grandchildren. My eldest son, born in 1863, was sent out by the Malagasy Missionary Society in 1886 with his wife to teach a heathen tribe near the south-east coast, and they are there still. For four years—from 1868 to 1872—I was stationed by Rev. J. Pearse as an evangelist to three villages, one being that in which I had burnt the idols when a little boy. On my return I was chosen pastor by the Christians of my native village of Hopetown, where I have lived ever since.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., April 13, Prov. iv. 14—27; Mon., April 14, Prov. vi. 6—22; Tues., April 15, Prov. viii. 1—18; Wed., April 16, Prov. viii. 19—36; Thurs., April 17, Prov. x. 9—22; Fri., April 18, Prov. xi. 17—31; Sat., April 19, Prov. xiv. 1—18.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Rock Ferry, April 13—19; Moseley, 20—30. Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. Andrew's, Lambeth, April 12—20; St. Leonards, April 26 to May 5. Mr. J. S. Tyler, Lydbrook, April 13—20. Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Y.M.C.A., Claremont, Hastings, to April 15. Mr. T. L. Sayer, Park Church, Highbury, April 13—23.

THE SPEZIA MISSION continues to be blessed. The schools and orphanage have won high public appreciation, and it is gratifying to learn that here and there friends at a distance have been inspired to help with great liberality. In Italy the poor, rather than the rich, respond to the claims of the Gospel. A noble-hearted lady recently made a contribution of £300 to the Mission funds, and gave impetus to an endeavour to raise the annual income to £5000, to aid the Mission in all departments, so that the workers may have greater liberty in the pursuit of their purely spiritual labours. The superintendent missionary is Mr. E. Clarke, Casa Alberto, La Spezia, Italy.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

This invaluable organisation for encouraging the regular reading of the Scriptures amongst young people, celebrated its eleventh anniversary at Princes Hall, Piccadilly, on Tuesday last week.

At the afternoon meeting the chair was occupied by Rev. E. A. Stuart, the president, who delivered an address on the seven lads mentioned in Scripture, from whose lives some useful lessons were deduced. Mr. T. B. Bishop, hon. sec., reported on the gratifying advance being made by the Scripture Union all over the world. This year 500,000 cards of membership have been issued in thirty different languages, the latest added being Sesuto (S. Africa), Malayail (S. India), and Lettish (Baltic Provinces). Thus large numbers of children are being reached; and from distant lands, as well as from the towns and villages of our own country, there come cheering testimonies to the blessing which is attending the daily reading of God's Word.

Rev. J. Outram gave an interesting account of a well-organised branch at Hampstead, with 720 members, and an efficient staff of lady workers. Mr. Edwin Arrowsmith remarked upon the pleasing fact that the Union reaches children in all grades of life, so that, through its agency, rich and poor scattered abroad are imbibing principles which will help to form solid and noble character, and make wise unto salvation. Mr. R. S. Heywood commended the notes on the portions in Our Own Magazine, and Our Boys' Magazine, as being useful helps in the daily reading.

In the evening, Rev. F. B. Meyer presided, and addressed some stimulating words to the workers. Many were disappointed, he said, by reason of the apparent non-success of their efforts, because they did not work with the right motive. Some workers have only for their object the salvation of souls, others the drawing together of large congregations, and others the building of character, &c. These objects were commendable and admirable enough, and might be rewarded with a measure of success, but the true motive which should animate every Christian worker is the glory of God. Those who labour with a single eye to please Him, and only to gain his approbation, cannot fail, but are bound to succeed.

Mr. J. R. Naylor told of very active work in and around Derby. The branch there has existed for some years, and several who joined as members are now carrying on branches in neighbouring villages, and others have become Sunday-school teachers. Meetings for conversation over the "portions" are held regularly, and are well attended. Mr. R. L. Barclay gave some particulars of the Union's work amongst the boys of our public schools. There are 2100 members scattered about in the various schools. Many of these meet with much persecution and suffering from their fellows, and have often a hard battle to keep up their regular reading of the Bible in face of continued sneers and jeers.

Rev. J. Hodgson Jones, of Bowden, Cheshire, urged the workers to impress upon the children in their meetings the fundamental principles of Christianity, especially to bring before them constantly the unchanging love of God, and the changeless efficacy of the atonement of Jesus.

Rev. Alex. Roberts, of Kimberley, Mr. Henry Hutchinson, and Mr. W. H. Roberts also spoke briefly, and prayer was offered that, as thousands of young people read the daily portions, the Word may abide in their minds, and be quick and powerful to renew them in spiritual life.

REV. JOHN MACKENZIE writes from "The Manse," Belize, British Honduras, on March 12:—"I mentioned recently the kind of work we had been doing in the prison, and that my wife had been accompanying me in that work. I grieve to say she was suddenly removed from me by fever, last December. The prison people are much interested in your paper. I have been able, by the kindness of the Society for the Free Distribution of the Scriptures, to circulate a good many Bibles and New Testaments among the poor people, which have been very thankfully received. The Roman Catholics have a great many agents throughout the colony, and they do everything in their power to injure Protestant work. There is a great deal of intemperance and immorality prevailing, especially at Christmas and New Year season, when the mahogany cutters and bushmen flock to town."

In Eastern Lands—Palestine.

By GAWIN KIRKHAM.

Now that we are taking a retrospective view of the Holy Land, we are the better able to estimate the value of such a journey as the one now closing; though its full worth will be seen in our Bible reading and preaching for the remainder of our lives.

To a Christian, the chief object of such a visit is to throw new light upon the Word of God. This has been abundantly accomplished in my own case. It is almost impossible to move in such a land without being reminded of Bible things and Bible themes. The happiest wedding of terms was hit upon by Dr. Thomson when he called his work "The Land and the Book"; for the two are inseparably connected.

Take a few of the associations of a single day's journey—the one from Jenin to Nazareth, across the plain of Esdraelon. This plain is about twelve miles across, and has been the scene of numerous decisive battles. Here Barak defeated Sisera, of whose army it is said: "The river of Kishon swept them away; that ancient river, the river Kishon" (Judges v. 21). Our party of twelve rode across it on a bright sunny day, when the fresh springing wheat, of which there was an abundance, was very pleasant to the eye. We sang a morning hymn on horseback, and then turned our attention to the various objects which surrounded us. On our left lay the long range of Carmel, terminating in the Mediterranean, which naturally suggested the scene of Elijah and the prophets of Baal, so graphically described in 1 Kings xviii. To our right lay the mountains of Gilboa, where "Saul died; and his three sons, and his armour-bearer, and all his men, that same day together" (1 Sam. xxxi. 6). I read this chapter and 2 Sam. i., where David's touching lament over this tragic event is recorded, as we slowly rode by. In front of us, though yet a long way off, rose snowy Hermon, and nearer to us, in front also, Tabor and Little Hermon, of which it is said "Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name" (Ps. lxxxix. 12). Further on we turned to the right to see Gideon's fountain, a copious stream, where some of our party tasted the water as Gideon's three hundred chosen warriors did (Judges vii. 5). We then retraced our steps and ascended a stony hill in the midst of the plain, on the summit of which is a wretched little village containing all that remains of ancient Jezreel. Here, in front of a ruinous house, pointed out as the palace of Ahab, was read aloud the story of the death of Jezebel (2 Kings ix. 30-37), a realistic tragedy.

Resuming our journey, we crossed the river Kishon—a dry watercourse—where the song of Deborah and Barak was read (Judges v.). We lunched in a lemon-grove at Shunem, after which I read the story of the "great woman" who lived here, and who prepared for Elisha "a little chamber" (hence our term "the prophet's chamber"). It must have been in one of the fields close by that her son had the sunstroke of which he died (2 Kings iv.). Further on we saw in the distance, on our right, Nain, where our Lord raised the widow's son to life (Luke vii. 11-15), and Endor, where Saul consulted the witch in his dire distress (1 Sam. xxviii. 11-14). Finally, we climbed a long, tedious hill in the heat of the afternoon, and so "came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up" (Luke iv. 16), and pitched our tents near the Virgin's Fountain; and so closed a memorable day. It is impossible after such a journey not to read the Bible with renewed interest.

We have thus traversed the scenes made sacred by prophets and apostles, and especially by our blessed Lord Himself. We have been to Bethlehem where He was born, and to Nazareth where He was brought up. We have followed his footsteps through Samaria and Galilee. We have traversed the shores of the sea of Galilee where so large a part of his public ministry was exercised, and have also sailed on the bosom of the lake, and proved how quickly storms arise on its treacherous waters. We have sat in the ruins of the old synagogue at Capernaum, the white stones of which heard the marvellous discourse on the bread of life (see John vi. 59). We have seen the place where the Lord lay after his crucifixion, and the Mount of Olives from which He ascended to heaven after his resurrection.

These and a hundred other sacred associations render such a tour exceedingly valuable; and I cannot imagine a better investment by Christian congregations than to send their ministers on a visit to the Holy Land; for their teaching must be enriched thereby for the rest of their life. In these days of scepticism it is well to be fully armed at every point. My chief in the Open-air Mission, Mr. John MacGregor, writing to me from Capernaum twenty-one years ago, said: "Everything I have seen and probed to the bottom has always turned out at last to be in complete accordance with the Bible. Yes, it is not a cunningly devised fable that we are living by. Christ's religion is a reality, dreadful to many, but sweet and charming to some."

No one can visit Palestine without pondering over the future of the Jewish people in connection with the land. It is clear to the devout student of the Bible that they must yet again possess the land of their fathers. Their past occupancy does not meet the requirements of the prophetic word. The eyes of all Christendom are more or less fixed upon this country, in expectation of what is yet to happen. The Jews must be in Palestine when the Lord returns. Only then will they, as a nation, look upon Him whom they have pierced. A literal interpretation of the closing chapters of Zechariah is the only consistent one. That the Jews are returning to their land in increased numbers there can be no doubt. I had it from one of the Jewish missionaries in Jerusalem that the Jewish population of that city is increasing rapidly. The total is 45,000, and no less than 30,000 of these are Jews; but, from some reason or other, they are anxious to conceal their real number. Outside the old walls, a new city is growing up, largely Jewish.

One of the popular objections to the occupancy of Palestine by the Jews is that they are a commercial, and not an agricultural, people. Hitherto this must be admitted; and it is a singular fact that in the new agricultural colonies the work is largely done by the Mohammedans, and not by the Jews. We came through what is called a Rothschild village, and I counted more than a hundred men and women engaged in clearing the land of stones—the perpetual plague of the tillers of the soil; but I was informed that these workers were Moslems, though the land was owned by the Jews, so that, at present, the work is done by deputy. Nevertheless, it is a fact that Jewish ownership of land is rapidly increasing, as well as the Jewish population.

I cannot take leave of the county without noting a few more of its missionary enterprises. At Nazareth the Church Missionary Society has a station, and a large church, which we attended on the Sunday we spent in a town so full of sacred associations. The service was, as usual, in Arabic, and was heartily joined in by the congregation, which I estimated at nearly 150. It was deeply interesting to see among the audience the picturesque Bedaween, with whom we have become so familiar from seeing them on horseback, with long guns slung across their backs, or tending their flocks, or following the plough. They retain their peculiar head-dress during Divine service. About forty persons remained for the Lord's Supper, in which five of our party joined, though that service was also in Arabic. In a conversation with the Rev. T. F. Walters, the missionary in charge, he lamented that the Arab character lacked solidity, and that it was difficult to get the converts to see the importance of godly, practical living.

But that which will retain the most vivid impression on my memory in connection with Nazareth, is its Orphanage for Girls, under the fostering care of the Society for Promoting Female Education in the East. I shall recall it, first, because it is difficult to reach. After a toil in the hot sun through narrow streets to its outer gates, there were 108 steps to climb to reach the front door, and still another flight to reach the ground floor. But a hearty welcome from Miss Adams, assured me I had reached a real home for children. The seventy orphans were gathered together in a room still higher, and nearly as many girls from schools in the town, with some teachers from country schools, to whom I expounded my "Broad and Narrow Way" picture, and was cleverly interpreted by one of the native teachers. We were then shown over the entire premises; and nothing can be more complete than the arrangements for the children's education, health, and habits of industry and order. If Bishop Gobat's school at Jerusalem is the hope of the country so far as the boys are concerned, this orphanage at Nazareth is certainly so as far as the girls are concerned. When they out go into the world again they will introduce new ideas of home life as wives and mothers, and so help to elevate coming generations. Let such institutions be multiplied, and let them be generously maintained!

A CHINESE VISITOR.

A SOCIAL gathering was recently held in the Parochial Hall at Clontarf, near Dublin, to meet Miss Clara Bradshaw, who has returned from China in company with a Chinese lady of rank and her native personal attendant. Both were attired in the old world costumes which have been worn by Chinese women since the days of the Pharaohs. Rev. M. Bradshaw, said this was the second instance on record of any Chinese lady of position visiting Europe; nor could the audience well conceive the marvellous change which such an undertaking involved. Miss Bradshaw's return had been necessitated by a complete prostration of strength, and her medical adviser at Foochow had quite unexpectedly insisted on her leaving for home with only two days notice. Her Chinese friend, on hearing that she must return alone, became so distressed that, with her husband's consent and approval, she decided to accompany her. The chairman felt that she ought to have a public recognition of such marvellous kindness, which might well recall the praise of the Roman centurion, "I have not found so great faith; no, not in Israel." He therefore proposed the following resolution:—"That this meeting, having assembled to welcome Miss Clara Bradshaw on her safe return from China, and having learned the extraordinary friendship, tenderness, and devotedness of her Chinese friend, the Honourable Lady of Diong Ahok (Mandarin of Foochow), who had, at a few hours' notice, decided to break through national customs and leave her home and family, rather than allow Miss Bradshaw to undertake the journey alone, hereby records its unbounded admiration of such Christian sympathy, and brave and generous conduct, and they trust that her own and her husband's desire that her visit may excite fresh Christian workers to go to China may be abundantly fulfilled."

This resolution being carried, Miss Bradshaw intimated to Lady Ahok the purport of what had taken place, and asked her to say a few words of acknowledgment. Accordingly, with the greatest simplicity and self-possession, she said (each of her sentences being translated by Miss Bradshaw), she was very glad to meet them all, and was very thankful to have been brought over to England; that her trust in God had enabled her to come. She then asked Miss Bradshaw to read out in Chinese a passage in the New Testament, and then to translate it literally; on which Lady Ahok made some comments.

THE CONGO.—Rev. George Grenfell, of the Baptist Missionary Society, reports the opening of another mission station, at a placed called Lulanga, some 150 miles north-east from Lokolele. Mr. Grenfell looks forward to mission work being done largely by natives. He contemplates the establisment of a station "in a district speaking a different language" from that spoken at other stations, and having in view the growth of a centre from which native teachers should go forth.

The Late Mr. W. E. Shipton,

Formerly Secretary of the London Y.M.C.A.

NO greater privilege or responsibility can be imagined than that of moulding and directing the life of the young manhood of a nation. To the good mothers in the nation that prerogative primarily belongs. For more than a generation past this high function has been taken up and fulfilled with a large measure of success by the Young Men's Christian Association. The aims of the little band of young men in St. Paul's Churchyard who founded the Institution, were lofty though simple; but they builded even better than they knew. Probably none of them dreamt of the wonderful issues that would spring from their united endeavour. The world-wide success that has been granted to the Association proves that its conception emanated from the Spirit of God, and that it meets a universal need in Christian society.

As General Secretary of the Central Association in London for well nigh thirty years, the subject of this short sketch took a leading part in the direction and development of the work. When the Association came under his secretarial charge it was a strong and healthy sapling, sending forth its tendril roots in all directions. When he relinquished his trust and passed it into other and younger hands, the Y.M.C.A. (as it is familiarly termed) had grown into a very goodly tree, whose leaves, in no hyperbolical sense, were bringing healing to the souls and bodies of the young men of many nations.

William Edwyn Shipton was born in 1825. Having lost his father in early life, he was educated at the London Orphan Asylum. It may be that the parental blank in his own boyish life the better enabled him to understand, in after years, the position of those in our great city who have to fight life's battles without the protecting shelter and the fostering care of home and parents. When he was thirteen years old, William Shipton had to leave school and enter on the serious business of life. He had distinguished himself in his classes, and no doubt if he had devoted brain and nerve to commercial pursuits he would have scaled the ladder of success; but a different path had been cut out for him. We have been told that it was a dream of his early years to be specially helpful to his fellow young men; if it were so, his aspirations were not long in receiving their fulfilment. Mr. Shipton became associated with the founders of the Association, and his name appears in the committee of the second annual report of the Institution. He was then little over twenty years of age. He must have shown great assiduity and capacity as a committeeman, for we find that in 1851 he was formally appointed corresponding secretary. Mr. T. H. Tarlton was general secretary, and Mr. Harley Mason, librarian. In 1857 Mr. Tarlton, being desirous of entering the Gospel ministry in connection with the Established Church, resigned his office, and Mr. Shipton was elected to succeed him as chief of the Society's working officials. In filling this important post he was very happy in having the counsel and practical co-operation of business men such as Mr. George Hitchcock, Mr. George Williams, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Samuel Morley, and others. The young institution also had the sympathy and hearty countenance of many well-known ministers of the Gospel, among them being Thomas Binney, Baptist Noel, William Arthur, Samuel Martin, James Hamilton, James Sherman, and others, whose names are still fragrant in the memory of the churches. The Association offices were at first located in Serjeant's Inn, Fleet-street; and then in Gresham-street. Shortly after Mr. Shipton joined the staff, they werem oved to the well-known and historic rooms in Aldersgate-street, where they continued during his term of office, and where the life-blood of the Y.M.C.A. continues to run to-day with a fulness of vitality that has not been exceeded at any period of its history.

It would be altogether impossible for us in a short sketch to fill in many of the details of the life and growth of the Association from year to year under Mr. Shipton's secretariat. All we can do is to mention one or two of the outstanding features that received his constant attention. The root idea of the Association, no doubt, was that of getting Christian young men in business houses in the City of London to seek in every possible way to lead their fellows in warehouse or counting-room to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. This principle could only be sustained by united prayer and study of the Scriptures. When the Association became organised, these two things were assigned a leading place in the programme, which they have maintained to this day. Other things, of course, good and needful, have been added since. Mr. Shipton's forte appears to have been the conduct of the Bible-class. The Sunday afternoon meeting for this object was for many years under his régime, quite a phenomenon in the matter of attendance and sustained interest.

Those who knew the Aldersgate-street Association in its early days well remember that on Sunday afternoon it was a regular beehive of movement and activity. There was the ordinary Bible-class, conducted for the most part by Mr. Shipton, with an average attendance of 200. At the same hour, Mr. George Williams had a class for inquirers with an attendance of forty or thereabouts. Some fifty lads were gathered in a class taught by Mr. Tapper. Mr. Harley Mason, who then lived on the premises, established and for twelve years conducted a Bible-class for young women engaged in City warehouses. In course of time the growing necessities of the work required all the room accommodation for the special work among young men, and this class was given up. Now, happily, the young women have an Association of their own. Mr. Shipton's gifts of Scriptural exposition had the fullest scope in this Sunday afternoon Bible-class, and we doubt not there are many active workers in the Christian ranks to-day throughout the world who could trace the strengthening of their spiritual life and Biblical knowledge to these weekly gatherings.

The famous Exeter Hall winter lectures were a notable feature of the Y.M.C.A. work in London during the period of its adolescence. As the organisation was then very much concentrated at headquarters, it was easy to plan such lectures and secure the adequate attendance. Mr. Tarlton, the first secretary, was very zealous during his reign in making arrangements with well-known ministers and others as lecturers, and in this he had an able successor in Mr. Shipton. It may be interesting as a specimen to give the list of lecturers and subjects for the winter of 1851, the year of the first great international exhibition:—

LECTURER.	SUBJECT.
Rev. Robert Bickersteth, M.A..	National Obligation to the Bible.
Rev. Hugh Stowell, M.A.	The Age we live in; its Tendencies and its Exigencies.
Rev. Alexander Duff, D.D.	India, and its Evangelisation.
Hon. & Rev. B. W. Noel, M.A.....	A Revival of Religion.
Rev. John Cumming, D.D.	God in Science.
Hon. & Rev. H. Montagu Villiers, M.A.....	Life in London; its Advantages and its Dangers in relation to Character.
Rev. William Arthur, M.A.....	Heroes.
Rev. William Brock	Daniel, a Model for Young Men.
Rev. James Hamilton, D.D., F.L.S.	Solomon the Prince, and Solomon the Preacher.
Rev. Samuel Martin.....	The Instinctsof Industry
J. B. Melson, Esq., A.M., M.D., &c..	The Cherubic Symbol.
Rev. Robert Candlish, D.D.....	The Authority and Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.

There were intellectual giants in those days, and the Y.M.C.A. was very fortunate in procuring for the public, as well as for its special clintèle, the gifts and services of such men as the list contains. Almost every name in it brings up in the mind of the reader a host of precious memories. We believe William Arthur is the only survivor of that remarkable roll of Christian worthies.

Now that the Association has spread roots and branches over all the districts of our city, centralised effort of this description is not possible. Every branch has its own programme and its own staff of lecturers, and though there may be less public display, probably there is not less profit to the young men concerned. This extension of the Y.M.C.A. leads us to mention another item in Mr. Shipton's duties which he was well fitted to discharge—that of deputation work: founding new Associations, or advocating at conferences the needs and claims of young men. We well recollect the pleasure with which we listened to Mr. Shipton's clear and finely finished reports at the Exeter Hall annual meetings, when he was able to record advances year after year in the planting of new branches in Great Britain, America, the European Continent, and other parts of the world. These reports were easy and pleasant reading, but they represented a great deal of steady, persistent work in committee, in office, and in travel. Being a man of inflexible purpose, Mr. Shipton was well to the front in all these earnest endeavours to bring the young men of our land and other lands under the influence of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

One other point only we will notice in his work as general secretary, and that may be expressed in his own stately words as recorded in the printed report for the year 1858:—

> It has been the privilege of your Secretary, in conducting your Bible-class, to be brought in contact during this year with many young men who were sincerely hungering for the bread of life. In this class, and in private meetings held weekly to enable all who seek religious instruction and advice to come to him, he has been enabled to meet the difficulties and perplexities of some to whom Christianity was a problem hard of solution, to remove the doubts of many tried and anxious sinners, and to pour into the broken hearts of others the consolations of the Gospel of peace. It has been a source of peculiar gratification to him that those who have chiefly sought his aid during this year have been young men in their early manhood, who have been enabled to consecrate themselves to the Lord and his service, ere the temptations of the world had acquired power over their spirits.

Such work is among the most important that can be undertaken in our day—more needed now perhaps than it was thirty years ago; and we can but hope that the Y.M.C.A. may always have officers well qualified and divinely taught for its performance.

In 1879, after almost thirty years of service, Mr. Shipton retired from his official post, an adequate retiring allowance being granted to him. He continued, however, as opportunity offered, to serve the movement in an unofficial way, chiefly by addressing annual meetings of the branches, and other gatherings. For this kind of service his goodly presence, and his ready and cultured speech, well fitted him. He was perhaps scarcely in touch with some of the more modern aspects of the work. Though in many respects he was an excellent example of what a Y.M.C.A. secretary ought to be, it is no breach of charity to say that he had his failings and weaknesses. As one who had to deal with all sorts and conditions of young men, he lacked adaptability, and was somewhat haughty in demeanour. Considering also the fearful snare to young men that lies in the drinking usages of society, it was a source of regret to many that he did not see his way to take a firm stand, by precept and example, on behalf of total abstinence. Happily, the temperance sentiment is now far stronger in Christian circles than it was when the Y.M.C.A. was established; if its officials would serve their generation, in the fullest and most far-reaching sense, we think they will have to make this element of the work more conspicuous than it is even now.

On March 11, after a trying illness, Mr. Shipton passed away, at the age of sixty-five, and was followed to the grave in Highgate Cemetery by a host of sorrowing friends and past coadjutors in the work. For a long term of years he bore the burden and heat of the day, and that at a critical stage of the Association's history. His numerous successors will not forget his services in consolidating and strengthening an institution which in its object and its outcome is one of the most splendid products of the Victorian era.

A PRAYER.

O Lord, I have a busy world around me! Eye, ear and thought will be needed for my work done amidst that busy world. Now, ere I enter upon it, I would commit eye, ear, thought and wish to Thee! Do thou bless them and keep their work thine; that as, through thy natural laws, my heart beats, and my blood flows, without any thought for them; so my spiritual life may hold on its course at those times when my mind cannot consciously turn to Thee, to commit each particular thought to thy service.—Dr. Arnold.

"THE MYSTERY OF GODLINESS."

I think it would have fared better with the word of redemption, particularly in our modern times, if people had contemplated the sun as the sun, instead of plucking out the beams one by one, which, thus isolated, must indeed vanish. The sunbeams thou canst not bind into a bundle, nor put the sea into a goblet. I also have tried it and failed; have applied the square of theoretically acquired formulæ to the great mystery of godliness, until the square shrivelled up in my hand, and I could no longer measure till it was cast away.

OMNIPOTENT PATIENCE!

If a man should come into the studio of a great artist, and should designedly break in pieces his most excellent works, which cost him years for study in the design, and months of labour in the execution; how would he bear such wanton injuries? How would his spirit be aroused! And could you expect the Lord to bear with sinners who have ruined his glorious work in themselves, and are polluting the world which He has made so fair and beautiful? Yet still his long-suffering is exceeding great towards them. What less can we do than exclaim, O omnipotent patience! Oh, infinite forbearance of the God of love!

THE SEVEN "I AM'S" OF JESUS.

The Lord reveals Himself seven times with the formula "I am," five times in his public ministry, and twice in the last discourses; and the figures with which this form of expression is connected furnish a complete study of the Lord's work.

(1) "I am the Bread of life" (John vi. 35).
(2) "I am the Light of the world" (John viii. 12).
(3) "I am the Door of the sheep" (John x. 7).
(4) "I am the Good Shepherd" (John x. 11).
(5) "I am the Resurrection and the Life" (John xi. 25).
(6) "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life" (John xiv. 6).
(7) "I am the true Vine" (John xv. 1).

MISSION WORK IN MADRID.

Chamberi has been about the most persecuted mission in Madrid. Still we are favoured with good congregations and overflowing schools, and the earnest attention of all is most encouraging. This week we have a prayer-meeting every night, and it would have done some of the members of English chapels and gatherings good to have seen a hundred persons thus assembled last night. Next week will be given to preaching. We are very slow in receiving into fellowship, or our numbers would soon double; but we are induced by experience to keep our candidates waiting a good while, that they may be manifested as God's workmanship.

During the past winter several have slept in Jesus. One long in fellowship, once a Bible-woman, to the last was full of zeal. The little church owed her much, she being always ready with words in season for all who came in her way, whether saints or sinners. Truly she was a mother in Spanish Israel. We have had our firstfruits, and the harvest will follow.

Yours in our Lord, Albert R. Fenn.

EUROPEANS IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Writing from Montevideo, on February 20, Mr. G. G. Froggatt says:—

The opportunities of the Italian element in the capital of the Argentine Republic for hearing the Gospel are limited and few; still they are by no means entirely neglected. The population of Buenos-Ayres, and, to a great extent, that of Montevideo, is very cosmopolitan, and the foreign population in both these cities is large and influential. The Methodist Church is doing a grand work in the evangelisation of these masses — especially among the Spanish and the Italian element. Both in Buenos-Ayres, and in Montevideo, there is many an Italian soundly and gloriously converted. We have some of them in our ranks as preachers, as colporteurs, and as evangelists, and they are, by no means, among the least efficient of the labourers in the great vineyard.

Many of the best converts of the evangelical work in the Argentine Republic and Uruguay have belonged to the Italian nationality; and the testimonies of some have been among the most spiritual and vivifying it has ever been my privilege to hear. Mr. Julius E. Prochet, a relative of Signor Prochet, the well-known Waldensian preacher in Italy, has recently commenced to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ to his countrymen, with a very fair measure of success.

As Mr. Torre, in a recent letter in your columns, indicates, more stations and more workers are urgently needed. There are thousands of Italians in Buenos-Ayres, and scattered all through the Argentine Republic, who could be reached if our resources were proportionate to our desires and aspirations.

SALVATION ARMY SLUM WORK.—On Tuesday evening, last week, Exeter Hall was crowded on the occasion of the celebration of the third "slum" anniversary. General Booth presided, and addresses were delivered by several workers and reformed characters. Various extensions of operations—one important branch of which is the visiting of prisons and the supplying of the willing with work—were announced as under consideration for speedy execution. The interest of the meeting was excited by the representation on the platform of slummers' homes and the appearance of slum workers, four of whom (men) had undergone terms of imprisonment, amounting in the aggregate to sixty years. "Whitechapel Granny," a frequenter of workhouses and prisons, but now a reformed drunkard, was also in evidence; and many others who took part in the proceedings were candidly announced as "ex-thieves, ex-drunkards, and ex-sweaters." It was stated that £3500 would be required to carry out the ensuing year's programme.

BERLIN CHRISTIAN MISSION.

A promising mission was started last year at Berlin by Mr. Fritz Schaaf, formerly a merchant in New York. The needs of the German capital are great, as is well known. Mr. Schaaf left all worldly prospects some years ago, in the hope of doing something for the salvation of his countrymen. In a circular, he says:—"I have been connected with the Salvation Army for ten years, and spent the last five years in establishing and leading the work in German Switzerland and Germany. I left this body last October, on account of difference in opinion as to how the work in Germany should be conducted. I shall make use of my experience in the Salvation Army, as far as it is suitable to the character and general taste of the German people."

Since the work began, Mr. Schaaf, who is assisted by his devoted wife, has witnessed cheering fruit of his labour in the conversion of souls. The hall is situate in the centre of the city, Alte Jacobstrasse, 97, and holds about two hundred people. Visiting from house to house is systematically carried on, and meetings are held every night. A small monthly paper, called the Vorwärts, has been started, advocating salvation and temperance; copies are mostly sold and distributed in public-houses, and, by special permission of the police, in the streets. A German lady has placed at disposal for meetings a large room in her house, which stands in the midst of a large Socialistic population. Mr. Schaaf is at present in England, hoping to interest friends in his undertaking. Communications for him may be addressed to the care of Mr. Ernst Jahncke, 30, Northampton Park, Canonbury, N.

INQUIRERS' COLUMN.

IS THE CHURCH "WIDOWED?"

Dear Sir,—In your issue of March 21 I read the expression, "the elect of God (widowed for awhile) must wait on Him."

I do not understand the Church, "the bride," to be in a state of widowhood. The Church is only espoused to Christ now, not married to Him yet; for, although believers are saved individually, they are not married individually. The wedding day is fixed, but the marriage ceremony will not take place until after the judgment of the "great whore"—the harlot church—as recorded in Rev. xix. 2-7. The Apostle Paul in Rom. vii. 4 speaks in anticipation of that event. The Church can never become a widow in any sense whatever, even though she be considered as already married, seeing that her Husband can never die. Isa. liv. 4 refers to the Jews; not to the Christian Church.

Yours faithfully, T. W. Bradbury.

THE GLORIFIED LORD.

Dear Sir,—Very reverently I would ask how it is explained that the Lord ascended in the crucified body, bearing the marks of the cross? Luke xxiv. 39, 40, 51—his appearing to Thomas—seems to confirm the view that there was no change in the body of his humiliation. Zech. xiii. 6 seems to give a connecting thought. Then notice Rev. v. 8.

Yours, &c., R.

REPLY.

The question suggests no reason why our Lord should not in the body of his glory bear marks of his conquest of sin and death. After his resurrection the Lord appeared to his disciples to be much like He was before; when, however, He took his place at the right hand of the Majesty on high, his glory was a realisation of the scene witnessed on the Mount of Transfiguration. He received of the Father honour and glory, and for Himself and us also responded to the call, "Sit Thou on my right hand." Nevertheless, as Denham Smith wrote in his "Prophet of Glory":—"In heaven Christ is seen 'as a Lamb that had been slain'; the glory-rays will shine for ever on that once thorn-clad brow. They will be seen through his hands and feet when millions of ages upon ages have rolled away."

A Plea for Ireland.

On the eve of returning to America, I desire, through the columns of The Christian, to urge upon God's people in England, Scotland, and the United States, to keep Ireland upon their hearts in prayer, and to do all in their power to help in scattering the Word of God, and to assist every effort to make the Gospel known in that land.

Various causes are operating to give the largest hope for much blessing upon these efforts. Through the work of the National Schools, there is now scarcely a cottage in Ireland where a young man or woman, a boy or girl, cannot be found who can read. Through political agitation, the minds of the people are awakened, and they are seeking for light as to the right of man, prince, or priest to hold them in injurious subjection and bondage. Through the action of the Italian cardinals, in political affairs they have been made suspicious of the power of the Pope. By the godly lives of individual Christians quietly living among them they are kept from infidelity, and made to see that there is a reality in Christianity, not conveyed by forms, or the power of man.

Finally, the Spirit of God is moving over the land. It is a time of opportunity. This has been deeply impressed upon my mind in two trips made through the south of Ireland. There is a thirst for the words of life. That the Son of God is to be glorified in some very remarkable way in this ardent, enthusiastic, warm-hearted, energetic, and impulsive people is my firm conviction. A mighty manifestation of the power of the Holy Ghost may speedily be looked for among them. When it comes, the Christians of this country and of America will be put to shame by the ardour and devotion with which they shall witness for Christ and spread his Gospel. Ireland was the first of these islands to send out missionaries of the cross, and it may be that the Irish missionaries of the latter days shall win its closing trophies.

What is needed now is prayer—continued, earnest prayer—and the putting of the Word of God into the hands of the people. Let all who can help in both of these directions. There are Church societies, Presbyterian societies, Baptist, Wesleyan, and Independent, all worthy, and all desirous of extending their work. As my own work is that of an undenominational evangelist, I have been led to give such help as lay in my power to an undenominational agency—"The Bible and Colportage Society of Ireland." May I heartily recommend this excellent association to the readers of The Christian who desire to help on God's cause in Ireland? I have met its agents in Kerry, Tipperary, and other parts, and know from personal observation the value of the work they are doing in the selling of Bibles, Douay Testaments, penny Gospel stories, and other evangelical literature to the people. The colporteur in Tipperary sold over a thousand Douay Testaments last year. Since its organisation its sales of Bibles, books, and periodicals has amounted to twelve million copies. In my judgment there could not be at the present time a more effective way devised to reach the people than the sending forth of these humble, Spirit-taught and Spirit-endowed men of God with their packs of books, penetrating to all parts of the country giving forth the words of life. They are sowing seed that shall bring forth an abundant harvest.

My heart has been moved to write a word of appeal for this special Society in reading their annual report, and seeing that, because of lack of funds, the number of colporteurs was one less than last year. With my view of the need of Ireland and the present glorious providential opportunities for reaching the people, there should have been one hundred more men sent out rather than one withdrawn. Will not the readers of The Christian remember this agency for their Master's work, and help them to enlarge their borders and strengthen their stakes as they seek in the giving out of the eternal and infallible Scriptures of truth to answer the prayer, "God save Ireland."

D. W. Whittle.

[We cannot but add to the above the name and work of another equally excellent Society, whose aims are very similar—"The Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," of which Capt. J. Kearney White is the superintendent.]

LONDON CITY MISSION.—An anonymous friend has paid to the treasurer £2500 towards the support of ten missionaries in poor and neglected districts of London for five years. The total cost of these extra missionaries will be £5000.

EAST-END THEATRICAL EMPLOYÉS.

More than 600 of those whom Good Friday sets free from their daily employment at the various East-end theatres—young and old, scene-shifters, flymen, members of the ballet, chorus singers, dressers, &c.—accepted the invitation of the Special Religious Services Committee to the twelfth annual social gathering at Shoreditch Town Hall—a larger meeting, we understand, than any previous one. After a good tea, the chair was taken by Mr. George Williams, who takes much pleasure in these assemblies, and defrays their cost. The reception given to his few words of kindly welcome, and to the addresses which followed, made it plain that guests and hosts thoroughly understand and appreciate one another.

There was a large array of speakers who dealt with the Gospel teachings of Good Friday, and illustrated by facts from real life the first principles of God's Word. The audience, evidently quite "at home," listened with interest to plain, direct, earnest, words concerning the great verities of sin and salvation, the sufficiency of God's grace whatever our surroundings, the strength which comes of testimony for Christ, and the fact that conversion takes from a man nothing that is worth retaining. The talk was pleasantly varied by choir singing and solos, received with warm applause. Mr. Sawell mentioned that, through the generosity of one Christian friend, a missionary is kept constantly working amongst the employés of the West-end theatres; but the London City Mission is not yet able to extend this benefit to the East-end of London.

Mr. Ehrlich, who directs the Sunday services in the hall in which this gathering was held, is encouraged to find members of the choir, which is largely recruited from one theatre, connecting themselves, from time to time, with various neighbouring churches. After a hearty expression of their thanks to Mr. Williams, the guests dispersed, each receiving a volume of "Friendly Greetings," presented by the Religious Tract Society, which, among its other good work, seeks to counteract mental and spiritual poison in the shape of pernicious literature for the young.

CAPTURE OF A SLAVE DHOW.—On April 2 the men of H.M.'s ironclad Sultan captured a dhow with twelve Wanyamwezi porters on board, who had been captured on the mainland, and were being taken as slaves to the island of Pemba. Pemba is full of spice farms which require some 6000 labourers. The duration of life of these—all slaves—is from three to seven years. Hence the powerful motive for keeping up the supply, and the urgent need of making our blockade effective. A later despatch states that seventy-eight more slaves have been intercepted at Pemba and freed.

JEWS IN SPITALFIELDS.—The Jewish Passover, which is almost synchronous with Easter, was again made the occasion of special sermons to the Jews, who form by far the larger portion of the population of the parish of Christ Church, Spitalfields. On Saturday last a considerable number of Jews assembled in Spitalfields Church, at four p.m., and, after a suitable service in German, interspersed with hymns in Hebrew-German and English, were addressed in the first place in English by Rev. E. B. Birks, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and afterwards in their own language by Rev. H. G. Rosendale, M.A., senior curate of the parish, who also rendered the service, the lesson being read in German by Rev. G. Nelson Walsh, B.A. The rapt attention and keen interest evinced by all present, together with the reverence and orderly conduct displayed, are all encouraging proofs of the growing tendency among Jews towards Christianity. Every Jew on leaving the church was presented with a tract in his own language.

PERSIA.—All who are not Mohammedans are at liberty to attend Christian or other places of worship; but a Mohammedan cannot abjure his religion without rendering himself liable to execution. Policemen are placed at the doors of mission chapels to prevent followers of Islam from attending the services.

Obituary.

MRS. MARTHA PORTER.

On Sunday afternoon, March 30, Mrs. Martha Porter died at Bournemouth, aged ninety. She was the widow of Rev. Edward Porter, formerly of Vizagapatam and Cuddapah. Her birthplace was Bedford, where her forefathers had been for generations office-bearers in the Bunyan Meeting House. When very young she conceived the desire to be a missionary, and gave herself to earnest work at home. She determined to visit every fallen woman in Bedford, and carried out her resolution, gaining the censure of some good people, but the approval of Him who came to seek and to save the lost. She would walk in all weathers to visit the poor in Elstow, the village where John Bunyan was born, and of whose spirit she partook from a very early age.

In 1835 she married Mr. Porter, who had been a student at Bedford, and had been accepted by the London Missionary Society for missionary work in India. She was fearless and faithful as a missionary's wife, and not only sought the salvation of the natives, but rebuked her own countrymen, officers and others, for their immoral and oppressive conduct toward them. In 1870 they returned home on account of her husband's confirmed ill-health; he died in 1882. To the end of her life her heart was in India, and she kept up a correspondence, by letter and by the transmission of literature, with the people who were so dear to her.

Rev. W. Jackson, late minister of the Congregational Church at Bournemouth, writes:—"With heart and mind subdued and brought into subjection to the will of Christ, Mrs. Porter entered the mission field, and spent the best years of a long life in making known the love of Christ to our heathen fellow-subjects in India. There indeed she was 'a succourer of many.' First her husband, whose heart she made glad by loving sympathy and constant co-operation; then the female converts and the young people in the mission schools, felt her influence; and lastly, as she had opportunity, she stretched out a helping hand to Christians of other churches in India who were proclaiming the Gospel of the grace of God to the heathen. Her heart was large enough to embrace all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. 'In India,' she once said to the writer, 'you cannot be sectarian. The field is too large, and the battle too real, to allow of ecclesiastical trifling and rivalry; the one absorbing passion of saving souls from death dwarfs all secondary considerations.' There was not an atom of party antagonism in her noble and loving heart; and yet she knew very well how to prove all things, and to hold fast that which is good, in church life and politics.

"I never knew a life of more glowing zeal than Mrs. Porter's; and the glow continued till the last. When, in her eightieth year, I received her into the fellowship of our Church, she said, 'I do not want to be a drone in the hive, I must work.' I suggested whether, after so long a life of labour, the time of rest had not now come. 'No,' she replied; 'I have a testimony to bear for India, and I want to interest the young on her behalf.' Nor did she rest till she had put in motion a missionary working society, and sought to stir us all up to more systematic effort, liberality, and prayer for the evangelisation of those who sit in darkness, and in the region of the shadow of death. 'India for Christ' was her motto, and how she laboured to bring about that mighty moral consummation is seen, to some extent, in the sketch of her husband's life which she wrote soon after his death. In that interesting volume Mrs. Porter is, of course, in the background; but her influence and ardour may be traced in the toils and triumphs which she records so well.

"When increasing years and failing strength brought her and Mr. Porter to this country, she very soon saw how much the churches needed the personal testimony of those who knew the real state of the heathen; and with tongue and pen she constantly pressed the claims of India on the sympathy and liberality of all Christian people. So long as Mrs. Porter was able to use her facile pen, hardly a mail left for India without bearing some expressions of her sympathy with the growing mission church and schools at Cuddapah. It was as good as a missionary meeting to sit with her for half an hour when the post brought her tidings from her old fields of Indian labour. Then the reminiscences of her missionary life was recited in picturesque language, whilst her voice trembled with emotion, and her animated countenance glowed with delight as she foretold still greater triumphs for Christ in India.

"And yet this long life of earnest and successful labour was one of peculiar trial. She passed through deep waters. She had special satisfaction and comfort in her children; but, just when they began to fulfil her best hopes, sickness came, then death. She followed them all to the grave. Then the greatest sorrow of all came, in the illness and death of her husband. She submissively bowed to these repeated strokes without a murmuring word; and found the best alleviation of her sorrows in more abundant labour, and in the blessed anticipation of reunion in her Father's house. The greatest trial of our friend's faith and patience was reserved for the last stage of her pilgrimage, when failing sight and increasing pain and weariness brought a new experience into her life. At this time she had many questions to put to me about the influence of pain on spiritual life and perception. We agreed as to the distracting and deadening influence of bodily pain; but the prospect, after all, I reminded her, is bright and cheering, for 'afterwards' there will be the reaping of those peaceable fruits of righteousness which spring most abundantly from tried faith. With such a harvest nigh at hand she continued to endure, as seeing Him who is invisible, and calmly advanced towards the city which hath foundations, rejoicing in hope of the glory of God."

MR. NILSON writes from Kibunzi (Congo) to Regions Beyond, reporting the baptism of three pupils of the school, who confessed before all their people their belief in Christ. The congregations are increasing rapidly, as also the confidence of the people in the missionaries, so that they send their children freely to school.

HOUSE OF REST, KILBURN.—At the all-day meeting on Friday, held at this rendezvous of Christian workers, many notes of praise were sounded; and one of special gratitude for the sum of £1000 towards the Aged Workers' Home. This, coming in direct answer to prayer, is taken by Miss Mason as an earnest of God's will in the matter; and further petitions were offered that the remaining £4000 needed would be forthcoming in his own good time. Dr. McKilliam was among the speakers, and gave a helpful discourse upon the tabernacle.

REVIVAL AT MARSOVAN.—In a recent letter to Dr. Constantine, of Smyrna, Rev. C. Tracy, of Marsovan, Asia Minor, tells of an awakening of religious interest there. A few friends met for prayer, confession, and conference as to the prevailing spiritual coldness. Special meetings were held, and a number, chiefly from the college and school, have been brought to decision. Mr. Tracy entreats the prayers of fellow Christians that the work may deepen and extend to other parts of the province. Dr. Constantine has lately paid a visit to Ordu, a town on the Black Sea. He held meetings, when many rose for prayer, and some decided there and then for Christ. Our correspondent says that entire families have been converted, and the ingathering is still going on. There has been some opposition, but this has not stopped the work. As in the recent awakening at Aintab, the chief interest is among the women. The Greek Evangelical Alliance of Smyrna is seeking to extend its influence, and Ordu is now its centre on the Black Sea.

The Temperance Cause.

Mr. W. Forbes has conducted a successful temperance mission at Herne Bay.

The National Temperance Fête at the Crystal Palace is to be held July 8, under the auspices of the Good Templars.

Lord Randolph Churchill has secured precedence on Tuesday, April 29, for the introduction of his Bill dealing with the licensing laws.

The Local Option Bill for Ireland, after being nearly "talked out," was rejected by the House of Commons on second reading by a majority of seven.

The C.E.T.S. at Birmingham has appointed an agent to meet prisoners on their discharge from gaol, and invite them to breakfast, with a view to their reform.

A pamphlet on the treatment and cure of intemperance as a disease, written by a practising physician, is published by Messrs. Hamilton & Co., 376, Argyle-street, Glasgow.

Arrangements are being made for holding, early in May, in the City-road Chapel, in connection with the three London Wesleyan districts, a Temperance Convention on a large scale.

Out of eighty-eight persons who were last year ordained to the Congregational ministry in England and Wales, no less than sixty-nine are known to be total abstainers, and many of them are actively engaged in temperance work.

The Spring Conference of the British Women's Temperance Association was held in Glasgow, and was well attended. The Association is doing good work, and often secures a hearing for temperance teaching where ordinary associations would fail.

Rev. Joseph Cook, in a recent lecture prelude, contended vigorously for enacting compulsory scientific temperance instruction in American schools. He also expressed the conviction that high licence is being more and more considered a delusion by judicious minds.

Within the last few years there has been a decided advance in public opinion as to the need of some legal restrictive control of confirmed inebriates. Dr. Norman Kerr asserts that one-half of the patients discharged from the Dalrymple House afterwards avoid alcohol.

So crowded is the American daily press with stories of girl-shooting and wife-shooting by some drinking youth or husband pretending love of her whom he shoots, then shooting himself, that one daily heads its morning report of this appalling crime of the saloon, "The Usual Thing."

The Intoxicating Liquors (Ireland) Bill, after having got through the Select Committee, is being bitterly opposed, no fewer than thirty amendments having been put down, thirteen being Irish. It is, however, looked upon as tolerably sure to pass, as it has the support of the Government and of a large number of the Opposition.

The East Tennessee Land Company, of which Gen. Clinton B. Fisk is president, the stockholders being almost exclusively Prohibitionists, have bought up a tract of 300,000 acres of mineral and agricultural lands for the purpose of founding a great temperance colony. The deeds for ever forbid the sale of intoxicants upon the premises.

Rev. U. S. Taylor, B.A., has written a capital pamphlet (2d. National Temperance Publication Depôt) entitled "Bible versus Drink," which conclusively shows, among other things, that those who range themselves on the side of total abstainers may rest fully convinced that such a course is in complete harmony, not only with the spirit, but with the letter of Holy Scripture.

The Sceptre Life Association, in its annual report, once more demonstrates the value of total abstinence in the promotion of longevity. The following figures show the mortality experienced for the six years ending December 31, 1889. General section: Ratio of actual to expected deaths, 76·27. Temperance section: Ratio of actual to expected deaths, 57·42; a difference of nearly 19 per cent. in favour of temperance.

The centenary of Father Mathew is to be celebrated by special temperance work in the Sister Isle. The Roman Catholics have determined thus to honour "the Apostle of Temperance," and many Protestant churches have acceded to a proposal to hold a special Gospel Temperance Mission during the first ten days of October. A plea for the proposal has been issued by Mr. W. Carty, hon. secretary, Sandymount Band of Hope, 1, Duke-street, Dublin.

The New York Independent states that in some prohibition districts people previously accustomed to stimulants have taken to opium as a substitute.

The gross value of the American breweries which have passed into the control of English syndicates is stated to be £9,013,000. Seventeen companies have taken over a total of thirty-three breweries.

A State Conference of the Prohibition Party, Michigan, has been held in Detroit, in view of the contest on the question to take place during the present year.

Mr. R. Coad is expected to visit New South Wales in May. His success in New Zealand has been most encouraging, and like fruit is anticipated from his labours in Australia.

A plebiscite of the Bo'ness United Presbyterian Church has been taken on the sacramental wine question, with the following results: For unfermented wine, 161; against, 85. Majority for unfermented, 76; neutral, 51.

Senator Dawes, Massachusetts, has presented over 240 petitions asking Congress to stop the drink traffic between the United States and Africa. The petition states that more than 800,000 gallons are annually exported to African ports.

The Executive Committee of the Liverpool Diocesan C.E.T.S. have resolved to engage a certificated day-school master to give simple scientific lectures, illustrated by diagrams, showing the effects of intemperance on the human system.

The Hotel Métropôle, Sydney, lately opened, is a magnificent coffee palace, in which board and lodging, and it is said, all the comfort of really first-class hotel life, may be had for 25s. a week. It cost about £200,000, and over 300 guests can dine at one time.

The statement presented to the Legislative Council, Calcutta, shows a surplus on the year of 37,000 rupees, to a considerable extent due to the opium revenue, and in a lesser degree to the excise. Additional duties on imported spirits and Indian brewed beer are proposed; estimate of increase, 100,000 rupees.

"One of the poor weary ones" writes touchingly in the Church of England Temperance Chronicle, on behalf of her class, the barmaids. She says, "It is time somebody took it up about us poor slaves; because we are nothing better." The way in which barmaids are treated is in many instances a disgrace to civilisation.

On Sunday, March 30, a new crusade against intemperance, was inaugurated in Ireland, under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church. This attempted revival of Father Mathew's noble work has the active sanction of the highest dignitaries in the Church. It aims at a form of home rule of which all parties must approve.

An important Wesleyan Temperance Convention has been arranged to be held at Stockport, under the auspices of the two Wesleyan circuits in the town. The Rev. John Baker, M.A., Rev. J. Murgatroyd, B.A., Mr. H. B. Harrison (Manchester), Mr. Thomas Hardy, Wesleyan district temperance agent, and others are expected to take part.

Rev. Nicholas Kelynack, lately on a visit to Sydney, Australia, for his health, in a private letter, says: "The spirit of gambling is rife, and this evil seems to exist amongst all classes. . . The absence of drunkenness was to me very pleasing, and yet, whilst you do not see men drunk in the streets as at home, their drink bill is nevertheless large."

Miss Haslam addressed the monthly meeting of the Manchester Women's Christian Temperance Association and Police-Court Mission on 2nd inst. on "Women's Work," showing the many opportunities there were for women to work in this temperance cause if they only would do so. She instanced specially work amongst barmaids and policemen.

The temperance cause in Newcastle-on-Tyne has suffered a severe loss through the death of Rev. Dr. Rutherford. In middle life, and in order more effectively to fulfil his ideal of a Christian minister, he studied medicine. One of his main reasons for doing so was a desire to be able to treat the physiological aspects of the temperance question with authority.

In opening a recent temperance bazaar at Newcastle-on-Tyne, promoted by the Good Templars, the Mayor (Mr. T. Bell) said he was deeply interested in the suppression of the national curse of intemperance. He thought if the dwellers in the richer parts of the city knew more of the poorer, a desire for the extinction of the traffic would greatly increase.

Evangelistic Notes.

Manchester.—Mr. Wm. Day, of the Evangelisation Society, has held a mission at John-street Hall, Pendleton, with manifest blessing.

Mr. E. Y. Parker has been holding a mission at Brook-street, Tottenham, which has been refreshing to believers, and has been the means of leading souls to the Saviour. Mr. Parker seems very gifted for this work, having a rich powerful voice and a clear, pointed, earnest way of preaching.

Mr. E. P. Telford, whose work in Great Britain has been greatly blessed for some years past, has recently been conducting missions in New York. Mrs. Telford has assisted her husband in the inquiry-room, and many people have professed to find peace through believing.

Mr. W. R. Lane has just finished a month's work at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, E. Nearly five thousand people attended the concluding meeting on Sunday evening, March 30. A number of persons professed conversion. The week-night lectures, with the model of the Tabernacle in the wilderness, were greatly blessed, many Jews attending.

Jedburgh Home Mission.—A fifteen days' mission, conducted by Mr. Oscar Owers, of the London Evangelisation Society, has been closed, and has resulted in a great blessing to the Christians. Seldom have we had the privilege of hearing the Word preached with more power or clearness, and the results will yet be seen for many days to come. F. H.

Ireland.—During the past month successful evangelistic services have been held at Kilrush by Mr. J. H. Crawford, of the Irish Evangelisation Society. Similar meetings have been held at Warrington by Mr. Peatt, of the same Society; and in the Methodist Church, Larne, by Mr. and Mrs. Brandon and Miss Knox, of Canada. In each case much good was done, and it is believed that several were led to accept Christ as their Saviour.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, from Australia, have just concluded a fortnight's mission at Zion Baptist Chapel, Chatham. Large audiences gathered each night, and on both Sundays crowded the chapel. Many entered the inquiry-room. Mr. Harrison's earnest preaching, and Mrs. Harrison's sweet Gospel singing—as well as their clear dealing with inquirers—were much blessed.

P. Hancocks, Pastor.

Rev. Samuel Jones (Welshpool) has concluded a successful ten days' mission at Morley Hall, Upper Parkstone, Dorset. The meetings were well attended. The word was with power, and much spiritual blessing resulted. Mr. Richard Weaver took part in one of the meetings, giving an address of more than an hour. The congregation which crowded the building was greatly blessed, and several desired prayer on their behalf at the close of the meeting.

Mr. Richard Hill has concluded a successful series of meetings in Bonnethill Free Church, Dundee. This is the church in which lay the life-work of Isabella Macpherson, whose memoir, written by her brother, has been appearing in our pages. The meetings extended over a fortnight, and were largely attended, hundreds being present every evening; in addition to much good done, the Christian workers have received a fresh impetus. Mr. Hill, by his simple powerful addresses, has been most helpful, and the results of his work will abide long after the meetings have passed away. Mr. Hill began a fortnight of meetings in Dalry on first Sabbath of April.

Rev. W. Haslam.—St. Paul's Church, Penzance, had, during last month, an unexpected visit from Rev. William Haslam, who, some thirty or more years ago, was very intimately connected with the spiritual work that was carried on in the parish under the late Rev. George Fenton. Mr. Haslam was paying a short visit to the West of Cornwall, for the sake of a little holiday, and asked the vicar if he would like him to give a series of sermons and addresses in his church; an invitation the vicar was only too thankful to accept. Mr. Haslam's mission at Blackrock, near Dublin, which commenced on March 30 and concluded on Easter Monday, increased in interest day by day, the various meetings having been attended by large numbers, not only from the immediate neighbourhood, but from more distant localities. Mr. Haslam's forthcoming engagements are—April 19, St. Cuthbert, Bedford; May 3, Christ Church, Bromley-park, Kent.

The Book World.

A Chronicle of a Country Town. Religious Tract Society. A charmingly told story, showing how a brother and sister, deeply imbued with the spirit of practical Christian helpfulness, became centres of blessing in their neighbourhood, and influenced others in the right direction.

A most admirable and outspoken sermon to young men on Temptations of London Life, by Rev. C. B. Foy, vicar of St. Mary's, West Kensington, has been published, and ought to be widely circulated. The proceeds will be devoted to the funds of the Hammersmith Y.M.C.A. (1d. A. Churchman, 16, King-street, Hammersmith, W.)

Electricity and its Uses. By J. Munro. 3s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. The third edition, revised and enlarged, of a handbook of special value. Recent advances in the application of electricity to the needs of man are succinctly described in popular language. The pages are fascinating reading, and embellished with numerous illustrations.

From Printing Office to the Court of St. James's. By W. M. Thayer. 3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. Mr. Thayer's facile pen finds a congenial theme in narrating the story of the boyhood and manhood of the illustrious Benjamin Franklin. His career, though not flawless, was full of life's romance, and this presentation of it will delight and inspire the youthful reader, showing him what heights of influence and affluence can be attained by perseverance and determination.

Bright Light in the Clouds. This is a little volume of letters, written by the late Rev. Samuel Hebditch, to several suffering and bereaved members of his flock. It will be welcomed by all who, in England and Australia, had the privilege of knowing him as pastor and friend. The letters were written at various periods of Mr. Hebditch's ministry, and have been collected by one who knew and loved him. They stimulate joyful trust in God's love to his children, and will speak comfort to many disciples in the school of sorrow. An excellent portrait of Mr. Hebditch forms a frontispiece. (2s. Nisbet & Co).

The Gospel in Great Britain; from St. Patrick to John Knox and John Wesley. By Rev. Samuel Macnaughton, M.A. Edinburgh: James Gemmell. We rejoice to welcome this excellent work in its second edition. The progress of Gospel truth is a golden thread running through the history of our beloved land. The author set himself to trace an evangelical succession outside of Rome and opposed to it all down the centuries, and to note with some degree of fulness the prominent agencies that brought blessing to the nation at different periods. He has succeeded admirably. We trust the volume will go through many more editions, and fulfil an important ministry of public enlightenment as to the introduction and progress of the truth in Great Britain.

Russia Japhet: or, The Muscovite, the Cossack, and the Mongol. By Oxonian. F. W. Parry & Co., 29, Paternoster-row. This book professes to elaborate an identification of the power whose doom is foretold in Ezek. xxxviii. with the Empire of the Czars. The author maintains that the British are the Israel of prophecy; and that the children of Canaan, the accursed, are to be found to-day in every quarter of the globe, weak in intellect and stunted in stature, pioneering and preparing for the advent of the higher races. The book bears evidence of wide reading, and considerable ingenuity in the department of linguistic identification. These will at once impress the unlearned and amuse philologists. The discussion is not, however, conducted with sufficient precision to give the work any real value.

By Canoe and Dog Train. By Rev. E. R. Young. 3s. 6d. C. H. Kelly. Mr. Young has an ample story to tell, and he tells it in a very lively and pictorial style. Missionary life and work among the North American Indians, before the railroad invasion, were surrounded by many difficulties and dangers, but they also had elements of special fascination and interest. All these come out in Mr. Young's graphic record of his journeys and evangelistic efforts among the dusky Indian tribes. The work was successful as well as interesting, and in the great North West as elsewhere the Gospel has proved itself to be a message of saving and transforming power. This is an admirable chapter in the romance of missions, and it ought to have hosts of readers, especially among the young. Fine portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Young are given, and there are also good illustrations.

The Weekly Pulpit. Vol. vii. Elliot Stock. A valuable repertory of sermons and outlines, critical and homiletical notes, illustrations, and addresses. Preachers will find this volume a fund of suggestion, at once practical and pointed.

History of the Westminster Assembly of Divines. By W. M. Hetherington, D.D. Fifth edition. Edinburgh: James Gemmell. Though having a special interest for Presbyterians, this volume cannot but claim the attention of all students of the religious history of our country. The character and proceedings of the Assembly are stated with fulness and care, and what makes the book specially attractive is the fact that in tracing the controversies by which both Church and kingdom were agitated in the seventeenth century, the author has avoided giving a controversial aspect to his work. Rev. Robert Williamson, of Ascog, Rothesay, supplies indexes and valuable notes. At the present time, when "revision" of the Confession of Faith is being so widely canvassed, the story of the Assembly by which the celebrated symbol was formulated will assuredly repay careful perusal.

The Miracles of our Lord. By John Laidlaw, D.D. 7s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. An expository and homiletic work of an eminently useful character by the Professor of Theology in New College, Edinburgh. The field has been well explored by others, but no one can peruse Dr. Laidlaw's volume without recognising many important results of his personal research. Classification is not easy, but the author groups the various miracle narratives as they relate to works affecting nature, acts of healing, and raisings of the dead, dealing separately with the post-resurrection miracle. Leaving apologetical questions, he sets each incident in the light of an exposition enforced by minute examination, and then indicates the outstanding lessons in a way which cannot fail to be very helpful to spiritual application. He well maintains that the miracles are not to be regarded as bare attestations of a Divine commission, far less as mere wonders. They are to be studied in their symbolic or didactic aspects, as well as in their evidential character. In a word, the miracles are an integral portion of the revelation made through Jesus Christ. These considerations receiving full weight, there is no attempt in this volume to explain the mode of the miracles. On this topic Dr. Laidlaw tersely says:—"From its very nature as an immediate Divine operation, the miracle admits no explanation of mode or process. All such attempts are self-contradictory. They are suggestions of secondary reasons or causes for that which ex hypothesi has only a Great First Cause." The volume is a mine of wealth to those who would expound the Scriptures to public profit.

What are Churches for? By Frank Ballard, M.A., B.Sc., Wesleyan Minister. 6d. Elliot Stock. The only favourable thing which the utmost charity enables us to say of this pamphlet is that it calls attention to one or two points of weakness in connection with Evangelical Churches. Sectarian bigotry and exclusiveness; the want of practical sympathy with abounding suffering—these, where they do exist, are serious hindrances, and we shall be glad to see them removed. But the author of this pamphlet, like most of the representatives of advanced theology, falls into grossest caricature when he describes orthodox evangelicals (page 87), while his remedy is considerably more to be dreaded than even his exaggerated statement of the disease. If we follow his lead we shall have to surrender the inspiration of the Bible (64), total depravity (34), imputed righteousness, the atonement as generally understood (65), and eternal punishment (47). On the other hand, our new theology will include Divine Fatherhood as "the very heart of the Gospel message" (63); the opening of the churches to receive all without requiring the condition of conversion (90); the abandonment of the old distinction between the Church and the world (60); the rejection of "Bunyanism" as having been substituted for Christianity (58), and the adoption of Maurice and Kingsley as our models (61); "rational amusement" must be regarded "as a branch of the work of the Churches—distinctly involved in their commission" (9); while, instead of the kingdom of God as we have understood it, Christ is to be preached as "King of human society," who has "a mission for redemption in politics, science, and art, as well as in the slums." These are some of the conclusions to which this author would lead us—all of them the result, in our judgment, of the entire neglect of some Scriptures, and the very imperfect interpretation of others.

The Word Opened; or, Materials for Bible-Readings. By Rev. Evan H. Hopkins. Marshall Brothers. Many will welcome this handy volume, in which fundamental truths are admirably unfolded. The outlines are accompanied by comments and illustrations, and there is a page for such notes as the student may wish to add for his own assistance in using the readings. In the introduction, the author expresses a hope that the work will prove useful to those who, from lack of time or opportunity, find it difficult, in these days of "high pressure," to prepare for the mission-room or the Bible-class. To such workers the book may be cordially commended. Should the series be continued, Mr. Hopkins promises to deal in a similar way with subjects involving a deeper study of Holy Writ.

FROM APRIL MAGAZINES.

A VERY INTERESTING LETTER.

appears in the current issue of Regions Beyond, from the pen of Miss Lucy Guinness. It records a conversation with a veritable "heathen Chinee" in Boston, U.S.A., and furnishes a racy description of the Chinese Sunday-school in that city.

IDENTIFIED WITH CHRIST.

In Col. ii. 9-12, Paul reasons: By becoming Christians you have been so identified with Christ that what is true of Him is true of you. This thought the Apostle expands throughout the whole passage, thus: In Christ dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and ye have been filled full in Him; "in whom also ye were circumcised in the circumcision of Christ; being buried together with Him in his baptism (literally, as in Rom. vi. 4, 'in the baptism'); in whom also ye were raised together with Him." That is to say, Ye were circumcised along with Him on the eighth day of his earthly life, buried along with Him on the last day of his earthly life, raised along with Him on the first "Lord's Day," and are now seated along with Him in the heavenly places.—Rev. H. J. Paterson, in The Expository Times.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY OF THE FUTURE.

With the advantages of the electric railway so unquestionably demonstrated in actual practice, it would not be unsafe to hazard the opinion that, in ten years, at the farthest, there will not be a single horse-railway in operation, at least in our own country [the United States]. The horse will then be once more returned to his legitimate field of labour, and the street-car passenger will be transported at an increased speed, and with all the comforts of easy riding, in cars propelled and lighted by electricity; while it is by no means improbable that, with further work on the line indicated, the passenger may step aboard a train in New York at ten in the morning, and eat a five o'clock dinner in Chicago on the same day. Enough has indeed been accomplished to show that electricity is destined to be one of the most powerful factors entering into our social conditions, and that the ease of distribution and convenience of power afforded by it must bring forth changes in the social order which are even now hardly realised.—Joseph Wetzler, in Scribner's Magazine.

Messrs. Cassell & Co. have commenced to reissue the very attractive serial, "Gleanings from Popular Authors;" 7d. per part.

No. 78 of the New Biographical Series is devoted to Archbishop Usshер. The very interesting story of the celebrated Irish primate is well told by Dr. Macaulay. (1d. Religious Tract Society.)

Using and Abusing the World is the title of a booklet by Rev. Walter Horne, M.A., curate of Christ Church, North Brixton. Canon Hussey writes a preface, the tone of which is in excellent harmony with the high character of the counsels conveyed.

Holiness from the [to the] Lord. By William Sloan Glasgow. This booklet, full of helpful thoughts on the Christian life, has reached a fourth edition. Faithful Sayings from God's own Word is a penny book, full of Scripture, and therefore worthy of high commendation. (Holness.)

Mr. Holness is publishing a series of penny books, entitled "Memoirs of Mighty Men." Nos. 3 and 4 are devoted to David Livingstone and Martin Luther; written by J. J. Ellis. These memoirs are well printed on good paper, and embellished with numerous illustrations.

Mr. W. M. Noble has written a very interesting sketch of the eventful life of Thomas Horrocks, the well-known temperance evangelist, recently appointed as mission agent to the National Temperance League. Both the dark and the bright sides of his career are graphically described, and a frontispiece portrait is given. (4d. 33, Paternoster-row.)

Letters to the Editor.

APOSTOLIC v. PRESENT-DAY PREACHING.

Dear Sir,—I have recently been reading in the Acts of the Apostles.

It is interesting to observe the bold manner in which the Apostles simply and faithfully preached "Jesus and the resurrection."

I have been much impressed with the success that attended their labours. In chap. ii. three thousand souls were saved, and in chap. iv. we are told that five thousand believed, whilst in chap. x. it is recorded that a houseful received blessing, and so on.

Now, Sir, what I should like to ask is: Why are these results not seen nowadays? There is plenty of preaching, and the Holy Ghost is here now, as then, but how comparatively few conversions there are.

If you could find space in your valuable paper for a limited discussion I am sure it would be intensely interesting to have an expression of opinion on this matter from a few of your numerous readers, who know the Lord, and are interested in service for Him.—Yours very truly,

Wm. Bramwell Dick.

9, Cumberland-street, Edinburgh.

APOSTOLIC WARFARE.

Sir,—The controversy as to Apostolic warfare seems now to have reached a point where I may well leave it to any who desire further to prolong it.

Pastor Douglas will still believe that I meant to deny the existence of any evangelical ministry outside our ranks. I hope I have convinced others that I never meant to do so, and that the report does not imply anything of the kind.

Upon the more important question of the Scriptural authority for our system of government, it is now admitted* that I did cite, and that we do claim, such authority. We shall, no doubt, be considered presumptuous for so doing. But that I cannot help, and I neither hope to convince the Pastor nor the many excellent people who hold aloof from us that we are right. They will continue not to "know" us, and we shall march on by God's grace, content to live "as unknown, and yet well known."

Whether it was, or was not, according to the Divine plan that no one Apostle was universally obeyed is really a question for students. What we observe with so much thankfulness, is that, calculating distance by length of postal transit, Paul was obeyed, and obeyed precisely, over a wider range of territory than the whole world now offers to our General. God has before our eyes repeated the same wonder by the Almighty Spirit that worketh all in all. We do not invite the Pastor nor anybody else who does not "know" him to obey our beloved leader. We only ask them to retire from the seat of the one Master when they tell us that we are not his disciples, but the disciples of man, because we have thus learnt Christ.

Now, I am just concluding visits to two nations differing as widely perhaps as two nations can—the French and the Swedes. But in each case I have seen the same thing—an Army raised up under the command of a woman, advancing over a large territory, and subduing crowds of the rebellious to the service of Jesus Christ. In each case I have seen the most perfect discipline. Hundreds of young men and women, who have left all to follow Christ, and who do their "diligence to come," or go, as fast as trains will carry them, to any spot to which they are sent to labour for the salvation of the lost. I am passing on to apply the same system to another nation, which at present scarcely knows us. If our authority be of man, the Germans will despise and refuse it. Only the power of God can subdue them under us. But He has already given us some thirty German officers, and I know that He will help us to make full proof of our Apostleship there also.

Railton.

* [We cannot follow Mr. Railton here. It has not been admitted in these columns that he has justified his claim from Scripture.—Ed.]

Mr. John Jewell Penstone writes a letter on this subject. One of his points may be briefly expressed thus: If the Salvation Army under General Booth corresponds to the Church under the Apostle Paul, how is it that the ordinances of the Church are ignored by the Army? If the Army discards the ordinances because it is a Mission and not a Church, then surely Commissioner Railton's analogy fails. Another point which Mr. Penstone makes is: It is alleged that the Apostle Paul was a more absolute dictator than any military commander could be, and passages of Scripture are quoted to support the statement. The meaning thus put upon those passages must be erroneous, because not in harmony with the general facts. In 1 Cor. xvi. 12, Paul says: "As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren; but HIS WILL was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time." Were there two Apostolic "generals" in the Church of the first century? or should Apollos have been drummed out of the service for disobedience? Mr. Penstone entreats the Army authorities not to press upon believers as Apostolic things which have no resemblance to the Apostle's well-defined way of serving the Lord.

"PERFECTIONISM."

Dear Sir,—No doubt Rev. F. B. Meyer was actuated by the best of intentions when he penned the letter which appeared in your issue of the 28th ult., under the head of "Perfectionism." By his own showing, however, the charges of insincerity and want of straightforwardness which he brings against Mr. Sanford are based upon hearsay. Had Mr. Meyer himself attended the services recently held at Hampstead, he would have found no discrepancy between Mr. Sanford's writings and teachings.

If by "eradication of sin," which is not a Scriptural expression, is meant perfect cleansing from all sin, both as a manifestation and as a principle, then Mr. Sanford undoubtedly does teach it; but if this expression means the removal of all the influence of sin, both external and internal, then Mr. Sanford does not teach it. The same remarks apply to the teaching of Mr. Reader Harris.

Mr. Meyer cannot condemn Mr. Sanford without equally condemning John and Charles Wesley, Whitefield, George Fox, and many other eminent saints of God, who persistently taught identically the same doctrine of entire sanctification and the cleansing away of inbred sin. To come to our own time, Mr. Meyer must equally condemn Dr. Westcott, whose appointment as Bishop of Durham was noted with satisfaction in the same issue of your paper. Let me annex a few extracts from Dr. Westcott's Commentary on the First Epistle of St. John. The italics are mine.

"i. 7.—The action of Christ upon the members of his body brings about that real sinlessness which is essential to union with God."

"...'cleanseth.' The thought is not of the forgiveness only, but of the removal. The sin is done away, the purifying action is exerted continuously....'From all sin.' The thought here is of 'sin,' not of 'sins'—of the spring, the principle, not of the separate manifestations...Ver. 9: 'forgive... cleanse.' Both acts are spoken of in their completeness. The specific sins are forgiven, the character is purified...As judging righteously God forgives those who stand in a just relation to Himself, as being righteous He communicates his nature to those who are united with Him in his Son...God meets frank confession with free blessing...a twofold blessing: (1) The remission of sins and their consequences; (2) The cleansing of the sinner from the moral imperfection which separates him from God."

What difference in doctrine is there between that in the extracts from Mr. Sanford's writings given by Mr. Meyer, and that laid down in the above extracts from Dr. Westcott's commentary? The "flesh" in the sense of the "carnal" mind is done away, but the "flesh" in the sense of our human nature—Scripture uses the word in both senses—remains to the end, subject to infirmity and weakness, but delivered from indwelling sin. This is Mr. Sanford's teaching, or rather, as he demonstrates it to be, the teaching of Scripture, for he refers to chapter and verse for everything, though Mr. Meyer calls it "unscriptural" and "misleading." Further, the word teleios must be eliminated from the New Testament before the words "perfection" or "perfectionism" can be used as if they were unorthodox.

In conclusion, may I remark that negative evidence is always unsatisfactory, and often misleading? A man was seen by two credible witnesses to steal a sheep, and was convicted on their evidence, though he was prepared with the evidence of twenty men to prove that they did not see him steal it. So the evidence of two or three sincere Christians who can testify that by God's grace they experience deliverance from indwelling sin is worth more than the evidence of a thousand others who can only testify that they have not found this deliverance. The recent mission at Hampstead, was prefaced and accompanied by fourteen days of earnest united prayer on the part of Christians of all denominations: one special and continuous petition being that God would grant the speakers grace to proclaim the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. In the face of the blessing which has resulted, who can doubt that this prayer was answered?

May I not remind those who do not see eye to eye with Mr. Sanford and Mr. Harris, of Gamaliel's counsel: "Refrain from these men, and let them alone, for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."—Yours truly,

Henry E. Millar.

Heathdown, Hampstead-heath.

[We must reply to the above that members of our staff having been present at some of the Hampstead meetings, and other friends at others, we were assured that "the eradication of sin," or, to use Mr. Millar's words, "perfect cleansing from all sin, both as a manifestation and as a principle," was not taught there. If, however, Mr. Millar asserts that it was, we will not contradict him. We believe such teaching to be utterly unscriptural.

Dr. Westcott on 1 John i. certainly cannot be taken to support the view. Even the words quoted above prove this: "The sin is done away; and the purifying action is exerted continuously." If "inbred sin" were "cleansed away," what room would there be for "the purifying action" to be "exerted continuously"?

On ver. 8 Dr. Westcott says, "If we say that we have no sin." The phrase "to have sin" marks the presence of something which is not isolated, but a continuous source of influence. [This explains the need of the purifying action of the blood exerted continuously.] "We deceive ourselves, or rather, we lead ourselves astray...We know that the assertion which we make is false; and, more than this, we persuade ourselves that it is true." Italics ours.

On ver. 10 we read: "He who recognises the true character of sin, and the natural permanence of sin as a power within, may yet deny that he personally has sinned. By making this assertion of sinlessness we affirm (positively) that God deals falsely with men ('we make Him a liar'); and (negatively) we are without the voice of God within us, which converts his revelation for each one into a living Word."

Nothing could be clearer than that the pretensions of "perfectionism" are not advocated by Dr. Westcott. Would to God that all who claim the sinlessness asserted by our correspondent to be the teaching of Mr. Sanford would take to heart Dr. Westcott's pregnant words: "'If we say that we have no sin,' we know that the assertion which we make is false; and, more than this, we persuade ourselves that it is true."

Once more, to quote Dr. Westcott—"The idea [of the noun from which the verb we deceive ourselves, or lead ourselves astray, is formed] is in all cases that of straying from the one way: not of misconception in itself, but of misconduct. Such going astray is essentially ruinous." Our italics and small capitals.—Ed.]

"UNSECTARIANISM."—The signature that was attached to the letter upon "Unsectarianism" which appeared in our last issue was a misprint. It should have been G. F. Trench—a name familiar to those of our readers who attend the Believers' Meetings held annually in Dublin.

"RELIGIOUS MASHERS."—In reviewing a book on sanctification Mr. Spurgeon says: "Certain young divines, whose judgments are, as yet, green and sour, sneer at Puritan writers; but this is simply the result of an ignorant pride. Their criticism is the hiss of geese. These religious mashers will have their day, and then go to the dogs. Those who read the old theology, and practice the old walking with God, will survive the contempt of the foolish, and grow in the esteem of the wise."

SASKATCHEWAN, CANADA.—Writing to a friend in Edinburgh, Rev. A. A. Wright, who labours in the Gospel in this north-western province, states that he has moved fifty miles to the East to an Indian reserve. He also visits the different out-settlements where there are whites and half-breeds. There is a great call among them for good reading, either books or papers, and Mr. Wright would welcome a further supply. Scriptural coloured illustrations would be useful among the Indians. His address is Kinistino, P.O., viâ Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada.

Among the Churches.

BAPTIST.

The Baptist Church at Rochester has celebrated its second anniversary. During the past year twenty-six have been added to the church, making a membership of fifty-seven, and £395 has been secured towards the new school chapel, which is to be erected shortly.

At Duckpool-road, Newport, Mon., anniversary sermons were preached by Revs. C. E. Griffin, B. Thomas, and A. T. Jones. The chapel now seats nearly eight hundred people. Much spiritual blessing continues to attend the earnest ministry of Rev. A. T. Jones. There are cases of inquiry nearly every Sunday.

A social meeting of the Belle Isle Young Men's and Young Women's Guilds was recently held at the Chapel in Brewery-road, N. Nearly 500 young people were present. Earnest, helpful addresses were delivered by Mrs. Aukland and Mr. W. T. Paton, each speaker seeking to lead to decision for Christ, or to renewed devotion to his service.

METHODIST.

The resignation of Rev. Edward Smith, of Clerkenwell, has been formally accepted by the Committee of the London Wesleyan Mission, with many expressions of regret, and of appreciation of Mr. Smith's work at Clerkenwell.

Rev. Dr. Lunn, in accepting the invitation of the Wesleyan London Committee to remain in connection with the West Central branch, has written to the general secretary, Rev. W. D. Walters, stating that he hopes after next Conference to be able to continue his services in connection with the Mission without further remuneration. This is already the case with Rev. Mark Guy Pearse.

The Christian Advocate states that Methodism is progressing rapidly and satisfactorily in Germany. The Methodist Episcopal Church of America only commenced its work in that country in 1849, and now there are nearly 16,000 members, with 98 ministers and 19 helpers; and the English Methodists have 2404 members and 31 ministers. The writer adds that a "great and effectual door is at present open in Berlin and Bavaria for earnest spiritual work."

The fourth anniversary of the opening of Clapton-park Tabernacle (Rev. T. Jackson, pastor) was held on Good Friday. The past year has been one of much blessing, and progress was reported in every department of work. The number of members in Church fellowship is 147. There are 23 teachers in the Sunday-school and 223 scholars. During the year 62 open-air services were held, and over 2000 visits made to the sick poor. Some of the most degraded have been led to Christ during the year, and are now in Christian fellowship.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The church at Kingsland has raised nearly £6000, and a good work has been done, during the three and a half years of Rev. T. Hooper's pastorate.

At the anniversary meeting of Trinity Church, Hanbury-street, Rev. Dr. Tyler gave an interesting account of his fifty-six years of labour in the East of London. The report stated that thirty-seven members had been admitted during the past year.

Rev. J. Sherratt has resigned the pastorate of the church at Burgess-hill, Sussex. In preaching his farewell sermon, he said that during the three years of his ministry there his business had not been to amuse nor to provide intellectual food of things deep, dark, and mysterious. He had sought to declare the plain truth, and to point to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world.

At the recent annual meeting of the Congregational Union of Gloucestershire and Herefordshire, held at Hereford, Rev. W. H. Skinner, of Bristol, spoke of the Forward Movement in connection with Lodge-street Chapel and Gaunt House in that city, showing that in an effective manner the masses are being reached. Rev. E. E. Ingham, of Leintwardine, Herefordshire, also made an interesting statement respecting evangelistic work in his district.

A new mission-hall, erected by the congregation of Brunswick-street Church, in Union-street, Ardwick, was opened by Rev. W. Rigby Murray. The hall is admirably adapted for home mission work. It contains a main hall seated for 500 persons; an infants' room, capable of holding 200 little ones; and six class rooms, with accommodation for about 140 advanced scholars. In connection with the mission-hall, there are 129 persons in church membership, upwards of 400 scholars in the Sunday-school, 600 members in the Band of Hope, an attendance of from 250 to 300 at the Gospel service, a Bible-woman, tract distributing agency, working-men's temperance society, &c.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

Rev. John Smith, of Broughton-place U.P. Church, Edinburgh, has accepted an invitation to take part this summer in the Northfield Convention.

Dr. Pierson is expected to be in Edinburgh at the time of the Synod and Assembly meetings, and he has been invited to address each of the courts on missions.

Special evangelistic meetings have been carried on for several months in connection with Young-street Free Church, Glasgow, which is situated in the centre of a dense population of the poorer working class of the East-end. Mr. Mackay, the pastor, supported by a large staff of Christian workers, has been labouring most successfully in reclaiming the lapsed. At the annual congregational soirée it was reported that 142 have been added to the membership during the year, bringing the total up to 740.

Miss Tyson will this month conduct services amongst the young for a fortnight in White Memorial Free Church, Glasgow.

Rev. Wm. Anderson, the veteran missionary of Old Calabar, will not be nominated to the moderatorship of the U.P. Church this year, owing to an affection of the eyes from which he is suffering. It is hoped he may be well enough to accept the post next year.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Presbyterian theological colleges at Belfast and Derby have each had a very successful year, and have respectively closed their annual sessions.

As the genial spring weather approaches the open-air evangelistic services held for many years on Sunday evenings at the Custom House Steps, Belfast, attract larger numbers, and are likely to be productive of much good.

The Methodist Temperance Committee have resolved to recommend the Conference to sanction the holding of a special temperance Gospel mission in every circuit in Ireland in connection with the centenary of Rev. Theobald Mathew in October next.

The last year was the most successful the Belfast Association for the Employment of Industrious Blind has ever had. Seventy persons, of whom the half were women, were altogether employed, and the Association, which fosters a spirit of independence and keeps many off the rates, is almost self-supporting.

A branch of the Y.M.C.A. having been established a few months since in North Belfast, most suitable premises have just been secured as a reading-room, and as a centre in which to carry on evangelistic and other Gospel efforts, and altogether the undertaking promises to be a blessing to the large number of young men who reside in that part of the city.

Great Victoria-street Baptist Church, Belfast, of which Rev. Wm. Usher, M.D., is the minister, is in a fairly prosperous state. During the ten years Dr. Usher has been pastor of the congregation he has received into church fellowship 231 persons, of whom he baptized 131. A schoolhouse has been built during the same time at a cost of £500, and £100 of debt has been paid off, while about £800 is now promised towards the erection of a manse.

Lord Plunket, Archbishop of Dublin, has issued an important pastoral in reference to the spread of Ritualism in his diocese, and in this he strongly condemns the use of crosses on the communion table, the eastward position, the elevation of the cup and patten, bowings towards the communion table, ablutions, and especially auricular confession; but on the other hand, he urges evangelicals to be very particular in their observance of all rubrical rites and enactments. Evidently the Archbishop's sympathies are entirely with the evangelical party, but he has a difficult part to play, and some allowance should therefore be made for his position.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Rev. John Wilson, Presbyterian minister of Lecumpher, Moneymore, co. Derry, in his 59th year.—Bishop Callaway, D.D., for some years Bishop of Kaffraria, S. Africa.—Rev. D. S. Rae, for over forty-three years minister of the parishes of Lethendy and Kinloch, Perthshire.—Rev. William Edwards, late pastor of Sion Welsh Baptist Church, Cefn Mawr, near Ruabon, where he ministered for nearly twenty years.

Brevia.

The new Sultan of Zanzibar is said to be co-operating in good faith in the repression of the slave trade.

The Evangelical Military Church in Rome had a very enthusiastic gathering on the birthday of the King of Italy.

The Swedish Missionary Society will shortly send out eleven new missionaries—seven to the Congo and four to China.

In France there are forty-one Protestant orphan institutions, containing 1650 children, with a budget of 600,000 francs.

The Bishop of Peterborough recently denounced the system of child insurance as one of the greatest social evils of the day.

A series of historical biographies—"The Rulers of India," edited by Sir W. Hunter is being published by the Clarendon Press.

A writer in The Westminster and Lambeth Gazette speaks highly of the Working Men's Mission, Collingwood-street, New Cut.

A correspondent at Rome says there has been renovated in the Vatican the map of Italy as it was, that is, with the old Pontifical State, the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, and the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. While the rest of the world moves round the Vatican stands still.

Abbé Desgodins, who has been a missionary on the Chinese borders of Tibet country for thirty-five years, has lately returned to France with the manuscript of a dictionary of the Tibetan language on which he has laboured for a quarter of a century, and which he is desirous of having published in Europe. It will be in Latin, French, and English.

BRAZIL.—The Protestants have profited largely by the turn in political affairs. Formerly the Reformed Churches were only tolerated, the Catholic Church alone being recognised by the State; now religious liberty on a broad basis has been declared in the country. The continual annoyance to which the Protestants were previously subjected is at an end, and it is hoped that advantage will be taken of the improved condition of things to make known to the people the Gospel in its purity.

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.—The Socialist workmen of Budapest have in public meeting demanded that, except in certain exceptional cases, Sunday work shall be made illegal.

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH is making rapid progress, in the United States. From 1884 to 1888 the German communities of this order erected no fewer than 1532 places of worship.

SPAIN.—There are at the present time 179 Roman Catholic religious orders in this country, possessing in all 1330 convents. In the city of Barcelona alone there are 163 convents set apart for women. During the past fourteen years the number of nuns in Spain has doubled, while the number of monks has increased sixfold.

BAVARIA.—The Government, after for a long time supporting the Old Catholic cause, in spite of the persistent opposition of the Vatican, has suddenly yielded to the clerical party, and officially acknowledged the infallibility and primacy of the Pope. Having lost their leader, Dr. Döllinger, the Old Catholics of Bavaria will henceforth be regarded by the State as "heretics."

RUSSIA.—Touchkourow, the celebrated ethnologist, has computed that the Russian army contains 400,000 Pagans and 50,000 Mohammedans. Seventy per cent. of the Cossacks are outside the Greek Church, and among them the religion of Islam is making inroads upon the "Orthodox" faith. The army of the Ural contains 10,000 "Orthodox," 20,000 Mohammedans, and 90,000 Pagans.

SWITZERLAND.—Large meetings have been held at Lausanne, under the auspices of the Blue Cross Society. The proceedings were very cheering to temperance reformers. The movement, which answers to the "Blue Ribbon" work in England, is making new friends on all hands, the prejudices which were at first excited having in many cases given way before a due appreciation of the high aims and objects in view.

MANCHURIA.—In connection with the U.P. Church of Scotland's mission in Manchuria, N. China, over forty were admitted into the Church in the out-stations north of Moukden during January. Five years ago Christianity was practically unknown in these regions, and there were only one or two Christians. Now there are 200 members, scattered among more than a score of villages, and this number represents but a small proportion of those whom Christianity has influenced.

BOSNIA.—Under Turkish government there were scarcely any schools here. Now good schools have been established, and the children of the poor in town and country are not only taught, but provided with all means of learning, and even with good clothing. Creed is no bar to advancement in education, and as intelligence is being developed, Gospel work will be greatly helped. Mr. Adolf Hempt, sen., of the German Baptist Mission, sells every year from 1400 to 1500 Bibles in his journeyings. The Roman Catholics are hostile, but they cannot materially impede the work.

GERMANY.—One of the latest lies of Rome is elaborated in an essay written by a Prussian curate to prove that Luther did not die a natural death, but committed suicide after an evening passed in excessive drinking! Professor Th. Kolde, of Erlangen, has promptly shown that no fact of history is better attested than the death of Luther, as we all know it to have occurred, in restful reliance upon God, and with triumphant profession of faith in Christ. The misfortune is that the refutations of Rome's wicked falsehoods are not read, as we could wish them to be, by the millions who believe everything the priests write and say.

FRANCE.—The Municipal Council of Paris has assumed an attitude of hostility to the practice of betting. The evil, formerly confined to the racecourse, has of late been rampant in many parts of the city, betting agencies having been established as such, and also in association with various trades. Poor people in the receipt of public relief have engaged in the vice, and the gambling agents have actually asserted their claim to prompt reimbursement from the allowances made. Consequently the subject has become one of widespread public interest, and come under the condemnation of the Municipal Council.

NEW GUINEA.—The Episcopal Church in Australia has commenced missionary work in New Guinea, and at the recent conference of the New South Wales and Queensland Wesleyan Churches it was decided to accept Sir W. Macgregor's invitation to establish a mission in the island. There is abundant room on the island and in the D'Entrecasteaux and Louisiades groups for these denominations, without danger of encroaching upon ground already taken up by the London Missionary Society, and it is to be hoped that each will enter upon new ground with due regard to the claims of the Society which initiated missionary work in New Guinea and Torres Straits. The Catholic Society had no scruples about entering the field of the London Missionary Society.—Australian Independent.

SOUTH AFRICA.—The Bishop of Cape Town in a pastoral letter to the clergy and laity of the diocese, announces that a general mission, with the object of "deepening the spiritual life of many, and awakening others from the sleep of sin," will take place at the Cape during the coming winter. The missioners will be Rev. Canon Mason, rector of All Hallows', Barking; Rev. Canon Bodington, missioner of the diocese of Lichfield; and Rev. George C. Grubb, who is now engaged in evangelistic work in Ceylon. The two former of these clergy expect to arrive towards the end of July from England, and to proceed at once to hold a mission at Kimberley, returning to Cape Town about August 13. By this time, it is hoped, Mr. Grubb will have arrived from Ceylon, and the mission will commence with a series of services in the cathedral.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 13.—Job XVI.

THIS chapter commences Job's reply to the second speech of Eliphaz.

(1) He rejects the empty consolations of his friends (1-6).—They are "miserable comforters," speaking "vain words" (2, 3). If they were in Job's condition nothing would be easier than for him to string together similar phrases (4). His reference to "mouth" and "lip" (5) suggests that his friends had given him merely lip-comfort. It is so much easier to look at the grief of another than to endure it. Only he can truly comfort who can feel what we feel. What a joy to possess a High Priest that "can be touched with the feeling of our" grief (Heb. iv. 15).

(2) He dwells again upon the picture of his misery (7-17).—It is painted in very black colours. God is regarded as the author of it, who in his "wrath" seems to "hate" him (9). In attributing his afflictions to God he has got half a truth; but the lack of the other half fills him with grief. Not hatred, but love prompts God to chasten his people (John xv. 2; Heb. xii. 6). Not only God, but men also are against him (10, 11). Note how the gestures of Job's enemies correspond with those of our Lord's enemies while on the cross (Ps. xxii. 13; John xviii. 22, xix. 3). To Job it appears that God, who laid his hand heavily upon him, abandoned him into the hands of the ungodly. This was an added bitterness to Job's grief. The remembrance of the honour in which he was held before (xxix.) makes it more painful to be treated with contempt now. Again his thoughts revert to God, who comes unexpectedly (12) and sorely upon him; makes him a target for his arrows (13); or a fort which He carries with terrible assault (14). And Job, humbled to the dust, with sackcloth as his perpetual garment (15), and face foul with weeping (16), remains puzzled and perplexed, because both in outward action, and in his whole life with God (17) he knows nothing against himself. Compare 9-17 with Isa. liii. 1-10, and see how remarkable Job's sufferings resembled those of the Lord Jesus.

(3) He gets a glimpse of a mysterious hope (18-22).—It is another instance of how Job's misery and despair lead him to a cry that God answers in the Gospel. He anticipates death as the result of his afflictions; but asks that after death his blood should not cease to cry for his vindication (18). But who is to hear the cry? Not his friends, for they "scorn" him (20). Then to God he appeals. Job feels assured that there must be a "witness in heaven," who will "vouch" (19, R.V.) for him there, and will "maintain his right with God" (21, R.V.). This is a wonderful passage, and suggests that the deepest needs of the human heart cannot be met without a Divine Saviour.

MONDAY, APRIL 14.—Job XVII.

Continuing his reply, Job, who sees no hope of restoration here (1, 2), makes

(1) A new appeal to God (3-9).—As he hoped for a witness in heaven (xvi. 19), so he now looks to God for a surety (3). Comp. Prov. vi. 1, xvii. 18. The Psalmist (Ps. cxix. 122) and the prophet (Isa. xxxviii. 14, R.V.) made a similar appeal to God. We have again the answer to this appeal in the Lord Jesus. Job strengthens his appeal by a description of his sad condition (4-8). Yet note how he maintains his own integrity (9). There are many perplexing questions which yet the righteous cannot answer; but these things shall not turn them from righteousness. Job includes himself among the number, and thus disproves Satan's calumny. Seek such a righteousness as will persevere, even when God's dealings appear to be against you.

(2) A gloomy anticipation (10-16).—He gives up the hope of any real solace from his friends (10), and just anticipates the grave as his only place of rest (11-16). We must remember that at that time life and immortality had not been brought to light by the Gospel. Job got nothing more than occasional and brief glimpses of truths which are now made known to us. We may, however, profitably remember the end awaiting us, while we look beyond the tomb to the Father's house on high. Our anticipation, like that of Paul, is not that of "going down to the bars of the pit," but of "departing to be with Christ, which is far better," or to meet the returning Lord. Thank God for the hope of the Gospel.

TUESDAY, APRIL 15.—Job XVIII.

Bildad's second speech shows how utterly he failed to sympathise with Job's appeals for a divine "witness" and surety" as against God who was recognised as the source of his trial. Such words were snares (2, R.V.) to him. The deep needs of a heart enduring sore trial are such as others cannot understand. Job's experience of affliction had prepared him for apprehending important truths which were utterly without meaning to Bildad.

There is something cruel in his description of the calamities that must befall the wicked (5-21). He declares his principle—that it is the wicked whose "light is put out" (5-7); then with considerable variety of metaphor he describes his distress (8-11), culminating in his destruction (12-14), and that of his family (15-17); and represents men as regarding him with horror (18-20).

There could be no doubt in Job's mind that he was one of "the wicked" (21) to whom this terrible description applied; for some of the pictures were simply reproductions of what had actually occurred to him. As a comforter, therefore, Bildad utterly failed. Even if these things were true of Job, the extreme suffering he endured should have given Bildad more tenderness in suggesting his sin as the cause. It requires the hand of love—the pierced hand—to heal the wounds that even sin has made.

Yet there was truth underlying this harsh speech. Judgment of the wicked is sure, and as terrible as Bildad described. His mistake was in assuming that judgment takes place here. Another world is needed in which to balance the inequalities of this.

We are also indebted to Bildad for the phrase, "King of Terrors," as applied to death (14). It is a significant and appropriate term. Sin has made all men to be the subjects of this monarch. Yet even he has met his conqueror (John xi. 25, 26; Heb. ii. 14; 1 Cor. xv. 26).

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16.—Job. XIX.

The evidence of Bildad's failure as a comforter appears in Job's reply. So long as his own heart did not condemn him, it appeared cruel on the part of his would-be friends to insist upon it that his great sufferings were the result of his great sins. Again, Job repels the charge, and asserts that, not for any sin of his own, but for some purpose he could not yet understand, God was afflicting him (1-6).

Job gives another most touching description of his misery (7-20), in which God is frequently mentioned as the source of his afflictions (7-13), and not the least of his trials is that he seemed to get no answer to his cry (7). This is perhaps one of the most painful experiences by which God tries his people. When God seems to turn away from our prayer, the burden becomes more intolerable. The woman of Canaan knew something of it (Matt. xv. 23-28). Oh, for such confidence that even his silences shall not make us despair.

Another element in his trial was the alienation of his friends (13-20). Even to those who were dearest to him he had become loathsome (17, R.V., margin). David knew what this was (Ps. lv. 12-14). It was a bitter element in Paul's trial (2 Tim. vi. 16); but the Lord experienced it too (Matt. xxvi. 56), so is able to sympathise and succour. To his friends Job's piteous appeal (21) was in vain; but no such appeal is ever in vain when made to our great High Priest.

Yet see how Job maintains his confidence. If his death should follow, and should seem to strengthen and support the charges of his friends, still he would have his assertions of innocence recorded indelibly in the rock, in the confident expectation that God would yet appear for his vindication (23, 24). The passage in which he describes his confidence is one of the most wonderful in this book (25-27). On the part of Job there may have been in it no intentional reference to the Messiah, but it finds its fullest accomplishment in Him. The "Redeemer" (25) is none other than "God" (26), whom Job expects to see. In his perplexity, bordering upon despair, he is comforted by the thought that he has a Divine Redeemer, who will ultimately undertake his cause. Every tried believer can appropriate the words with greater significance now. It is doubtful whether Job's hope is for resurrection. Of that truth he has had a glimpse before (xiv. 13-15). He now advances a step, and anticipates that "out of his flesh he shall see God" (26). And this vision of God fills him with rapture. He repeats it, and emphasises it. See margin and R.V.

The New Testament lights up these words with a new meaning. The Spirit of God, who has given them to us, means us to see in Him all the meaning He gives them. If, as Job understood them, they could dissipate his fear and establish his confidence, to us they may give even greater blessing.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17.—Job XX.

Zophar is the man who, least of all, understood Job. The rebuke which Job had just administered (xix. 28, 29) has vexed him, so that he speaks with impatience.

The theme of Zophar's speech is, the brevity of the prosperity of the wicked. He claims that this is an acknowledged principle (4), then proceeeds to show it by many striking metaphors. "Hypocrite" (5) is "godless" in the R.V.; and, in describing the prosperity and speedy destruction of such (5-11) he manifestly applies his words to Job He refuses to pay any heed to Job's protestations of innocence. His theology was: God is righteous; He blesses and prospers the good, and destroys the wicked; Job was being destroyed, therefore Job was wicked. Thus often do we in our ignorance misunderstand God, and cruelly misjudge man.

Zophar descends to more particulars, and describes the pleasure which the ungodly have in sin (12, 13); and how his sin becomes his punishment (14-22), and terrible destruction at last visits him (23-28), which is his "portion from God" (29). Though in all this Zophar was wrong in applying it to Job's case, and equally wrong in supposing that this life is the place of judgment for the wicked, yet it is important to remember that he was right in seeing a very real connection between sin and punishment. However sweet sin may be to the taste, it is sure to become bitter as the gall of asps ere long. "The pleasures of sin" are but for a season.

FRIDAY, APRIL 18.—Job XXI.

It is little wonder that Job should reply to such a speech with impatience (3, 4). His friend's theology was much too meagre to explain his case and that of others he had seen (5, 6).

The wicked are often prosperous (7-16).—Note how much Job's description includes; he sees wicked men living long (7), their children spared (8), their houses in peace (9), their substance increased (10), and after a merry life they die in peace (11-13). These men, though godless, are blessed of God (14-16). This is a fact which his friends have not observed, and which their present theology does not explain. It has puzzled other men of God since Job's day (Psa. lxxiii. 3, 4; Jer. xii. 1, 2); let it not make us fretful and envious (Psa. xxxvii. 1).

Calamities do not befal men so frequently as to justify Zophar's contention (17, 18, R.V.). God will not be taught knowledge from men, nor act as their imperfect theology demands (22-26). Not in the present, but in the future, the wicked are to receive judgment (29-31). It is this thought that may prevent our fretfulness at their prosperity. The rich man, at whose gate poor Lazarus sits, is an object of pity rather than envy, as a very brief experience in the other world teaches him. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth." They who possess all things in Christ cannot be poor.

With this reply of Job, the second colloquy ends. His three friends have gained nothing by their arguments; but Job has learned much by his afflictions. His appeals to God have become less passionate and impatient. He has had visions of wonderful truths which only the Gospel fully reveals. And though there is much yet that he cannot understand, he has learned to appeal to God with greater confidence, and to find refuge in Him.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19.—Job XXII.

The speech of Eliphaz, which begins the third colloquy, is the most cruel he has spoken. He had before hinted somewhat delicately at the guilt of Job, which he was convinced was the cause of his afflictions. Now he not only speaks it boldly, but describes it in detail (5-11). They are exactly the sins which a man in Job's former position, if he were exceptionally wicked, would commit. Eliphaz does not know that Job has been thus guilty; he only concludes it from what he sees of Job's afflictions. This is cruel; but Job had asked for definite charges (vi. 24); now that Eliphaz makes them, Job knows the value of them. The office of comforter requires more tenderness and sympathy than Eliphaz possessed. Appeal to the God of consolation when all would-be comforters fail.

Yet, as before, Eliphaz declares some important truths. Note his claim that God's judgment is impartial (2-4). The men whom He tries cannot give any advantage to Him. Other interests may affect human judges; but He will do right. Eliphaz perverts the truth when he seeks to apply it to Job. Reject the application; but appropriate the truth itself, and give it the widest meaning. "God is no respector of persons."

Note, also, God's watchfulness over the affairs of men (12-20). It is the habit of the wicked to conceive of God as too far away to take any note of the doings of men. Men before the Flood did so, and were destroyed (15-17). Any view of God which removes Him from interested observation of man is practical atheism. Again, reject Eliphaz's application; it was cruel to suggest that Job had acted under the influence of such a false idea. Yet retain the truth; God is not far from anyone of us; and while his eyes behold the wicked, so that their judgment is sure, not less does He behold the righteous. He is a God "at hand" to observe their distress and to hear their cry (Ps. xxxiv. 15-18).

Note, also, the excellent counsel Eliphaz gives (21-30). The life these words describe is beautiful, and in some measure true even to present experience. To be reconciled to God (21); to be obedient to his word (22); to put away iniquity (23); and to cease to trust in earthly riches (24, R.V.), what counsel could be better than this? Let us accept it, and act upon it. Then shall we find in God more than we forsake for Him (25); shall be able to delight in Him, and shall have confidence before Him (26). Our prayers shall be answered (27); our walk shall be "in the light" (28); and by our service others shall be blessed (29, 30). All this may become true of us. It is in the application that Eliphaz fails. He assumed in Job some terrible guilt which needed confession and cleansing; and thus misapplied a most precious truth.

FOREIGN AID SOCIETY.

Our crypts are for the most part interesting relics of former days and nothing more; they are not often used for such a practical purpose as was the crypt of Canterbury Cathedral (French Protestant Church), where a meeting was recently held on behalf of the Foreign Aid Society. Canon Fremantle took the chair, and expressed sympathy with the work. Pastors Choisy and Knatz (of Canterbury and Brighton) also spoke, and Rev. J. Patterson, of the Presbyterian Church, Canterbury, in a few words full of spiritual fervour, commended the work of the Society to the meeting.

Miss Burgess, secretary, explained the objects of the Foreign Aid Society—namely, to assist the evangelical societies in France and Belgium to extend the kingdom of Christ. She gave details of the work; dwelling on the special claims of the Society on the Church of England as representing a link between that Church and the Reformed Churches abroad, which might be said to have been riveted when the Huguenots were first welcomed under the stately fane of Canterbury, and which, notwithstanding many attempts to snap it asunder, remained firm and fast to the present day.

MOROCCO.—Mr. W. H. Newett, of the Manchester Y.M.C.A., who has been visiting Tangier and other places in Morocco, writes in very high terms of the good work that is being done by the workers of the North African Mission, and especially of the medical and Christian work of Dr. Churchill and his helpers. He speaks also of the gratifying spirit of union that exists among the agents of the different missions. Mr. Partick is finding many opportunities for service among Jews, and the colportage work of the British and Foreign Society is meeting with success.

BIBLE-CLASS UNION.—A most enjoyable and successful social gathering in connection with this Union took place recently at Exeter Hall. Mr. George Williams, the President of the Union, occupied the chair, and most helpful addresses were given by Rev. W. Fuller Gooch, of Norwood, and Rev. H. Elwyn Thomas, of Tolmers-square Church. An encouraging report of the work was given by the hon. sec., Mr. G. S. Greenfield (53, Buckingham Palace-road, S.W.), who will be glad to give any further information respecting the Union. A small quarterly magazine dealing with interesting news of the Union has just been issued, and may be obtained of the hon. sec., price 1d.

Sunday Afternoon, April 20.

Forgiveness and Love.—Luke vii. 36-50.

Golden Text: 1 John iv. 19.

This is one of the most touching incidents in the Gospel narrative. Gregory the Great said concerning it: "As oft as I think upon this event, I am more disposed to weep over it than to preach upon it." It took place in the house of a Pharisee (36). There is no reason for supposing that Simon invited Jesus from any hostile motive. It is certain that he did not perform those ceremonies of hospitality which were due from the host to the guest (44-46). For this omission he received a well-merited reproof. Yet he seems to have been in an inquiring condition (39)—favourably impressed towards Jesus, but not yet prepared to receive Him fully. The incident is calculated to help him out of that condition.

The woman's grateful service (37-39).—The name of the woman is unknown. There is not any reason for identifying her with Mary Magdalene. Her former character is described—"sinner." Doubtless well known in the city; and evidently known to Simon (39). She had been a "sinner" in an especial sense—one whose presence would be a defilement to a Pharisee. She had evidently received blessing from Jesus, for her service is recognised by Him as being the outcome of grateful love (42). Her courage appears in her entering into Simon's house. She could not expect a welcome from Simon; but she would risk an ignominious dismissal in order to render a service to Jesus. "Perhaps this was alabaster from Damascus, distinguished specially by its clearness, whilst the best nard ointment was prepared at Tarsus." Describe the incident. The Saviour reclining at table, his feet unshod, extending backwards, so that the woman could easily reach Him. Her tears flowing copiously over his feet; her kisses expressing deep reverence and devotion to Him; her hair used for a towel. "To appreciate this act we must remember that among the Jews it was one of the greatest humiliations for a woman to be seen in public with her hair down."—Godet. Her service seems to have continued during the whole of the feast (45).

The Saviour's parable (39-44).—Like the three in Luke xv., this was prompted by a complaint (39). But the Pharisee misjudged. It was not because Jesus did not know who or what the woman was that He accepted her service; but Simon did not know what Jesus came to do, hence he murmured. The amounts owed by the two debtors were equivalent to about £16 the larger, and £1 12s. the smaller sum. Simon correctly answered the Lord's inquiry (43), perhaps not knowing that he thus condemned himself. The parable itself is full of instruction. It suggests that sin is a debt. The obligation naturally resting on each one is to love and obey and serve God. Having failed in this, we are then liable to the penalty of disobedience. And none are free from this debt. In the Pharisee and the woman we have types of two extremes: the one moral and even religious; the other a sinner, an outcast from society. Both are involved. The method of Divine forgiveness—"frankly." Men do not purchase it, nor in any way seek to obtain a right to it. God bestows it "without money and without price," when men have "nothing to pay." That brings forgiveness within the reach of all. The effect of receiving this blessing is loving service. Not always in the same degree. But the degree is determined by the debtor's sense of obligation. The parable does not teach that we must seek to incur greater guilt in order that we may be moved to greater love. The very best man has sinned enough to lead him to place the very highest value upon the grace that forgives him. What we need is not more sin, but a deeper consciousness of the sin we have.

The application of the parable (44-50).—First to the Pharisee (44-47). The contrast between his treatment of the Saviour and that of the woman reproved him. Prompted by her love, she had performed the part of the host better than he. It was her forgiveness that prompted her love, not her love that secured her forgiveness. Compare 47 with 42, and see Golden Text. The parable said that the debtors were forgiven when "they had nothing to pay"; if the love was the price of forgiveness, then the woman had something to pay. In contrast with this, the Pharisee, who had but little sense of the value of forgiveness, loved little, therefore rendered little service. Jesus thus reproved Simon by the woman's example. Then to the woman (48-50). The parable has assumed already that she had received pardon, but she receives a fresh assurance of it (48). The word of Jesus is the best reason for assurance. He attributes her forgiveness to the right means, "thy faith" (50). The order is Faith, Forgiveness, Love, Peace.

Personalia.

Mr. E. H. Soper, of the Brazil Mission, is still in England, and open to address meetings during April on Christian work in Brazil.

Captain Moorhouse has been conducting daily Bible-readings in connection with the New Brighton Y.M.C.A. and Christian Mission.

Captain Hore, of the London Missionary Society's Mission on Lake Tanganyika, Central Africa, leaves England at the end of April for a deputation tour through the Australasian Colonies.

Mrs. Booth still lingers in great pain. During last week there was a further decline in her strength, though once or twice she rallied somewhat. As we go to press we learn that she lies in a very precarious condition, and it is thought that she may pass away almost at any moment. General Booth and most of the members of the family are with her.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.—This month's Sword and Trowel has a short and biographical article by the great preacher, describing his baptism at the age of sixteen at Isleham Ferry, on the river Lark, in the Fen Country, on May 3, 1850. He got a day's holiday from business for the purpose of being baptized, and had to walk eight miles to the place. He "lost a thousand fears on the river Lark, and found that 'in keeping his commandments there is great reward.'" A picture is given of the baptizing place.

Rev. A. Chambers, now holding a pastorate in Wisconsin, was converted at a Friends' meeting in Darlington about five years ago. He entered the meeting a most determined atheist, thinking it was an educational class. The Spirit of God dealt with him in a most remarkable manner. Before he left the room he had given himself wholly to the God he had up to that time ignored. He won many to Christ at Darlington. Then he got work at Grangetown, where he had led many into scepticism. He went with the prayer that he might win all back to Christ. Before he had worked there a year, more than one hundred were truly converted.

"TENDER WAIFS OF THE GREAT CITY" is the title of a booklet explaining the good work of the Watercress and Flower Girls' Mission, Clerkenwell. It is painful to learn that there has been more sickness than usual among those whose welfare the Mission studies. Hundreds of famishing Board School children look to the Mission for their breakfast or cheap dinner. The matter which chiefly weighs upon the hearts of the workers at the present moment is the founding of the Home for little waifs of the flower-selling class, whose hard case is explained and illustrated in the booklet. The hon. superintendent of the Mission is Mr. J. A. Groom, 8, Sekforde-street, Clerkenwell, E.C.

BRIXTON Y.M.C.A.—For nine years this Association has been at work, and the time has now come when more suitable accommodation, than they have at present, is necessary. The annual meeting was held on April 1, at Brixton Hall, and a building scheme was submitted to the large gathering, by Mr. W. Hind-Smith. It is proposed to take premises in the leading thoroughfare, and at a cost of about £1000, turn them into attractive headquarters for the district. It is submitted that, as there are about 12,000 young men in Brixton, such a step is urgently required. Already over £200 has been promised, and it is thought that there are many in the locality who will willingly contribute towards the expense. The annual report was of a most encouraging nature; a large amount of useful work is being done under the leadership of the secretary, Mr. T. MacKenzie. Addresses were given by Mr. George Williams, and Revs. Z. T. Dowen, and Walter Horne.

PARIS.—The Montauban students are happily employing their free hours in earnestly evangelising the people in and around the town, with remarkable blessing to themselves and those they visit or address, keeping up a wholesome equilibrium between theory and practice.

Dublin Believers' Meetings.—Merrion Hall, Dublin, June 2—5.

CHARING-CROSS VIGILANCE AND RESCUE COMMITTEE.—The report for the last year shows that while efforts at repression were vigorously maintained, much was also done to raise the fallen. In all, eighty-three cases were received into the Home, and the workers were cheered by many tokens of Divine favour. The committee deserve the thanks of the public for what has been done. The report states that there is evidence of the existence of haunts of unbridled licentiousness, calling down such judgment as was poured out upon the Cities of the Plain. The hon. secretary is Mr. S. Bourne, Vestry Hall, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, W.C.

LONDON MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—Some time since it was announced that the Directors of the London Missionary Society had decided to encourage offers of service from young unmarried men, of approved Christian character and good general education, who have not passed through a theological training at college, but have been successfully engaged in Christian work. The details of this scheme have now been worked out, and the Board is prepared to receive applications. The first examination of candidates will be held in September. A leaflet has been prepared which gives full information as to the conditions of service, the subjects of examination, and other particulars, copies of which may be obtained from Rev. H. Jones, 13, Blomfield-street, London, E.C.

STUDENTS AND MISSIONS.—A gathering of students belonging to the various Nonconformist theological colleges in London was recently held at Regent's-park College, to hear missionary addresses from Rev. W. S. Swanson and Dr. A. T. Pierson. Mr. Swanson gave an address on "The Civilisation of China," showing that, notwithstanding the civilisation and advanced learning of the Chinese, only the Gospel can meet their deepest needs. A vigorous and impressive address followed from Dr. Pierson. He stated that he was devoting the best years of his life to the realisation of a principle which he had learnt twenty years before from an address of Dr. Angus, viz., that it was within the power of a generation (and was therefore their duty and privilege) to preach the Gospel to every creature. Dr. Underhill, Rev. R. Vaughan Pryce (principal of New College), and Dr. Pierson took part in the devotional services of the meeting.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—A mission to the young, at St. Andrew's, Lambeth, April 13 to 20, by Mr. Henry Hutchinson; and special services for adults, from April 27 to May 4, conducted by Rev. Joseph Potter, of Londonderry.——Special Gospel work in Hastings during April, by Mr. Herbert R. Francis.——A mission by Mr. William Forbes, at the Presbyterian Church, Chatham, to commence April 14.——A mission at Lewes Y.M.C.A., April 13 to 27, by Mr. John H. Wills of Brighton.——An eight days' mission at the Bow and Bromley Institute, Bow Station, Bow-road, E., conducted by Rev. W. Evans Hurndall, April 27 to May 4.——A mission at the Y.M.C.A., 55, Old Steine, Brighton, by Rev. Dr. Morris, April 13 to 22.——A month's mission at Wilmott-street Mission Hall, Manchester, by Mr. George Robert Cairns.——A mission being held in Bantry, co. Cork, to April 14, by Messrs. Smith and Flook, of the Irish Gospel Mission.——For Mr. Harley Mason, who is still dangerously ill, and suffering great pain.

[As it is found that infidels and others send tracts to the persons whose names are inserted here, it is most desirable that all books and papers received should be carefully read before being given away.]

Mrs. Fisher, The Old Welcome, Cross Key-square, Little Britain, E.C., would be thankful for old Chrismas and New Year's cards and pictorial scraps of any kind.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1890.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

In consequence of the Easter Holidays our donation list is made up earlier. Amounts received after mid-day, April 3, will appear in next number.

GALVANIC BELTS

FOR the CURE of NERVOUS DISEASES

HAVE RECEIVED TESTIMONIALS from over FIFTY MEMBERS of the ROYAL COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS of LONDON, including THREE PHYSICIANS to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS.

GALVANISM v. SCIATICA and LUMBAGO.

39, Union-street, Tranmere, Birkenhead, 28th February, 1890.

Dear Sir,—I feel I ought to thank you as the means, in the hands of a merciful God, of restoring me to health and strength. For upwards of four months I had been in a helpless condition, suffering from Sciatica and Lumbago, and was under three medical men; a fourth doctor was called in, and he informed me that my sciatic nerves and lumbar muscles were contracted, and the muscles of left leg completely wasted for want of circulation, and my sufferings were so great that they injected morphia to give me rest. One doctor advised electricity as a last resource, and I wrote to you, and from the first hour I wore your Galvanic Belt I obtained immediate relief, and day by day the cramps and severe pains gradually left me, and my muscles are perfectly restored again. I have now resumed business, believing my cure to be permanent. I have recommended your treatment to many of my friends and neighbours who have witnessed the wonderful cure effected in my case, and I consider your Galvanic appliances a marvellous scientific invention. One of the doctors called on me to know the result, and asked me what I thought of your Belt. I replied, I don't think, but I know, it has been my Salvation.—Yours faithfully, J. PHILLIPS.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. INDIGESTION and NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Melview, Clonmel, Ireland, February 21, 1890.

Dear Sir,—I have only worn your Galvanic Bands for two months, since which I have had no return of the ailments I suffered from in consequence of the damp weather (indigestion and nervous debility). I now feel strong and healthy, which I believe is due entirely to using your electric appliance, and shall feel obliged if you will send me some of your pamphlets for my friends.—Yours very truly, (Mrs.) L. MALCOMSON.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. EXTREME NERVOUS DEBILITY and SLEEPLESSNESS.

12, Henry-street, Rawtenstall, Lancashire, February 17, 1890.

Dear Sir,—You will be pleased to hear of the recovery of my apparently hopeless case. It is now some months since you persuaded me to try one of your Electric Belts. I was then suffering from nervous weakness, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and pain in the side. In fact, I was a complete wreck, and two physicians whom I consulted told me that I should never be well again. Before I consulted you I had lost 3 stone in weight, and was so completely broken down, I lost all hope; but after wearing your Belt for a short time I began to revive, and in two months the improvement was so rapid that one of my physicians told me I should get well again; and now that I am restored to health, you are at perfect liberty to use this letter as a testimonial.—Faithfully yours, J. NORTH.

Mr. J. L. Pulvermacher, 194, Regent-street, W.

GALVANISM v. NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

The distressing symptoms of NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, LOSS of MUSCULAR POWER, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, PARALYSIS, EPILEPSY, &c., are speedily removed by means of PULVERMACHER'S world-famed GALVANIC BELTS, which convey the electric current direct to the affected parts, gradually stimulating and strengthening all the nerves and muscles, and speedily arresting all symptoms of premature waste and decay.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

(THIRTY-THIRD SERIES.)

CASE AT ST. HELIER'S, JERSEY—RECOMMENDED BY REV. S. B. LANE.

In February last year I received a letter from the B. C. minister above-named respecting a young man in his congregation, then reduced to an extremely low state, so much so that his life was despaired of.

He commenced, according to my instructions, at once, and continued regularly under my treatment, gradually diminishing the doses, there being, after four months, a gradual improvement in his condition.

In Sept. he writes: "Thank God, there is such a decided improvement that I have gone back to work. Your wonderful medicine has saved me."

I heard from him March 5: "I am pleased to tell you I continue well and able to work, and have done all the winter. You can make use of my case if you will.—J. J. Le C."

PREVENTION OF INFLUENZA.

In a letter dated Feb. 24 last, Mr. H. W. CASE, of Oxford-street, Cotham, Bristol (who also uses the "Balsamic Elixir" largely in his family and among his friends) says: "I think it will gratify you to know that I have (I believe) saved many of my employés from attacks of the prevailing epidemic by the use of your preparation, 'Dr. Flemming's Quinine and Camphor Pills,'* when they have advised me of the premonitory symptoms at once. Without this remedy the care of business this winter would have simply unendurable."

* The pills mostly used under my treatment when a mild tonic-aperient is required.

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

CADBURY'S

REFRESHING COCOA SUSTAINING

CADBURY'S COCOA is closely allied to milk in the large proportion of flesh-forming and strength-sustaining elements that it contains. It is prepared on the principle of excluding the superabundance of fatty indigestible matter with which cocoa abounds—supplying a refined thin infusion of absolutely pure cocoa, exhilarating and refreshing, for Breakfast, Luncheon, Tea, or Supper—giving staying power and imparting new life and vigour to growing children, and those of delicate constitutions.

Society for Promoting FEMALE EDUCATION IN THE EAST.

Treasurer: Sir W. R. FARQUHAR, Bart.

This Society, established fifty-five years ago, has lived to see its work, once considered Utopian, not only fully recognised as possible, but regarded as an indispensable part of Gospel Missions.

The sphere of the Society's work embraces China, Japan, India, Persia, Africa, and the Levant, and it includes the establishment of Orphanages, Boarding, Day, and Infant Schools, Bible and Sewing Classes, Mothers' Meetings, Zenana Visiting, and Medical Work.

This important work is now crippled by want of funds. HELP is therefore URGENTLY NEEDED for its support and extension, and will be most gratefully received by THE SECRETARY, Miss Webb, 267, Vauxhall Bridge Road, London, S.W.; or by the Bankers, Messrs. Herries, Farquhar & Co., 16, St. James's Street, S.W.

THE LARGE TYPE MISSION HYMN BOOK.

CONTAINING 100 SELECTED HYMNS IN BOLD TYPE.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

YIELD not to temptation, for yielding is sin,
Each victory will help you some other to win;
Fight manfully onward, dark passions subdue,
Look ever to Jesus, He 'll carry you through.

Ask the Saviour to help you, comfort, strengthen, and keep you;
He is willing to aid you, He will carry you through.

THE ROCK says:—
"Hymns printed in large type on good paper are a great comfort to those who have not good eyesight. In fact, the book provides one hundred STIRRING MISSION HYMNS at the cost of ONE PENNY, printed so that everybody can read them."

THE ROCHESTER DIOCESAN CHRONICLE says:—
"The LARGE TYPE MISSION HYMN BOOK consists of one hundred selected hymns for use at Special Missions, and also at ordinary services in mission rooms."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of Mrs. Travers Lewis (née Miss Ada Leigh), of the Homes for Young Englishwomen in Paris.

Mr. W. T. Stead's new monthly, The Review of Reviews, has already gained for itself a well-established place in the literature of the day. It is a truly remarkable résumé of the best writing of the month, and ably meets a need that has long been felt by the busier portion of the reading public. Mr. Stead has stamped it with his characteristic literary qualities of freshness and dash. Besides being very readable, it is invaluable as a work of reference. Personally we could dispense with "The Novel of the Month;" and the remark applies with more than usual force to that department of the current issue.

Presiding at a meeting of special prayer for Ireland, on St. Patrick's Day, the Archbishop of Dublin, in the course of a thoughtful address, said:—

"There is a spurious form of Protestantism—a weak-kneed, invertebrate Protestantism—which, under the specious guise of a false liberality, minimises and vapours away all those serious differences which distinguish the religion of the Church of Rome from ours. There is another form of spurious Protestantism which finds vent in feelings of bitter animosity against those whom, as our fellow-countrymen, we should love. But there is a more true type of Protestantism, which leads us, while thankfully recognising the essential truths that we hold in common with our Roman Catholic brethren, to protest with all our hearts and minds against the dangerous innovations whereby those truths have been overlaid and defaced; and which calls us, therefore, in a spirit of love, to strive and pray that our fellow-countrymen may yet return to the pure faith as preached by St. Patrick and his followers in days of old.

We are glad to commend these words to earnest and wide-spread attention. They are sound in spirit and wise in substance.

It appears from some correspondence in the official Malta Gazette that Sir J. L. Simmons, the British special envoy to the Pope, has been aiding and abetting that Romish functionary in regulating mixed marriages in Malta. The arrangement to which the British Government are said to have undertaken to give the force of law, is that no mixed marriages in Malta shall be valid unless they are celebrated "according to the form established by the Council of Trent." As a Glasgow evening paper plausibly observes: "If the Pope has the power to say in Malta what marriages shall and shall not be valid, why not in Britain?" It is simply monstrous that Popish law should override Imperial law in any part of Her Majesty's dominion. Will not some Protestant member of Parliament bring the Government to book on this question?

It is well that we have from an advocate of the theatres a paper on "The London Stage" in the current Fortnightly Review. It goes to justify the objections of their non-frequenters. Mr. Oswald Crawfurd says that melodramas which travesty life are the most paying ventures of the modern stage; that "playing to the gallery" is more and more becoming the rule; that educated persons are passed over for those who want noise, rant, and buffoonery; and that the mutterings of a storm of popular discontent are becoming audible. Those who have denied what has been called the educating influence of the stage need not regret their action, nor recall their warnings.

The lesson learnt from the foregoing is this—you cannot cater to mere pleasure-lovers without finding yourself on a down-grade. Churches that have entered on these lines are on an incline of lower and yet lower sensationalism and deterioration. Remarkable to say, the article on the Stage is followed in the same Review by one on "Literature," by Mrs. E. Lynn Linton, who contends that nothing more frothy and superficial has yet appeared than much of modern fiction. Those who have no means of judging as to such fiction or modern plays will be glad to have a testimony from within these circles.

Modern scepticism is as unreasoning as it is self-consciously obtrusive. Rationalism is certainly polite, but we cannot grant that it is really cultured. Mrs. Humphrey Ward, writing in The Nineteenth Century for April, says of certain books of Scripture:—

> When we have understood something of a process of dramatic representation which produced the book of Daniel about 165 B.C., and led to the composition of the Fourth Gospel about 120 A.D., and to the Pastoral Epistles later on in the second century, &c....

What a wonderful "process," to be sure! We do not fear that much harm will result from such outrageous assumptions as these. In view of the evidence, however, we cannot but be sorry for anyone who writes in this way. This is "literary criticism" beside itself, and "scientific method" run mad.

We content ourselves with a sentence or two by way of remark. If the Book of Daniel was written at such a late date as is assumed, how comes it that the political and social surroundings of the author are essentially Babylonian, and not Greek? Thank God, the contemporary inscriptions which have been unearthed on the spot during the present generation confirm Daniel's history in a remarkable manner, and show that the book must have been written long before the days of the Maccabees. Christians should have no difficulty in recognising the extended vision of the prophet, for the Lord Himself quoted an unfulfilled portion of the Book in the discourse on Mount Olivet.

As regards the Fourth Gospel, Mrs. Ward's position is simply that of a school of critics whose history has been an ebb and flow of arrogant challenge and graceless retreat. It is an eloquent fact that Hilgenfeld, the present head of the Tübingen school, regards about three-fourths of the New Testament as having been written in the first century, while his master, the illustrious Baur, allowed such antiquity to only one-fourth! The movement is ever backward, and the argument from "environment," of which the critics talk so much, ought to be enough to show that the Gospel of John must have been written before the year 100 A.D. Irenæus, who became Bishop of Lyons about 177 A.D., quoted the Gospel as having been written by John; he was a disciple of Polycarp, who had sat at the feet of the Apostle. Surely no further witness is needed; otherwise a long chain of facts might be given that go to make certainty fully assured. As to the Pastoral Epistles (Timothy and Titus), their personal spirit and the simplicity of the church government which they exhibit, are evidences of authenticity against which advanced "thinkers" merely range their spiritual blindness and obstinate unbelief.

The Mansion House Council is doing excellent work in many districts of London in the direction of bringing about great improvements in regard to the dwelling-places of the labouring classes. A recent report shows that, by the labours of local committees in places such as Shoreditch, the sanitary administration has been thoroughly "revolutionised"; thousands of cases have been dealt with, and matters remedied which would otherwise have remained unheeded by the authorities.

The summary prosecution of the owners of property unfit for human occupation has been very beneficial in a number of districts, and in more ways than one it has been shown that the existing machinery is far from being insufficient to bring about the needed reform. There is need, however, that self-denying and kind-hearted men should submit to some inconvenience in putting the law in motion for the sake of their poorer brethren.

Some excitement has been caused in New York by the Rabbi Gottheil's recent sermon, in the Fifth Avenue Synagogue, with reference to Christ. The Rabbi has urged that the Jews as a race do not reject Jesus, and that of those on earth at the time of his mission, "only a small minority" disbelieved Him. Judæa was absolutely recognisant of his mission; the crowds listened eagerly to his doctrines, and hailed Him with cries of "Hosannah" on Palm Sunday. The Scribes and Pharisees (the Rabbi maintained) encompassed the death of Jesus in retaliation for his having assailed them. He further maintained that the great majority of Jews contemporary with Jesus were "willing to accept his Godly mission," and that they venerated his teachings, but they were "unable to comprehend his claim to be Divine."

The Century for April contains a painfully interesting article on "The Slave Trade in the Congo Basin" by one of Mr. Stanley's pioneers. It illustrates the importance of the deliberations of the Anti-Slavery Conference, and the urgent need of united action on the part of the civilised powers for the suppression of this inhuman traffic. The writer describes it as producing "a life of unspeakable horror, tortures that only the savage African can invent, and a certain and violent death." He does not touch upon the slave-raiding by Arabs, but deals only with inter-tribal slavery, and tells only of such scenes as he has himself witnessed. He states that the bloodshed is even greater than when Stanley first visited the Congo in 1877, contact with the white man having made the chiefs richer and able to buy more slaves. He suggests several measures of forcible repression; but probably we must look for an effectual remedy in the gradual opening out of the heart of Africa to missionary work, and the consequent softening and elevating of the whole tone of native life. The same Gospel which has raised the Fijian and the Malay will assuredly be powerful to wean the African from his bloodstained ceremonies.

Disparagements of missionaries in China and criticisms on their work have appeared in American as well as English papers. The Presbyterian (Philadelphia) gives, therefore, the result of a thorough, personal inquiry and visitation by an impartial correspondent, and also the testimonies of respectable Consuls, and a Minister of State. It affirms that the calumniators are fast young men, officers of the army, merchant service captains, and "vagabond" consuls from the United States and England; and that it is found that the missionaries are, as preachers, physicians, and educators, pioneers in China of the grandest social advancement, while their converts, in the vast majority of cases, would be models of sacrifice, character, and zeal to the churches who sent out their teachers. A testimony of this kind ought to make people careful in listening to stories which are born out of prejudice and superficial knowledge.

A MINISTERIAL EXPERIENCE.

Less than three years ago I went to a church which had suffered greatly from worldliness. My preaching was too plain and outspoken. After I preached a sermon on amusements, five out of six deacons attacked me in a church meeting, and demanded that I should withdraw what I had said and apologise for it. A special meeting was held, at which the church stood by me, and expressed its sympathy with me, and "thankfulness to God for having sent so faithful a minister" to them.

But for my action at that meeting it is probable that the five deacons would have been obliged to resign. But I hoped then to win some of them to a better course. One or two, however, were opposed to much of my teaching, and the others were under their influence. Three charges were laid against me: (1) That poor people were attracted by my ministry. One of the deacons said, "We don't want poor people. Our church never was intended for them. Let them go elsewhere." (2) That I preached too much "the doctrine of salvation." (3) That I preached "too high an ideal of the Christian life." They tried all they could to force me to leave, but I knew I had the church almost entirely with me, and I felt God called me to stand by the place and see it purified from the worldly element.

I am thankful to say this has now been accomplished. God has most wonderfully manifested his presence, and has guided us to the desired issue. The five deacons had to resign, and fresh ones—men in hearty sympathy with spiritual things—have been appointed. Nothing less than a revolution has been effected in the church; and we are now experiencing much blessing.

I had more than a year's conflict, and have lost in some respects considerably. But we are now reaping a rich reward in conversions and in the growing spirituality of the church.

A Pastor.

Visible Unity.

"I pray for them—that they all may be one."
John xvii. 9, 21.

The great burden of the intercessory prayer of Christ, ere He suffered, was for the unity—the visible unity of his people.

In the very first petition for them He expresses the intense desire of his heart "that they may be one." Again and again He prays "that they all may be one," "that they may be one in us," "that they may be made perfect in one"; and adds the reason, "that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me"; yea, "that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me."

In a vitally important sense, believers are, of course, necessarily one in Him. Saved souls are "in Christ." All who have been born again of the Spirit are now members of the body of Christ; and the body is one. To be out of Christ is to "abide in death." Necessarily, therefore, there must be, and is, unity in Him amongst all his saved people.

But, oh, what the Lord intensely desires is unity in love and sympathy, in purpose and endeavour; which will manifest its reality continuously before the world. The fact is often stated, with evident pleasure and satisfaction, on the platforms of Bible Societies and temperance and similar organisations, that, notwithstanding the visible disunion prevailing amongst Christians, real unity does actually exist, and believers are "all one in Christ." But then, in between these pleasant gatherings, the world too frequently witnesses sad sectional disagreements and unlovely controversies, political and otherwise. Unbelievers do not fail to draw their own conclusions from what they thus see; and the result is not good. The Lord Jesus Christ wants the world to be convinced of the reality of his Divine mission; but the spectacle of a Church at variance within itself, and distracted by bitter internal antipathies, tends rather to invite the sceptical inquiry, "Can this be of God?"

Dear to all his people should be the known wish and desire of their redeeming Lord. What loving eagerness should be manifested in carrying it out! Hindrances should be vigorously removed, individual ideas set aside, everything made to give way before it. Yes: the known will and wish of the Lord should be supreme in every mind, in every heart, and in every life. Clearly, his heart yearns for the manifest unity of his people before the eyes of the world; so that the world may be convinced that his mission is from God and his work divine.

But, how can this visible unity be realised? Not by endeavouring to bring all believers into one "Denomination," and to establish uniformity of worship, church government, modes of operation. Not by attempting to formulate a creed for universal acceptance, or to merge all distinctions and differences in one style and kind of ecclesiastical organisation. Any such venture would signally fail. Under present conditions, success would be injurious rather than beneficial. Our Lord does not deprecate diversity, but visible, unsympathetic disunion. He would not have all the members of his body to become hands, or feet, or eyes, or ears; but, while still diversely organised, to be "one" in supreme loyalty to Himself, "one" in uncompromising fidelity to his service, "one" in solid purpose to win the world for Him, and "one" in intense sympathy and mutual respect and love amongst themselves.

Given this unity in love, sympathy, and purpose, how can the oneness be manifested? Surely, it will be self-manifesting! With all the clearing away of "roots of bitterness" and "stones of stumbling," will there not be such a luxuriant growth of flowers and fruits, in the garden of the Lord, as that even the world will acknowledge the change and admire the result?

Given the unity of heart and sentiment within, how unfailing will be the outward evidence of the inward fact! We may expect union services greatly multiplied, and also union meetings for the furtherance of every good work; union conferences, for mutual help and counsel in the Christian life, will not, then, be "few and far between," as at present; and, perhaps we may say most precious of all, united communion will gather together the loving children of God and disciples of Christ to the common table of their dearest Lord, there to enjoy closest and holiest fellowship with Him and with one another, and to anticipate the "heights of rapture" they will know, "when round his throne they meet."

Given this unity, will not the Church of God, no longer distracted and at variance through Satan's internal antagonisms, come forth "fair as the moon, clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners," to win the whole world for Christ!

A TEMPERANCE POEM.

JOHN ALCOHOL.

John Alcohol, my joe, John,
When we were first acquaint,
I'd siller in my pockets, John,
Which noo, ye ken, I want.
I spent it all in treating, John,
Because I loved you so;
But mark ye how you've treated me,
John Alcohol, my joe.

John Alcohol, my joe, John,
We've been o'er lang thegither;
Sae ye maun tak' ae road, John,
And I will tak' anither;
For we maun tumble down, John,
If hand and hand we go;
And I shall ha'e the bill to pay,
John Alcohol, my joe.

John Alcohol, my joe, John,
Ye've blear'd out a' my e'en,
And lighted up my nose, John,
A fiery sign atween.
My hands wi' palsy shake, John,
My locks are like the snow;
Ye'll surely be the death o' me,
John Alcohol, my joe.

John Alcohol, my joe, John,
'Twas love of you, I ween,
That gar't me rise sae ear, John,
And sit sae late at e'en.
The best o' frien's maun part, John—
It grieves me sair, ye know?
But "we'll gang nae mair to yon toon,"
John Alcohol, my joe.

John Alcohol, my joe, John,
Ye've wrought me muckle skaith;
And yet to part wi' you, John,
I own I'm unco' laith;
But I'll join the Temp'rance ranks, John:
Ye needna say me no—
It's better late than ne'er do weel,
John Alcohol, my joe.

The First Epistle of Peter.

XXX.—CONFLICT.

1 Peter v. 8, 9.

r would appear that the image of the flock is ill in the Apostle's thought, and that he calls some such incident as that narrated by avid, when as a stripling he stood before Saul nd related how, as he kept his father's sheep, here came a lion and took a lamb out of the ock, and he went after him, and smote him, nd delivered it out of his mouth, and caught im by the beard, and slew him. However fely folded and watched, no flock is secure gainst the attempt of the beasts of prey hich infest the wilderness. Especially at ght they will prowl around, seeking for the nguarded spot, or the unwary sheep, and lling the night with their terrible roarings.

This figure of the lion roaring around the ck reminds us of one of God's earliest words men, when He warned Cain that sin, like a ld beast, was crouching at the door of his art, waiting to spring in. And we may t forget how our Lord described the coming the wolf to the flock entrusted to the hire- ng shepherd, filling him with panic, and sulting in the catching and scattering of the eep. Satan is evidently no myth, no ima- nary being, to the writers of the New Testa- nt. From the distinct references made to m by our Lord, to the last great conflict scribed in the Apocalypse, when he is finally nquished, there is abundant and emphatic idence that, behind the veil of the visible, he heading a great revolt against the rule of d, and is pledged to do his worst by stratagem skill against his dominion and his saints. It a subtle manœuvre of his to lead men to sup- se that there is no devil at all. A gang of ieves is never so dangerous as when they have widely rumoured that they have left the ighbourhood. Any artifice succeeds which rows us off our guard.

There is no need to suppose that all God's ople are watched and attacked by the devil nself, for this would almost invest him with e attributes of omniscence and omnipresence. t he is supported and abetted by myriads of cked spirits in the heavenly places, any one which waits to do his will and to execute s plans; and the entire host, with long perience of the frailties of human nature, th desperate malice against God, with un- aried watchfulness to do us harm, rests not y or night, but goes to make up that one align and terrible adversary of which the ostle speaks. And, indeed, we might re- quish all hope of being able to withstand his sets, did we not know that he has been nquished by our Leader, who is prepared to ercome him again in, and through, and for ch of those who put their trust in Him. O ctor of the Garden, the Cross, and the Resur- tion morning, as Thou didst overcome Satan thine earthly sojourn, so overcome him again each of us that we may be more than con- erors, because He that is in us is greater an he that is in the world!

I. The Description here given of the mpter.—He is our adversary.—The prophet chariah was not mistaken when he beheld tan, standing as an adversary beside the high est, clothed in his dishevelled robes, and standing there to resist him. For, when the veil is drawn aside, in the majestic prologue to the Book of Job, Satan is discovered suggesting an evil and mercenary motive for the uprightness of the patriarch. "Doth Job serve God for nought? Put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse Thee to thy face." And thus, when he is cast out of the heavenlies, as a prelude to his being cast down into the bottomless pit, it is not to be wondered at that loud voices are heard rejoicing that the accuser, who accused the saints night and day before God, has been cast out. But the defeat which he has met with yonder only exasperated his hatred the more, and he now roams the earth in all the greater wrath, because he knows that a limit has been put upon his power, and that he hath but a short time.

He roars as a lion.—There is terror in his threatenings, which may well strike panic into timid hearts. But we must remember that it is the expending of ineffectual rage. He makes up in noise what he has lost in power. He hates our Shepherd, though he cannot now hurt Him. He did his worst against Him, and failed. He must content himself with bellowing out his hate, though this, too, shall be stayed. So Rutherford used to say that he preferred dealing with a roaring devil. It fills him with redoubled chagrin and malignity to know that the weakest saint is more than a match for him, if he dares to resist him, stedfast in the faith, and armed in the panoply of God. "My sheep," said the Chief Shepherd, "shall never perish."

He walketh about seeking.—There is no church-fold which he does not eagerly visit; bent on injuring its usefulness, or snatching away its careless professors. No bishop so busy in his diocese as he. If only he can vitiate Christian teaching by false doctrine, so that every sermon may carry with it error enough to cancel its truth and power; if he can involve the leading professors in inconsistencies which shall neutralise the effect of their testimony; if he can entrap the weaklings into pride, or jealousy, or sensual pleasure, or backsliding; if he can scatter the flock by persecution, or bury it in a snowstorm of formalism, or drown it in a spate of worldliness, then he is full of glee. And he is always on the watch for such a chance. "Going up and down in the earth, and walking to and fro in it."

Satan considers the saints. "Hast thou considered my servant Job?" No neglect of the morning watch, no permission of the first faint thoughts of evil, no unwatchfulness, no tampering with wrong, escapes his attentive scrutiny. He never yet missed an opportunity of following up any clue, or making the most of any advantage. We are engaged in conflict with an accomplished and merciless opponent, who is quick to plunge in his sword wherever the joints of the armour open, and wherever we give him the chance. What need, then, for constant vigilance on our part to meet and parry his attacks! "Be sober, be vigilant." And what need also for the ceaseless intercession of Him who sees the approach of temptation, and anticipates it by his prayers! "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not."

II. The Aim of Satanic Temptation.—When the devil tempted our Saviour, He could truthfully say, "The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in Me." But only He could say this. In all else there is a certain proneness to go wrong, to which the great adversary makes his appeal. And before we can hope to vanquish assaults from without, we must be careful to have taken up that attitude with respect to the inner realm which is ours in the holy arrangements of God. We cannot successfully vanquish assaults from without, whilst there is revolt or anarchy within. And for this reason the Apostle has been careful, at the commencement of the previous chapter, to deal with the question of the flesh. For only when we have truly experienced what God is prepared to do in relation to the flesh, shall we be able to stand in his grace against our terrible adversary, or maintain the attitude of uncompromising vigilance and unremitting watchfulness. Perhaps there is, as Bengel suggests, a hint of this in the admonition, Be sober.

When man first came from his Maker's hand, all his natural appetites and desires, which in themselves were pure and necessary, were under the control of the will, which itself was true to God, willing only what God willed, and obeying each prompting of his Spirit. But man swerved from that blessed condition, substituting self for God, and his own pleasure for obedience to the Divine law and will. And ever since that one fatal act there has been transmitted to all after generations a bias towards evil, a tendency to repeat that first sin in aggravated forms, a predisposition to the gratification of natural instincts, irrespective of the Divine requirements. This inherited tendency is due to the operation of that great principle which scientific men know as the law of heredity, and which operates through all races of the creatures with which we are familiar in our world-home.

The sphere in which this inherited tendency mostly manifests itself is in relation to the appetites and desires of the body, the natural action of which has been much interfered with through successive generations, and which, as they come to us, bear evidence of the abuses to which they have been subjected by our progenitors. Now, of course, these natural impulses, though vitiated in their operation, cannot constitute sin until they have inflamed the imagination, captured the heart, and conquered the will. But, as a matter of fact, there is not one of us in whom they have not done all these things again and again, and in doing so have increased and accentuated our susceptibility to evil. This perverted tendency of our appetites, coupled with its inevitable influence on the inner life, is what the Word of God calls the flesh. "The flesh with the passions and lusts" (Gal. v. 24). "We all had our conversation in times past, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind" (Eph. ii. 3).

God has judged this flesh in the person of Jesus, made in the likeness of sinful flesh, and has assigned it to the cross. There, on Calvary, is God's verdict and doom for the flesh. And in his thought and purpose our flesh has been crucified there. "Our old man was crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be done away" (Rom. vi. 6, R.V.). Also, "They that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh" (Gal. v. 24)—statements which cannot be appropriated by one or two, but are made generally of all the saints, as they are considered in the person of their Representative and Head. Oh that, through our failure in faith and obedience, there were not so great a gap between what all the saints are in the purpose and thought of God, and what they are in their practical realisation!

But God has done more than assign flesh to the cross. He has given us his Holy Spirit, whose special office it is to restore to the inner life, and to the body also, a right-ordered and natural existence. There are some who seem to suppose that He takes the evil bias entirely away, so that they are as Adam before he fell. In our judgment this is contrary to the teaching of Scripture, which recognises the presence of the flesh in believers, though it expressly teaches that they are not in the flesh. But the Holy Spirit is eager to dwell in each believer mightily, as a counteractive agency, lusting against the flesh, restraining its every manifestation, keeping it utterly in the place of death; and this so calmly and quietly, that the happy subject of his grace begins to suppose that the flesh is extirpated or eradicated, when in point of fact it is present still, and would reveal itself, if the gracious operation of the Holy Spirit were restricted for a single moment (Gal. v. 17).

It is not a question of what Christ can do, but of what He has undertaken to do. Of course, a moment is coming when we shall put off this body, and when the redemption of our entire being will be completed in the acquisition of a body fashioned in the likeness of our Lord's. But till then we are doomed to carry about a body which is apt, through inclinations excited in the mind, to hurry us into sin (1 Cor. ix. 27). Yet surely it is more blessed to have the constant indwelling, restraining, sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit, as the source of our deliverance from the flesh, than to have back again the nature of unfallen Adam, which might at least fall again before the onset of the tempter.

We lived once in a house, the cellar-kitchen of which was so damp that the servant was able sometimes to sweep up the white mould from the tiles; but as long as we kept up a roaring fire, the damp was undiscernible, and the kitchen was warm and pleasant. Indeed, no stranger would have realised how strong the tendency to damp was. But directly the fire was allowed to die down for days or weeks, the damp revealed itself. So, when the Spirit works mightily in the soul, He is like the ruddy glow of a furnace, and the evil tendencies of our nature are as if they were not.

We were told the other day that the workmen employed in making the subterranean tunnel through London came on sand, through which water was flowing freely, but they were left perfectly dry so long as the parts excavated were filled by a strong blast of compressed air. So is the heart kept pure and sweet as long as the Spirit dwells in it in power. It is of the utmost importance, then, to live in the Spirit and walk in the Spirit, that we may not fulfil the lusts of the flesh.

Temptation does not only come from without, as some say. The spark may be flung in from without, but there is a magazine of gunpowder within. The match could be struck on the lid in vain if there were not a prepared surface on which to ignite. "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed" (James i. 14). And it is because of the known presence of these evil tendencies within that the devil watches us so closely.

As long as we are kept under the mighty power of God, we are safe. The conflict is no longer within, but without. And all hell shall expend itself in vain on the nature which is experiencing the blessed reign of the Spirit of God, making us free from the law of sin and death. Yield yourselves to God, receive the filling of the Holy Spirit by faith, and then march to assured victory through the power of the Son of God.

III. Consolation to the tempted. — (1) Your temptations are not an uncommon experience.—We have all the same constitution, and there is much more similarity in our temptations than we suppose. "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common in man." "The same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world."

(2) All temptation is under the restraint of God.—As in the case of Job, Satan cannot tempt us without God being first acquainted with his designs. And, as in the case of Peter, there seems to be almost a seeking and receiving of permission to tempt before Satan assails. In any case, no temptation befalls us greater than our power to combat and overcome. And we are permitted to be tempted that we may learn to avail ourselves of the resources of which we might otherwise be unaware.

(3) Satan can be conquered.—Watch and pray. Be sober in your tastes and habits, in your words and deeds. Never neglect to abide in your strong fortress, Christ. Keep with the flock of God. Nourish your souls with the Word, that you may be healthy and strong. Gird on the whole armour of God. Resist the first insignificant advances of the foe. Be steadfast in the faith. Look instantly to Jesus to cast the panoply of his protection around you, and to stand between you and your assailant, as a shield before the body of the warrior. Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Go into battle assured of success: this your talisman, They overcame by the blood of the Lamb; this your battle-cry, Jesus saves, Jesus saves.

The Baltic Provinces.

Rev. J. D. Kilburn, late minister of the English and American Congregational Church at St. Petersburg, writes in Evangelical Christendom:—

Though a change in some respects for the better seems now to be passing over the Baltic Provinces, there remains very much that saddens and grieves one there. If I mistake not greatly, much has been, and is still being done, in those Provinces which will weaken and injure the Russian Empire. A little leaven leavens the whole mass. Kindle a fire, or feed it when it is kindled, and who can say how far it will spread?

It is surprising to see the suspicion with which some in high positions appear to have regarded the Lutheran pastors. Interested people, to gain their own ends and accomplish their own purposes, have sought to spread the report that they were not as loyal as they ought to be. This has been far too readily believed by some. Careful and searching inquiry would show how utterly unfounded it is.

I have personally conversed with about thirty of the pastors in all parts and in all positions in the Church, from the General Superintendents of the Provinces, or Bishops, as we should call them, to the isolated and lonely country pastors. I have met them in companies, and alone in their own homes, and in the homes of others. They have spoken freely; in many cases, I believe, they have told out all their hopes and all their fears. What is the result? Have I heard again and again outbursts of disloyalty? Have I heard again and again words which, if reported, would prove that they were justly regarded with suspicion? I have not. I wish to bear the strongest and most emphatic testimony I can to the loyalty of the Lutheran pastors in the Baltic Provinces. Not once have I heard one word against the Emperor, or one wish respecting him which was not for the well-being of himself and his empire. Nay more, I know a pastor in Esthonia who for five years has been under arrest, and who, though out of prison (because two friends have given bail on his behalf) yet cannot leave the town where he lives without special police permission. He is charged with what to us would seem a most trifling offence, if even offence it could be called. This man, was asked by a foreign nobleman to write a full account of his case that he might lay it before one high in position in another land. The pastor declined to write this account. And why so? Because he thought it would hardly be acting rightly towards the Emperor. I do not think Russia, or Europe, can produce many cases of such high-souled conscientious loyalty as that.

In the same town is another pastor with a large family and an invalid wife. This man, through certain changes that the Government had made, knew not how he and his family were to obtain even the common necessaries of life. Still, when he gathers his family together around the family altar day by day, he never neglects to ask that God's blessing may rest upon his Emperor. Yet these are the men of whom some have spoken of as lacking in loyalty. These are the men whom some have regarded with suspicion.

I was in Esthonia when the papers published what was said to be the advice of the Commission, which was said to have been sitting upon the Lutheran Church. The Commission was reported to advise that the land, &c., be taken from the pastors. This implied the loss of much that they valued. Yet it was not this that made the deepest impression on some minds, it was not this that gave the greatest pain to some hearts. It was stated, by way of introduction to the advice referred to, that the advice respecting the taking away of the land and removal of the Theological Faculty to St. Petersburg, &c., was given because of the "well-known political tendencies of the Lutheran pastors." It was this sentence that gave the greatest pain to many.

I know something of Russian life and Russian opinion, and I say unhesitatingly that the Emperor has no more loyal subjects than the Lutheran pastors of the Baltic Provinces.

There is no class of men in Russia whose teachings and influence tend to make more loyal and more useful subjects than do those of the Lutheran pastors of the Baltic Provinces. I do not write thus because I am a Lutheran, I am not. I write thus because truthfulness and a sense of duty compel me so to do.

The suspicion referred to seems to be less now than it once was. All who wish for the good of the Russian people, as well as those who desire the prosperity of the Baltic Provinces, must earnestly pray that it may decrease still more. We seldom act justly towards those whom we unjustly suspect. We may desire to do so, we may try to do so, but we seldom, if ever, succeed. Unjust suspicion injures those whom we suspect; it injures ourselves most of all.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Thanking friends who responded to his appeal for Gospel tracts, Mr. Charles Wm Downes writes:—"The papers and tracts were faithfully distributed on Good Friday in the villages to which the Mission Band went. Open-air meetings were held in several places, and we trust that the seed sown will bring forth fruit to the glory of God."

VICTORIA HALL MISSION, NORWICH.—We turned to account our annual Good Friday evening meeting by entering a strong protest against the national sin and shame involved in the practice of forcing by our Government upon the unwilling native races of India the sale of intoxicating drink. Rev. W. A. MacAllan, Presbyterian minister, occupied the chair, and a resolution was unanimously carried, calling on Her Majesty's Government to discontinue the present iniquitous "abkari" system, and to allow absolute prohibition where the inhabitants desire it. Copies of this resolution were to be forwarded to Viscount Cross, Secretary of State for India, to the two members of Parliament for Norwich, and to Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P. Mr. Hira Singh Puri (from the Punjaub) was the exponent of the wants and wishes of his fellow-countrymen, and while gratefully acknowledging the beneficent effects of British rule in India, he pathetically pleaded for the removal of this injustice which he described as a great hindrance to the spread of the Gospel, and a fruitful source of demoralisation, degradation, and misery.

Bracondale, Norwich. Robert Adcock

r takes no little courage to maintain the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch before hen who, in order to exclude God from the niverse, deny all inconvenient historical facts, nd overlook the sublimest problems of life. o Rev. J. F. B. Tinling belongs the honour of aving bravely called a halt in the reckless isrepresentations of Secularist lecturers in egard to the question, "Who wrote the Penateuch?" In the Hall of Science, Old-street, .C., recently, Mr. J. M. Robertson, in the ourse of a lecture, said that no one to-day elieves that Moses wrote the five books with hich his name has been associated. Among he audience was Mr. Tinling, and he promptly hallenged the statement. Asked whether e would discuss the point thus raised, he conented to do so. The discussion came off on hursday evening last week. There was an udience of between 300 and 400, a dozen or nore of them females, and many young men.

The issue was a well-defined one. As all dmit, the Pentateuch has for two thousand ears passed for the work of Moses. Mr. obertson quoted Wellhausen, Driver, Kuenen, nd others, and made their most destructive tatements his main argument against the Mosaic authorship. He regarded the book as "a mass of fraud and imposture," with the nerest germ of historical truth, the product of a acerdotal party after the return from Babylon. Mr. Tinling replied by showing the unreasonableess of this assumption, maintaining the impossibility of the books having been written at so ate a period, and under such circumstances. He read extracts from the works of modern ritics, pointing out that they are in utter conusion in the details of their conclusions, lthough too sadly at one in shutting their eyes o unwelcome evidence. First they bring the Pentateuch down to the latest date they dare; nd then, on discovering allusions to the Law n the historical and prophetical books, they leny the claims of even these to the antiquity hat was previously conceded. Everything nust bend to the theory, which has no objective evidence whatever to support it. Mr. Tinling utterly discredited the method of the critics, and called attention to the patent unity nd high purpose of the Pentateuch. Mr. Robertson made many statements which his opponent did not stay to answer. He declared hat the Talmud described the Sadducees as denying the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, as if such a statement found in the iterature of their avowed enemies could have ny value alongside the well-known historical act that the Sadducees accepted the Law itself, ut rejected the rabbinical expositions of it.

Things that doubters have hinted, the atheist oldly affirmed, several of his statements well leserving to rank among those of days gone by, vhich have now been shown to have been without foundation. Who will now question, as once vas done, the correctness of the Bible description of Nineveh? Or who will say that there ever was a mighty Hittite empire? In due course, many of Mr. Robertson's rash words will be shown to be vain. The miracles which the infidels laughed at, Mr. Tinling boldly admitted, declaring miracle to be one of the ways of God at great crises in the world's history. Having quoted travellers to show that he Pentateuch could only have been written n very ancient times by one who had personally one over the ground described, he contended hat the only reasonable course is to allow the Mosaic authorship. He by no means overooked the statement of our Lord (of no account n the so-called "Hall of Science") as to Moses aving "written concerning Him."

Finally, Mr. Tinling commended the book itself to the earnest study of his hearers, making nention of Moses as a distinguished servant of God and the precursor of Jesus Christ. It was painful to hear the derisive jeers with which the name of the Blessed One was greeted by some of those present—by those who had previously made up their minds not to be impressed with any evidence, and who, sad to reflect, must have had in their hearts the contempt and hatred of God and his Christ which they showed by their voice and manner. The few Christians present could not but be impressed with the serious purpose of Mr. Tinling, which contrasted so greatly with the painful levity of the audience.

American Notes.

Once more one of our fairest cities has been visited by the dreaded cyclone. The ravaging tornado has struck Louisville, Kentucky, levelling buildings and killing hundreds of citizens. Since the appalling Johnstown disaster no such desolating visitation has come upon us. It is difficult to describe the fell power of such a storm, when the forces of nature are loosened for but a moment. Immense warehouses, palatial residences, and humble cottages have alike been whirled out of their settings, and dashed to fragments on the earth, or hurled through the air.

Louisville is not alone in her grief. For hundreds of miles the cyclone swept onward, demolishing villages and sweeping away isolated houses throughout the country. Many are houseless, while numbers mourn their dead. The signal service bureau had given warning some hours before the storm, but who can predict the line of an erratic tornado; or where could shelter be found?

In our journeying West and South the constant cry of pastors is over the laxity and worldliness of the professing Church. Certainly there is reason for sighs and tears. But many pastors forget that a worldly Church, or a worldly Christian, cannot be cured by complaints. Let an attractive spirituality be held out as the antidote; the joy of hearty Christian service be encouraged. A prominent Methodist paper draws a doleful picture of the spiritual state of its own denominational churches. The exposé may do good if it will lead the godly to cry for the upraising of another Wesley, or, better still, for the coming of Wesley's Master.

This brief extract will indicate the character of the article:—"The world is in the Methodist Church; in it as big as an elephant, as ravening as a lion, as offensive as a skunk, as poisonous as a viper...in our lust for members, by our carnal revivals, by our superficial preaching, by personal pressure, by social attractions, by worldly baits, we have widened the gate and brought great numbers of unconverted men, women, and children, into the Church; and these unregenerate, unbroken ones, always have the world with them. In many churches these form the majority, are active in controlling, and the world then gives direction to the Church; and, alas, for the direction!"

From the beginning of its organisation, we feared the new Order known as "The King's Daughters." The very title betrayed its superficiality. But it became fashionable, and sentimental young ladies took to it, and joined these bands of "daughters." We suspected the orthodoxy of the movement, knowing that Unitarians, Universalists, and anti-Evangelicalists were received into full membership. It is now evident that the Unitarians control the majority of these bands; all evangelical reference to the blood of atonement has been purged from their tracts. A Unitarian magazine openly endorses "The King's Daughters" by this statement: "We are now satisfied, since 'The King's Daughters' make Christ a Saviour, as General Grant was a Saviour." While the Church has been asleep, numberless organisations of an ephemeral character have arisen, each one claiming to hold the true panacea. They have their little day, and yet the heart of the world hungers for the Bread of Life. God has linked his power but to one thing—viz., the Gospel of Christ. We need a revival of true Gospel preaching.

The volunteer missionary movement has necessarily called into existence extra schools for Bible study and preparation. The seminaries already at work could not accommodate all of the young men and women, nor could they very well adapt themselves to impart the quick training needed for certain missionary evangelisation. The new schools are doing a faithful work, and doubtless others will soon be established. They are, however, violently attacked in some of our religious papers, and ridiculed as "short-cut schools." The outcry is made that the home and foreign field may be occupied by persons lacking literary culture, notwithstanding their moral and spiritual qualities, because, forsooth, intellectualism must win the day. We hear far too much about "a cultured ministry" the need of the times. Some very intellectual men have wrecked many a church on the rocks of Agnosticism. When intellect sits humbly at the feet of Jesus it has its true and needed place in the ministry of the Gospel. But God still uses the weak things, and things that are not.

MISSION HALL, CHISWICK.

Chiswick is associated with boating and sunny weather; but some may not know that there is in that quarter a densely populated district, where poverty, want of work, and improvidence make it an extremely suitable place for active Christian effort. Here, for the last nine years, Mr. Robert Smith has been engaged. He has been enabled, by the help of kind friends, to build suitable mission premises, and to make them a veritable hive of Christian and social agencies. Beside the usual services on Sunday, there is a Sunday-school with an attendance of seven hundred; and it would have gone hard with many of these little ones, had not Mr. Smith been able to supply them with a daily breakfast, and a weekly dinner, during the winter months. One hundred and fifty of these youngsters enjoyed a fortnight in the country or at the seaside last summer, part of the expense being borne by the parents. During the past year the Crèche has been made useful 3264 times by mothers obliged to go out to work.

To promote "pleasant evenings," some kind friends suppled a piano, and apparently every evening has its purpose. Bible study, music, singing, temperance, thrift, and Band of Hope, all receive a due share of attention. A nurse is maintained for the benefit of poor people who lack this needful aid in sickness. There are savings-banks and various clubs, all calculated to give that needful "stitch in time" which is so helpful to the industrious poor. Indeed, if a model mission for a very poor district were being sought for, one could not do much better than to visit Mr. Smith. His address is 15, Linden-gardens, Chiswick, S.W.

BRADFORD Y.M.C.A.—The seventh annual report is, like its predecessor, a record of cheering progress. The roll of members and associates contains 807 names, an increase of 120 during the last year. Much blessing has attended the various services and other meetings. Steps have been taken which will, it is hoped, lead to the erection of a new building. The total cost of land and institute, with needful furniture, will be about £12,000. At the present time the membership is such that considerable difficulty is felt during the winter months in providing accommodation for all the classes and meetings which are organised. Mr. David Gardiner is general secretary of the Association.

Dr. Barnardo's Homes.

THE EASTER FESTIVAL.

The Easter Festival promises to become a very useful, as well as interesting, annual fixture in connection with Dr. Barnardo's great work. On Wednesday, last week, between 1500 and 2000 friends of the work visited Stepney Causeway, and had the pleasure of seeing the spacious Homes, and many members of their large and ever-increasing family. The sight could not but suggest many reflections to thoughtful people. There were boys who had been taken from the streets, and in many cases from surroundings even more dangerous, engaged in workshops and learning trades at which, in due course, they will be able to earn a respectable livelihood. Bakers, blacksmiths, brush-makers, carpenters, printers, shoemakers, harness-makers, wheelwrights, and wood-choppers were all hard at it, improving the time, and developing their powers of body and mind. If the "raw material," picked off the streets, can thus be put to use, what a patriotic enterprise is that of which the Homes are the centre! What a Christ-like endeavour is that which takes the "idle hands," which Satan is so willing to employ, and trains them to industry and honesty!

After going the round of the place, the sympathetic company assembled in the spacious gymnasium, where a meeting was held under the presidency of Mr. Samuel G. Sheppard. There had been military drill in the yard by two hundred boy inmates; now there was musical drill by a squad of trained lads, and a performance on the dulcimer, mandolin, and violin by small boys. In the course of some remarks, the chairman said that the various institutions had that day 3450 mouths to fill, and bodies to clothe. Altogether 15,500 children had passed through the Homes, 4390 of them having been sent to other lands, principally to Canada. The eloquence of these figures left little to be said as to the grandeur and importance of the work. Dr. Barnardo then gave a hearty welcome to friends, new and old. He spoke generally of the work of rescue in which he is engaged, beginning with details of what the Homes rescue children from. Needless to say that many have been rescued from the custody of persons of wicked and criminal life.

THE STORY OF A LITTLE GIRL

was given in illustration. Ten years of age, Mary has a father, but he is in gaol for the thirty-second time, and her mother is a woman of bad character and shameful life. Her sister, having already been convicted several times of crime, is in a reformatory, and her brother in a training-ship for similar reasons. This little girl was for the third time charged with picking pockets, at which she was an adept. Her hand is very small, and when before the magistrates, she said: "Do you see, my hand is so small that I can easily slip it into people's pockets."

How did the girl become an inmate of the Homes, seeing that they are not certified under the Industrial Schools Act? Well, she suffers from an affection of the ear, and so was refused admission into other institutions. Having been committed three times to the workhouse because ineligible for ordinary Homes, application was made for her reception into "Dr. Barnardo's Homes," from which no destitute child is ever turned away. Little Mary is now an inmate of the Village Home at Ilford, and, having been rescued from vicious surroundings, it is hoped she will grow up a credit to her benefactors.

Children are also rescued from cruelty. To show that there is much need for this, Dr. Barnardo told the story of a baby who was received some time ago. In course of time it was noticed that the little one was blind, and examination showed that both eyes had small ulcers on them. On investigation, it was found that the mother, while drunk, had wantonly punctured them with a needle. The brutal creature was in gaol when she made this admission, and expressed the intention, on being released, of applying for her child, so as to care for it herself. "But," said the Doctor, "I need hardly tell you that she shall never have the little one again. I will not part with her until I am satisfied that it shall be for her eventual and permanent benefit."

On March 5, a little girl, four years of age, became

and has needed ever since the constant attention of a trained nurse. She was admitted from Shropshire, and, while she had not been subjected to direct violence, she had been so horribly neglected that, although four years of age, she only weighed twenty pounds. She was on the verge of death, and her parents have been sentenced to prolonged terms of imprisonment for their cruelty. The magistrate made an order, under the new Act for the Better Prevention of Cruelty to Children, for the little one to be sent to Dr. Barnardo's Home, because that was "a safe place."

Dr. Barnardo went on to show that the young are also rescued from the sufferings of the street. During the present year 369 destitute boys and girls have been admitted. Some time ago a boy clad in rags and with a starved look was admitted. A glance showed that he was seriously ill. He was fourteen years of age; he could not remember his father, and his mother died when he was nine. At that age, after living for a few weeks with a poor neighbour, he found himself

THROWN UPON THE WORLD.

He lived, as thousands live, on the street and by the street. He had no friend to help or direct him, no teacher to keep his hand from theft and his mind from pollution. When he could pick up a few pence, he slept at a common lodging-house with its corrupting associations; at other times he walked the streets all night. He was admitted to hospitals, but discharged as incurable. Homes were closed against him, because he was "only fit for a hospital," and hospitals could not retain chronic cases when their accommodation was so greatly in demand for patients for whom there was some hope. Advised to apply to the Stepney Homes, he found the welcome he needed. He occupied the Harecourt cot in the hospital, and shortly afterwards died. The Doctor concluded the story thus: I left London for a little time just after his admission. When I returned, a little note from the matron was put into my hand, saying that, while lying on a bed of pain, the poor boy learned to love the Saviour. The matron added: "I loved to talk to him, and no doubt he truly learned the preciousness of Christ." Is not this true Christian work, rescue work having the blessing of our divine Master? Proceeding to speak of the Doctor said that first of all they are taught to obey. Then they are instructed in trades. Quite a number go to sea, and many have emigrated. The failures have not yet reached an average of two and a half per cent. of those that have been placed out in life. In a large number of cases, evidence has been afforded that the children have become out-and-out followers of the Lord Jesus Christ.

WHAT IS DONE WITH THE CHILDREN,

The speaking over, there was a collection on behalf of the work. The little Scotch pipers then had an opportunity of displaying their powers and Highland costumes. There were also two interesting swimming contests. The things that were said and seen will, however, provoke further gifts from the same pockets, for the work cannot but be supported by such generou people as intimately know of it. The Hospit for Waif Children, erected during the Jubil year, and called "Her Majesty's," was ope and those who visited it saw much to plea them. The festival was, from first to last, success, and we trust it will result in the r pletion of the spacious coffers of the Homes.

Obituary.

MR. GEORGE H. STUART.

We deeply regret to see an announcement of th death of this well-known Christian citizen Philadelphia. Mr. Stuart has for many yea taken a leading part in commercial, financial, an religious matters. In an early issue we hope give his portrait and sketch of his life.

REV. JOSEPH TOULSON.

The Primitive Methodist Connexion has su tained a serious loss by the death of Rev. Josep Toulson, General Book Steward and President the Conference. For more than forty-seven years h was one of the most devoted and successful mi isters in the denomination. Born near Wakefiel in 1823, of pious parents, he early gave his hea to God, and entered the ministry at the age nineteen. He laboured in Yorkshire, Ken Berkshire, Buckingham, and settled in the Metr polis about twenty years ago. In addition superintending Connexional business, he held hi self ready at any time to plead good causes in th pulpit and on the platform. On Saturday, Apr 5, while on his way to Liverpool-street station, leave for Dereham, where he was to preach on th following day, he was taken ill in the street, an died almost immediately. Testimony has on a hands been borne to his high character and dutiful ness as a servant of Christ.

MR. OBERLIN PUDNEY.

We have to record, with very deep feelings o sorrow, the demise of this young Christian worke and member of the Society of Friends, who die last week in London at the age of thirty. He wa for over nine years a faithful and efficient servan in our publishing office, and gained universal an very warm esteem for his genial and gentle Chris tian disposition. He was active in many depart ments of Christian work, such as open-air preaching adult Bible-classes, &c. Last Whitsuntide he me with a serious bicycle accident in Holborn, a omnibus passing over his body; and to this may b traced his untimely decease. He had to a grea extent recovered strength, but was seized som weeks ago with diarrhœa, resulting in typhoi fever. Though of a naturally strong and well preserved constitution, the internal weakness caused by the accident did not allow him to rally and he succumbed after a painful illness. Hi remains were interred at Earl's Colne, Essex, th residence of his parents, on Friday last.

MR. JOHN T. WOOD.

The death is announced of Mr. John T. Wood to whom were due the discoveries at Ephesus which excited so much interest a few years ago. Bor in London in 1821, Mr. Wood was educated as a architect, and in 1837 undertook work in connec tion with the Smyrna and Aidin railway. After year's employment in this way, he began excava tions at Ephesus for the discovery of the Temple of Diana. Although he failed at the time in thi enterprise, he succeeded in finding the theatre o the city and the Odeum. In 1868 he resume operations, and in due course came upon the Grea Temple, twenty-two feet below the surface. By 1874 Mr. Wood had uncovered the whole site o the temple, demonstrating that three temples had successively stood upon the site, and that within the last structure a Christian church had been erected. Several sculptures which he secured are now in the British Museum. The results of Mr Wood's explorations were published in his "Dis coveries at Ephesus," issued in 1877. His health was permanently injured by his researches.

Y.M.C.A., LIMERICK.—The first public meet ing of this Y.M.C.A. was recently held at th rooms, 27, Upper Cecil-street. Mr. Rober McCann delivered an interesting lecture o "Y.M.C.A. work throughout Great Britain an elsewhere."

THE JEWS OF JAFFA.

The Jewish population of Jaffa is now reckoned as between 3000 and 4000, and consists, as elsewhere in Palestine, of Sephardim and Ashkenazim, Spanish and Polish, Russian and German. Jaffa is a very babel of languages, and I am constantly conversing in seven or eight tongues and dialects, and I wish I had leisure to recover what I once knew of Turkish and modern Greek.

With the disappearance of the Dengue epidemic, from which almost the entire population suffered in the autumn—and now the influenza is afflicting many—and the return of mild weather, Jewish visitors on Saturdays are coming, like last season, in increasing numbers to hear what the missionary has to tell them of God's message of love and mercy to man. They come in family groups and stay for hours, and come of their own free will, not by invitation; and I am thankful to add that my intercourse with them is friendly and cordial, and out of doors they show me as much respect as they would to any of their Rabbis. On December 28 we had twenty-eight visitors; on the fourth inst., forty-two—men, women, and young persons of both sexes. Mrs. and the Misses Ben-Oliel do all they can to interest and instruct the Jewesses by reading, conversation, and singing of hymns, while the men gather in my study to listen to the glad tidings of God's redeeming love. Occasionally a controversialist turns up, ready to twist and quibble; but long experience has taught me to prefer simple, plain, incontrovertible presentations of Divine truth to mere intellectual athleticisms.

Recently an extraordinary hunger for Scriptures and religious books and tracts has manifested itself so great that I have scarcely any left in the languages in largest request. Glad, indeed, and thankful I shall be if readers of these lines will send me a supply of tracts in Hebrew, Spanish, German, and Polish Hebrew, &c., to be had from the London Society for Jews, Lincoln's Inn-fields, and to be forwarded by book post, for the Turkish Customs interpose no end of difficulties to the introduction of books, particularly of Christian literature. Good English books for the lending library would be welcome also. Including wives and children, there are some fifty Hebrew Christians residing in Jaffa.—Rev. A. Ben-Oliel, in Evangelical Christendom.

MR. CAINE'S OFFER to the London Wesleyan Mission Committee of a mission-hall in South Lambeth, which is worth from £1000 to £2000, has not been accepted. Mr. Caine and his family have worked this hall very successfully for some years, and there are about a hundred members. Mr. Caine offered to subsidise the work to the amount of £100 per annum.

POOR GOVERNESSES IN BERLIN.—At the annual meeting of the Berlin Home for British and American Governesses, presided over by the Empress Frederick, it was mentioned that Sir Edward and Lady Ermyntrude Malet, who had at an earlier period given over £400 to the Home, have made another munificent bequest of £500. The institution was founded as a temporary refuge for governesses waiting for situations, or for those who happened to be in distress.

MISSION TO THE KHONDS.—We rejoice to report the safe arrival of Messrs. A. B. Wilkinson and A. Long at their destination, to labour among the Khonds, in the hills of Central India. Writing on January 16, Mr. Wilkinson says:—"Mr. Pike, who has travelled there, advises us to settle at Khalahandee (Kharondee), a place within the borders of the Central Provinces, at about equal distances from Russelkhonda and Sumbulpore. This place is said to be in the heart of the Khond country, and is comparatively healthy." Hitherto the Khonds have never been evangelised. Many are praying that these two servants of God, who have devoted themselves to the work, may be greatly blessed. The hon. sec. of this Mission, which is unsectarian, is Mr. A. F. Emeric de St. Dalmas, 11, De Montfort-square, Leicester.

MR. C. INGLIS AT HEREFORD.

The united mission just held by Mr. Charles Inglis, under the auspices of Lady Henry Somerset and a committee representing the various denominations in this city, has proved a great blessing.

The Lord has given a marked spirit of hearing, insomuch that the Corn Exchange, holding eight hundred people, has been filled nightly with those willing to hear the Gospel. Many have been convicted by the Spirit of God, and it has been a joy to see the ministers and Christian workers of the various churches working unitedly among the anxious ones in the inquiry-room.

The last Sunday of the mission will long be remembered. No less than four services were held. Hundreds were unable to get into the Corn Exchange, and a neighbouring church lent for the overflow was crowded to the doors; and many in these closing meetings, it is believed, accepted Christ as their own Saviour. The Y.M.C.A. building has been filled nearly every afternoon to the Bible lectures which Mr. Inglis has given; and many Christian workers have gone away greatly refreshed and profited by things new and old which have been brought out of the Word of God.

YOUNG WOMEN AT GIBRALTAR.

A great need has been felt for some time of an institute for young women at Gibraltar. A branch of the Y.W.C.A. has lately been started there; a class for servants already numbers over twenty; a "time and talents meeting" is also working, and considerable interest has been shown. These meetings were held at my house, and the want is now felt for a centre for work.

Ladies residing at Gibraltar are in sympathy with this. It is a place of enormous temptations to young women, being such a large garrison town. Many girls come from England, and often find situations not what they are represented. Lately two very sad cases of girls who were very wrongly treated sought protection at the Soldiers' Home, not knowing where to go. As this Home is exclusively for soldiers, it is, of course, unseemly for young women to be received there. Miss Niven, the lady superintendent, is now taking this class for servants, but we desire to establish a Home, and send out a lady worker exclusively for girls.

House rent is very expensive at Gibraltar, but a small flat could be obtained for £30 or £40 per annum for this purpose, and we venture to ask sympathy and help from those who are interested in work amongst young women abroad. I have just returned from Gibraltar.

(Mrs.) Kate Hannington.

NIGHT CABMEN OF LONDON.—The twenty-eighth annual report of the Mission to the Night Cabmen of London, in connection with the London City Mission, tells of good work among a needy class. The two missionaries seek out the cabmen in all their haunts, in all weathers, and visit the sick ones in their own homes, or in the infirmaries. A new feature of last year's work has been the formation of a Christian Cabdrivers' Association, having for its object the binding together of believing cabdrivers, in order to their being strengthened, and outsiders being won to Christ by their example and solicitude. The missionaries endeavour to see and converse with all the night cabmen from once to six times a month, and they rejoice to record blessing as a result of their labours. Copies of the report, and other information, may be had from Miss E. Hebert, 1, Marine-terrace, Silloth, Cumberland.

BEULAH.

But yesterday a mist hung low
O'er moor and field and fold;
And here and there a patch of snow
Gleamed pure and white and cold.

And I was sad, I scarce knew why—
The primrose in the lane,
The greening earth, the bright'ning sky,
All failed to ease my pain.

Yet, when I climbed the mountain side
Hushed as a child asleep,
And reached the moorland stretching wide,
Where I could hear the deep

Moaning within the sunlit bay,
Singing of its unrest,
My mood of sadness passed away
And peace came to my breast.

A springtime breath that kissed my face
Whispered away my strife;
And in that lonely halting-place
My heart renewed her life.

So, when I'm weary of the round
Of each day's pressing care,
Lord, lead me to the higher ground,
The alpine heights of prayer;

That thy south wind may comfort me,
And thy face on me shine
From that eternal flowing sea
Of thy great Love Divine.

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

Glad times were experienced at Kilburn Hall on Bank Holiday, when the twenty-second anniversary of this branch of the Evangelistic Mission was celebrated by meetings in the afternoon and evening. Large numbers assembled, representing almost every denomination of Christians.

Mr. James E. Mathieson, who presided in the afternoon, spoke on the words of "Good Cheer" in the Gospels and Book of the Acts, showing how the Lord turns our dark hours as well as our bright ones to account for his own glory and our good. He added a few words of testimony to the good work of the Evangelistic Mission.

Pastor Stott, of Abbey-road Chapel, spoke of the Easter joys flowing out of our Lord's resurrection for all believers. It was a joy to welcome Pastor Frank White again, after his recent indi position. He dwelt profitably on the character of spiritual Christians in contrast to carnal ones as stated in 1 Cor. ii., and the teaching in connection therewith in Colos. iii.

Colonel Morton (Mr. Mathieson's successor at Mildmay) dwelt on the blessedness of pardon and holiness enjoyed by all true believers. He gave pleasing incidents, observed during his military career, illustrating the attractive power of a godly life.

After an interval for tea, Mr. T. A. Denny presided at the evening meeting, speaking of the work in his usual bright and cheery manner. Rev. J. Stephens, of Highgate, dwelt on Christian unity and service. This was followed by short helpful words by Mr. Edward Hurditch, of Swindon, Dr. H. Soltau, Mr. W. H. Seagram, and Mr. Townley. Mr. C. Russell Hurditch gave particulars of the work of that branch of the Mission which showed cause for praise for blessing received, and for increased "power from on High." Other friends took part in prayer in the course of what proved an exceedingly interesting and we trust fruitful gathering.

Similar meetings were held at the same time at Bignold Hall, the East-end branch of the Mission, with like encouraging results. Revs. F. B. Meyer, John Wilkinson, and Messrs. E. H. Glenny, A. Wallis, and Newton Jones, took part.

CHINESE MISSIONS.—The visit of the Chinese lady to Dublin, to which we referred last week, has resulted in deepening the interest in Chinese missions. Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, with whose daughter the visitor came from China, has received a letter from a lady offering to devote her life to work in China; another has sent a remittance of £25 in aid of the Hospital at Fou Chou.

For the Young.

SUNBEAM WORK:

OR,

WHAT A CHILD MAY DO.

Far, far overhead, in the bright blue heaven, a little sunbeam played. It danced about full of joyous life and happiness, for it had only just been born out of the blazing heart of the great, golden sun, and it was full of love and warm gladness at being a living thing. All round it danced and played other baby sunbeams, and for a time it could think of nothing else but the joyousness of life. But by and by it began to notice the disappearance first of one then of another of its companions.

"Where are they gone to?" it questioned.

"To earth," whispered a glorious beam of light as it flashed downwards also.

"To earth! What for?" again asked our sunbeam.

"To work," answered the great mother sun, who had heard her child's questioning. "We have all our work to do. Life is not only meant for play."

Over these wise words our sunbeam pondered, and at last said to itself, "I must go, too. Perhaps there is work for me to do, though I'm only a baby beam." And down it shot like an arrow from a bow.

The summer's morning was still in its fair, fresh sweetness, and the hearts of the roses were all a-glitter with the dew. The stalks of the golden butter-cups were bent down, for they were full of cloud tears. Down by the brook blue-eyed forget-me-nots nodded "good morning" to the tall ferns and rushes that fringed its sides, and a few late violets wept softly over their loneliness under the shadow of their leaves.

The little sunbeam lightly kissed each rose-heart, causing the dew-drops lying within to sparkle like diamonds; drank a deep draught or two from the king-cups, lightening their heaviness, and then darted straight to the violets, softly circling them with its warm, glad light until they forgot their sorrow, and lifted their sweet blue faces heavenwards, breathing out fragrant thanks that made the morning breezes rich with odours.

Then away, away, flitted the sunbeam in search of work to do—this time to the great city, where all the world had been for hours astir—down dark lanes and reeking slums, until some fancy led it to enter an attic window. On the floor crawled a baby, ill-clad and hungry-looking, with its little wane face pinched ready for a cry. Mother had gone out to do half a day's charing somewhere; the money thus earned would bring food to the baby, but baby knew nought of this. Alone, hungry, weary, unable to do more than kick or cry on the bare floor where it had been placed for safety, it missed the mother's face and the mother's voice. So the ready tears came, and the baby face darkened and puckered—when lo! it forgot to cry!

For a bright, golden sunbeam had come in at the attic window to play "bo-peep" with the baby boy! Oh! what games those two had, and how the baby cooed and kicked. You would have laughed to see the fun had you been there.

After half an hour of this merry play the sunbeam saw the baby eyes grow heavy and the baby lips beginning to droop, so laying soft warm kisses on each little cheek, it whispered "good night" so often that the baby believed it heard its mother's cradle song and felt the pressure of her lips—so it sank to sleep tired and happy. How the sunbeam danced with glee! but in a moment more it had flitted away, away for still there was work to do.

Into a sick room, where a woman lay wearied out with long wakefulness and pain, the sunbeam flashed. It lightened up the dingy wall paper with its glad though tiny ray. It danced amongst the medicine bottles and cups arranged on the little round table; and then rested lovingly across the pages of an open book, which lay idly in the sick woman's fingers.

The unusual warmth of the sunbeam's breath on her chill fingers roused her, and she opened her languid eyes to see and smile a welcome to it. Right athwart the page it lay, gilding the words of promise she had just been reading.

"The Lord God is a sun and a shield" (Psalm lxxxiv. 11.), she murmered, "The Lord is my light and my salvation" (Psalm xxvii. 4.), and then her eyes uplifted, and she breathed the fervent prayer, "Lighten mine eyes, O Lord, lest I sleep the sleep of death."

To and fro the sunbeam glanced till evening shadows fell. Love and warmth followed; whatever it touched grew gay and beautiful. And now its work was done. Where it lay down to rest I do not know. I only know the light and happiness it gave did not die with it.

And now I am thinking of the loving sunbeams that are dancing and playing all round one, full of the joy of living happy, innocent, and glad. I am thinking of you, dear child, whom I love to picture as

> A sunbeam from eternity,
> Suffered on earth to play;

and I want to know if you have ever stopped in your bright, happy child life to ask yourself the question, "Is life all play? Is there no work I can do for God and other people?"

Suppose we think of our sunbeam's story and find out what you can do, and how you can do it.

If a child's heart is filled with God's love, and a real desire to do good, it will not long be left idle. You may only be able to give a gentle kiss, to tenderly press a trembling hand, to mark the look of weariness on an older brow, and by silent thoughtfulness and sympathy help your mother or friend to bear a burden heavier than you know—but this is sunbeam work. How often has a child's mute caress been the greatest possible comfort to a troubled spirit! It could not have borne a word, it could not have endured the curious eyes of older people, but the wealth of unspoken sympathy that was wrapped round it with the child's bare arms, the tender sorrow laid upon its lips with the soft kisses, did more to help and comfort than the child sunbeam could tell!

Dear children, let your work be sunbeam work; to comfort, to help, to sympathise. You cannot say much, but you can shine a great deal; you can be bright, joyous, helpful, and the magic of your happiness will drive trouble away.

What more can you do? Does it seem but poor work to make a baby brother's or sister's day happy? When you toss the ball to unskilful hands, or stand up the unsteady tin soldiers, or patiently build the brick houses for baby to knock down, do you often grow impatient and feel the time wasted? Nay, but it is sunbeam work.

It helps your busy mother, it sets the servant free for other duties, it fills the baby's heart with happiness, and makes him forget to cry. Why, it is angel's work too, and you, little maiden, should not ask better. Do it for God. And is there no sick room you know that could be made brighter for half-an-hour, if your healthy young face and clear young voice were seen and heard in it. "Sick rooms," you say, and shudder; "they are such gloomy places. One has to tread so lightly and speak so softly in them, and to sit so quiet. Must we go there?"

If you want to do real sunbeam work, you could have no better place. If it tries you so much to be still and quiet and to hush your energy for half-an-hour, how would you like to occupy a sick room for half a lifetime? Would you not want sunshine, and all the brightness you could get? Aye, indeed; so remember this and give it to others.

"No children ever visit one," said a poor invalid the other day with a sigh, gazing lovingly down at my baby boy who stood open-eyed and open-mouthed looking up in her face. "I wish they would, they seem bright bits of another world into which I never get a glimpse." Boys and girls, think of the sick rooms. Flit in and out of them noiselessly, cheerily, leaving brightness behind you. A bunch of flowers, a little delicacy, a loving word will do sunbeam work, and cheer many a dark hour in an invalid's life. So working, so living, so loving, you will be real little sunbeams, making up joy and happiness wherever you go. Life is not all play; God has work for you and me. Shall we forth goto find it, dear readers, and whatsoever our hands find to do, be it cheering sorrow, spending an hour in play, or brightening the dark places on earth, let us do it with our might.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., April 20, Prov. xv. 1—17; Mon., April 21, Prov. xv. 18—33; Tues., April 22, Prov. xvi. 1—16; Wed., April 23, Prov. xvi. 17—33; Thurs., April 24, Prov. xvii. 1—17; Fri., April 25, Prov. xviii. 10—24; Sat., April 26, Prov. xx. 1—13.

CHILDREN'S MISSION AT STAFFORD.—Gospel services for young people were held at St. Thomas's, Stafford, by Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, from April 4 to 8. The mission was prefaced with much prayer, and consequently there was much blessing, a considerable number, both young and old, deciding for Christ. Towards the close of the mission an "inquirers' hour" was held in the vestry of the church, and several sought conversation with the missioner, who was also cheered from time to time by meeting those who had received blessing at his seaside services at Rhyl, last summer. As one result of the mission, quite a contingent of workers from Stafford will accompany him and assist in this summer's campaign at Rhyl.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Rock Ferry, to April 19; Moseley, April 20—30. Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. Andrew's, Lambeth, to April 20; St. Leonards, April 26 to May 5. Mr. J. S. Tyler, Lydbrook, to April 20. Mr. T. L. Sayer, Park Church, Highbury, to April 23.

Scripture Union Conferences at Birmingham, in Young Men's Christian Association Rooms, Needless-alley, April 21, at 3.30 and 7 p.m.

TRAVELLERS' AID.

The Travellers' Aid Society, projected in 1885, is still battling with some of the difficulties which beset early attempts. One of its branches, that which provides parents and guardians with safe escort for their charges through London and other large towns, will, it is hoped, in time become self-supporting. But there is another branch of the Society's work which may appeal with yet greater significance to the followers of One who once said: "I was a stranger and ye took Me in." The Society cares for the "strangers" who come and go—the friendless, the fallen, the way-weary. Helping hands are stretched forth in time; who shall say how needful they are? To meet pressing needs of this sort an appeal is made for help. A report will be sent to anyone who may desire one. The Secretary is at the office (16A, Old Cavendish-street, W.) on the morning of every week-day, and will gladly supply details of the work.

A MISSIONARY IN JAPAN, writing to thank a Penzance friend who sends him The Christian, says:—"All the different foes of the Gospel seem to have their representatives in this interesting field of labour. Corrupt and Apostate Christianity, insidious Anglo-Catholicism, broad and down-grade theology, Agnosticism, European Buddhism, Darwinism à la Herbert Spencer, with light, frivolous worldliness, rejecting even the semblance of a creed or faith. All these are competing earnestly for the soul of Japan. Others are determined to know 'nothing but Christ Jesus and Him crucified,' and prayerfully labour to bring the witness of 'the Gospel of the kingdom' to bear in its mighty soul-saving strength upon the agitated and restless heart of the nation. We need guidance, tact, power, and love; above all, a rich outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon workers and hearers."

Dr. Pentecost in Scotland.

After finishing his month's labours in Paisley, the evangelist went to Saltcoats, where he has had very different surroundings. Admirable arrangements had been made for his visit by a representative committee of ministers and laymen, so that he began work in the most favourable circumstances.

Afternoon Bible-readings were given in the hall of the new parish church, Ardrossan, which is connected with Saltcoats by a line of beautiful villas; whilst the evangelistic addresses in the evening were delivered in the North Parish Church, Saltcoats. The Bible-readings were greatly appreciated, dealing as they did with subjects of present-day interest. This was particularly the case with one on the Bible, in which he spoke his mind very freely on some aspects of the question which is greatly exercising the Scottish churches.

The evening meetings were always crowded. From the very start persons came readily forward; during the fortnight, upwards of 300 made a public profession of having surrendered themselves to Christ. This, however, does not represent all the good that has been done; there are many known to the Christian workers who are under deep impressions, and others who have given their hearts to God in their own homes. Believers have been greatly quickened, and speak most thankfully of the mission.

In 1859, a great revival movement spread all over Scotland, and a Saltcoats minister, Mr. Davidson, of the Free Church, took a very prominent part. His memory is still lovingly cherished by many in this town, and his pithy, pointed sayings are quoted by the fireside.

Dr. Pentecost's work has borne the richest fruit among the young, as was evident at the thanksgiving service held the night after he left, and attended by close upon 300 professed converts. It was a very happy meeting, and if those present are properly watched over and guided to Christian work, they should have a marked influence for good in the district.

WEST MARYLEBONE MISSION.—The seventh anniversary of this Mission was recently celebrated at St. James's Hall, George-street, Lisson-grove. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. T. Kirtley, F. Dowling, P. Gough, W. T. Russell, W. Barnard-Smith, James Sprunt, and others.

A NEW PALESTINE PICTURE.—A very attractive addition has been made to the far-famed collection of paintings in the Doré Gallery. It is from the brush of Mr. Edwin Long, R.A., and was painted for the Royal Academy of this year, but it has been secured by the proprietors of the New Bond-street collection. Mr. Long represents with much artistic grace and skill, a market scene in Nazareth; and though the conception is mainly modern, we are assured that with slight differences it would faithfully portray such a scene in the early life of our Saviour. Figures, costumes, fruits, &c., limned in the brightest of colours, are characteristically Oriental, and the general effect is singularly pleasing. The milk and honey of the land find a prominent place in the foreground, and the whole affords a charming peep at a phase of Eastern life, and is of undying Biblical interest.

THE SAILORS' REST AID SOCIETY.—Mr. Stephen Burrowes (15, Flavia Goija, Naples) has returned from his mission to the East, in connection with this Society and the International Purity League. He declares opium-smoking to be on the increase in the Levant. The traffic in corrupt literature is a plague going out from Egypt into many lands. Gambling is a rampant evil, specially rife at Cairo. Mr. Burrowes saw much to cheer him at Port Said and Alexandria, and had a pleasant, though brief, season in the Holy Land. The Sailors' Rest at Constantinople, has diligent workers, but an Englishman is required to assist among the ships. At the Piræus a long-cherished desire was realised by the establishment of a Rest. The Smyrna Rest continues to be a useful centre, British as well as other seamen enjoying its advantages. As a result of Mr. Burrowes' mission, the sphere and responsibilities of the Sailors' Rest Aid Society have been considerably extended.

BRETON EVANGELICAL MISSION.

Great blessing is being experienced by Pasteur Lecoat and his helpers in this work. Much prayer and effort has been followed by a great awakening of interest among the Breton population at all the stations. At Brest notably the new hall, which is a great advance upon the former contracted meeting-places, is now found to be not large enough for the crowds who are eager to listen to the simple Gospel in their native tongue. The little Church recently enrolled is steadily increasing, and the good received is followed up by M. Masson, who is in charge of that station, by personal visits to the Church members and inquirers at their own homes. By this means he learns of other Bretons who, having broken with Rome, are drifting into utter indifference as to spiritual things, if not into lax morality, amid the mass of their French-speaking fellow-citizens.

Upon the recent periodical visit of Pasteur Lecoat a large gathering was held in the hall at three o'clock on the Saturday, and three crowded services on Sunday. The new Breton Bible is proving itself to be the Word of God by the best of all evidences—the conversion of souls. Pasteur and Madame Lecoat are preparing for their annual visit to this country, and would be glad of further opportunities of making the Lord's work in their hands better known. At Fremel, the central station, all goes well. There are seventeen orphans in the home, and two aged occupants of the hospice have passed to their rest.

METROPOLITAN MUSIC-HALL.

Easter Sunday closed another season's work at the above, making the fourteenth consecutive year that these services have been conducted. Holding some two thousand, the hall is usually crowded, and many standing, whilst our workers have been constantly cheered by the many tokens given of the Lord's converting power. Our choir has been augmented and our stewards added to from the new converts.

While at tea at Hyde Park Hall, it was most cheering to hear one and another telling where it was that they decided. Two sitting together discovered that they were both blessed the same night; another mentioned Palm Sunday as the day he decided; two living in the same house were blessed on the same night; and one who had attended the meeting for years said, "I was obliged to yield last Sunday;" and another who had backslidden was restored, and is now useful to the Lord and to us.

Thus the work goes on, and our hearts feel grateful to our Lord for His continued mercies to us. Last night a number of the converts were obedient to their Lord, and confessed Him in the ordinance of baptism. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, from Australia, begin a fortnight's mission on Sunday next at Hyde Park Hall, and we shall be glad of the prayers of your readers that much blessing may follow, and that guidance and blessing may attend my journey through some of the prisons of Germany, Poland, and Russia, when I hope to leave copies of the Scriptures for the use of the prisoners.

Our annual meeting will shortly be held in the large Metropolitan Hall, Edgware-road, when Mr. C. H. Spurgeon will preside.

SOME GOOD PEOPLE HAVE FOUND FAULT with the mode in which Rev. Thomas Connellan left the Church of Rome. Have they ever thought that, had his intention been discovered beforehand, he might at this moment be imprisoned in the cell of a monastery? The Church of Rome has many a way of disposing of troublesome priests like Father Connellan.—Christian Irishman.

THE "A 1" HYMN COMPETITION.

The award in this competition as to the most popular hymns in Sacred Songs and Solos appears in A 1 for April. The competition was divided into eight sections, and 504 papers were sent in. We refer the interested reader to the magazine itself for the details of the award. The following is the closing paragraph:—

"We have left for the end of our remarks mention of the one feature of the competition which has afforded us the greatest pleasure. We refer to the testimony we have received from many as to the spiritual benefit and blessing they have experienced as a direct result of searching out these hymns. We trust the benefit may in every case prove to be a lasting one. God has already of his goodness abundantly blessed many of Mr. Sankey's hymns to the salvation of men's souls; and if, as we have reason to believe to be the case, we have, through this competition, been the means of awaking the hearts of some and causing them to 'seek after God,' we shall indeed feel that we have been permitted to do a good work."

Central Africa.

MRS. GUINNESS'S NEW BOOK.*

The issue of this bulky and intensely interesting volume is well timed. Central Africa is in everybody's mouth and everybody's mind, and this work ought to have the heartiest welcome from all who believe in Christian missions. It consists of three sections. First we have a graphic and comprehensive description of recent Central African discoveries and explorations; of the founding of the Congo Free State and of the two great curses of the Continent—the drink traffic and the slave trade. Next, there is a full and detailed account of the establishment and early progress of the Livingstone Inland Mission—a most romantic and engrossing chapter in missionary history. Section three records the dawning of Gospel light in the Congo region and the founding of the new Balolo Mission; with an additional chapter on the Congo climate. The illustrations and portraits are very numerous, and there are five valuable maps. Of course everybody will be eager to see and to read Mr. Stanley's forthcoming work, but we do not hesitate to say in advance that this admirable compilation by Mrs. Guinness is far more worthy of study, from the Christian missionary standpoint, than anything the great explorer is likely to say.

THE AFRICAN EXHIBITION.

Some very interesting additions have been made since the opening to the Exhibition in the Victoria Gallery, in Regent-street. Among these we may note the crocodile-shaped idols from Bonny, on the West Coast. Will it be believed that these were made in Birmingham, and sent out to Africa from this "Christian" land as objects of heathen idolatry? The lady attendant who pointed them out to our representative was well justified in her sarcastic observation about England taking the Gospel to Africa with one hand and fetiches and firewater in the other. Livingstone's tattered "Union Jack" is an exhibit that awakens a very different train of thought. Visitors should not omit the tea-room, where they will find Mr. H. H. Johnson's original sketches, made to illustrate his book, "The Life of a Slave." The presence and antics of the two Swaziland negro boys are a never-failing source of attraction to younger visitors. A photographic portrait of Prof. Drummond is now added to those of other African travellers.

ANTI-GAMBLING MOVEMENT.—At the Manchester Y.M.C.A., last week, a great anti-gambling meeting was held. The president, Mr. Herbert Philips, was in the chair, and addresses were given by Revs. Canon Davenport Kelly and H. T. Smart, and by Major Seton Churchill. The evils of betting and gambling have also been kept before the members for many years by the secretary, in his "Straight Talks."

Dr. Parker on the Psalter.

The twelfth volume of Dr. Parker's People's Bible (8s. Hazell, Watson & Viney) deals with the Psalter; we venture to think it will be one of the most popular and useful of the series. The field is so great that the preacher has had to compress very severely, and the book is not so much a critical and consecutive exposition as a brilliant essay at representing the scope and spirit of the Psalter. As an interpreter of the devotional element in Scripture Dr. Parker has few living equals, and here we find him at his very best. To show the estimate he has of the value of the Book of Psalms we give the following extracts from his Introduction:—

The whole Bible may be said to be condensed into the Book of Psalms. Everything is related in poetry. All the plainest and least poetical works are turned into music. The Book of Job is repeated in the Book of Psalms. In Job we find the concrete and the personal; the intensely dramatic and realistic; yet in the Psalms we find the same personalities represented, the same devil, the same upright souls, the same temptations, the same fears, and the same ultimate deliverance. Whether we read Job or the Psalms we are in reality reading the same book.

This observation holds good even of the Book of Proverbs. The psalter is set between Job and the Proverbs in our canon, and, account for it as we may, that would seem to be the best place for it. Nearly all the Proverbs are in some form in the Psalter. It seems to be the function and prerogative of poetry to take up all history, all proverbs, all moral maxims, and all common-places of human intercourse, and magnify and sublimate them into poetical expression. Can such singers be dead? Were they but so many songsters, like nightingales in the darkness, singing to human sorrow? and are they now dead, extinct, annihilated? It is impossible to believe this. To such singers music was no mere enjoyment. It was an instrument by which they communicated Divine revelation to human listeners. It was the soul in its highest raptures. It was the intensest enjoyment which the human can hold with the Divine. Other music comes and goes, changing its fickle fashion without reason and without defence, but this solemn, glorious, booming music rolls on night and day through all the centuries of human evolution. The men who sang such songs must be living; their immortality cannot be limited to their music.

Would we could live in this Psalter all the rest of our days. We need it every word, and we need every word every hour. By various figures could our enjoyment be represented. We should be as men called to reap the largest harvest ever grown in the vineyards of earth. We should be as those privileged to hear spiritual music stealing down upon us from the hidden places of the sky. We should be as prodigals to whom the word of pardon and of love is being spoken in ever-varying tones, yet with such definiteness that the heart can never miss the sweet and healing message.

In the Psalms we need find no controversy. In the music of the Church all controversy should be hushed. When men lecture, or preach, or discourse in any form, they provoke more or less intellectual indignation on the part of those who listen to them; but, when the noble Psalm or sweet hymn is being sung, all controversy is silenced, and alienation is forgotten in true brotherhood. When we are puzzled, therefore, by other portions of Scripture, and are inclined to high debate, and even to furious contention, let us suspend the angry combat, and go into the Psalter, that we may find a music which will reconcile us and unite us in holiest love. Blessed be God for the Psalter. It seems to have been written in our mother tongue. It is a calendar which we can consult every day in the year, and for every day in the year find some bright motto, some gentle speech, some anticipative Gospel.

Gathered Gold.

Were there not forgiveness with God, there would have been no commandment to repent.

If Christians lived nearer to God, they would have no difficulty in loving one another.—Rev. J. Hamilton.

The Lord tells us to carry our cross and cast our care, but we often try to cast our cross and carry our care.

Oh! if I might but speak to three or four herd boys of my worthy Master, I would be satisfied to be the meanest and most obscure of all the pastors in this land, and to live in any place, in any of his basest outhouses.—Samuel Rutherford.

WHERE ARE YOUR SINS?

What is your name? What is your age? How is your health? Where do you reside? Are you rich or poor? These are important matters, but they are of no moment in comparison with this question, Where are your sins? Other questions are for a day: this question bears on eternity.—Rev. John Macpherson.

A DESOLATE HOUSE.

The house that Christ leaves is left desolate. The temple, though richly adorned, though hugely frequented, is yet desolate if Christ have deserted it. He leaves it to them: they had made an idol of it and let them take it to themselves, and make the best of it; Christ will trouble it no more.—Matthew Henry. (Luke xiii. 35.)

FIRE FROM HEAVEN.

Let the religion of God lack the fire from heaven, and she is but a poor thing and can be beaten at every point. She must call in the State to prop her up with purse and power and Acts of Parliament, or she will faint and die. When early Christianity lost her power she borrowed from heathenism her altars and priests, her festivals and some of her foremost doctrines. She was born in the fire, and in the fire only can she live and thrive.—Rev. Mark Guy Pearse.

CALEB IS A MODEL

for the Christians most needed in these days. Quality is more important than quantity. Caleb is the type of thorough-going, uncompromising fidelity; he followed the Lord fully. What is required to make our churches vigorous and successful is, not bustle, but business; not parade and puffery or pulpit-pyrotechnics, but patience, prayer, and persevering work. We want the full following of Jesus Christ with the whole heart, and for the whole life campaign. Jesus wanted no half-hearted disciples. He kept sifting his nominal followers, and out of the whole number there remained eleven men and a few faithful women to lay the foundation of his Church at the time of Pentecost. These were like Gideon's gallant three hundred waterlappers, who were worth more than all the rest of his army.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Mr. McNeill at Holborn Halls.

A fairly satisfactory beginning was made last Sunday in the experiment by Rev. J. McNeill of holding afternoon Gospel services at the Great Central Hall, Holborn—or, as the preacher prefers to call it, "Holborn Halls." The meeting had been well advertised, and the response was highly encouraging. There must have been over 3000 persons present to hear Mr. McNeill discourse on the closing Gospel invitation of the Scriptures: "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come; let him that heareth say, Come; let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

There was nothing exceptionally powerful or striking in the address, except perhaps the closing illustration and its application. The clauses of the text were taken seriatim. Mr. McNeill showed that the Gospel invitation proceeds first of all from the heart of the great God Himself; and then through the Church, which is the Bride. On the second clause he founded a very earnest appeal that those who had heard and heeded the message should pass it on to others. He did not by any means encourage Christians to go from meeting to meeting in order simply to indulge in evangelistic confectionery and jujubes. Then the thirsty ones were invited to drink of the water of life, and thirst no more. Lastly, it was shown that if one were only willing to come to Christ, though there might not be any deep manifestation of soul concern, the promise of salvation would be made good. The illustration used was to this effect:—

"As a minister, I have sometimes to marry people. There stand the man and the woman. The clergyman does not say to the man, 'Are you in a great state about this woman?' but simply, 'Are you willing to take her?' The man, without any excitement, calmly and quietly answers, 'Yes.' The minister does not ask the woman if she is dying for sheer love of the man, but if she is willing to have him. It is to be hoped, of course, that they are warmly attached; but all that is asked is the quiet, clear, emphatic utterance of the mind through the tongue, and afterwards by the signature of the pen. (The preacher created some merriment here by remarking, as the result of his observation, that the woman usually said 'Yes' before the question was finished; but he restored the equilibrium of the audience by his pathetic peroration.) You see where we stand. I would like to join you to the Lord in an everlasting covenant that shall never be broken. I place before you Jesus Christ, the Lover of your soul, who has come far to woo and win his Bride. Novelists and poets tell about high lords who stoop down to marry village maidens of low estate. Poor girls! maybe they have a good deal the worst of the bargain. But here is a Lover who has stooped indeed, and I say to Him, 'Lord Jesus, art Thou willing to take this man, this woman, into eternal union with thyself?' He bends down and He says, 'Willing! Let my incarnation; let my earthly life; let my agony on the cross; yea, let my glory testify. Yes. I am willing!' Sinner, art thou willing to take this Christ, to have and to hold, from this day forward, in sickness and in health, in death, to be thine—thine in life, and through all eternity? Look Him straight in the face, and will you dare to say 'Nay,' or to preserve a dumb silence, which is louder in its rejection than a thousand 'Noes'? Yield to Christ. Hang upon his arm. Give Him thy whole being, and He will hand Himself over to thee in a covenant that shall never be broken."

These special services will be continued for three more Sundays, at 3.30 p.m. The collection on Sunday last was for the sufferers by the two recent mining catastrophes in Wales.

SIGNOR LUIGI CAPELLINI,

Of the Italian Military Church, Rome.

FOR some sixteen years a work of evangelisation has been going forward in the Italian army, which is certainly not the least important of the many agencies now in operation for the spiritual enlightenment of Italy. Both the origination of the work and its successful prosecution up to the present day are alike due, under God, to one man, well known now as the Soldiers' Minister, Signor Luigi Capellini.

He is a native of Spezia, of respectable family, another of whose members has achieved a far wider celebrity in a different sphere. Giovanni Capellini, brother of Luigi, ex-rector of the University of Bologna, is one of the most famous scientists in Italy. The present King Humbert at one time studied under him, and still preserves for him a warm attachment. Luigi entered the army when only eighteen years of age, from motives of patriotism, and against the wishes of his widowed mother, who would willingly have paid a substitute for him, as she had done for his brothers.

In the year 1861, the heart of the whole Italian nation was palpitating with hope, and ardent youths from all the provinces were flocking to the banner of Victor Emmanuel, already victorious against Austria in the bloody fields of Magenta and Solferino; and now advancing to establish unity, liberty, and order, where the wild tumult of revolution was raging in the centre and south of the peninsula. Luigi joined the ranks, swept onward by the current of universal enthusiasm; but an unseen hand was leading him to a higher service than that of any earthly king.

Both at home and at college he had been habituated to the religious observances of Roman Catholicism. Even in the freer life of the camp he still wore his amulets and told his beads; but these practices had no influence on his heart or life; they were mere superstitions, and were felt as a burden he dared not throw off, a price he must pay for the safety of his soul, in the perils of the siege and the battlefield.

But one day, while on garrison duty in the town of Perugia, a few torn leaves of a New Testament fell into his hands. The words he there read were as the dawn of a new day to his soul. He soon found out that several of his comrades were in possession of the entire volume, having received it from a colporteur whom a Christian lady, the late Miss Burton, had sent to the town to labour among the garrison.

Luigi was not long in making the colporteur's acquaintance, became a diligent attendant at the meetings held in his lodgings, and an eager student of that sacred book, from a mere fragment of which such blessed light had already broken upon him. Taught and led by the Word and Spirit of God, the young soldier now passed through that spiritual change which is the starting-point of all true and successful work for Christ. He knew himself a dark and undone sinner, and believed on the name of the only-begotten Son of God. Love, joy, and peace filled his soul; and with wondering gratitude he blessed the Providence that had led him by a way he knew not to the discovery of so priceless a treasure.

(From a Photograph by G. Borelli, Rome.)

From the very first a strong conviction seized him that God had a work for him to do among his fellow soldiers. From Miss Burton, with whom he placed himself in correspondence, he obtained a supply of tracts and Testaments. The influence given him by his rank of sergeant was turned to account. Very soon he had gathered round him a group of inquirers, several of them, like himself, non-commissioned officers. In the hours of freedom from military service, they read together the Word of God, Capellini expounding, as he found utterance, in the light of his own experience.

When, after a while the regiment was sent south to stamp out the brigandage in the mountains of Apulia, the young sergeant often found himself in a position of independent command. On such occasions the quarters of the detachment were converted into a preaching-room. Corporals and privates were gathered morning and evening for reading the Scriptures and prayer. Each soldier carried in his knapsack portions of the New Testament for distribution among the peasants of the Appennines, while lying in wait for the enemy in their rude huts or cattle-sheds, or resting in them for the noon-day's siesta or the night's repose.

Signor Capellini's period of military service, covering as it did some of the most eventful years of the Italian Revolution, was passed in the midst of perils. During the campaign against Austria in 1866, during the guerilla against the fierce and crafty brigands of the south, on the fever-breathing Campagna, in the plague-stricken city, the shafts of death had flown around him thick and fast; yet an unseen hand had covered his head. At Parma, just as his term was expiring, he was laid low with cholera, and brought to the very verge of the grave; yet the disease was rebuked. These marvellous deliverances confirmed him in the conviction that God was reserving him for a special mission, and deepened his own purposes of self-consecration.

Urged onward by this impression, as soon as he was once more master of his own movements, he joined himself to a small class of theological students, conducted in Padua by Rev. Henry J. Piggott, with the laudable desire of being found the better equipped for work whenever the Master should call him. And when in 1870 Rome became the capital of the kingdom, and consequently the headquarters of all branches of the public service, both military and civil, it seemed to him that the call had come. His first labours in Rome were sustained single-handed and at his own charges. The death of his mother had recently placed him in possession of a small income; and with this he hired lodgings for himself and his meetings, purchased tracts and Testaments, and met the other expenses of his work. Driven four times from his lodgings in little more than as many months, he still persevered. By the time he had reached the bottom of his own purse, Christian friends of Italy had begun to open theirs to so ardent a worker and so genuine a work. Nor to the present day have the needful supplies failed to come, from one quarter or another, for the carrying forward of the Mission.

The Thursday of Passion Week, 1873, was a memorable day in the history of this Christian enterprise, for on that day twenty-five young men, firstfruits of the work, Italian soldiers quartered in Rome, gathered for the first time around the table of the Lord. It was in a large upper room, in a building flanked by two monasteries, and fronting a third, situated on a slope of the Capitoline Hill, in a square called the Piazza of the Golden Keys (Chiavi d'Oro), that this "Italian band" took up in Rome the broken tradition of primitive Christianity, and ate together of one bread, and drank "all" of one cup, very much no doubt as the guards from the Prætorium had done in Paul's "hired house" eighteen centuries ago. The Italian Military Church still continues to commemorate that day as the day of its foundation; and will do so, it is to be hoped, for long years to come, when this grain of mustard seed shall have grown into a goodly and wide-spreading tree.

Only a few months after this event, so full of promise, the little church was scattered up and down the country. In Italy the same regiments are seldom stationed more than three-quarters of a year in the same place. In the month of July the troops of each province are brought together for field manœuvres and instruction into certain selected encampments, and after that are again divided among the garrison towns; but with such interchanges that but few regiments return to their old quarters. This custom offers at once valuable advantages and serious difficulties for the prosecution of Capellini's Mission. On the one hand, the periodic arrival in Rome of new regiments brings a constant succession of fresh troops under the influence of the Gospel, while the periodic dispersion of the old regiments spreads the benefit among companies and battalions which the evangelist personally could never reach. But, on the other hand, the very same circumstances involve for the evangelist himself the discouraging necessity of seeing his work broken up, and of having to begin afresh to re-people his deserted preaching hall, and reconstitute his scattered church.

And a difficult task it is, only to be overcome by the most careful tact and unremitting exertion. Rigorously excluded by military jealousy from the barracks, the evangelist can only avail himself of such opportunities of contact with the soldiers as may be presented away from their usual quarters. Thus the small companies or piquets on guard at the entrance of the Senate, of the Chamber of Deputies, of the Public Ministries, and other services of the State, furnish perhaps the best opening for inserting the small end of the wedge. Here Signor Capellini may often be seen passing and repassing, scanning, with an eye made quick to read character by long experience, the countenance of the sergeant in command, putting out a cautious feeler now and then by the gift of a tract, or by a tentative word, and happy if at length, as not unfrequently happens, he be invited to enter the guard-room, and explain freely his message and his work. Often, too, he will watch in the principal thoroughfares of the city for soldiers whose hesitating step and attentive study of the names of the streets show that they have either lost their way or are afraid of losing it; and, having won their confidence by a kind offer of guidance, will improve the occasion as time and circumstances may permit. Many a first acquaintance has been made in the city omnibuses; many a little group has been evangelised at the railway station. A certain restaurant, whose head waiter was himself a few years back one of the military converts, is a favourite scene of labour; and every soldiers' haunt in the neighbourhood of the various barracks is diligently beaten up during the men's brief daily hour of liberty.

By such sanctified ingenuity and zeal has Signor Capellini, year by year, re-peopled his empty benches, and, the Divine Master adding his seal to the work, garnered his yearly sheaves of converts. More than a thousand of these young men, belonging to all classes, from the peasant to the university student, drawn from every province, from the Alps to the Lilybeum Sea, the stoutest hearts and most stalwart arms of young Italy, have, since the beginning of the work, enrolled themselves under the standard of Christ. Not all, it is true, have maintained their steadfastness on their return to their homes in town and country; some, as might be expected, have "heard gladly," but "endured" only "for a while"; isolation and opposition have withered the hasty growth of a soil that lacked "depth." Yet much fruit has come to light; evangelical centres exist in Italy whose first planter was a member of the "Soldiers' Church"; some of the men are themselves labouring as colporteurs and evangelists; not unfrequently a missionary pioneer in remote districts tells of unexpected encouragement from sympathisers whose interest in the Gospel dates from their service under the flag of Italy in Rome; and who can doubt that much fruit is being borne in families in far-off hamlets in districts as yet untrodden by the evangelist, which only the day will declare?

That such a work could be carried on in the very seat of the Papacy without encountering violent opposition is not to be expected. From bigoted superiors, from scoffing companions, from alarmed and distressed homes the evangelical soldiers have often, or rather always, to suffer trials more or less fiery. On one memorable occasion bitter complaint of the "Protestant propaganda" was carried up to headquarters. The General of Division in Rome at that time was none other than Prince Humbert, the present King. His answer was wise and noble: "Watch, if you have any fear of political plotting; but do not hinder the men from worshipping God according to their consciences."

And it is worthy of note, as showing the estimate in which Capellini personally and his work are held by the highest authorities in the army and the State, that in 1884 he received from the King the Order of Chevalier of the Crown of Italy.

But the story of these persecutions, with many another interesting incident showing the hand of God in the work, may be read in Signor Capellini's annual reports.

It may be stated, in conclusion, that Signor Capellini is himself an ordained minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Italy; and receives from that Church his personal stipend. But his work is, in the truest sense of the term, undenominational, inasmuch as all societies and churches in Italy partake in its benefits. Hence the fairness of the appeal annually made to all friends of the Gospel in Italy towards the working expenses of the Mission, which are of necessity considerable.

[The substance of the foregoing account is taken, by permission, from two articles that appeared in The Sunday at Home for 1880.]

A WORD FOR MUSICIANS.

A CORRESPONDENT recently directed our attention to the fact that very little is being done to bring the Gospel under the notice of musicians of the tradesmen class, who play in the pantomimes, orchestras, &c. Some of these musicians are quite young, and in London they are worse than friendless—exposed to many and strong temptations. We submitted the letter to Mr. Courthope Todd, of the Theatrical Mission, who writes to us as follows:—

"Amongst upwards of nine hundred boys and young men connected with the theatrical profession, who are members of 'Macready House,' there are, to my knowledge, many who belong to the orchestras of different theatres, and whose musical ability subjects them to much the same temptations as young actors. Some rise by their talent to be soloists, and then often go on the music-hall stage as 'variety artistes.'

"When it was proposed, about eight years since, to open a special club-room of the Theatrical Mission for youths, a lady, previously unknown to my committee, gave £100 for the work, and, when 'Macready House' was built, special provision in the way of club-rooms was arranged for them. Helpers are, however, greatly needed in this department, for the lads naturally sort themselves out in groups as actors, acrobats, choristers, musicians. Each class needs special dealing, though Mr. S. B. Power's Bible-class on Wednesdays, as well as the evangelistic meeting, have attendants from all.

"Not, however, until the Institute is completely paid for, can we devote ourselves to the natural developments of work on which hitherto there has been so much blessing. Any aid, personal or financial, will therefore facilitate our labours amongst the young musicians, so often friendless in London. The gymnasium, reading-room, and library prove counter attractions to the streets and public-houses. And I will only add that the club-rooms are entirely free to all professionals who can conform to the rules of the governor in charge, and meals at a very reasonable rate can be obtained at the buffet."

The needs of the class here referred to are emphasised by the fact that they have hitherto been largely overlooked. We are sure that any funds that our readers may send to Mr. Todd will be laid out to the very best advantage.

Flowers for the Sick Poor.—Will some of our readers send flowers during the summer months for the sick in a very poor parish in South London, to Miss YOUNG, St. Luke's Mission, Branch-buildings, Peckham, S.E.

Rome and America.

By Rev. N. C. ALGER, Chatham, Mass., U.S.A.

America is getting thoroughly aroused and alarmed on the subject of the encroachments of the Roman Catholic Church; and every week is raised the Stars and Stripes over her educational institutions. It is high time for a general awakening, if the Papacy is to be taught that laws passed on the Tiber are ill-adapted to the spirit of American institutions, and that the real President of the United States does not live in the Vatican, but in the White House, and is elected, not by the votes of Cardinals, but by the ballots of intelligent freemen.

Rome is erecting her parochial schools as rapidly as means will allow, and is withdrawing her pupils from the public schools and compelling them, under a penalty of withheld sacraments, to patronise only her inferior schools, of which nuns are teachers and priests dictators. Secret at first, she now makes a public avowal of raising up a generation of voters, who shall bow their necks to her yoke, and carry out the commands of the Jesuit. We wage no war upon the honest Catholic who believes in the doctrines of his church, but we do protest against the seductive, crafty element within the Roman Catholic Church, which meddles with our educational, social and political system. We do most earnestly contend against that spirit which seeks to destroy the lofty principles of the English Pilgrims, and to render their sacrificial labours abortive and odious.

The Catholic Congress, which recently met in Baltimore, announced its purpose of compelling the Catholic youth to regard henceforth the public schools as their mortal enemy, to shun which is their duty if they would hope for eternal felicity. Jesuitical orators sought to make out that the only martyrs the world ever had were persecuted Catholics, hunted like wild beasts, denied educational rights, deprived of political office in the State, and appointed to no important post within the jurisdiction of the Government. Such false statements reacted upon the public mind, and the discussion concerning Swinton's text-books, which the Boston School Board, under the dictation of the priests, rejected, because they taught the plain, unvarnished facts of history, has still farther aroused the public sensibilities, and at the late election in the city that school board was relieved of its dictatorial priests. Boston's largest hall has been packed every Sabbath for months, to listen to the most eminent divines and professors and patriots, in defence of the public schools. Because the daily press has been largely silent, lest the Catholic vote be lost to political parties, new papers were born, notably one called The British American and another The American, whose columns are weekly packed with arguments to show the crafty aim of the enemies of freedom. English residents could not hire Faneuil Hall to celebrate the Queen's birthday, simply because Boston was under the control of the Papacy.

The Common, which had been used for quiet, orderly addresses from ministers of the Gospel, was denied the Protestant clergy, because Rome did not wish to have the evangelical truth proclaimed. Rev. H. L. Hastings, whose voice every patriot loves to hear, was fined because he simply read some choice selections of Scripture without comment; while Dr. A. J. Gordon was likewise debarred from assisting in religious services. Hence, because of this growing insolence of the Roman Catholic Church towards our educational and religious rights, the school houses of Massachusetts are fast waving the Stars and Stripes. In some places, towns and cities furnish the staff, and philanthropic gentlemen present the flag. Bills are introduced to have the matter become a State enactment, until the national banner shall wave everywhere, declaring that the schoolhouse shall stand, and the Bible shall be read, and the Protestant liberties be defended and maintained.

This is a movement in the right direction, and will tender to foster a love for our institutions in the heart of every scholar in the land. It will give emphasis to the decision of a judge who fined a priest 5000 dollars damages because he ordered his large congregation to hire no more carriages of a stable-keeper, whose children were kept in the public schools, instead of being forced to attend the parochial schools of Rome. The stable-keeper failed, when his patronage was taken from him, and he was financially ruined. He brought a suit against the priest with the above gratifying result. This is only one of many similar cases.

It looks as if both the English and American banner shall yet be needed to wave over their respective structures to compel due submission to, and reverence for, the Protestant principles. God has not raised up an English-speaking people for nothing, nor for naught has He created the marvellous English language. People and language are yet to figure largely in the future conquests of Protestantism and the evangelisation of the world. We have only the kindest feeling towards the devout Roman Catholic, but the wily Jesuit we command, while we point to our flag waving over our public schools, "Hands off!"

"A PRESSING NEED IN ITALY" is the title of a booklet by Rev. John H. Eager, of Rome, urging the importance of Protestant places of worship being provided in the various cities and towns of Italy. The peninsula is a land of great cathedrals and splendid churches. Rome alone has more than 350 churches, and nearly every mountain hamlet can boast a building large enough and elegant enough to inspire the village worshipper with a feeling of respect, and even sometimes of awe. Mission workers feel the great need of Protestant chapels, which will obviate the payment of heavy rents for meeting-rooms, and serve as evangelical centres, while giving outward permanency to mission endeavour. Mr. Eager is connected with the Maryland Baptist Mission, the headquarters of which are at 10, E. Fayette-street, Baltimore, U.S.A.

EVANGELISTIC VILLAGE MISSION.—Mr. Shipley issued invitations to young converts and friends of the above Mission to meet on Good Friday at the Therfield Congregational Chapel, Herts. Soon after nine o'clock vehicles began to arrive from villages in the surrounding district, both in Cambs., Essex, and Herts. The morning and afternoon were given to meditation upon "The sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." The service in the evening was thrown open; and for three hours there flowed a steady stream of testimony to the power of Christ to save all sorts and conditions of men and women. Notwithstanding that many were present who would have desired further to join in the chorus of praise, the many miles that lay between the meeting-place and home necessitated a very happy and profitable day being brought to a close all too soon; but (D.V.) it is intended that similar meetings should be held in other places during the summer.

SOLDIERS AT PIRBRIGHT.—About 2000 of the Guards are encamped at Pirbright (Surrey) from May to September, each year, for rifle practice, coming down in detachments from Windsor, Chelsea, Westminster, &c. Up to the present time no effort has been made to provide for their social or religious welfare, in the way of the erection of any building, such as a soldiers' home or coffee bar. The Sunday morning parade service has hitherto been conducted in the open air, with the result that when wet no service is held. A plot of land, situated near the Pirbright Camp, and between that and the Volunteer Camp, at Bisley, has now been secured, on which it is proposed to erect a hut to seat about 100 persons, a coffee bar, a games room, a kitchen, and a caretaker's room. This will involve an outlay of about £200. As the Volunteer Camp is near by, and as no other similar provision is being made, and we are expecting the Guards in May, it is hoped that the urgent necessity of the case will secure a speedy and liberal response. Rev. H. J. Quilter, Caerleon, Woking, Surrey, the minister in charge, will receive communications.

WORK IN ALEXANDRIA.

The financial position of the Sailors' and Soldiers' Institute at Alexandria, which is a branch of the work of Miss Robinson, the well-known "Soldiers' Friend," is just now a cause of grave anxiety to the trustees. The building debt of £2000 has been reduced to £1730, but until this is cleared off, the help so much needed at Alexandria cannot be afforded from the funds at home; neither can the Institute be properly kept up, nor the minds of the workers there be at rest.

It would be a very sad thing if this work should cease, and the Institute pass into other hands; but this must be the case unless the money can be raised. Mr. Lawrence is now in England for the purpose of asking help; Mrs. Lawrence, meanwhile, bravely sustaining the work at Alexandria alone. Grateful testimony is continually given at home, personally, by men returning from Egypt, and by the letters of men still abroad, as to the usefulness of the Institute, and the love they all feel to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence.

It was touching to see the proof of the solidity of the work at a public meeting lately held at the Y.W.C.A. Rooms at Southsea. An old Major rose from among the audience, and unexpectedly asked to be allowed to bear his testimony to the work. He had a son in the ranks at Alexandria whose letters had told him of the blessing the Institute had been to him and his comrades. At the close of the meeting another unexpectedly came forward wishing to see Mr. Lawrence. It was a modest-looking servant-maid, who wore the blue ribbon. She had a brother in the 2nd Suffolk Regiment who had, a few days before, written to say that he had been to the Institute, and there he had, as she expressed it, "found the Saviour."

The work consists of evangelistic services, temperance meetings, Sunday-school, night-school, Bible-classes, lending library, visitation of hospital and barracks, with many agencies for the amusement and recreation of the men; such as a recreation ground on the seashore, and games of various kinds, indoors and out. There is a large reading-room, 99 feet in length, and a lecture-hall, a Bible-class room, and cabins for sleeping. Five hundred soldiers have been seen in the place at one time, and over two hundred pledges are taken annually. Communications may be addressed to Rev. T. R. Lawrence, The Priory, Mill-hill, N.W.

MR. F. S. ARNOT'S CENTRAL AFRICAN MISSION.—Since the news given in our issue of April 7, letters have come to hand. One reports: "Ekwikwi is quite friendly towards us, and we, if need be, could pass without any trouble." A house is being built at Bihé, where it is intended to establish a station, chiefly with the view of forwarding supplies to those farther inland. One other besides Mr. Arnot can already make himself understood well enough to preach the Gospel, and services are held in the surrounding villages, when at times 200 to 300 interested listeners assemble.

RECLAIMED FROM CRIME.—At a meeting on Good Friday in the Salvation Army Shelter, 61A, St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, there were forty-two men ("dossers") who had given evidence of change of heart and life since the place was first opened. Captain Keates has charge of the work. The meeting developed into one of testimony as to how the men had spent the preceding Good Friday, and the following remarkable facts regarding prison experience were elicited: Four of the men were in Wandsworth Jail, three in Pentonville, two in Holloway, three in Millbank, one in Cardiff, and one in Maidstone Jails. The men are all now in permanent situations, and it seems, also, enjoying the blessings of salvation.

STRANGERS' REST, RATCLIFF-HIGHWAY, E.—At the monthly workers' meeting held on Friday last very encouraging accounts of the work were given by the secretary, Mr. J. Theo. Isaac, especially that among the Scandinavians and the Italians. Large and successful meetings were held on Easter Monday. The company was addressed on Friday evening by Rev. James Stephens, of Highgate, on the words "The men which Thou gavest Me out of the world" (John xvii. 8). He pressed home the truth that the main thing is to know God, and pointed out that the Christian's privilege is to show forth the perfections of God, which is the true meaning of the word "glorify," rather than its common acceptation of doing something to bring honour to Him. The meeting was most helpful and stimulating to Christian workers.

BELFAST Y.M.C.A.

This Association is a most flourishing one, and the record of last year's work is calculated to greatly cheer and encourage every Christian. It has now a membership of about 2000 young men. Seven years ago it took possession of its admirable premises in Wellington-place; and though that was then considered a very hazardous enterprise, such has been the steady growth of the Society that already the premises are too small for the work.

The annual social meeting was held on Friday night last, Sir Wm. Quartus Ewart, Bart, in the chair, and a most hopeful and satisfactory report was submitted. The year has been one of steady advance, spiritually, numerically, and financially. The activity of the members in every work having for its object the extension of Christ's kingdom among young men has been unabated, and has been attended by the conversion of many souls.

Missions held during the year by Dr. Henry Grattan Guinness and others have proved to be seasons of permanent blessing to many. The special evangelistic meetings held during the winter in St. George's Hall, and the cab and carmen's meeting held every Sabbath night, have been followed with cheering results. A missionary spirit has manifested itself among the members, causing several of them to dedicate themseves to foreign mission work, and culminating in the scheme by which a splendid steamer, built of steel at a cost of £1500, was presented as a gift to the Balolo Mission.

YOUNG WOMEN IN PARIS.

A large company assembled at the premises in the Avenue Wagram, Paris, to take part in the eighteenth annual meeting of the British and American Homes and Christian Association established here. The foundress of the work, Mrs. Travers Lewis (formerly Miss Leigh, and now the wife of the Bishop of Ontario) was among those present. The children from the Crèche connected with the institution performed their Kindergarten exercises, and the inmates of the Orphanage displayed their proficiency in calisthenics.

Five hundred and fifty-two young women have been admitted into the Home during the year, making a total of 5781 since its opening, the average daily number of inmates having been fifty-two. In connection with the free registry for obtaining English girls situations, it is observed that there is an increasing difficulty in finding employment for governesses, but that English domestics are highly prized and sought for by French families. Over three hundred situations were secured for English young women. There is a complete system of evangelising work, corresponding to that of similar organisations in England, connected with the mission. The Home of the Young Women's Christian Association in the Faubourg Saint-Honoré received forty-seven milliners, dressmakers, and saleswomen and visitors during 1889, and the Governesses' and Artists' Institute in the same street gave temporary accommodation to 353 governesses and art and music students in all.—Daily Telegraph.

THE EMPEROR WILLIAM, wishing to realise the sensations of a soldier on guard, put himself on duty for twenty-four hours in an extemporised guard-room within his own garden at Potsdam, and stood sentry during four spells of two hours each during that time. He wore the uniform of a private soldier, carried a rifle, and ate of the soldier's ordinary. When he was asked how he had enjoyed standing sentry at night, he answered, "I was thinking all the time how many millions of poor wretches have gone through the drudgery of military life while loathing it, and have got killed in wars for the causes of which they did not care a button."

EASTER IN RATCLIFF-HIGHWAY.—During the Easter holidays a series of indoor and outdoor meetings was held by the agents of the Seamen's Christian Friend Society, in the Ratcliff-highway. On Easter Monday a sailors' tea-meeting was followed by special evangelistic services in which Capt. Dalrymple, Mr. W. A. Beckett, Miss Messer, and others took part. The Seamen's Chapel was well filled, and at the close many of the sailors signed the temperance pledge and evinced anxiety about spiritual things. The Mizpah Male Choir, from Stratford Conference Hall, occupied the platform on Thursday evening, and, although the audience was smaller, it is believed that much real good was done.

The Book World.

Civil Government and Religion; or, Christianity and the American Constitution. By Alonzo T. Jones. 25 cents. "American Sentinel" Office, 28, College-place, Chicago. A very thoughtful pamphlet, which will be specially interesting to such as are watching the persistent demand for religious legislation, especially in relation to the observance of the Lord's Day.

Father Flynn. By George C. Needham. 30 cents. James A. Connor, 72, Bible House, New York. This story, the scene of which is laid in the Sister Isle, exemplifies, in a striking manner, the power of the Gospel to deliver and save Roman Catholic priests. We trust many copies will find their way to Ireland, and that not a few who are now in bondage will be led to emulate the example of Father Flynn, and share with him the blessing of spiritual freedom in Christ Jesus.

Preparation is the title of a weekly journal for the Sunday-school teacher and Bible student. In the first issue, dated March 27, the international lesson is expounded and illustrated with great fulness. Many theological and other works have been laid under contribution. Mr. C. A. Vince, headmaster of Mill Hill School, writes helpfully on Christ's law of love. School teachers who wish to make thorough preparation will find this a useful publication. (1d. John Haddon & Co., 3, Bouverie-street, E. C.)

Bible Expositions. Under this designation Mr. George C. Needham is publishing, through The Scriptural Tract Repository, 47, Cornhill, Boston, some useful essays from his own pen, and that of his gifted wife. The little books are being issued quarterly, at ten cents each. The first, just to hand, is entitled, The Spiritual Man, a lecture originally delivered at Northfield, and well received by Mr. Moody's earnest students. This pamphlet contains important teaching as to the natural and spiritual—the man born of the flesh, and the new man in Christ Jesus.

Dying at the Top: or, The Moral and Spiritual Condition of the Young Men of America. By Rev. Joseph Waddell Clokey, D.D. 50 cents. Chicago: W. W. Vanarsdale, 10, Arcade-court. The author was grieved to find that a favourite apricot tree was "dying at the top." Examination showed that there were worms at the root. The incident suggested the title of this outspoken book on American society. Of the millions across the water, as well as in Great Britain, it is sadly true that "God is not in all their thoughts." We would fain hope that workers among young men everywhere will redouble their efforts in view of the pressing needs of the time.

"None of these Things Move Me": A Brief Memorial of Caroline Cuerton Toomer. 3s. 6d. Nisbet. This book has been compiled by a loving sister of Miss Toomer, whose joy it was for sixteen years to labour among the people of Twyford and neighbourhood, Berks. The selections from the journal, letters, and Bible jottings of this devoted lady show her simplicity and brightness, her gentleness and piety. Rev. F. Whitfield, of Hastings, who knew her well, says, in a preface full of sympathy: "Her hands were full, because her heart was full of the one great motive-power—the love of Christ." These are beautiful pages, in harmony with the life portrayed. The volume is specially intended for young women, and to such it is calculated to prove a channel of blessing.

The Holy Spirit's Testimony to the Word of God. A Bible-study in the most emphatic sense, consisting of striking passages of Holy Writ, arranged under various heads. It is simply wonderful what a great deal the Word says of the Word. (1d. Bristol: W. F. Mack Park-street.)

What must I do to be Saved? By Cheyne Brady. 1d. Monthly Tract Society, 181, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. The momentous question is well explained, and its only and ever-timely answer is powerfully enforced. The way of salvation is made very plain; therefore, the tract is worthy of wide-spread circulation.

The Church Standing of the Children. By Rev. Norman L. Walker, D.D. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark. An argument for the baptism of infants. It leaves unanswered many a question which arises in the mind of the thoughtful reader. Those who connect baptism with the profession of faith in Christ will regard this as a very weak assault upon their position.

Trials. This is the title of a precious little book written to comfort Christians. It contains much Scripture truth, and is calculated to encourage a meek, quiet, and thankful spirit when under discipline. Any who are themselves exempt from trial would be doing good service by sending copies to those who are burdened. (6d. per dozen. Drummond Tract Depôt, Stirling.)

Thoughts on Worldly Conformity: What it is not, and what it is. By Bishop Ryle. 3d. Hunt & Co. Words of sober earnestness and practical sense. Appeal is made to the Bible and the Christian conscience. "Be ye separate" is the keynote, and the exhortation well closes with the warning, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." "Worldly amusements" are dealt with in an added note.

The Two Geologies is the title of the most recent "Present Day Tract," issued at 4d. by the Religious Tract Society. The author is Rev. W. Sunderland Lewis, M.A. Revelation and Science are compared, and shown to be friends, and not rivals, in stating the history of the earth. The subject is treated with ability and judgment, and the tract is likely to perform good service to the cause of Christian evidences.

The Christian Outlook; or, How to Wait Scripturally for the Lord's Coming. An author who remains anonymous here sets forth with much clearness the position and prospect of believers. It is not often that so much solid teaching is compressed into so small a compass. Intense love for the Lord, and longing for the glory to be revealed, are urged as requisite for those who would maintain the true attitude to the great consummation. Glowing passion will melt all the difficulties which may be confronted in the study of the subject in its varied phases. (3d. Morgan & Scott.)

Baptists or Baptismal Regenerationists—Which? This is the title of a vigorous booklet by Rev. A. E. Clarke, B.A., late of St. Mark's, Preston. It is an able statement of the case for believers' baptism, the practice of sprinkling young children being uncompromisingly criticised in the light of Scripture and the dangerous doctrines which have become associated with it. Mr. Spurgeon writes a brief introduction, sympathising with the author in his fidelity to truth, while apparently thinking, as we assuredly do, that some of the many strictures scattered up and down the pages would have conveyed more weight with general readers if expressed in less stern language. (2d. Elliot Stock.

BETHESDA MISSION, PORTSMOUTH, with which is incorporated the Portsea Island Town Mission, continues to exercise a beneficient influence in the great naval town, with its 150,000 inhabitants, and working-class masses. The last annual report says: "We are thankful to know that there are in Portsmouth many living epistles of our work, who are manifest witnesses of the grace of God, received through the preaching and teaching of our workers." Two legacies, amounting to £700, have recently been left to the Mission. They will go far to clear off building debts, and establish the work on a more elastic basis. The agencies are numerous. The superintendent of the Mission is Commander B. H. Key, Downham-street, Edward-road, Southsea.

DENMARK.—Two earnest Christian men—a Government employé and another—have organised an effort to reach the lower classes in the city of Copenhagen. Open-air meetings are held, and soort services in a small building—inscribed, "Thou shalt not commit adultery"—situate in the midst of houses of ill-fame. Many sympathisers have lent a hand, and God's blessing has signally rested upon the work.

ALGIERS.—M. Gantet, colporteur in the employ of the Geneva Evangelical Society, writes from Tizi:—"God has greatly blessed prayer-meetings which have been held since the beginning of the year. We have witnessed some beautiful cases of conversion; in fact, it has been a revival which is simply magnificent for Algeria, where religious sentiment is but weak, and facilities for public worship are but few."

The Temperance Cause.

The Good Templars of England have an adult membership of 57,000, besides 48,000 juveniles.

Sixty per cent. of the students attending the Toronto Medical College are pledged total abstainers.

At the forthcoming military exhibition at Chelsea the only refreshments are to be of the teetotal kind.

In India, members of the Salvation Army have been making earnest efforts against the drink traffic.

Massachusetts, says a writer in a New York paper, is undoubtedly steadily moving on toward prohibition.

At the annual licensing sessions for Ramsey and North Isle of Man, Sunday licenses were refused to various hotels.

High-license Omaha sends four students to the State university, and eighty-one convicts to the State penitentiary.

Regret is expressed in Scotland that ordination dinners and the accompanying toasts have not yet gone out of fashion.

A proposal has been made that army pensioners should be paid monthly instead of quarterly, as less would probably be squandered in drink.

Mrs. Ormiston Chant, of London, has been holding large and successful meetings in Baltimore, Maryland, under the auspices of the W.C.T.U.

A close victory for prohibition has been won in the Iowa legislature. A local-option license bill was introduced, and carried by a vote of forty-six to forty-five.

A lady and gentleman of Hartford, Conn., have presented the National W.C.T.U. of America with 5000 dollars, in valuable bonds, to be used for the cause.

An African correspondent at Port Elizabeth writes that there is a movement among the natives in favour of local option, which, he thinks, would be a great boon to them.

It is contemplated by a well-known firm of contractors to establish at all the railway stations, where practicable, a separate refreshment-room where nothing but temperance drinks are to be sold.

Dr. E. E. Jenkins, at the Wesleyan Seaman's Mission meeting, expressed his great satisfaction at the higher standard of temperance and morality among seamen now existing, as compared with that of a few years ago.

A Lahore paper states that the Government was to close all opium-smoking and similar dens in that city and vicinity and in other large towns in the Punjab on April 1. The revenue thus voluntarily surrendered by the authorities is over 60,000 Rupees.

The lumber camps of Wisconsin have been the scene of a remarkable work. The state W.C.T.U. has kept an itinerant missionary constantly in the field, and the camps have been supplied with the best of literature by the various unions throughout the State.

Mr. Justice Butt, in the Divorce Court, said an undue proportion of the cases which came before him were those in which publicans and their wives were parties. He supposed that until public-houses became coffee-taverns it was too much to hope for a better state of things.

The Hampshire justices are giving the temperance party some encouragement. A select committee of their number report that there is on an average one licensed house to every sixty-seven adults, and they suggest that the justices, with the co-operation of the owners, should do their best to greatly reduce the number.

Mr. James Whyte, secretary U.K.A., a few days ago read a paper before the Manchester Statistical Society, on "The Cost of our Drinking Customs." His answer to the question "Is intemperance more or is it less common than it was in 1830-1835?" was discouraging. The churches should be more in earnest, and electors should give their M.P.s no rest on the temperance question.

Mr. John Abbey, secretary of the Agricultural Department of the Church of England Temperance Society, 50, Prince of Wales-road, Norwich, will be glad to give information to any temperance friends who will undertake to see that the Truck Amendment Act, 1887, is enforced in its bearing upon farmers and their men during this spring and summer. The Act makes it illegal for workmen to be supplied with beer, cider, and other intoxicating drinks, as remuneration for their services.

Personalia.

Mr. Spurgeon left London on Monday on a pastoral visit to the Baptist Churches in the Channel Islands.

Rev. G. C. Grubb has gone from Tinnevelly to Australia; after three months there he goes to Cape Town for August and September.

Rev. John Smith, of Edinburgh, says that circumstances have arisen which have led him to decline the invitation to the Northfield Conference.

Dr. Theodore Cuyler preached the closing sermon of his thirty years' pastorate at Lafayette-avenue Church, Brooklyn, on Easter Monday, April 6.

The late Professor Elmslie.—The memorial volume to the late Professor Elmslie has been completed, and will be published shortly by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.

Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck, has accepted the office of president of the Indian Female Normal School Society, and has intimated her intention of being present at the annual meeting at Princes Hall, Piccadilly, on April 22.

Dr. Baedeker is again leaving England for Siberia on April 21. His purpose is to travel through the whole country, visiting the prisons as far as Saghalien, the penal settlement in the Pacific Ocean. He asks the prayers of our readers on behalf of his mission.

Professor Henry Drummond will occupy a portion of his time on the voyage to Australia and his return to this country in preparing a volume dealing with Christianity in the light of evolution—a work somewhat in the nature of a sequel to "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

Rev. W. Darlow Sarjeant, in addition to the heavy work of a wide London circuit, and the oversight of his Homes of Rest, contrives to make the Young People's Bible and Prayer Union a greater success than ever. The Union, which is unsectarian, has now between 20,000 and 30,000 members.

Rev. A. R. Cavalier, vicar of St. Paul's, Cheltenham, has been appointed secretary of the Indian Female Normal School Society. Mr. Cavalier worked for ten years in India in connection with the C.M.S., and was subsequently an association secretary of the Society, which he has now rejoined in a higher capacity.

Mr. Chas. E. Faithfull, of the Marseilles Sailors' Rest, is about to visit England, in company with his wife, who has recently been restored from what threatened to be a fatal malady. He hopes, in Scotland and elsewhere, to describe the good work in which he is engaged. Letters for him may be addressed to our care.

Mrs. Booth.—During last week a remarkable change took place, the severe pain at the seat of the disease being replaced by a highly nervous condition, with long spells of the painful spasms even more distressing to endure. The sufferer had but little sleep, and experienced great difficulty in taking nourishment, owing to the critical condition of the throat.

Mr. William Joseph Lewis.—Writing to a friend from Ryde, Mr. Lewis says: "I am still a close prisoner. The doctor examined me minutely this week, and strictly forbids me to walk more than just from room to room. He says, if I do, it will entail very serious trouble with the lung. I must not talk more than is needful. I think he fears that the least exertion would cause hæmorrhage."

Madame Tschebrikova, says the Vienna correspondent of The Times, has not been released, but has been transported to Penza, in the Caucasus, and placed there under strict police surveillance. The transportation of the high-spirited lady who dared to tell Alexander III. the truth about the condition of his Empire seems to have been accomplished under every conceivable condition of hardship. It may be that the Czar intended to release Madame Tschebrikova, but autocrats have but little effective power over the bureaucrats who govern in their names.

Mr. Edwin H. Kerwin, of the Tower Hamlets Mission, broke down in health in December last from the constant strain of work, and has been imperatively laid aside for more than two months. By the advice of his physician he is taking a sea voyage, and hopes to leave England for Canada the first week in May. He will visit settlers who have been sent out by the Mission for years past. Friends in Canada may direct letters to him at the Y.M.C.A., Montreal, where he expects to arrive about May 12.

Dr. Cranage, of Wellington, Salop, well known to many of our readers, has been obliged, by failing health, to relinquish his position as principal of the Old Hall School, which he has held for 45 years. His two sons will succeed him and carry on the school.

Rev. Jas. H. Brooks, D.D., of St. Louis, has been preaching in that city for over a quarter of a century, though not all the time in one church. For the past two years he has been in poor health, but those who are privileged to sit under his ministry rejoice that "his bow abides in strength." All who know him will pray that he may long be spared to continue his fearless assaults upon error, in whatever form, and from whatever quarter it may present itself, and to bear faithful testimony to the "blessed hope" of the Church.—Young Men's Era.

RAGGED SCHOOLS.—An interesting paper on "Window-sill Flowers: How to sow, grow, and show them," appears in the organ of the Ragged School Union, In His Name for April. The cultivation of flowers by poor children in their homes is advocated as a humanising influence.

NORTH-EAST LONDON GOSPEL MISSION.—Since 1886 the Isle of Dogs Branch of this Mission has been under the care of Mr. G. R. Coultas, who has been privileged to lead many of the people to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Mr. Coultas has just relinquished the charge, in order to work in another sphere. On Tuesday last week a public meeting was held to bid him farewell. Mr. C. F. Duckham presided, and addresses were delivered by several local ministers and friends, acknowledging the devotion with which Mr. Coultas had laboured among the poor of the district.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—A mission at the Gospel Hall, Wood Green, N., April 20 to 27, to be conducted by Mr. Richard Weaver.—— Special services by Mr. Opie Rodway, from April 17 to 20, at the Primitive Methodist Chapel, Wallingford, Berks.——An eight days' mission at St. Mary Church, near Torquay, commencing on Sunday, April 20, to be conducted by Mr. J. Crofton Rainey.——Fourteen days' services at Rudmore, Southsea, conducted by Mr. Newton Jones.——A fifteen days' mission at Colchester, by Mr. G. Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society.——Work at the New Cross Public Hall Mission, Lewisham High-road.——A mission in a village near Brighton, to be held from April 27 to May 4.——A mission being held at South Shields, till April 27, by Mr. W. Mapstone.

THE LATE MRS. WEITBRECHT.—When this honoured lady departed this life, a strong desire filled the hearts of many to raise some fitting memorial to her memory; and, to meet a pressing need, it was decided to provide a house for the missionaries of the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society at Burdwan, the scene of Mrs. Weitbrecht's long and unwearied efforts on behalf of the women of India. The total cost of a suitable building was estimated at £1400, of which sum £400 has yet to be raised before the memorial scheme can be fully carried out. An effort is at present being made to raise the money still required. Doubtless there are among our readers, who knew Mrs. Weitbrecht, who will be glad to help in the realisation of this very useful project. Communications may be addressed to Mrs. Gardiner, Glenwood, Auckland-road, Upper Norwood, S.E.

MISSION WORK AT THE DOCKS.—On Monday week, Lady Ashburton inaugurated a Sailors' Rest and Reading-room in connection with the Mission Hall and Coffee-palace erected some months since at the Custom House, Victoria Docks, E. The Rest, which will be carried on under the auspices of the Victoria Docks auxiliary of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, is in the centre of a vast sailor population, and supplies a long-felt want. The Rest will be open all day, so that the men can drop in at any time, and make free use of the rooms, where every comfort will be provided for them. It is proposed to hold a daily noon prayer-meeting, and it is hoped a Gospel service every evening; besides which the missionary, Mr. J. C. Winfield, will hold meetings on board the ships lying in the Docks. At the public meeting, the Mayor of West Ham (Alderman F. Smith) presided, and brief addresses were delivered by Lady Ashburton, Rev. E. W. Matthews, Alderman Phillips, Capt. Clarke, Mr. Dunn, and Mr. A. Wilké. Much earnest prayer was offered that this new Rest may be an unspeakable blessing to hundreds of sailors who may enter its doors.

A Message from Far.

The following is a translation of a letter from the Native Christian Churches of Canton, sent to us by Mr. A. S. Dyer. It is signed on behalf of over 2400 native communicants connected with six European and American missions :—

"The Christian Churches of Canton respectfully address the Christian Churches of England.

"This year, when holding our annual new year's meetings, we were favoured with a visit from Alfred S. Dyer, who told us how the Christians in India to the number of several thousand had improved the opportunity afforded this year, before the time fixed for the revision of the Commercial treaty in reference to opium expires, to appeal to the Executive Council and the Emperor of China to co-operate with your Government in abolishing the opium traffic. Having been told this we were incited thereby to prepare this letter, signed by representatives of all our Churches—beseeching your Churches, pastors and teachers to combine your strength in devising some efficient means to remove this curse of opium. Years ago Mr. Turner, besides other good works, presented an appeal to your Parliament to prohibit the importation (by British merchants) of opium into China.

"Although the object sought has not been attained, the agitation of the matter should not be allowed to flag, for the calamities which opium brings are numberless. Permit us to set forth briefly a few of the more conspicuous forms.

"The introduction and sale of opium extends to all the cities and villages of the land, the Chinese expending upon it more than 50,000,000 dollars (about £10,000,000 sterling) every year. By this means the rich are made poor, and the poor led to sell their children, and its curse appears in the dissipation of the wealth of the land.

"Scholars, agriculturists, artizans and merchants, represent the constant employments of the people. When once they acquire the opium habit they become weak, inefficient, and indolent in every department of labour: every form of handicraft deteriorates, business suffers, and time is squandered. There is no worse evil than this, and its curse appears again in the gradual destruction of the industries and trade of the country.

"Our people originally are comparatively strong and healthy, but when once they acquire the opium habit they become mere weak skeletons, and can neither eat nor sleep with comfort. This physical deterioration is transmitted to their children and grandchildren, and the curse of opium is seen in the injury it inflicts upon the very life of the people.

"When a man has enough to eat and to wear he observes the proper regulations and custom of society, but when once he takes to opium he loses all self-respect, and, as money becomes each day harder to obtain, he resorts to dishonest means to gain a livelihood and becomes utterly debased; so the curse of opium appears again in destroying the character and manners of the people.

"While these evils are preying upon the people of China, the obstacles they present to Christian work are not a few. Your people come to preach the doctrines of the Gospel, which are indeed the truth, and your real desire is to lead many to believe: but those who hear them say that opium and the Gospel have come together from England, and the doubt arises, and finds expression in words, that the Gospel is false. Your missionaries come with the real desire to benefit the people, but those who see them, maliciously declare that opium and missionaries are alike English productions, and they suspect the missionaries of secretly doing evil. Moreover the Church opens free schools, and although they are meant to benefit the youth yet it is impossible to stop the mouths of those who are not taught, while opium remains unforbidden. The Church has opened hospitals, but, although they are saving men from disease, it is impossible to influence the hearts of those who have not been healed, while opium remains unforbidden.

"Your Christians, with singleness of heart, are zealous in many good works, but while opium remains they are all like so much water poured out.

"It is said by some that the Chinese are fond of opium and the calamities they suffer are of their own making and the English have nothing to do with it. The New Testament says: 'Have no fellowship with evil.' Now when your Government plants and sells opium to minister to the evil propensities of the Chinese, you are partakers with them, and what can you say in excuse thereof?

"An opportunity having now been providentially afforded by our friends in India to renew the agitation of the matter in the memorial they have presented to the throne of China for consultation and prohibition, our hope is that your Christians will with one heart exert themselves, without regard to profit or loss, and be enabled to abolish opium, that the Chinese may be released from this yoke of bondage, and the obstacles to the preaching of the Gospel be removed. We have but little strength, but night and day we pray the Lord above to reveal Himself, and help England and China to abolish this great evil. May this exceeding blessing come to us and to China. For this we reverently wait."

Letters to the Editor.

"APOSTOLIC v. PRESENT-DAY PREACHING."

Dear Sir,—In your paper of April 11, William Bramwell Dicks asks, "Why are not the same fruits seen nowadays, as the result of preaching, as in the time of the Apostles?" In my opinion the cause lies with professing Christians. I believe that in the present day conversion comes as much by sight as by hearing. As has been said, "Christians are, or ought to be, the world's Bible"; but, alas! that it is not so, for if the hundreds we read of who profess to be saved really and heartily consecrated themselves to the Lord, to live, die, or suffer shame for his sake, surely others would "take knowledge of them," and the hundreds would soon become thousands.

Yours truly, G. F. D.

Another correspondent, Arthur Solomon, specifies two reasons why more blessing is not experienced: the character of the preaching and the worldliness of church-members. He says: "The people are not brought under conviction of sin, and, therefore, they are not converted. Every church and chapel should have its own agencies for reaching those who are without; and aggressive work should be permanent."

"APOSTOLIC WARFARE."

IS GENERAL BOOTH'S POSITION SCRIPTURAL?

Dear Mr. Editor,—The kind tone of "J. G.'s" letter in your issue of the 5th inst. seems to invite a further reply; and "J. G." has not been able apparently to give that autoptic information which the latter asked for, regarding the difference of the governments of the China Inland Mission and the Salvation Army.

Will you allow me as a member, but not an officer, of the Army, and writing from my own personal knowledge, and on my own responsibility, to contribute some further light on the much-misunderstood subject of General Booth's position? May I postulate one or two points on which Christians differ, but which I must be excused from discussing here?

(1) I assume it to be Scriptural that there should be a constituted and recognised authority in the churches of God.

(2) I assume it to be Scriptural that there should be an individual in the Church invested with a superior jurisdiction, appointing and controlling its subordinate officers, as did Timothy at Ephesus. Such, in fact, is an archbishop in the Church of England.

Now, Sir, I think that I can show your readers that we can fully justify from Scripture the office of Mr. Booth as General of the Salvation Army, and also the manner and spirit in which he exercises that office.

He was put there by God. Man never chose or sent him. God's call came to his soul, and with it came the submission of some hearts. He obeyed, and led out a handful to battle. That handful has become a mighty host, "like the host of God," but their David is the same at Hebron now that he was in the cave of Adullam.

I mean: If his position as superintendent of the Whitechapel Christian Mission was right and Scriptural—and who denies it?—so is now his same position over the same followers, though they have grown into an Army, and he is their General.

I say, his leadership is divine; only God could make him so "manifest in consciences"; God must have written his claim to obedience in hearts. That obedience is rendered in God's name, as obedience to God, and that by a people in whom the Holy Ghost dwells in no common measure.

I am by no means saying that he is the only man to whose leadership such terms are applicable. "W.H.F." has compared Mr. Hudson Taylor's chiefship of the C.I.M. It is not my province to speak of Mr. Taylor's relations to his committee, but I own to a deep admiration for that noble servant of God, a man truly raised up of God, who has carried the flag of the Cross throughout the empire of China, and now has the splendid faith to ask for a thousand fresh volunteers for that work. I will only ask: Is not he sent of God?

But why does not General Booth have a committee? Oh, how men love committees! It seems like treason against such a time-honoured custom that a man should work without one. But is it peculiarly Scriptural? I wonder how Moses would ever have got Israel out of Egypt, if he had shared his authority with a committee of Israelites!

Did James at Jerusalem have a committee, in Acts xv.? We do not read that he took a vote and declared the decision of the majority. General Booth does on all important questions what James did; that is, he calls together a consultative council, hears their opinions and suggestions, adopts what appear to him to be the wisest, and gives his decision accordingly. Is not that Scriptural?

But "J. G." says he finds no "autocrats" among the gifts given by the ascended Christ to his Church.

Was not the Apostle Paul an "autocrat"? Had he a committee? Does "J. G." find that Jesus gave "committees" to his Church? I admit that "autocrat" is a word of ugly sound, and is associated with the knout and Siberia in our minds. Nevertheless, every husband is an autocrat; only his is the autocracy of love.

So is the General's autocracy. His people love him. It would be difficult to convey an idea of their attachment to him. The great majority of them have been converted in the Army, and they believe that to the General they indirectly owe their salvation. Because they love Jesus, they love him. He has their devotion, their confidence, their personal attachment to a rare degree. You will never hear a whisper of complaint against him, save from seceders. He is an enthusiasm to them, and he knows it. He is proud of it. He often boasts of it, and then some dear brethren, who have no conception of such a sway over men's hearts, cry "Pope!" No! The General is no Pope, claiming jurisdiction over the souls and consciences of the whole world upon pain of eternal damnation; but claiming simply to regulate the arrangements of his own body of followers, and expressly reserving their individual liberty of conscience. But he is a true successor of Peter, feeding and shepherding the flock; not lording it over the heritage, but an ensample to the flock.

He is a brotherly chief. We are "all brethren" in the Army; but there is one, as Christ said, "who is chief among us," and he is "the servant of all," and a hard-working one too. From personal acquaintance, I have ever found him to be a lowly-hearted believer in God's grace, who sees in himself no more merit of salvation than in the worst and lowest of those whom he is seeking to save; owning and loving as his brother every true-hearted saint, wherever he meets him; a genial friend, a ready counsellor, with his big heart open to every claim upon his sympathy for every sorrow, every bereavement, every hardship or persecution among his comrades, and ready equally to rejoice with them in every victory; bearing the worst brunt of the almost unprecedented storm of hatred, abuse, malignity, and misrepresentation with which the Army has been, and is still, assailed; traduced by the most cruel defamations of himself and of his noble children, and that even when his sainted wife, who is so universally beloved, is lying at the gates of glory. Surely, Sir, the primacy of this successor of Peter is not to be coveted by flesh and blood.

But it is Apostolic. "God hath set forth us, the Apostles (not 'first,' but) last." It is like the Master's, a crown of thorns.

"But," adds "J. G.," "what about his successor?" Great men rarely have a successor. They take care so to lay the foundation of their work in their lifetime that it shall live after them, whoever may carry it on. "Have faith in God." If William Booth dies, God lives; and God is the King of the Salvation Army.

In conclusion, we Salvationists have been pitied as serfs or fellahs, ground under the heel of General Booth; but we think ourselves a free people, who have achieved our freedom at considerable personal cost, free from all restraints, social, conventional, or ecclesiastical, free to yield ourselves unreservedly to God the Holy Ghost, to act, speak, or go, as He will, for the salvation of the world.

Yet we value order. Subjectness of spirit is a grace peculiarly cultivated among us, that "meekness," which has learnt from Jesus to "take the yoke," and which we believe to be an index of a truly sanctified spirit.—Yours sincerely,

C. J. Bird, M.A.,
Formerly Vicar of West Fordington.

PERFECTIONISM."

Dear Sir,—I did not intend to trespass again on your space, but in reply to the editorial note appended to my letter in your last issue, may I be allowed to point out that, if the extracts from Dr. Westcott's commentary given by you and by myself apply to the same class of persons, the author flatly contradicts himself. On careful reference, however, we find that this is not the case. Dr. Westcott points out that verses 6 and 7 are in contrast, as are also verses 8 and 9; that the three propositions, each beginning "If we say," are "the three false views which man is tempted to take of his position;" and that in them "St. John considers only the case of professing Christians"—italics mine (vide pp. 18, 19). If it were not so, how could the Apostle state in verse 7 that "the blood...cleanseth us from all sin," and in the following verse contradict himself by affirming that the sin still remains?[1] We have a parallel expression in James iii. 9: "Therewith bless we God...and therewith curse we men." Because the first "we" means "we Christians," is it to be supposed that the second "we" equally means "we Christians"? Do not Christian ministers constantly identify themselves with those whom they are addressing?[2]

With reference to the need for constant cleansing, which no true child of God can deny, may we not draw an analogy from earthly things? Will a vessel perfectly cleansed from all impurity and exposed to this atmosphere of ours remain clean for a single moment? Could our hearts remain clean after cleansing without the constant virtue of Christ's blood, we should be sinlessly perfect, but the doctrine of "sinless perfection" is repugnant to the Word of God and to be abhorred by all true Christians. Yet we may and do sing[3]—

Plenteous grace with Thee is found,
Grace to cleanse from every sin,
Let the healing streams abound,
Make and keep me pure within.[4]

At the same time the external presence and influence of sin must remain a fact in every believer's experience. Says Dr. Westcott, p. 41, "St. John... shrinks naturally from regarding sin as a normal element in the Christian life....Before touching on the fact of sin as indeed part of the believer's experience to the last, he asserts the end of his teaching which is sinlessness. This is the end, and even if it cannot be gained by the believer's effort and directly, it can be gained through the Saviour's work." Italics mine.[5]—Yours truly,

Henry E. Millar.

Heathdown, Hampstead Heath.

[1] Our correspondent is evidently mistaken as to the meaning of the words he quotes from Dr. Westcott, who is not there distinguishing "professing Christians" from real Christians, but from those who are not professing Christians. We quote the passage in full: "St. John considers only the case of professing Christians. In doing this he unites himself with those whom he addresses; and recognises the fact that he, no less than his fellow Christians, has to guard against the temptations to which the three types of false doctrine correspond." [Our italics.]

[2] This passage is misapprehended. The Apostle is reproving those to whom he writes, who were, like himself, professing Christians. The sin was not necessarily committed by all, nor by himself, though he uses the first person.

[3] The writer surely forgets that his contention in his former letter was on behalf of Mr. Sanford's teaching of "perfect cleansing, from all sin, both as a manifestation and as a principle"—"the cleansing away of inbred sin." If this were true, we must reply to the question: "Could our hearts remain clean after cleansing, without the constant virtue of Christ's blood?" Certainly they could, and would, so long as the cleansing away of sin as a principle—the cleansing away of inbred sin—remained a fact. Adam, before he fell, did not need "the constant virtue of Christ's blood," nor would Mr. Sanford nor our correspondent if inbred sin were really cleansed away.

[4] Whatever Wesley meant in the above lines, we do not think that either he, or those mentioned in Mr. Millar's previous letter, ever claimed to have experienced the cleansing away of inbred sin. And if they had, we doubt whether their wives, children, and neighbours believed it of them, blessed saints of God as we believe they were.

[5] This last quotation from Dr. Westcott cannot bear the sense put upon it by Mr. Millar, as will be seen from the closing sentence, which he omits:—"That which is true of the past (i. 9) ["If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness"] is true throughout." [Our italics.] The confession, the forgiveness, and the cleansing, are true throughout. Therefore, inbred sin has not been cleansed away. We are not at one with all the views expressed by Dr. Westcott on John i., but it must be evident to any unprejudiced reader that he does not teach the cleansing away of inbred sin.

In reference to Mr. Millar's previous letter we must note that there is no parallel between the evidence of two men who saw a man steal a sheep and that of two or three sincere Christians who declare that they have been delivered from indwelling sin. In the former case the men were eye-witnesses, but Christians, however sincere, have no senses, either natural or spiritual, capable of giving them reliable information as to their having been delivered from indwelling sin.

We should not be so concerned to make this matter clear were it not that the fallacy of deliverance from the indwelling sin is the thin end of the Arminian wedge of Antinomianism, as a false view of election is the thin end of the Calvinistic wedge. From opposite ends they are each used by Satan to split up the religion of Jesus Christ. —Ed.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see reference made to this interesting and instructive Book in a recent issue of your paper. It is a Book little read, and less understood in its typical and prophetic import. For many years I pored over it without being satisfied in my mind as to what the leading truths taught by it meant; but some twelve to fifteen years ago I found in a Jewish commentary what appeared to me to be its true signification, unpalatable perhaps to Gentile Christianity, but valuable to those who want to know the mind of Christ on every subject, and not the vaticinations of their own carnal intellects.

Jehoshaphat Ben Ezra, in his book entitled "The Coming of Messiah in Glory and Majesty," writes as follows:—

"The time shall come when king Ahasuerus shall remember Vashti and what she hath done, and what was decreed against her (Esther ii. 1). The time shall come in which his heart shall move towards his former spouse whom he so much loved, and whom he put away from him for righteous reasons; when taking pity on her hardships and softened by her tears, and satisfied with her great and most sorrowful repentance, he shall call her once more to himself, and shall reinstate her in all her honours, and clothe her with greater glory than she was possessed of before her misfortunes."

The late J. N. Darby, in his synopsis of the Books of the Bible, recognises the typical character of this Book.

I have also understood Haman and his ten sons to be types of Antichrist and the ten kings of the Roman earth, and his utter destruction, as also that of his sons, as the judgment justly due to his daring audacity. With these leading thoughts as a skeleton key, the whole import of the Book will become manifest to the impartial and prayerful reader.—Ever truly, W. G.

WENCHAW, CHINA.—Writing shortly after her arrival at her former sphere of labour in China, Mrs. Stott, who is personally known to many of our readers, says she received a very hearty welcome from old friends in Wenchaw. The various branches of the work have been prospering during her absence; last year fifty-seven were received into church fellowship. Several new places have been opened up to the Gospel. Mrs. Stott in her letter pathetically remarks: "How unspeakably empty the house now is without the one who made it home to me." We are sure those of our readers who knew and esteemed her late husband, will not fail to pray that all consolation and strength may be granted to her in the work to which she has given her life.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. J. Crofton Rainey has recently held a mission at Stanton Drew, Somerset, with good results.

John Wills has closed a successful ten days' mission at Horsham. Many were led to decision for Christ. Prayer is asked for the mission to be commenced at Lewes on 13th instant at the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh is conducting a mission in Devonport. A special feature of the mission is the setting apart of Friday evenings for Christian evidences, questions being replied to at the close of the service.

Ireland.—Successful Gospel services have been held at Blacklion by Mr. and Mrs. Powers; and in the Methodist Church, Glenavy, by Mr. James Dixon. Similar meetings have been held at Magherafelt by Revs. Samuel McCune, Geo. Gillespie, and others.

Mr. J. W. Moodie has completed a series of meetings in Kilbarchan, N.B. The interest was at its height when the mission closed, and seldom has there been such manifest interest awakened as we have witnessed during the past fortnight.

J. Finlayson.

Rev. W. Haslam, the first vicar of Baldhu, Cornwall, recently visited the parish, and preached three sermons in the church. Much interest was felt in the rev. gentleman's visit, not merely in the parish in which he had been so well known, but also in the surrounding neighbourhood, he being personally acquainted with many of the older inhabitants.

Stanstead Abbotts.—A successful mission was lately held in this parish. The services were very well attended, a spirit of deep earnestness and prayer pervading the whole village. Mission services have been carried on by the vicar each Sunday evening since the actual mission closed, and some seventy to eighty men met every Sunday afternoon in Lent in the church for a men's service.—Record.

Messrs. Smith and Flook have completed a two months' evangelistic tour through the south of Ireland. They not only conduct meetings in public halls, but engage in cottage meetings, open-air services, and house-to-house visitation. By these means hundreds of Roman Catholics have been brought under the sound of the Gospel. Meetings have also been held in the houses of Roman Catholics, where the message has been welcomed.

Mr. Thomas Waugh.—The most successful mission Mr. Waugh has conducted in London, says The Methodist Times, was recently brought to a close in the Grove Chapel, Stratford. During the mission over 300 grown-up inquirers, besides some fifty children, went into the inquiry-room, a large number of men being among the seekers. Many of the inquirers belong to other denominations. To the Christian workers of all churches in the neighbourhood the services have had an especial charm. The loving manner of the preacher, his hard-hitting, and happy way of putting things have been a delight to all.

Church Parochial Mission Society.—The following missions have been arranged in connection with this Society. It is hoped they will be made a subject of prayer by our readers:—Rev. W. Hay Aitken: April 19 to May 5, St. Just, Penzance. Rev. W. St. Hill Bourne: April 19 to 21, Willesborough, Kent. Dean of Chichester (Dr. Pigou): April 26 to May 3, Pewsey, Wilts. Rev. J. P. Cushing: April 19 to May 5, St. Paul's, Shanklin, I.W. Rev. W. Haslam: April 19 to 28, St. Cuthbert's, Bedford. Rev. J. H. Haslam: April 26 to May 6, Blindley Heath, Godstone. Rev. W. Hayton: to April 21, St. Faith's, near Norwich. Revs. T. Lancaster and B. F. Buxton: to April 23, Kilvey, Swansea. Rev. R. D. Monro: April 19 to 30, Elworthy, Taunton. Rev. Dr. Morris: to April 22, Brighton Y.M.C.A.; 26 to May 7, Westleton, Saxmundham. Rev. Canon Pennefather: to April 22, Matfen, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Rev. E. B. Russell: April 26 to May 5, King's Pyon, Herefordshire.

Cannes.—Meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life will be held at the French Church, Route de Grasse, on Thursday and Friday, April 24 and 25, conducted by Rev. Evan H. Hopkins.

Rev. A. Chambers.—We are desired to say that this Wisconsin pastor, to whom we referred last week, was not converted at "a Friends' meeting" in Darlington, but at a meeting of Miss Fothergill's Christian Band—an unsectarian work, the gatherings of which were held, by kind permission, in the premises of the Friends there. Mr. Chambers' pastoral work at Princeton, Wisconsin, though attended with many difficulties, has been much blessed of God.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. A. E. Clarke, formerly curate of St. Mark's, Preston, has joined the Baptist body.

Rev. H. M. Scarth, Prebendary of Wells, whose death at Tangier is reported, was a learned and accomplished antiquary.

At the recent Norwich Diocesan Conference, the Bishop expressed the conviction that there is more real pure Gospel preaching in the pulpits than there was fifty years ago.

At the Lichfield Diocesan Conference, Bishop Maclagan defended Archdeacon Farrar's new scheme of monastic brotherhoods. The Daily News, in a leading article, declares the scheme to be impracticable.

The next annual meeting of the Southport Evangelical Conference is to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 3 and 4. Arrangements have been made for Rev. Evan H. Hopkins to speak on "How to raise the spiritual tone of our congregations"; and Rev. H. James, rector of Livermere, on "Social hindrances to spiritual life."

In his eleventh annual statement and report, Rev. J. G. Gregory, the Incumbent, states that during the past year there were 4813 communicants at Emmanuel Church, Hove, Brighton, although the congregation is necessarily of a changing character. The Sunday afternoon Bible-class for poor children is a useful adjunct, and reaches a class too often neglected.

A telegram has been received from Ceylon, stating that Rev. E. J. Perry, who was for eleven years senior curate of Clerkenwell, had been accidentally shot dead by one of the natives. Mr. Perry went out to Ceylon only about six months since to succeed Dr. Hodges, the Bishop-elect of Travancore and Cochin, as Principal of the Church Missionary Society's college at Kandy.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

A comparatively large Friends' Meeting has been formed at Tokio, Japan.

A meeting-house has been opened at 48, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea, S.W. Meetings are to be held on Sundays and Tuesdays, at 4 p.m.

A successful eight days' Gospel mission, conducted by Howard and Louisa Nicholson, of London, has just been concluded at the Friends' Mission, Elsenham. The mission was acceptably followed by a visit from Jonathan Grubb, of Sudbury, and Mrs. Edmonds, of Bishop Stortford.

BAPTIST.

A Baptist Church has been formed at Addison Hall, Notting-hill. Rev. G. W. Pope, late of Diss, Norfolk, has been chosen pastor. The services at the hall are of an encouraging character.

A religious revival has taken place at the Baptist Church, Felinfoel; during the last six months upwards of 130 have been added to the church. The newly appointed pastor, Rev. B. Humphreys, is highly esteemed.

Rev. G. Parker, mission pastor, has entered on the fifth year of his pastorate at Mursley, Drayton Parslow, and Newton Longville, Buckinghamshire. He reports:—"Nine friends have recently been led to trust the Saviour, our Sunday-schools are in a prosperous condition, and during the past winter we have held more than fifty cottage meetings in the district. We have formed a 'mission band,' consisting of twelve men, who have pledged themselves for work in the district, and they go out four together and conduct meetings."

Writing to the American National Baptist, Rev. Chas. Williams, of Accrington, says:—"Our Baptist denomination, especially the churches connected with the Baptist Union, may be said to have awakened up to a deep sense of the worth of souls, and of the importance of preaching Christ as the only Saviour. Rev. F. B. Meyer, of Regent's-park Chapel, occupies one of the high places of the field, and therefore is more conspicuous than are others. But there are hundreds like him. He cares more for the cultivation of the devout life than for aught else in work within the church, and more for persuading sinners to accept the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour than for any aggressive enterprise."

At the quarterly meeting of the London Baptist Association, held at Woolwich a few days ago, Rev. F. B. Meyer gave a report of the progress of the Forward Movement. He said they had taken a house as a home for the ladies engaged as visitors in connection with the movement. They hoped to have twelve ladies so employed, and that by three months' training at the Tottenham Deaconesses' Institution they might be fitted for medical mission work and nursing. They wanted more ladies for this work, and would prefer those who could in part provide for their own maintenance. They had also secured a suitable house in Leather-lane for a lodging-house and men's club. In this they hoped to train working men for useful service.

There was a large gathering at Abbey-road Chapel, St. John's Wood, on Easter Monday, to bid farewell to Rev. Wm. Stott, the first pastor of the church, whose ministry has extended over twenty-seven years. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Joseph Peters, a member of the Established Church. The proceedings were of unusual interest and affection. During the evening, at the request of the chairman, all who owed their conversion to Mr. Stott's ministry rose from their seats, and they formed no inconsiderable number; and when those who had received any spiritual good were asked to stand, nearly the whole of the vast congregation responded. Revs. Dr. Angus, H. Sharpe (Holy Trinity Church, Hampstead), F. Sloper (Greville-road Congregational Church), H. Trotman, and F. B. Meyer were amongst the speakers.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Since Rev. E. Lee's settlement at Billingshurst, about a year ago, the membership has increased from sixteen to eighty-four.

Rev. Andrew Mearns has definitely decided to retain the secretaryship of the London Congregational Union, and give up entirely the post he has held in the Church Aid Society.

A novel but interesting "function" took place at Barry-road, East Dulwich, last Monday, when at 7 a.m. Rev. A. A. Ramsey "cut the first sod" of the new church to be erected by his congregation. About 150 friends were present, and a brief appropriate service was held. Mr. Ramsey's ministry here is meeting with much appreciation and success.

At Craven Chapel, Regent-street, between 1500 and 1600 Sunday scholars assembled on Good Friday morning. This was the fiftieth anniversary of similar gatherings. Rev. R. Berry gave an address from "My Friends." In the evening Rev. Arthur Hall conducted a service of sacred song and dissolving views, illustrating the events in the week preceding our Lord's crucifixion.

SALVATION ARMY.

An appeal is made in The War Cry for help in defending the action for obstruction at Whitchurch, which is to be tried in London.

There are now, Commissioner Railton reports, a dozen corps established in some of the chief towns along the coast of Norway up as far north as Christiansund.

General Booth has a new scheme in hand for meeting the case of the unemployed. It embraces the acquisition of a farm where employment can be given to those out of work.

On Easter Monday there was a novel bricklaying demonstration at Newcastle. Over 300 bricks were placed, each representing a contribution of five shillings towards the new barracks to be erected.

General Booth's birthday was celebrated in a characteristic way by the various headquarters' staffs in London. All the employés assembled soon after midday at a united prayer and praise meeting. Telegrams of sympathy were despatched to General and Mrs. Booth at Clacton-on-Sea.

In a recently published letter addressed to new converts, General Booth exhorts them to persistency of faith, diligent obedience, the use of all means calculated to maintain a Christlike life, such as secret communion with God, earnest prayer, thoughful reading of the Bible, self-examination, and keeping company only with the holiest and most zealous soldiers.

The Army began operations in Finland last year. A lady and gentleman of high standing (says the correspondent of The Daily Graphic) commenced operations, and they are now doing well, while, to the astonishment of everybody, they are looked upon with more favourable eyes than I believe is the case anywhere in Europe. At present there are two "captains"—two young English ladies—assisting.

Mr. Haden Corser, the Dalston magistrate, has decided not to convict seven members of the Upper Holloway contingent of the Salvation Army band "for playing noisy instruments for calling people together in a public place." He said that the defendants were playing concerted music for the purpose of keeping step and as an accompaniment to hymn tunes. They were not playing "noisy instruments," as set forth in the charge.

METHODIST.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes is delivering a series of addresses at St. James's Hall on Sunday afternoons, on the subject "Why am I a Christian?"

Rev. Edward Smith, who is resigning the charge of the Clerkenwell Mission, has accepted an invitation to labour at Eastbrook, Bradford, after the next Wesleyan Conference.

The "forward movement" has been begun with marked success at the Mumbles. A "Wesleyan String Band" has been formed, and the week-evening services are as largely attended as the Sunday services used to be.

Rev. Thos. Cook, Rev. Jas. Clegg, and Mr. Joshua Dawson attended a convention at Castleford on Good Friday. Two well-attended meetings were held, and about eighty persons decided for Christ after the evening service.

Revs. George Patterson and W. H. Findlay have arrived in England from India to appear before the special committee appointed to make inquiries respecting the controversy on Indian missions provoked by Dr. Lunn's articles in The Methodist Times.

The Association of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists of London has recently held its annual meetings. Rev. Abraham Roberts, of Liverpool, referred to the steady growth of the churches of the Connexion in London. The communicants for the past year numbered 2533, which showed an increase of 113 on the previous year. The denomination has eight churches in London, and two of these have recently opened new chapels, the one in Charing Cross-road and the other near the "Elephant and Castle." The total number of adherents is 3630.

The Methodist Recorder publishes a return of the present membership of the Wesleyan body. The total increase during the year is stated to have been nearly 3000, or more than 2000 less than the increase reported last year. There has also been a considerable falling off in the number on trial for church membership, nor is the increase in the junior society classes a sufficient explanation or counterpoise. These figures do not include, except to a very small extent, the fruit of the large number of revival missions held since the beginning of this year. In 447 circuits there has been an increase, in 308 a decrease.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A course of lectures, concluding with a sermon by Rev. John McNeill, has been delivered in the Presbyterian Church, New Barnet. The lecturers included Drs. Monro Gibson and Thain Davidson, Revs. Peter Carmichael and J. B. Meharry, and the head of the Natural History Department at South Kensington, Mr. William Carruthers.

NOTES FROM WALES.

At its recent quarterly meeting the Council of the South Wales and Monmouthshire Temperance Association rejoiced that the Special Commissioners had advised the preserving and strengthening of the Sunday Closing Act.

Rev. A. J. Parry, the preacher and temperance orator, purposes paying a short visit to the United States this summer. After his return he will undertake the pastorate of the church at Zion, Cefnmawr, which he left twenty-two years ago, after being its respected pastor for ten years.

The first quarterly conference of the North Wales and Border Counties' Prayer Union was held on April 1. Three meetings were held during the day, and addresses were delivered by several ministerial friends. The meetings pointed to the fact that the Union is becoming a source of much strength to the churches in the district.

Alderman Richard Cory, of Cardiff, has presented Prof. Gethin Davies with another cheque of £1000 towards the strengthening of weak churches in North Wales, in connection with the Welsh Baptist Home Mission Fund, and has also given a donation of £5000 in aid of the funds of Mr. Spurgeon's Stockwell Orphanages.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

Rev. James Fleming, of Whithorn, is to be nominated for the moderatorship of the United Presbyterian Church.

Renfield Free Church, Glasgow, have sent a call to Mr. Halliday Douglas, a young probationer, to succeed Dr. Marcus Dods in the pastorate.

Writing to The New York Observer, on the Dods Heresy case, Dr. Blackie, of Edinburgh, says that the result will likely be a thorough discussion on the subject of the authority and inspiration of Scripture.

At the recent annual meeting of the Free High Church, Edinburgh, Dr. Walter Smith expressed great disappointment at the very small number of young people who had come forward to confess Christ.

Glasgow University has conferred the degree of D.D. on Rev. James Stalker, Glasgow; Rev. Archibald Henderson, Cardiff; Rev. George Robson, Inverness; and Rev. Bryce Ross, Free Church missionary in Kaffraria.

Extreme poverty and indifference are the causes of non-churchgoing in the opinion of Kelso Established Presbytery. The remedies suggested include visitation, friendly remonstrance, carefully conducted services, with earnest, attractive, spiritual preaching.

The Free Presbytery of Glasgow have distributed a report of their committee on religion and morals submitted by Rev. James Gage. Although there appears to be no general spiritual movement in congregations and missions, conversions are numerous, and the ordinary work of the Church is followed with marked results.

At the annual soirée of Pollokshields Church, Glasgow, it was reported that the membership had increased to 871, and that during the year the congregation had raised a total of £4071 for all purposes. Rev. James Wells, the pastor, has published a most interesting volume of sketches of his work among the outcasts of Glasgow.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Commercial Travellers' Christian Association has held its second annual meeting in Belfast, and was able to report steady progress.

The Dublin White Cross Association has been doing a vigorous work. During the past year it formed three new branches and enrolled many new members.

A Presbyterian Church was opened in Belfast last Sunday in a working-class district, towards the cost of which a working cooper called Magean left £2000.

A series of meetings on behalf of Dr. Barnardo's Homes have been held in this country during the past thee or four weeks by Mr. J. B. Wookey, and have been well attended.

The portentous development of Ritualism in Ireland is not very reassuring to the lovers of evangelical Christianity. At the Easter Vestries held last week several remarkable cases were referred to.

A very large and enthusiastic meeting of the Protestant Defence Association was held in Dublin on Thursday week to express sorrow and alarm at the growth of sacerdotal pretensions in the Church of England, and to petition Parliament against the Bill to enable Roman Catholics to hold the offices of Lord Chancellor of England and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Dr. Parry, Suffragan Bishop of Dover.—Rev. William Melvin, Presbyterian minister of Larne, co. Antrim.—Mrs. Dick, aged eighty-four years, relict of the late Rev. Prof. Dick, D.D., Ballymena.—Rev. David Thomas, Wesleyan minister, Brecon, S. Wales.—Rev. J. R. Thomas, Bethesda, Pembroke, for upwards of twenty-seven years pastor of Bethesda Congregational Church, Pembroke.—Rev. Colin Brewster, Congregational minister, Heaton Chapel, near Manchester.—Rev. Humphrey Hughes, superintendent of the Wesleyan Circuit of St. Just-in-Penwith, Cornwall.—Prebendary Burney, vicar of Norton St. Philip, Bath.—Rev. John Grant, parish minister of Croy, Inverness-shire.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road. London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20.—Job XXIII.

Job felt the cruel and unjust charges which Eliphaz had made against him (xxii. 5-10). Yet, in his reply he barely makes any allusion to them. He knew that his "complaint" was considered "rebellious," yet his "hand was heavy upon his groaning" (2, R.V. marg.). He sought to repress it. It was a dignified way of dealing with such a cruel attack. He would not answer Eliphaz, but committed his cause to God (1 Peter ii. 23).

From his friends, who so misunderstand him, he turns again to God. Nothing less than God Himself is his great need (3). His works on every side speak of Him, yet to Job they seem only to conceal Him (8, 9). A God at hand, yet incomprehensible and unreal! How many have suffered from the same thing since Job's day. Cultivate the faith that claims the fact of his nearness to us even when we cannot see Him. The blood keeps us nigh, so that even in the darkness we may "trust" and "stay" (Isa. l. 10).

Notice, too, that Job felt he had a "cause," and was prepared to support it with "arguments" (4). Prayer often fails for want of a definite object and a powerful plea. God not only permits us to argue with Him, but is delighted to be overcome (Gen. xviii.; Matt. xv. 28). Yet Job would hear as well as speak (5). In fellowship with God all the talking is not on one side. To hear—quietly, reverently, obediently—is as necessary as to speak (Ps. lxxxv. 7, 8).

Job's confidence is great (6, 10). The great power of God would not be against him; and though he did not understand God, he knew that God understood him (10), and that his trial would have a blessed result. This is a considerable advance upon anything Job has previously spoken, though his entire inability to see why he was afflicted soon interrupted the confidence. With the New Testament revelation given to us, surely God may look for unwavering confidence, even when his ways are past finding out (1 Pet. i. 7).

The claim to strict integrity which Job makes (7, 11, 12) is not a mere self-righteous boast. If Job had been guilty, as his friends supposed, he could not have appeared thus confidently before God. David used similar words concerning himself (Ps. xviii. 20-23). They emphasise the fact that only "holy hands" must be lifted up in prayer (Ps. xxiv. 3, 4).

There is a tone of unbelief about the closing words (13-17). He seems again to think of God as having resolved to destroy him, though he knows not why. But apart from this mistaken thought, some of these words are most suggestive (13, 14). When we have learned that his will concerning us is so much better than our own, we shall delight to know that "what his soul desireth He doeth."

MONDAY, APRIL 21.—Job XXIV.

From himself, Job looks out upon others, and sees many an indication of the absence of a righteous rule over the affairs of men. The text of the chapter is "they that know Him do not see his days," or, are not prospered (1). Then follow illustrations, which are graphically given. The rich, ungodly men are seen oppressing the poor and the widows (2, 3); extorting labour for which they give no adequate recompense (4-6), so that their labourers gather food, and obtain shelter wherever they can (7-12); and yet though the wounded cry, God appears not to regard the wrong done to them. It is another statement of the old difficulty. Yet the denunciations of God's Word remind us that He is not indifferent, and will not fail to punish the oppressor (James v. 1-11).

Then Job describes special forms of sinners, especially the murderer and the adulterer (13-16). How significant is the statement, "they rebel against the light" (13, 16). Darkness is sin's opportunity. Evil-doers come not to the light, but the righteous desire it (John iii. 19-21; 1 John i. 6-7).

The fate of such men is not always the same. Of some Job sees a terrible end (18-21). But with others it is not so (22-24). They are secure and at rest while they live, and when they die are suddenly and painlessly removed as the ears of corn. These are contradictions to Job. An explanation may be possible, but his friends have not given it, and Job cannot discover it. But of his facts Job is so sure that he can challenge contradiction (25). There are mysteries still that the most perfect creed cannot fully explain, but the great "mystery of godliness" makes it easier for us to trust a love thus wondrously expressed, and to wait until we "know as we are known."

TUESDAY, APRIL 22.—Job XXV.

Bildad speaks again, not because he has anything more to add to the argument, but because it is his turn. But the brevity of his speech, and the entire absence of reference to the words of Job, are a confession of defeat.

Though the application of them was entirely mistaken, the words themselves are full of beauty. In the boasted advancement of this age, with the advantage of the fuller revelation which God has given, there are few men who attain to such true and devout thoughts of the greatness and glory of God as were uttered by Job and his friends.

Bildad begins with God's "dominion," and the "fear" or reverent worship that inspires. "Peace," or perfect order, is in all places where his dominion is acknowledged. "His armies"—either the starry host, or the angels—are innumerable; and his "light" shines upon all (2-3). Is not this an Old Testament statement of Eph. i. 20-23? The Gospel of the Kingdom of God recognises and rejoices in all these thoughts.

Bildad is equally right in asserting the impossibility of man being "clean" before such a God (4). And a truer apprehension of the power and holiness of God would restrain the too confident utterances of some men to-day. Yet we have found the answer to Bildad's question: "In Christ" we are "holy, and without blame" before God.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23.—Job XXVI.

Bildad has not helped Job, who refers with bitter irony to the feeble and futile attempt made to reprove him (1-4). The experience of the insufficiency of every "son of consolation" prepares us to receive more readily "the consolations of God."

Job can speak of God's greatness, too. Bildad had spoken of the greatness of God in the heavens; Job descends in thought to the under-world, and sees God's power displayed there. The "deceased" whose habitation is "under the waters" (5) feel and tremble before the presence of God. The Psalmist and the prophet felt the power of this thought (Ps. cxxxix. 8; Amos ix. 2).

Among other exhibitions of Divine power it is impossible not to notice the words, "hangeth the earth upon nothing" (7). That Job was acquainted with the idea of modern astronomy need not be supposed; but neither need we refuse to see that the words state the actual truth. No better words could have been used; and it is impossible to conceive of their being uttered at all except on the supposition that the Spirit of God spake by Job.

This description of the power of God closes with a recognition—modest and reverent—of the very imperfect character of all our present knowledge of Him (14). We shall do well to remember the thought. Our highest attainments touch but "the outskirts" of his ways. It is this defective knowledge of God that explains our frequent difficulties in seeking to understand Him, and his dealing with us (John xiii. 7).

THURSDAY, APRIL 24.—Job XXVII.

It is now Zophar's turn to speak; but, having nothing to say in reply to Job, he wisely holds his peace. Job, therefore, "again takes up his parable" (1).

He begins with a solemn protestation of his innocence (2-6). It must not be supposed that he asserts absolute sinlessness. Definite charges have been made against him which he knows to be false. His assertions of innocence have not been believed; but he can do no other than repeat them. He is still in difficulty, and conceives that God has "taken away his right" (2); yet he cannot acknowledge sins he knows he has not committed.

Considerable difficulty has been found in interpreting the following verses (7-23). They seem to be a contradiction of what Job has formerly said. Hitherto his thought has dwelt upon the prosperity of the wicked; here he seems to see them subject to distress and judgment. But had he not referred to this before (xxiv. 18-21)? And is it any wonder that while suffering so terribly his mind should see first one view and then an opposite one?

It is not "the hypocrite" (8), but "the Godless" to whom Job refers (R.V.). He is described as hopeless in the time of death (8); without refuge in time of trouble (9); and destitute of joy in God throughout his life. These are points of most significant contrast between Job and the wicked. If they had some advantage by reason of their greater prosperity, he has by far the greater advantage in possessing a God on whom he can call.

The fate of the wicked is described in terms similar to those used by the friends (11-23). If not always true in this life, neither is it true, on the other hand, that the wicked are as prosperous and free from trouble as Job has previously described them. They are therefore not to be envied in any respect (Ps. xxxvii. 1, 7-10, 35-38). Ungodliness misses true enjoyment here, and has no hope for the world to come (1 Tim. iv. 18).

FRIDAY, APRIL 25.—Job XXVIII.

The theme of this beautiful and interesting chapter seems to be the utter incapacity of man to understand the ways of God. It states the same truth that filled Paul with the spirit of praise and adoration (Rom. xi. 33-36). The three friends were not troubled with any such difficulty. They had a clearly defined theological position, with which all the facts of human experience were expected to agree. Job saw already that no theory ever propounded was adequate to explain every work of God. He is getting a glimmer of the truth by which God humbled and blessed him at the last.

"But where shall wisdom be found" (12)?—Man had discovered the place of metals and precious stones, and by his skilful mining operations had brought them to light (1-11, R.V.). The description is most graphic. We can see the miners sinking their shaft, then swinging in their cage and pursuing their calling, forgotten by the passers by (4, R.V.). Yet far down in the heart of the earth, in a path which birds and beasts of prey know not (7, 8), most precious stones are found (6, 10). Are we not reminded of the exhortation to seek for wisdom as for hid treasures (Prov. ii. 1-5)? The precious things of God's Word are only discovered by those who search diligently. All this man can do, but he cannot discover the place of wisdom, nor bring it to light (12-14).

What price shall be paid for it (15-22)?—The most precious things man can discover cannot purchase it. Only God knows it (22). He who does everything, and only He (24-27) knows his own purpose. Wisdom, as personified in Prov. viii., speaks in similar language. The person who thus speaks is "Christ, the wisdom of God" (1 Cor. i. 24). Wisdom centres in Him who is made of God unto us wisdom (1 Cor. i. 30, 31).

The chapter leads us then to this:—God's ways are inscrutable; his judgments are a great deep. "Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known" (Ps. lxxvii. 19). What, then, is wisdom for us? "Fear the Lord, and depart from evil" (28). At present be content that He knows. Fear Him with reverent, loving fear, so that no murmur concerning his dealings with us ever escapes our lips.

SATURDAY, APRIL 26.—Job XXIX.

This and the two following chapters contain Job's final survey of his case. They are valuable as exhibiting the contrast between Job as he was and as he is. In this chapter we have

(1) A description of his former happiness (2-10).—Job devoutly attributes this to the favour of God (2-5). To this he owed his joy in his children (5), and his abundant prosperity (6). This is the true way of receiving the blessings of this life. They become a greater source of joy to us when we receive them as the gifts of God (James i. 17). But Job had also the favour of men (7-10). All paid him respect, not only on account of his wealth, but because of his character. The remembrance of such days makes his present humiliation harder to bear.

(2) The method of his former life (11-17).—Job does not dwell upon it in the spirit of self-righteous boasting. Yet we may see how much easier it was to glorify God by acts of benevolence in the days of his prosperity than by quiet submission to painful afflictions that were full of mystery. We need to learn both how to abound and to suffer need (Phil. iv. 11, 12). The beauty of Job's character appears in the fact that his piety was not negative only. His life was full of acts of kindness and sympathy to all classes of persons. This is the man who, in the presence of God had to confess himself vile. Do those perfectionists who are so ready to advertise their own holiness compare favourably with him? In Job the true fast (Isa. lviii. 6, 7) was observed. This made his affliction the more mysterious. He knew nothing of Satan's challenge, and could only believe that God was holding him guilty. What wonder that he was in distress!

(3) His too great security (18-20).—Perhaps these verses indicate Job's failing. There were evidently times when his heart was set upon his prosperity, and he began to rest in that rather than in God. His trial reminds us that nothing here is secure, and that God Himself, not his gifts, must be our only confidence (Micah ii. 10; Hab. iii. 17).

International S.S. Lessons.

Sunday Afternoon, April 27.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER.
LUKE viii. 4-15.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verse 18.

FOR the surroundings of this lesson compare parallel passages in Matt. xiii. and Mark iv. From his position in the boat on the Sea of Galilee, it is probable that Jesus saw all the four kinds of soil mentioned in the parable, and the sower engaged at the time in scattering his seed. The occasion was the growing popularity of Jesus (4). But He did not regard mere popularity as success. It became necessary to distinguish between true followers and false. The parabolic form of teaching was intended to do this. The sincere would be attracted; the indifferent repelled. As in the surrounding country, He saw the four kinds of soil, so among his numerous hearers He saw "four kinds of expression:—countenances expressing thoughtlessness and indifference; faces full of enthusiasm and delight; others with a careworn preoccupied expression; and lastly, expressions of serene joy indicating a full acceptance of the truth."—Godet. To these, whether among his hearers then, or in any congregation or Sunday-school to-day, his parable applies.

The parable (5-8).—The four conditions of soil are the wayside (5), near the pathway through the fields; the rock (6), not soil mingled with stones, as the term in Matthew and Mark suggests, but that part of the field where the soil lay in a thin layer over the hard rock; the thorns (7), where the soil was fertile but already occupied; and the good ground (8), which was neither "hard as the first, nor thin as the second, nor unclean as the third." The same seed was scattered upon all; but note the different prepositions used to represent the different relations of the seed to the soil: by (5); upon (6); among (7); and into (8, R.V.). Of the four kinds of soil only one was fruitful. Such was the parable; the words "He that hath ears," &c. (8), were a call to all to pay earnest heed to its teaching.

The interpretation (9-15).—The parable contained "mysteries of the kingdom" (10). There are several such mysteries (Eph. i. 9, iii. 3-5, v. 32; Col. i. 28). These are the "heavenly things" which only Jesus can reveal (John iii. 12). The parabolic form was used for a double purpose. It revealed the truth to those who sincerely desired to learn (9); but it concealed it from others who were indifferent (10). It is a solemn thought that they who want darkness will find it even in the teaching of Jesus.

The word of God as the seed (11) is precious (Ps. cxxvii. 6), and incorruptible (1 Pet. i. 23). Like the seed, it contains life. All it needs is a heart to accept and keep it, and eternal life is the result. A brief portion of the word of God has arrested and saved many a soul. A workman engaged at the Crystal Palace heard Mr. Spurgeon repeat the text, "Behold the Lamb of God." It was spoken simply to try his voice; but it sank into the workman's heart, and resulted in his conversion. The words "no other name," repeated several times by the blind man who had lost his place while reading from his Bible with raised type, fell upon the ear of the passer-by, and became the life-giving seed to him. Such instances are numerous, and justify the description of the Word of God as a seed.

Of the four kinds of hearers, the first are the careless and indifferent, whose conscience feels no sense of sin; nor fear of its punishment, who are only among the hearers because it is customary to be there. The Devil is at hand while such men hear the Gospel (12). There is a very vigilant enemy, and wherever men have not heard the Gospel, and been saved by it, the enemy has gained a triumph. All those who hear, but neither understand (Matt.) nor believe, belong to this class.

The second are the superficial hearers (13). These make a very promising start. Their emotions are excited; and, having received the word, they begin at once to manifest a change. But they have not counted the cost; so persecution soon sends them back. What they need is not less persecution, but greater depth. However deeply the feelings may be stirred, if the heart is not broken, and the will surrendered, there can be nothing but failure. Pliable was of this class. See also Hos. vi. 1-4; Luke ix. 57, 58.

The third are those hearers whose heart is divided (14). They are not prepared to leave all for Christ, but want the best of this world and the next as well. They aim at serving God and Mammon. Cares, riches, pleasures—these already occupy the heart. Not outside the Church, but among its members these persons are to be found; particularly in these days when a religious profession is so easy. Were not Ananias and Sapphira (Acts v.), and Demas (2 Tim. iv. 10) of this class? God requires a perfect heart (2 Chron. xv. 9).

The last class are the true hearers (15). They are sincere and earnest. They receive the word not merely into their feelings, but into their heart, and they keep it there (Heb. ii. 1). Their will is yielded to obey it; and they persevere in spite of opposing difficulties.

The parable thus applied, powerfully enforces the Golden Text. We are reminded that out of four hearers three of them hear without real profit. The proportion may not always be the same; but it suggests the need of care in hearing the Gospel.

We see, too, that, to be lost, men need not violently oppose the Gospel. Even hearers may fail to be benefited by it. What a condition of heart is implied by the fact that such a Gospel does not save!

In an article in The Christian Irishman, Rev. Thomas Connellan remarks that the early Irish clergy spent their revenues in their own country, and did not send it over sea to keep a crowd of Italians in laziness and debauchery.

A new leper hospital is being built on Robben Island, Cape Town.

Heligoland, the smallest organised British colony, has no debt, no crime, and little disease.

An international congress on the administration of prisons is to be held in St. Petersburg.

The first passenger train in the Transvaal started on Monday, the 7th instant, from Johannesburg to Boksburg.

Lady Roberts, wife of Sir Frederick Roberts, is appealing for help for her military hospital work in India.

Mr. Gladstone is to write an article for Lloyd's Weekly on the progress of the labouring classes during the last fifty years.

The sudden gales of the spring in the North Sea (says The Daily Graphic) leave behind them a sad record of disasters to the hardy fishermen.

Mr. Jephson, one of the officers of the recent Emin Expedition, writes to The Times extolling the fidelity and courage of the natives employed.

The Committee for providing Homes for Working Lads in London are going to erect a new house for the benefit of youths engaged in the City.

Two newspaper correspondents have been expelled from Italy for having sent news to French and German papers "affecting the credit of Italy."

There is a project on foot for sending a trading expedition from Monrovia, West Africa, to open up the country between Liberia and the Niger.

Wit and Wisdom is giving a series of papers, "Interviews with Modern Prophets." The first prophet to propound his views is Rev. H. R. Haweis.

Father Hyacinthe has written a new book, "Neither Clericals nor Atheists," which contains (says Dr. Pressensé) "some of the finest specimens of eloquence."

Father Kreusch, head of the Jesuits in Burlington, Iowa, says his fraternity are preparing to return to Germany now that Prince Bismarck is no longer in office.

The Lancet of last week describes, from a sanitary point of view, the shocking conditions of life to which Russian political exiles are subjected on the road to Siberia.

The trustees of the late Mr. George Heginbottom offer £10,000 to build a technical school and free library in Ashton-under-Lyne. The corporation gratefully accept the gift.

The well-worn controversy about "Domestic Servants" has been revived in The Daily News. Many servants complain of the lack of consideration on the part of mistresses.

A second conference on the condition and employment of barmaids has been held at the residence of Miss Morley, Grosvenor-street. There was much practical discussion on the subject.

A correspondent of The Record asserts that parents and teachers generally are strangely insensible to the perils which the young will have to encounter from rationalising and sceptical teachings.

Mr. Stanley states that he has seen, between the Upper Congo and the coast, the terrible traces of the slave trade, which seems to be carried on more actively than ever before, even in the Equatorial Soudan.

An anonymous friend has paid to the treasurer of the London City Mission £2500 towards the support of ten missionaries in poor and neglected districts of London for five years. The total cost of these extra missionaries will be £5000.

Taking into account the doubtful state of the weather on Easter Monday, the London police courts on the following day had a record encouraging to temperance workers. Things are better than they used to be, though not so well as they might be.

Rev. Thos. Connellan, in an article in The Christian Irishman on "Ireland and Her Early Church," says it is perfectly certain that before the mission of St. Patrick to that country the Gospel had already been preached there. Mr. Connellan pleads for Home Rule in spiritual matters as against Rome Rule.

Mr. A. T. Jackson, a juryman in the Crewe murder trial, proposes to establish a central office in Birkenhead or Liverpool for the carrying on of an active agitation for the abolition of capital punishment. He invites co-operation from all who favour the movement, and asks that offers of support may be addressed to him at 66, Market-street, Birkenhead.

Appeals.

The Upper Congo.—An appeal is made for a magic lantern and slides illustrating the life of Christ for use among the tribes on the Upper Congo. If any friend of missions can respond, the parcel may be sent to Messrs. Bywater, Tanqueray & Co., 79, Queen Victoria-street, to be forwarded to Mr. C. B. BANKS, A.B.M.U., Equatorville, Upper Congo, S. W. Africa.

A Village Need.—Miss Adela Brooke has at last succeeded in providing a reading-room and coffee-house for the village of Coombe, Oxfordshire. Many friends came to her aid to meet the expense, about £600. Now she is asking for help in furnishing the place. A piano, if only a second-hand one, is required, also books, chairs, tables, &c. The population of the village is very poor. Letters may be addressed to Miss BROOKE, at Coombe House, near Woodstock; gifts should be forwarded to her at Handborough Station (G.W.R.), Oxfordshire.

Christian Community.

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY, since this work began, 21,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual severity, arising from the recent Dock Labourers' Strike and other causes; and from present appearances an unusually severe season is most certainly apprehended, making our appeal all the more urgent.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the Secretary; or Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by the Editors of "The Christian."

JAS. ATKINSON, Secretary.
28, Enfield-road, Kingsland, London, N.

MISS WESTON'S SAILORS' REST,

PORTSMOUTH.

Great enlargements. Gifts of Cabins (thirty guineas), and also to Building Fund, gladly received.

Address: SAILORS' REST, PORTSMOUTH.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

INSTITUTED 1807.

Treasurers: { F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.
Wm. J. PARKS, Esq., 10, The Chase, Clapham-common, S.W.

Secretary: Mr. J. E. HAZELTON, Office, 83, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

Secretary of Asylums: Mr. W. JACKSON, 29, Marlborough-road, Upper Holloway, N.

TWELVE HUNDRED AND NINETEEN of the Lord's aged poor, of both sexes, and members of various branches of the Church of Christ, are now on the books; and upwards of £7,800 per annum are distributed amongst them, in pensions of five, seven, and ten guineas. To meet this amount the ordinary income is inadequate. The pensioners live in all parts of the country, and most of them are upwards of seventy years of age. By means of this Society, little homes are sustained, weary hearts cheered, happy dwelling places provided, and the pathway of hundreds of aged Christians smoothed and brightened. An appeal is therefore made to all who love the Lord Jesus to give their practical support to this Institution.

In the four Homes—Camberwell, Hornsey Rise, Brighton, and Stamford Hill—180 of the pensioners have peaceful and happy abodes. A visit to these buildings is invited.

Fresh Contributions are earnestly solicited.

ANNUAL REPORTS, AND OTHER PAPERS, WILL BE GLADLY SUPPLIED FROM THE OFFICE.

THE MISSIONS TO SEAMEN SOCIETY.

DONATIONS
RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, APRIL 14, 1890.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 We would respectfully urge all our friends, when remitting to us, to make Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders payable to Morgan & Scott, and to cross them "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss of same.

 Donationsshould be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders, not by stamps.

Scripture Readers' Society

FOR IRELAND.

INSTITUTED 1822.

Funds greatly needed to extend the Itinerant work.

The Scripture Readers are placed under carefully selected Superintendents, and not only located in Towns and Cities, but also sent into remote districts where they are generally well received by all denominations.

Irish speaking Readers are sent where required. Sailors in Seaports are visited, and Bethel Services held.

The work is carried on in a spirit of love and not of controversy.

Reports and all particulars sent post free on application to Captain James Kearney White, Secretary, Offices, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin, and 9, Paternoster-row, London.

Donations may be sent to the above addresses, or will be received by the Proprietors of The Christian.

Please notice exact title of Society as above.

ONE RECENT CASE WILL BE GIVEN IN THIS JOURNAL EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

(THIRTY-THIRD SERIES.)

CONSUMPTION—TWICE ARRESTED, THEN CURED—CASE of MISS E. THORPE, of EASTBOURNE.

This patient was recommended to me by Rev. HENRY BRADFORD, of Eastbourne, who had previously recommended many others, knowing the value of my treatment.

This case is peculiarly interesting, as showing the importance of perseverance till every symptom be entirely subdued.

Nine years ago, when a girl of 13 years, Miss EUNICE THORPE was first attacked with phthisis. "Several doctors agreed that my left lung was going rapidly, but none afforded any relief, and I was given up as a hopeless case. Application was made to you through our friend and minister, Mr. Bradford. I took one largest bottle of your medicine, which seemed to cure me completely."

(N.B.—The medicine was only a six weeks' supply, and should have been continued much longer.—G. T. C.)

"I remained (she continues) in good health for four years, with only a slight cough"—(an indication that the treatment should not have been left off so soon). "Then came a relapse, and I took one smaller bottle, which seemed to set me up, but I fully believe if I had continued on with it, I should have been troubled no more."

Another four years brings us to 1889, and on May 29 I had a kind letter from Mr. Bradford, and one from Miss Thorpe entering more fully into details. The cough was now troublesome; expectoration copious, dark and heavy, spitting also at times chalky concretions; distressing, aching, or dull pains across the chest; burning heats; beginning to lose flesh all over the body. "Several doctors say that my left lung is quite gone, and the right much affected."

July 2, she writes: "I have gained flesh, and am better in every way. I have no pain in my chest. I wish to persevere with the medicine properly this time, for it is doing me great good."

In August I again sent medicine. She writes me (August 28): "I am truly thankful I am so very much better."

In October she came to Coombe Lodge, and saw my son, who carefully examined her, and found that phthisis in both lungs was decidedly arrested, and very slight mischief.

I heard again from her November 23 last. She writes: "I am like another person. It is wonderful the change in the time. I feel as though I had an entirely new chest. They say I look the picture of health, and I certainly do. I thank you most sincerely. If you care to publish my case for the benefit of others, you are at liberty so to do."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

John, Whom Jesus Loved.

A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY, AND INFLUENCE OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Views.

Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.;
Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."—The Sword and Trowel.

"Behold, I stand at the Door, and knock."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.
Superior Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"This very handsome volume on a subject of perpetual importance will be welcomed, especially by those who are acquainted with Dr. Culross's other excellent works. Dr. Culross has here pre-eminently exhibited his usual excellence as a religious writer. Clear in style and eloquent in argument, striking in illustration. Never wordy or tedious, never flat or cold, but always exhibiting great Christian affection, with the obvious sense of the fidelity his subject so solemnly demands. We are sure this work will be useful wherever it is read."
Baptist Messenger.

"Thy First Love."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT EPHESUS.

By REV. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.;
Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. Because we may honestly use them in this case, we heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."—The Sunday School Chronicle.

"The Lady Superintendent of Nurses begs to acknowledge the receipt of the Parcels of Texts as ordered. She more and more feels their value. The patients lying in their beds can read the words—the print is so distinct.
"As she is going to undertake the charge of several hundred more patients, she wishes to give other Wards the advantage of these Texts on the wall."

70 different Texts, 3d. each.
Mounted on canvas, varnished, and with eyelet holes, 9d. each.
Mounted on rollers and varnished, 1s. 6d. each.

LIST OF THE TEXTS.

1. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."
2. "The wages of sin is death."
2.* "The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."
3. "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."
4. "Repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance."
5. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."
6. "In whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins."
7. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."
8. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."
9. "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth."
10. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."
11. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."
12. "The Lord is good to all; and His tender mercies are over all His works."
13. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."
14. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered."
15. "When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."
16. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."
17. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."
18. "Now in Christ Jesus ye, who sometime were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."
19. "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near."
20. Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God."
21. "Herein is love: not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins."
22. "God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."
23. "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so, by the obedience of One, shall many be made righteous."
24. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."
26. "The just shall live by faith."
31. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God."
32. "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."
33. "Through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."
34. "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."
35. "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."
36. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."
37. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."
38. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."
39. "God so loved the world, that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."
40. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me."
42. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus."
43. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."
44. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."
45. "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."
46. "He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom."
47. "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord."
48. "I love them that love Me, and those that seek Me early shall find Me."
51. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
52. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him."
53. "Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you."
54. "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."
55. "He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."
56. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."
57. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."
58. "In all their afflictions He was afflicted."
59. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."
60. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."
61. "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God."
62. "He is despised and rejected of men: a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with grief."
63. "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities."
64. "The chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed."
65. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."
66. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquities of us all."
67. "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."
68. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."
69. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink."
70. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."
71. "It is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul."

The eight following are in Extra Large Type.

25. "Jesus only."
27. "Now."
28. "God is love."
29. "Behold, He cometh."
30. "Have faith in God."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we shall give portrait and sketch of Rev. W. H. Barlow, Vicar of Islington.

With the advent of longer days and milder weather there come to us multiplied appeals for tracts for distribution among the careless masses. Will our friends, by replenishing the treasury of our Tract Fund, enable us in some measure to respond?

In view of the present-day tendency among many to attach undue importance and efficacy to outward observances, to let what has been well termed "religionism" do duty for true heart-religion, the following words by Bishop Ryle in a recent sermon may not be out of place:—

> Coming to church is not coming to Christ, for thousands do that from Sunday to Sunday, who are none the better for it. Nor is it merely coming to the minister, for whilst thousands come to their ministers and hear them, and are taught by them, they never come to Christ...A man may use every ordinance of the church, ay, and attend regularly at the Lord's Supper, and yet never come any nearer to Christ. How, then, are they to come to Christ? They must put aside their negligence, wake up to see their sinful state, and come to Him for forgiveness, pardon, and peace. This is all that is required of them. How simple it all seems! yet how hard it is to get men to see, to realise, and accept all the blessings offered by Christ!

Those of our readers who feel deeply respecting recent atrocities in Russian prisons will find much important information in an article which has just appeared in The Universal Review. It gives the story of the brutal crimes which have more or less filled Europe with consternation; and also the history, from a lady who knew her well, of Madame Sihida, who died after the infliction of a hundred lashes, and from the shock through the unutterable shame. The inhumanity which led three other ladies, her companions, to poison themselves has, with similar deeds, furthered the formation in England and America of committees of protest. If a storm of indignation is rising, it is abundantly justified and demanded.

The attention of all who are interested in preventing, as far as possible, incitements to vice, should be called to an Act which came into operation at the beginning of this year, called "The Indecent Advertisements Act, 1889." It provides:—

> Whoever affixes to or inscribes on any house, building, wall, hoarding...or exhibits to public view in the window of any house, or shop, any picture, or printed or written matter, which is of an indecent or obscene nature, shall, on summary conviction, &c.

Of course, it depends upon what our magistrates would hold to be indecent or obscene, but there are pictures upon the walls and hoardings of this great city which stare us in the face, and in shop windows, which strike us as being indecent in the extreme, if not obscene. It is terrible to consider what must be the condition of the mind of those who, for gain, cause such things to be exhibited and circulated. Their number and frequency show how the purpose intended is answered. We fear the Act will be a dead letter unless some of our vigilance committees see that it is enforced.

A meeting was held in the Christian Union Buildings, Dublin, last week, under the presidency of Archbishop Plunket, to consider the steps to be taken to promote union amongst Protestant Christians in Ireland. Over two hundred clergymen of the Episcopal Church attended, and the discussion was an exceedingly interesting one. The strongest desire for unity was almost unanimously expressed. At the meeting of the Synod resolutions were passed in favour of attempts being made to promote union. The Bishop of Cashel, speaking afterwards at the annual meeting of the Hibernian Bible Society, introduced the subject, and several ministers of various denominations spoke in favour of the movement. We trust that some practical result may follow; in no other country perhaps is there such need for union on the part of those who love the Gospel of Christ.

Lord Archibald Douglas, who has for some time back been labouring to bring the people of Dumfries-shire to Rome, is about to commence the summer campaign of 1890, and appeals for funds to defray the cost of keeping up his horse and van. It is necessary, he says, that he should utterly avoid the appearance of collecting money. A series of masses will therefore be offered by his lordship "for all who will help according to their means," a photograph being added when the amount given is five shillings. With great candour, however, the mission priest admits that he believes the immediate result of his preaching will be very small, but he urges that an impression is being made "which will grow as it sinks in." Dumfries-shire, we should think, has too many open Bibles for such a mission to be successful.

Attention has previously been directed to the thorough discussion of the Pentateuchal question which is taking place in the pages of Hebraica, a quarterly journal in the interests of Semitic study, published at Hartford, Conn., U.S.A. The case for the destructive critics having been impartially presented from their writings by Professor W. R. Harper, of Yale, the defence has been given by Professor W. H. Green, of Princeton. It is well known that the occurrences of the Divine names, Elohim and Jehovah, furnish the principal criteria with those who would split the books up into sections which, without objective evidence, they allege to have come from different pens, at dates more or less long after the time of Moses. Dr. Green shows that these names are employed in the Pentateuch in accordance with their true meaning and general Biblical usage, and, therefore, cannot indicate the arbitrary piecing together of various documents by a late editor. As reasonably—or, rather, unreasonably—might we divide up the New Testament books on the basis of the varying reference to our Lord, sometimes as Jesus, and at other times as Christ.

The trial of Abraham has by some of the critics been grossly perverted, but Dr. Green is more than a match for them all. He points out how beautifully the story illustrates the use of the Divine names. It is Elohim who puts the patriarch to the test by the command to offer up Isaac; it is Jehovah who stays his hand. God as supreme has a right to demand the dearest and the best; but the gracious and merciful Jehovah accepts the spiritual surrender and spares the child. The inference that the narrative indicates the "possibility of human sacrifice" by the patriarchs, is justly described as "an atrocious misrepresentation." As Dr. Green shows, the lesson of the narrative is precisely the reverse—that while God put Abraham's faith and obedience to the severest test, he did not require the sacrifice of his child.

Dr. Green abundantly exposes the vaunted argument from "difference of diction." The critics first make patchwork of the books; then they discern distinct literary features. One after another of these he sets aside as groundless, while others he shows to be in reality non-existent. It is high time the entire subject was thus thoroughly dealt with. We trust those who are not able to follow the discussion in its details will at least hesitate to accept off-hand the arguments and conclusions of even the most excellent scholars when they go to discredit the writings of Moses. Our Lord never doubted the authenticity of the Pentateuch, in definite reference to which He rebuked the Jews by saying, "Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed Me: for he wrote of Me." The Jews accepted, but did not believe from the heart. Let us be jealous, not only to accept, but cordially to believe the Law and the Prophets, which foretold "the sufferings of Christ and the glories that should follow."

As intimated in another column, Mr. Baynes, the Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, has returned to England, and we desire to express our sincere congratulations to him personally, and to the Committee of the Society he so ably serves. At the same time, we cannot help the remark that he has rendered service to the mission workers in India at very great cost to himself. He was ill when he arrived at Bombay; yet, with that devotion to duty which characterises him, he prosecuted his great work, and has returned in an enfeebled state of health, and looking years older than when he went away. We fear that in view of the forthcoming meetings much work will fall upon him; but we venture earnestly to hope that it will be possible to make early arrangements for a period of much-needed rest.

The fact that a large part of the surplus dealt with in the recent Budget was derived from increased consumption of intoxicants is one to be deeply deplored by all who have the interests of the people at heart. Unfortunately this "rush to alcohol" is far from being a rare one, as it almost invariably accompanies any remarkable advance in national prosperity. It is evident, therefore, that the steady decrease in spirit drinking for some years back affords no ground to warrant any cessation of the labours of temperance reformers. Indeed, the time has come for still more vigorous effort and more persevering prayer.

We are very much in accord with a correspondent who writes to us bewailing the low-toned morale of the House of Commons, as shown in the frequent "cheers and laughter" by which the Chancellor of the Exchequer's speech was punctuated, when he described this "rush to alcohol" which has given him the most of his big surplus. Intemperance, unhappily, has long been deemed a fit target for the jester and the humorist, and in this respect temperance advocates, both in and out of the House of Commons, have been far from blameless. Our correspondent rightly thinks that the increase in rum drinking, with all that it involves, ought to cause weeping rather than laughter. Mr. Goschen's frivolous phrase, "toasting the prosperity of the country," will help to bolster up one of the most foolish and hurtful of modern fashions.

Punch had a contribution last week purporting to report the proceedings of "a Society for the Study of Inebriety," and setting forth what it is evidently pleased to regard as the humorous phases and developments of delirium tremens. We sympathise with our contemporary in the difficulties it must experience in securing a weekly supply of nonsense; at the same time we feel strongly that a habit which causes so much individual and social misery is scarcely a fit subject for jocular treatment.

On its next page, however, our witty friend does good service in showing the necessity of establishing "a Court of Criminal Appeal." We are quite unable to grasp the reasonableness or the righteousness of the recent decision of the Home Secretary in the Crewe murder case, but, with Punch, we deem it unfair that any one official should be burdened with such a heavy responsibility in cases of life and death. We think, moreover, with very many more, that the time is come for seriously considering the abolition of capital punishment.

We have a number of letters on "Perfectionism," for which we have not space. Meanwhile we find The Woodford Times exposing, in guarded language, proceedings similar to those of Mr. Wood in Brighton some time ago. Many are better than their creed, but there are not a few in London to-day who began with the milder errors of "the Kentucky evangelist," then followed Mr. Carty and declared that having received the glorified body they should neither sin, suffer sickness, nor die, and then identified themselves with the Agapēmoné. The self-deceit that "we have no sin" (1 John i. 8) will always lead a certain proportion of weak-minded people into demoralising error and the breaking up of family life.

In crosses, universally, let this be thy rule; make thyself none; escape some; bear the rest; sweeten all.—Bishop Hall.

The cross is a wondrous place! Here opposites meet—the highest joy, and the deepest sorrow; the sweetest peace, and yet all the elements of a broken heart.—John Harington Evans.

"Allusive Contrast" in Scripture.

"Let me call your attention to a species of indirect evidence of much value, of which we shall find several instances in this part of Scripture. This principle has been termed allusive contrast. It may be thus illustrated. If, in the course of history, we read of any peculiar laws and penalties having been at any time enacted against certain specified crimes or habits, we feel at once that at that particular period there must have prevailed, to some extended degree, the habitual practice of the very evils which those laws were intended to correct. The description implies the corresponding opposite. So when Ezekiel spoke of the righteous man that "hath restored to the debtor his pledge," and "spoiled none by violence," &c., it implied by allusive contrast that injustice and oppression characterised Judah in those days, and that violence and fraud were special sins that then called for God's rebuke."—Elliott's Horæ Apocalypticæ.

The above is a very important principle, and will, we think, give a fresh significance to many portions of the Word of God. Some instances of its occurrence pointed out in the Horæ Apocalypticæ are intensely interesting, instructive, and suggestive, though others would seem to many, as they do to us, far-fetched or fanciful.

We would suggest that there are many allusive contrasts to heathen rites and practices, and it will be helpful if our readers will communicate, for our mutual benefit, other instances which occur to them. We note the following, which appear to us to be illustrative of this principle of allusive contrast.

(1) The earliest, and still the most widely spread form of idolatry, is the worship of the sun; and the priests and people worshipped with their faces toward the rising sun. In allusive contrast to this, when Moses reared the Tabernacle according to the fashion thereof, which was showed him in the Mount, the door was made to face the east. The same direction applied to the Temple; so that when the Lord would show Ezekiel greater abominations even than Israelitish women weeping for Tammuz (the Babylonian Adonis), He "brought him to the door of the Temple of the Lord, where were about five-and-twenty men, with their backs toward the Temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east" (Ezek. viii. 13-16).

This is an important Scripture at the present time, as showing the essentially idolatrous and abominable character of the Babylonish and Romanising Ritualism which is honey-combing the Established Church, and of which "the eastward position" is a prominent feature.

(2) As Ritualism is the special danger of the Establishment, so Rationalism is the peril of the Nonconformist bodies. A popular Baptist pastor has published a sermon, entitled, "The mistake of Abraham in offering up Isaac." Like Rationalistic errors generally, what strikes the reverent Bible-reader with regard to this idea, is its shallowness. The whole transaction was in allusive contrast to the heathen horror of human sacrifice, and especially of the sacrifice of their own children. God showed by his staying the uplifted hand of Abraham that it was an abomination which the Lord hated that men should burn their sons and their daughters (Lev. xviii. 21). And on the other hand, by commanding Abraham to offer his son, and permitting him to obey to the point of lifting up the knife to slay his son, He proved Abraham's absolute confidence in Him: "Now know I that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from Me." So far from there being any mistake, it was written large in history that God hated the heathen and devilish sacrifice of sons or daughters, and that what He desired was the unquestioning obedience of faith in Himself. "Shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul? He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Micah vi. 7, 8).

We shall be glad of other illustrations to the same effect. M.

N.E. LONDON GOSPEL MISSION.

An eight days' mission has been held at the Balls' Pond Hall of this Mission, by Mr. Edward T. Parker. Much interest was awakened, and good numbers came each evening. A largely attended closing meeting was held on Sunday, when many appeared truly awakened, and the workers were permitted to see a goodly number confess Christ. The Sunday-school has received blessing, and the teachers have been encouraged by many of their scholars being converted. Mr. Parker hopes to spend the next three months at the Millwall branch of the Mission, and prayer is asked that much blessing may attend his labours in this difficult neighbourhood. Mr. Chorley has renewed his tenancy of the former Salvation Army barracks here, which holds about 400 souls, and is the largest hall on the Isle of Dogs.

Mr. Alexander Clark, formerly of the Evangelistic Mission, has been appointed to the care of the Gospel work at Cubitt Town, where a much-prospered work is being carried on, only crippled from further expansion by the size of the premises. The hall and five class-rooms are outgrown entirely. Mr. Chorley has ground behind the hall whereon to erect more class-rooms, and also enlarge the hall, were the means available.

WALTHAMSTOW.—Folkestone Hall, the principal scene of the evangelistic labours of the late Mr. Thomas Morris, who died in Africa, has been crowded in every part on recent Sunday evenings with about a thousand people, to whom Mr. Russell Hurditch preached with gracious help from on high. Large numbers remained at each after-meeting, and several very interesting cases of conversion of young and old came under the notice of the workers, while the general interest in these services appears to be wide and deep, for which praise is rendered to the Lord. Mr. Hurditch will preach again on Thursday (7.30), and Sunday evening next (6.30).

LONDON WORKING LADS.—Twelve months since an Institute was opened in connection with Regent's-park Chapel, N.W., for the purpose of bringing poor working lads under Christian influence, by giving them a place where they could spend their evenings out of the streets, and away from the public-house bar and worse places. The Stanhope-street Board Schools were rented and opened every night in the week, there being a capital gymnasium provided, and the class-rooms for reading, games, and technical instruction given voluntarily by young men connected with the chapel. As the result, writes Rev. F. B. Meyer, there has been a total membership of 800 youths, with an average attendance of 200; the weekly payments have largely met all the working expenses, apart from the rent; the public-houses, formerly frequented, are deserted, and the work of the police materially lightened. Some of the tradesmen around have gladly helped by donations, because the streets are so much quieter. A great change has passed over some of the worst lads of the district, many of whom are now in a temperance society. Some of the lads have also commenced to attend the Sunday services at the chapel.

EDINBURGH.—Last Sabbath evening Rev. Dr. Whyte addressed the meeting in connection with the Grassmarket Mission. He preached an eloquent sermon from Romans v. 20, which left a deep impression on a congregation numbering about 240 of the poorest people in Edinburgh.

"Thy Kingdom Come."

By Rev. JOHN SMITH, M.A.*

Everywhere men are bestirring themselves in the endeavour to create a future transcending the past. And many who have only their own dim guesses by which to guide their steps, are exhibiting a true heroism, and an intense devotion, which might put many Christians to shame. Should not we at such an hour be displaying an unprecedented enthusiasm? For we occupy quite different ground from the advocates of any humanitarian reform. We stand on the rock-foundation of a common faith. God is in our midst. We are his servants, carrying out his eternal will. And God's infinitude is behind us while we toil.

Still more, what we help on is no dream of man's, which at any hour may be dissipated into air; but that purpose of the Divine mind which, conceived before the world was, and developing from the earliest centuries of time, has met and surmounted every opposing barrier, rising to vaster predominance through each fresh struggle which it has undergone. And in the womb of this comprehensive purpose, as past centuries testify, is included all possible good for man, good for the individual, good for the nation, good for body as for soul, social and public, as well as inward and spiritual regeneration and peace. And we are bound to this service of humanity and of God by the bond of an unspeakable personal obligation.

When, then, as to-day, Christ calls us, standing by his side, his brothers redeemed, to share with Him in the filial task of glorifying the Father's name—when He puts into our lips, in this petition, the very breathing of his own heart—shall we not seek to be possessed with a Christ-like enthusiasm? God grant we may. God grant that by the very magnitude of the enterprise we may be driven into closer personal contact with our Lord, and into fuller personal soul-surrender to the Father, whose sons we are in Christ. Then the coming of the kingdom will be the very apple of our eye, the joy of our souls, the centre of all our thoughts, the unseen yet real goal of all our activities. Then our gifts will flow into the mission treasury in an unstinted stream. Then our desire will be irrepressible to advance by every means in our power, and to the utmost limit of our power, the cause of Christ. Then we shall see hindering barriers of ecclesiastical division giving way under the resistless pressure of Christian love.

Then, even in these latter days, there shall come to a dismembered Christendom something of the glory of its prime, as, united in an Apostolic fellowship, the churches, one in heart and in practical purpose, press on to victory. Then, when along the whole line of battle we have no longer divided counsels, and mutual suspicion, and all the useless reprisals of the sects, but one common purpose resolved on and being executed with unfaltering decision by the Universal Church, one at last in a common service of the King—then the prayer of our text will come near being realised, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God.

* These paragraphs form the conclusion of a thoughtful and inspiring discourse, preached in Broughton-place U.P. Church, Edinburgh, and published under the title of "Thy Kingdom Come," by Andrew Elliot, 17, Princes-street, Edinburgh.

God in Nature.

A startling paradox of the times is this—a bold, assuming infidelity, on the one hand, which has tried to persuade itself that chance rather than God has originated all things; and, on the other, a phalanx of great scientific investigators, who are at once believers in God and in the inspiration of the Scriptures. Doubtless there are those whose elucidation of nature has been swayed by a bias which has been immeasurably injurious to the age. Happily the rebellion against materialism and a Godless theory of the origin of species is setting in strongly. "The majority," as, on high authority, it is affirmed, of scientific leaders are joining in the reaction.

Among the books of those who, as interpreters of nature, cordially accept the Christian faith, may be mentioned a volume recently sent forth by Dr. Pritchard, F.R.S., Savilian Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge.* It contains addresses delivered before members of the British Association and Church Congresses. Its main teaching is that God is everywhere in Nature, and that there is nothing outside Him; that irrefutable proofs of design multiply as the physical universe is more carefully and widely explored; that the Darwinian hypothesis, which refers the wonders of creation to merely natural causes, is becoming increasingly untenable; and that in such phenomena as the elementary molecules, the structure of the human eye (with its lenses, curved surfaces, densities of media), and the brain of man, the characteristics are those of articles manufactured, and are such as demand the intervention and action of an intelligent will. It maintains that no amount of time, consistent with the requirements of astronomical knowledge, can set aside the weight of present philosophical authority which everywhere finds incontestable evidences of a contriving will and a pre-established harmony.

The treatise wisely lays stress on the fact that since the evidences for Christianity are not, and cannot be, mathematically demonstrative, they are a test of the bias of man's will. Their probability ceases to satisfy only where there is an exclusive cultivation of one side of man's complex nature; or the pre-occupation of position, ambition, money-getting, conceit, or sensual habits. It insists upon this—that there is a continuity between the scheme of Nature and that of Revelation; they both show signs of proceeding from one Author, and we may, with our present limited faculties, expect to find difficulties in the one as much as in the other. "I for one," says Dr. Pritchard, "entertain as strong a conviction of the substantial veracity of the Gospel histories as I do of the Newtonian theory of gravitation; and I am not more staggered at the wonders recorded in the life of Christ than I am at what I read in the constitution and motions of the stars." "I look into the vistas of the ages that are past, and I read in the evolution of our world, and its rich stores of materials laid up, a beneficent intention that in the slow fulness of time, an intelligent being such as man should there find a habitation fitted by the Divine hand for his abode and development." "In like manner the stately march through the universe of our sun and its system of worlds, and the fact now made manifest that other systems contain the very necessary elements which were ages back laid up for man, go to indicate that we are being borne on into new circumstances, new forces, and hitherto unknown resultants, which will fulfil what holy Scripture has promised, and more wonderfully reveal the forethought of the great Creator."

Such a book might be usefully placed in the hands of tempted young men; and while these lines are being written, The Universal Review, just published (April 15), is seen to contain a remarkable paper, entitled, "The Deadlock in Darwinism." It maintains that the two distinguished men who have written on "Natural Selection," Mr. Wallace and Mr. Darwin, were misled, and have been most mischievously misleading the age; that their theory, which so many have accepted, is demonstrably false; that the triumph of its opponents is sure; and that the older view of evolution, which dates back to the time of Buffon, 1756, and which saw God in nature's processes, vivifying and indwelling in all his creatures, must again be regarded as the only possible philosophy.

Surely this rebellion against the materialism that has sought to persuade recent times that the universe was without a Designer, or with an unknown God, who has never revealed Himself; and has thus sought to give us a system of life without the moral sanctions of Scripture, and without hope, is a fact of the deepest import, and one for which Christian men must give adoring thanks to the Lord. BIBLE NURSES FOR FRANCE.

About three years ago Madame Dalencourt held meetings in this country on behalf of a small organisation for the training of Bible-women nurses in Paris. The report of the Committee in England, appointed amongst the Society of Friends to aid Madame Dalencourt, records considerable progress in securing and training suitable workers. The present little Home for Bible-women is near this estimable lady's house at Boulogne-sur-Seine; but, as she has to remove to Paris shortly, and larger accommodation is really required, she has arranged to take a flat in the house next to the one in which she will reside. Five likely women are now under her influence, besides a work-helper, who has been acting as a Bible-woman under her direction for nearly five years.

The need for these Bible-women nurses in Paris and elsewhere is growingly felt. The means at the disposal of the Committee are at present meagre, and consequently those under training are very few; but the hope is cherished that the small beginning will be so blessed that it may grow, and become more and more fruitful to the Lord's praise.

Mrs. Henry Fowler, South Woodford, Essex, on behalf of the Ladies' Committee, will forward a report of the work for last year, to any who desire it.

BRIGHTON AND SOUTHERN COUNTIES' EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE.—The first anniversary was celebrated a few days ago, when Mr. W. J. Smith presided over a largely attended public meeting at Brighton. From the report it appeared that during the year Mr. J. Wills, the missioner, held twenty-two missions, while other members of the Crusade laboured in various spheres. The work was done in connection with churches of different denominations, and with the hearty co-operation of ministers in town and country. Hundreds of people have professed to find Christ. It is proposed to extend the movement by employing two other missioners.

India's Blood Money.

The reader scarcely needs to be told that our heading refers to the six millions sterling or so that the Indian Government annually raises out of the miseries of those in China and elsewhere who drown sorrow and conscience in the Indian-grown poppy drug. We wish to draw attention to an important article on "The Opium Revenue: how to replace it," in the current issue of National Righteousness.* Mr. Mathieson's remedy is such as a Christian patriot might be expected to advocate; but we greatly fear it is altogether too heroic for adoption by any British Government, apart from the strongest moral pressure from without. Before that pressure can be applied there will have to be the creation, throughout the country, and especially among the Christian churches, of a deep sentiment and feeling of responsibility for the enormous national sin we have been guilty of these many years. The pulpit might do much if it were set on fire on this subject; but that seems a long way off.

Mr. Mathieson thinks the fact that the Indian civil and military services are so attractive to many scions of the upper middle classes in England, constitutes a grave difficulty. He advocates the filling of certain posts by well-educated and properly-qualified natives, who would live on greatly diminished incomes; a reform in this direction, he contends, cannot be long resisted. If the feelings of the native princes were conciliated, there could also be great reductions in military expenditure. The bulk of the deficiency that would result from a removal of the opium revenue must, however, be directly met by the taxpayers of Great Britain, and Mr. Mathieson suggests that this could easily be achieved by an addition to the home income-tax. The article was, of course, written long before the budget arrangements were made public, and Mr. Mathieson has learned before now that for the present year at any rate his plan has no chance of adoption. Still we do not regret that he has put it forward, and can but hope that it may form the text for many expositions and exhortations up and down the land by those who feel the importance of the question. We heartily agree with Mr. Mathieson that the moral muscle of the nation needs to be exercised by the accomplishment of some such grand achievement in well-doing. But it is hopeless to expect this, unless the followers of Jesus Christ lead the way in pressing it on the consciences of their fellow-countrymen.

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.—Mr. D. Sinclair, who writes from Trafico Terro-Carril Gran Veste Argentino, Mendoza Estacion, Argentine Republic, says there is a wide and hopeful field there for the circulation of tracts, Scriptures, &c. He is filling a business appointment, and seeks in his spare time to scatter Gospel truth among the people. Spanish or Italian tracts, and also a few in German and French, would be very helpful. He would be thankful for some copies of Mr. Hastings's "Inspiration of the Bible" in Spanish. As an instance of the eagerness of the people to know the truth, Mr. Sinclair tells of a young man who borrowed his Spanish Bible for two days, in order to read it to a brother paying him a visit. This was the fruit of a tract previously handed to him.

Preach Christ!

The following is an extract from the admirable chapter on "The Moral Sphere of Ministerial Work," in Dean Lefroy's recent book, The Christian Ministry.

To those who have eyes to see Him, Christ is the Light of all the ages, even as He is the Light of all Scripture; be it historical, or ritual, or martial, or proverbial, or poetical, or predictive, each receives illumination from the Sun of our souls. And he who preaches Christ, as Christ is preached in the Scriptures, can never be reproached with the sin of sectarianism; can never be charged with a narrowness which practically disparages a vast amount of the revelation of God; can never be guilty of the blood of men; can never be dwarfed by the reactionary influences which always take revenge upon a preacher of Divine truth, by making him the antitype of his dwarfed declaration.

For the salvation of the souls of men; for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ; for the glory and for the praise of God, preach Christ. Your message will never lack variety. There is not a field of thought or of enterprise which He has not touched. Do you want to preach creation? Then preach Christ, for "without Him was not anything made that was made" (John i. 3). Do you want to preach philosophy? Then preach Christ, who "is the wisdom of God" (1 Cor. i. 24). Do you want to preach the unity of the human race as the conclusion of ethnology; or the limitations of national boundaries; or the reign and the ruin of empires; or the dependence of the meanest and of the mightiest upon a sovereign will? Then preach Christ, "who hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation" (Acts xvii. 26).

Above all, preach Him as the sole expression of the love of God; as the unique and accepted and final Propitiation for the sins of the whole world; as the Life and as the Light of men; as the "Head of the Church, which is his Body." Thus will his commissioned ambassador be faithful to the contents of that revelation with which he is entrusted.

ENGLISH PRISONERS IN FRANCE.

The Maison Centrale, of Poissy, near Paris, is a prison containing about 150 Protestant inmates, among whom there are always sure to be several Englishmen. There is no society in France corresponding to those in England having for their object the assisting of discharged prisoners to return to the paths of honesty and virtue.

Pasteur Alfred Gary, the chaplain of the prison, has for years given attention to English as well as other inmates. It cannot be said that the authorities have facilitated or encouraged the work. The demands upon the time and resources of M. Gary have not diminished with time, but the Government grant has been so reduced of late that he has been compelled to appeal to British Christians to join with those of France in supplementing the grant of £32 per annum. M. Gary not only visits the prisoners and instructs them in religious truth; he writes to their families, and is sometimes impelled to help them financially.

The work is very trying, and it is a pity that it should be so little considered by the millions who happily know nothing of prison life. M. Gary's address till April 26 is 8, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.; his address in France is 6, Rue de Labordère, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Paris.

The First Epistle of Peter.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's Park Chapel.

XXXI.—THE CALL TO ETERNAL GLORY.

1 Peter v. 10.

What a contrast is presented between the attacks referred to in the previous verses, and the all-sufficient grace, which lies as a great depth beneath this!

Why should we fear the attacks of the great adversary of souls, so long as the God of all grace is ours? There is no kind of grace we can need, which does not reside in Him; yea, grace on grace, so that when one supply is exhausted there is always more to follow. And the attacks of Satan are, perhaps, permitted that we may be constrained to realise and avail ourselves of the stores of grace which are treasured up in Jesus Christ our Lord. "In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and in Him ye are made full" (Col. ii. 9, 10, R.V.).

Edinburgh Castle, perched on its grey crags, is said to have been captured only once, by a shepherd leading a small storming party up the precipitous western cliffs, which had been left undefended because deemed to be inaccesible. And yet there was benefit even in that apparent disaster, because it indicated a weak spot in the defences for all after time, and led to a more perfect line of fortification. So we may be thankful when temptation assails us, indicating some point of our character which needs immediate attention, and summoning us to look into the Divine storehouse for some special and unrealised form of grace, which from that moment is claimed and appropriated by the exercise of faith.

It is an exceedingly beautiful title: "The God of all grace!" Illuminating grace for the seeker; justifying grace for the believer; comforting grace for the bereaved and sorrowful; strengthening grace for the weak and downtrodden; sanctifying grace for the unholy; living grace, and dying grace. Bring hither the pitchers of your need. The grace of God, which is his unmerited love, will conform itself to their special shape, and will seem to be just fitted to your exigencies and requirements. The ocean is known by several names, according to the shores it washes, and its very tints vary with the shades of the rocks that line the margin of its bed; but it is the same ocean, and its waters are identical in every place. So is it ever the same love of God, though each needy one discovers and admires its special adaptation to his need. "The God of all grace."

(1) Our Destiny.—It is almost too marvellous to credit, and yet it must be so, that He has called us unto his eternal glory. He is the giver of all grace, and He calls us to all his glory. We therefore stand in his grace, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God (Rom. v. 2).

We shall ere long behold that glory which is just the shining forth, in all their loveliness, of the manifested attributes of the ever-blessed God. This was our Saviour's request, which carried with it the certainty of realisation. "Father," He said, "I will that they whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am, that they may behold my glory." Not on his back parts only shall we look, as Moses did, as the procession swept down the mountain pass; nor for so transient a moment as the disciples beheld his glory when they were with Him on the Holy Mount; but face to face, in prolonged and stedfast fellowship. The Queen of Sheba, contrasting her brief visit to Solomon's court with the lot of his servants who lived there, broke into exclamations of envy at their lot. "Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants which stand continually before thee." Conceive then what our lot is to be through endless ages!

Nor shall we behold it only; we shall share it.—"The glory which Thou gavest me I have given them." Co-heirs with Jesus in all that He has won through his humiliation and death. Sharers in his unsearchable riches; participators in his unspeakable and triumphant joy; one with him in a unity, which in its mystic circle weaves the Deity itself into oneness with redeemed men. "That they may be one even as we are one, I in them and Thou in me, that they may be perfect in one."

And this glory is eternal, not as to the length, but as to the quality of it. For it is difficult to speak of the successions of time, when considering that state of being from which time is expressly eliminated. The word certainly means more than never-ending being. It involves conceptions of the imperishable, the untainted, the altogether satisfying, the Divine. Bread, of which if a man eats, the vast appetite of his spirit is sufficed. Joy, of which he can never tire. Knowledge, which is beclouded by no limiting mystery. Life, which reaches to all the lengths and breadths and depths and heights of that spirit which God has made in the image of his own. Glory, which will meet and far surpass the loftiest desires and anticipations which have ever extorted from some elect spirit of our race the cry, "I beseech Thee, show me thy glory."

Tell us not, then, of jasper walls, or golden streets, or flashing jewels. These will no more suffice us than jewels will compensate the bride for the absence of her lord. We are set on attaining the glory to which God has called us in Jesus. And by his dear grace we shall attain it, too, for we have already received his grace, which is glory in the bud. Nor would our God mock us with the foretaste and earnest unless He were prepared to consummate all his grace with all his glory.

Oh, who will heed this call, which is yet sounding through the world, but which may soon cease? Surely the sons of men cannot realise what obedience to it involves. They think more of what they must give up than of what they are to receive. But if they would reverse this process, and think more of what they are certain to receive in Jesus Christ, methinks they would leave all else, without one anxious thought, in order to follow whither such delights entice.

II. Our Pathway Thither.—"After that ye have suffered for a little while." Suffering is inevitable. Through much tribulations we must pass to our reward on high. No cross, no crown; no Gethsemane, no Easter-dawn; no cup of sorrow, no chalice of joy; no cry of forsakenness, no portion with the great, or spoil with the strong. All who suffer are not necessarily glorified; but none are glorified who have not somehow suffered. We must drink of his cup, and be baptized with his baptism, if we would sit right and left of the King. The comet that stands longest nearest to the sun must have plunged furthest into the abyss.

Let sufferers take heart! If only their sufferings are not self-inflicted; if they did not result from their own mistakes and sins; if they arise from that necessary antagonism to sin and the present world into which close following of the Crucified must necessarily bring any one of us; if they are borne, not only submissively, but with the heart's choice, as of those that delight to do the will of God—then each pang is a milestone marking their way onwards to the goal of light and glory.

Suffering is necessary to our characters.—The Apostle does not for a moment wish his converts spared from the ordeal. Nothing short of necessity would ever lead God to expose us to the fire. But in no other way can our truest bliss be achieved. In no other school-house are the lessons of obedience so acquired as in that kept by Sorrow. The Lord Himself was once a scholar there, and carved his name on the hard and comfortless boards. In no other ordeal can we lose so much dross, drop so much chaff, learn so much of our own nothingness, be drawn so close to his companionship, or be taught such true estimates of the comparative values of things, weighing the present against the future, till we feel that it is not worthy to compared with the glory to be revealed.

Suffering is limited.—At the most, it is for but a little while. Remember how often the Lord Jesus repeated the words, it is only "a little while" (John xvi. 19). It was a note on which his fingers lingered, as if loath to leave it. Compared with all the future, the longest life of suffering is only for a moment; and, contrasted with the weight of glory, the heaviest trials are light. Let us not look at the things which are seen, but at those which are not seen. The hills which would daunt the traveller seem diminutive when they are seen lying about the feet of some soaring Alp. Weeping can only stay for the brief summer night, and in the early twilight must hasten veiled away, because joy cometh in the morning, bringing the herald-beam of the long, happy summer day, on which night can never fall or draw her dusky veil.

When once that glory breaks upon us, the separations, and misunderstandings, and agonies of time will be no more remembered than a pin's prick is recalled by the soldier on the day of his public welcome and decoration.

> And when we gain the shore at last,
> Who shall count the billows past?

III. Our Nurture in the Divine Life.—All our hope must be in God. We are not to concern ourselves to cope with the difficulties of our growth in grace, or to fret about what seems to be our slow progress. If only we are willing, trustful, and obedient, God will make Himself responsible for all the rest. "God shall Himself perfect, stablish, strengthen you" (R.V.).

He shall perfect, i.e., put you in joint, so that his will may work through you, without let or hindrance, as the will of each human being operates consciously through any part of our marvellous nature.

He shall stablish, i.e., founding you so massively on the Rock of the person and work of the Lord Jesus, that when the rain descends, and the floods come, and the winds blow, and beat upon you, you may not fall, because rooted and grounded in Him.

He shall strengthen—i.e., He may not take away the suffering or the temptation, but He will give more grace, communicating his own strength, so that the soul may even glorify God for infirmity and trial, and say gladly: "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

How safe and strong then may we be, if only we will go again and again to the God of all grace, claiming, with holy boldness, grace to help us in time of need; and believing that it is to us not according to our feeling but our faith. It is not probable that Elisha felt any different as He turned back from the chariot of fire, which had swept in between him and Elijah. He looked and felt as in the morning of that day, but a vast change had passed over him, which only awaited the River Jordan to call it forth into marvellous manifestation. So we may not be always conscious of the vast changes which are being gradually effected within us in answer to our faith; but when we approach the bank of some foaming river of difficulty or temptation, our behaviour and victory will open the lips of onlookers to exclaim, "Lo, God is here."

Let us give Him glory. Do not hesitate to tell Him what you think of Him. Amid all the hatred, and blasphemy, and misunderstanding of his foes, let us blend voice and heart in ascribing to Him glory and dominion for ever and ever. Let the notes rise higher and higher as life climbs up towards its goal; until they are merged in the ocean of praise, the billows of which smite against his throne, breaking into the spray of a thousand songs. Thus may it be "for ever and ever." Amen.

HOME OF INDUSTRY.

The usual monthly meeting of workers took place last week. During the tea hour it was pleasing to see so many friends meeting, and speaking together of their work for the Lord; of victories or failures; taking counsel together, and afresh girding themselves for service. Old veterans were there, and young ones just entering on their life mission. It was interesting to notice several members of missionary committees, here and there, questioning and exhorting the young candidates, who were anxious to be led forth for India, China, and North Africa. Some of these are being tested in the Home of Industry, while others came from the headquarters of the China Inland Mission, or the East London Institute.

From time to time bright Gospel songs were heard from the gathered family, which forms the nucleus of the sixtieth band of children to sail for Canada on June 5. Amongst the group were two little families, one numbering four, the other five children. In the latter case, the father is still alive, but in weak health, and hopelessly out of work. All had been sleeping on the bare boards, with scarcely a morsel of food to keep life in them. In the former case the little family are completely orphaned, with no one to look after them but an aunt with a number of children of her own, and an elder brother out of work, and himself looking starved out.

The upstairs meeting was presided over by Mr. C. Dobbin, and the address given by Mr. W. F. A. Archibald on "The Power of Christian Influence." Mr. G. Simons, an active worker of the Deep Sea Mission, gave a very interesting account of the progress of that work. Two ladies bade farewell, who are shortly going out under the North Africa Mission. The closing speaker was Miss Radcliffe, who had just arrived to hold a ten days' mission among the various classes of men and women connected with the Home of Industry.

Mr. Gladstone

On "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture."

By R. ANDERSON, LL.D.

The personages who hold absolutely the foremost place on the world's stage are few. The young German Emperor and the veteran Prince Bismarck, Queen Victoria, and Mr. Gladstone, are names that at once suggest themselves. Every country could swell the list with others of national renown, and a few might be cited of European celebrity. But when we speak of world-wide fame, it would not be easy to add a fifth to the names already specified. That, amidst the toil and turmoil of a great political campaign, one of this number should, in his ripe old age, step out into the arena as a champion of faith, is a fact that has scarcely received the notice it deserves. Mr. Gladstone's article on "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture," in this month's Good Words, has been regarded by many in much the same way as they would notice some new feat achieved by a popular giant. But it is an epoch-making treatise, first as a declaration of his unswerving belief in the sacred volume as "a house builded upon a rock, and that rock impregnable"; and, secondly, as popularising questions of criticism which have hitherto concerned only the learned.

His apology for entering on the task he has set himself is as characteristic as it is graceful; but it is really unnecessary. The most cultured of Hebraists, just like the most accomplished of violinists or mathematicians, may be wanting in the judicial faculty. Indeed, it is not the rule, but the rare exception to find a specialist who is noted for power of judgment. In our law-courts his evidence is valued in the witness-box, but his presence is never sought on the judgment-seat. There is no sphere in which this has been so much forgotten as in that of Biblical criticism. Professor Blank, whose knowledge of Hebrew, and of the MSS. of the Pentateuch, is unsurpassed, is by no means as well fitted to form a judgment upon the great questions which his researches have suggested, as is Mr. Justice Blank, who, though ignorant of the Hebrew alphabet, enjoys the highest reputation for his experience and skill in dealing with the evidence of experts. A man of Mr. Gladstone's training is far better fitted than any mere specialist to deal with those problems of "Higher Criticism," which the specialists have arrogantly claimed as their own domain. Had he fearlessly recognised this, he would have challenged many of the conclusions which he has blindly accepted on the plea that being "without original means of judgment" he is "incompetent" to review them.

It is a truth for all time, and it is as true today as it ever was, that the great facts which are the burden of Revelation, are "hid from the wise and prudent," but "revealed to babes." Many there are, however, who, though clinging firmly to belief in Holy Scripture, are oppressed by fears that the labours of the critics have in some way undermined their faith; and such cannot fail to be reassured by Mr. Gladstone's apologia.

But his treatise suggests two criticisms which cannot be brought too prominently into notice. The first relates to the assumption which, unintentionally perhaps, pervades the article, that it is natural and right for the Christian to keep an open mind upon the questions which (so-called) higher criticism presents to the student of Scripture. This is greatly to be deprecated. A crisis may occur in the home life when stern facts demand that the virtue of a wife or a sister shall be rigidly investigated. But it is fitting at such a time to draw down the blinds, and retire from society until the ordeal is at an end. A house in which such a question is always open can never be in any true sense a home. Far more hopeless would be the state of a heart in which the truth of Christianity was continually in question. Some of us have passed through periods of suspense about the truth of Scripture, as terrible as if the fair fame of wife or mother had been in the balance. But as the result we are at rest in an intelligent conviction of the truth, which neither the quibbling nor the dogmatism of the critics can disturb. Just as the mind of a man who distrusts his wife is poisoned or upset by every passing rumour to her discredit, so the ordinary Christian gives heed to each new-fangled criticism which disparages the sacred volume, while the true believer is at rest in the calm confidence of his faith. And it may be added that a man who has devoted hours unnumbered to the patient and careful investigation of some of the chief problems which are the stock-in-trade of these critics, and has discovered their utter fallacy, is not easily moved by new problems of the same character.

The second criticism which the article invites is still more important and searching. "I embrace," Mr. Gladstone writes, "one of the great canons of modern criticism, which teaches us that the Scriptures are to be treated like any other book in the trial of their title." This much vaunted "canon of modern criticism" strikes at the very root of Christianity. Anyone who is versed in questions relating to property is aware how completely a Royal grant or an Act of Parliament disposes of every difficulty or seeming flaw in an ancient title. And in the same way the Christian has a certainty of the Divine authority of the Hebrew Scriptures, which raises him above the strife of modern criticism. He receives "the law and the prophets" from the hand of his Lord and Master, and the question, for example, whether the Book of Deuteronomy be a Divine revelation, does not depend upon the labours of the critics, but upon the Divinity of Christ. Albeit God dwelt in the midst of his people in the old time, their highest privilege, St. Paul declares, was not the Shekinah glory, but the sacred trust of the holy writings—"Unto them were committed the oracles of God." If adverse criticism has no other answer to make to this than that the oldest extant MSS. are nine centuries later than St. Paul, the answer needs no rejoinder. Not a single fact of cardinal importance, not a single doctrine of the faith, is affected by the difference between the Greek and the Hebrew Bible, and, as the Christian turns to the sacred page, he does so with certainty that, for all practical purposes of life and doctrine, he has before him what our blessed Lord described as "words proceeding out of the mouth of God"—what the inspired Apostle termed the "God-breathed Scriptures."

But all this is branded as ignorant cant in a flippant and materialistic age. The claim to transcendental faith puts one outside the sphere of classic literature. These problems must be discussed upon ground chosen by the unbeliever, or not at all. "The Scriptures are to be treated, like any other book, in the trial of their title." Rather than pander thus to the insolence of unbelief, let us cherish the enthusiasm of faith, and say, with Dr. Pusey, "The Bible is God's Word, and through it God the Holy Ghost, who spake it, speaks to the soul which closes not itself against it."

JESUS A FRIEND OF SINNERS.

The best of our actions may become the worst of our accusations. It was true, in some sense, that Christ was a friend to publicans and sinners, the best friend they ever had; for He came into the world to save sinners, great sinners, even the chief. So he said (1 Tim. i. 15) very feelingly, who had been himself not a publican and a sinner, but a Pharisee and a sinner. But this is and will be to eternity Christ's praise; and they forfeited the benefit of it who thus turned it to his reproach.

Matthew Henry (Matt. xi. 19).

PREACHERS, TAKE HEED!

Many a preacher is now in hell who hath a hundred times called upon his hearers to use the utmost care and diligence to escape it. Can any reasonable man imagine that God should save men for offering salvation to others, while they refused it themselves? and for telling others those truths which they themselves neglected and abused? Many a tailor goes in rags, that maketh costly clothes for others; and many a cook scarce licks his fingers, when he hath dressed for others the most costly dishes. God never saved any man for being a preacher, nor because he was an able preacher; but because he was a justified, sanctified man, and consequently faithful in his Master's work.—Baxter.

HIDDEN THINGS.

Observe the rain: it falls on mountain slopes, collects in rills, combines in streams and rivers, hides underground, bubbles in fountains; and now—leaping in music—cuts new channels; and, finding a way to the desert, gladdens the barren ground with fruitful beauty. The blessing is distilled out of invisible watery particles which ascended from the earth to render heaven beneficent.

There is a secret affinity between the lightning of heaven and the conductor which brings it down to the earth, between the steel and the magnet; why not between man and God? Our spirit, indeed, lays hold of the Divine will, and draws out a blessing by being itself drawn to God. A hidden work—but we feel and know it well. It changes earthly thoughts into heavenly ideas, turns flesh into spirit, carries our prayers to heaven, and brings down angels to bless our heart and home.

Prebendary Reynolds.

In Eastern Lands—Syria.

By GAWIN KIRKHAM.

With regard to the Lord's work in Syria, a prominent place must be given to the British Syrian Schools, founded thirty years ago by Mrs. Bowen Thompson, after the terrible massacres, when so many Christians were killed by Moslems and Druses. There are now twenty-nine different schools in localities far apart, such as Beyrout, Damascus, Mount Lebanon; Anti-libanus, Zachleh, Cæle Syria, and Tyre. About are under instruction in twenty-nine schools by eighteen European agents and ninety-seven native teachers. The only places where I was privileged to see something of this good work were Damascus, Baalbek, and Beyrout. At Baalbek a new building has just been erected which is the most pretentious structure in the town. The white stone, neatly executed, gives the exterior a very chaste appearance, and the sloping roof, with its red tiles, is unique, as all the other buildings have flat roofs, according to the dominant custom in Palestine and Syria. The site is roomy and good, and the background as striking as could well be imagined, consisting of the world-renowned ruins of the Temple of the Sun, and the fine range of Lebanon, about fifteen miles away, covered with pure new-fallen snow.

Miss Pollard, the lady superintendent, has held the fort in this, the most northern of the Society's stations, for seven or eight years, and has recently been joined by Miss Butlin, who visits among the people, and dispenses medicine, part of the new premises being fitted up for a Medical Mission. The success of this school provoked the authorities to open another, and then from attending this. Consequently about one hundred and fifty Moslem children were withdrawn, and are only coming back by degrees. So that at the time of my visit only about fifty were present; but it was very interesting to hear them sing in English and Arabic, and to close the morning school by repeating the Ten Commandments, and the afternoon one by the Lord's Prayer. The native judge was pointed out to me who recently sent a father to prison for allowing his child to attend a school other than the Government one.

At Beyrout I was greatly charmed with the work of the British Syrian Schools, which, it is needless to say, are effectively conducted. Mrs. Mentor Mott is away in Egypt on account of her health, but she has left effective substitutes in the persons of her English helpers, five of whom I saw. How delightful it is to hear these children sing and speak in English! Many are being trained for teachers, and will be a great blessing to the country. About one hundred girls were gathered to hear me expound my picture; they gave answers in English, and turned up passages in the English Bible as readily as girls of their age in England would have done.

At Damascus I was privileged to have a glimpse of MISSION WORK FROM ITS SOCIAL SIDE.

Rev. J. G. Phillips, one of the staff of the Irish Presbyterian Mission, was celebrating the birthday of his eldest son, and, hearing that I was in the city, he requested me to expound my picture to his assembled guests. Seldom have I seen a more delightful gathering. There were pastors, and teachers, and friends, and elder scholars, and servants; some having tea in the house, but the majority feasting on a favourite native dish on the divan in the courtyard. Some of the guests were from the British Syrian Schools, including Miss Walker and Miss Butchert. What charming places these Oriental courtyards are! Here was a roomy space, paved with white marble, having a fountain in the centre, and vines and orange trees and flowers all around. One tree was loaded with fine oranges, and more hung over a neighbouring wall, where a number of children had gathered to watch the festive proceedings. The eighty persons I spoke to that day are exercising an influence for good, as is also the work of the London Jews' Society; but what are they all combined in a city containing 200,000 souls, mostly Moslems? Before leaving Jerusalem I met whose work at Kerak, in Moab, was recently mentioned in The Christian. What an heroic little woman she is! And how "the burden of Moab" weighs upon her! She had been six days in reaching Jerusalem, though Kerak can be seen from the city, away beyond the Dead Sea. But the slowness of travel and the difficulties in the way makes such a journey dangerous. She was taking back with her a young English lady, Miss Arnott, to help in the work. Let me beg the prayers of my readers for these devoted workers, who are accurately described in Judges v. 18: "A people that jeoparded their lives unto the death in the high places of the field."

At Tiberias we met a charming party of seven, three being ladies, and headed by Dr. David W. Torrance. They were taking an evening sail on the lake, and came ashore to inspect our camp. They work a medical mission in the interests of the Free Church of Scotland, commenced four or five years ago. In sailing up the lake the next day I noticed their new mission premises, rising in a good position by the old castle at the northern end of the town. Tiberias has a population of about 5000, of whom 4000 are Jews, many of whom, like their compatriots in Jerusalem, are fed by the hand of charity, which reaches them from foreign shores.

THE AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN MISSION

is great in Syria as in Egypt. It has not only schools and mission stations, but a Syrian Protestant College, a Theological Seminary, and a Medical Hall in Beyrout. Here nearly 200 students are being prepared for pastors and doctors, and it was a rare treat to be shown over the buildings, charmingly situate on an elevation overlooking the Mediterranean, by Dr. Daniel Bliss, the founder and president, who has been here thirty-four years. He is surrounded by an admirable staff of professors, &c., most of whom I met at a weekly prayer-meeting at the house of Dr. Dennis.

The Prussian Hospital is another institution I visited by invitation of Dr. Post. Here everything was the essence of neatness and order, while the Sisters were the essence of cheerfulness. How delighted the Sisters and nurses of an English hospital would be if their wards could be as easily supplied with flowers as these are!

In the street I met Dr. Dixon and Mr. Baron, on a tour in the interests of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, of whom there are 1500 in Beyrout in a population of 100,000; and in the hotel I met the Rev. George Mackie, who represents the Church of Scotland, which has had a Mission here for thirty years. Its operations include a school with 200 scholars.

I commend all these missions and schools in these Bible lands to the prayers of Christians at home. The workers are bravely battling with many difficulties, and greatly value the fellowship of those who are more favourably placed.

Beyrout, Syria.

Leeds Railway Mission.—An engine-driver, while returning thanks lately for Gospel papers sent to him, testifies to the blessing they have been, and pleads for more workers to supply the railway officials who are quite without these Gospel messages. Communications should be addressed to Mrs. Cambie, care of the Railway Mission, 18, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.; she will forward names of railway workers, with particulars.

EPILEPTIC CHILDREN IN SWEDEN.

By MADAME DE RAMSAY.

The dream of seven years has become a reality in regard to alleviating the sufferings of the most wretched of human beings next to the leprous—namely the epileptic children nursed in "The Hope" at Wilhelmsro. It took seven years (from 1867—1874) to prepare a place in 'Wilhelm's Memory" for the crippled and, diseased children whom we have nursed and still nurse here. Seven years had elapsed, and then Princess Eugenie began the second institution of the same kind, the Eugenie Home at Stockholm. Here we sent incurables gathered in "The Hope," in order to ensure to them and their equals in misfortune a permanent home.

Now, the worst cases of crippled and diseased in Sweden have found a sure resting-place; and that is the most glorious outcome of the Wilhelmsro work. But there was still more to be done for suffering children. The Princess could not give to those plans the attention she had bestowed on the others; she felt too weak to begin a new branch of work when the new scheme was last submitted to her in November, 1888. Scarcely five months later she had laid down her crown at her Saviour's feet and entered the palace of the King. Seven years (from 1882 till 1889) the suffering condition of our epileptic children had been brought under the notice of the people; many and many a time one hoped to have gained a friend with enough and willing to give them a home. But the desired need was not met. However, the founder of the first Cripples' Home at Wilhelmsro opened "The Hope" again for epileptics. It seemed a venturous undertaking; but the Lord has made the path so clear. The first child received was the protégée of our King Oscar, who felt the great necessity of such a home; and the first six children are all paid for. What, however, is to be done with the two hundred still uncared for? We take them in prayer to the throne of God, the Lord of mercy and compassion.

The Wilhelmsro property is now a refuge for four different classes of unfortunate children: (1) A school for idiots of good family, at "Ebenezer"; (2) incurable idiots showing no capacity to be taught, at "The Shadow"; (3) crippled and diseased at "Wilhelm's Memory"; (4) epileptic, at "The Hope." To all these we still would add an Infant Home for scrofulous little ones of the worst kind, in order to prevent, if possible, those inherited disaffections from developing fatal and incurable disease. In our beautiful garden we long to see strewn family cottages, where a smaller number of children, classed after the kind and degree of their cross, may be sheltered, loved, and taught, if not cured, until they can return to their own home circles, and become useful members of society. One has seen wondrous things with regard to the seventy-five cripples nursed in all these sixteen years at Wilhelmsro, and the hope is cherished of even greater things still!
—Evangelical Christendom.

TRYON HOUSE, CHELSEA, Y.W.C.A.—Feeling the strain and anxiety of fifteen years' work, Miss Ellis has been compelled to close this Home. The final report shows that the Lord has greatly owned the endeavour, and many will praise Him in eternity for blessing received in the Home.

MR. L. D. WISHARD is now in China, whence he proceeded from Calcutta. He will be returning to India again in November to further prosecute his inquiries respecting the opportunities for Christian work among the native university students. Madras and Calcutta are fixed upon already as places where the way seems open for such work. Mr. David McConaughy, Jun., is already established in the hearts of Madras students, and is beginning what will doubtless be a blessed work among them.

Billingsgate Christian Mission

It is now fourteen years since aggressive Christian work was begun in Billingsgate in connection with the London City Mission. Though many difficulties have been encountered, a living testimony for Christ has been sustained. Owing, however, to the fact that the work had no home that it could call its own, curtailment of effort has at one time and another become necessary, though monthly evangelistic services in the Subscription Rooms of the London Fish Trade Association have been regularly held, to the joy and encouragement of Christian salesmen and workmen alike. At last the Mission has a home and centre of which its promoters and friends may reasonably be proud. The new premises are situate opposite the market, and a noble pile they are. They proclaim war with Satan on ground which he has long dominated with little challenge; and, as they have gradually risen, many an enemy of God and servant of sin has, Judas-like, passed remark upon "this waste" of bricks and mortar—good money's worth! One salesman was heard to say that the promoters deserved "hanging" for putting up the building for "such a purpose." What better "purpose" than seeking the glory of God in the salvation of men? That is the aim and object of the Billingsgate Christian Mission.

Lord Kinnaird presided over the opening ceremony on Wednesday afternoon, last week. The proceedings were very hearty, addresses being delivered by Sir Henry Peek, Bart., Mr. H. W. Maynard, and Rev. B. Senior. A goodly number of friends looked over the place, which has involved an outlay of £5200. The ground floor and basement have been let for a post-office. On the first floor there is a mission-hall, capable of seating about 240 persons. There is, on the second floor, a large room, which will be utilised as a library and reading-room; while the upper portion of the building has been set apart for the use of the caretaker. As to light and ventilation, the buildings are all that could be desired, and the decorations and fittings are eminently suited to their purpose.

In the evening a public meeting was held, presided over by Mr. George Williams. Mr. A. Walters, the devoted hon. secretary, told the story of the Mission, showing that it has been one of against many odds. The Gospel in its purity has been preached, with the sympathetic co-operation of many friends; and it is proposed to continue the work in the same way, with sustained confidence that God will own his Word and bless the labours of his servants. There will be a weekly prayer-meeting—every Wednesday at 2 o'clock—at which any Christian workers will find a warm welcome. It will now be possible to develop the Mission in many ways, and one of the agencies will be the advocacy of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks. The hon. treasurer, Mr. W. H. Williamson, was full of joy at the success which God has vouchsafed to the prayerful endeavours of those who are seeking the good of the toilers in and about Billingsgate. Owing his own conversion to the Mission, he had no doubt that the work is distinctly of God. From the first there have been predictions among outsiders that the scheme would fail, but the uniform answer had been that God's work never fails. Mr. Williamson told the story of the enterprise, showing that Mr. F. A. Bevan, the esteemed president, had all through rendered indispensable assistance. As, however, only about £1260 has so far been received towards the building fund, the debt on the premises stands at £4000.

The Chairman gloried in the work—so very fruitful in the past, and so promising for the future. Dr. Neatby followed, invoking God's blessing upon the building. His prayer was that the workers would be endued with the power of the Holy Ghost. Mr. George Nokes was alternately humorous and serious in his address; and Mr. C. Russell Hurditch embodied in a short speech some ever opportune words on "Working for Christ." Mr. Bevan urged the strong claims of the Mission upon those who enjoy the fruit of the labour of Billingsgate men.

Several of the speakers rejoiced to recognise improvement in the speech and manners of many in the market, owing to the operations of the Mission. They expressed a hope that the time is not far distant when, as an epithet, the word "Billingsgate" will require antiquarian explanation. The day was a joyous season with the friends of the Mission. Its proceedings told of progress, but they also emphasised the great need for a forward move in a financial respect. Kind friends made contributions amounting to several hundreds of pounds to the building fund, but yet there is an urgent call for generous aid. We sincerely trust the grand work will soon be free from all embarrassment of debt.

Visiting France and Italy.

After a busy week in Paris, during which Dr. Pierson and his companions met with most satisfactory evidence of the healthy condition of the work of the McAll Missions, Miss De Broen's Mission, and other evangelistic agencies, they left for the South of France on Tuesday, April 8. That evening in Lyons an audience of some three hundred French people were addressed by Dr. Pierson in the French Protestant Church. The meeting had been arranged by M. Dubus, the McAll missionary, and was held in the church, because the mission-hall was too small. M. Dubus and his devoted wife and daughters are consecrated to the work, and earnestly seeking the conversion of souls to Christ. What they seek they find, and what they work for they obtain. God has given them souls for their hire.

Leaving Lyons on Wednesday morning the visitors passed down the valley of the Rhone to Marseilles. Here an interesting meeting was held in the afternoon at the hall of the Y.M.C.A., attended by half a dozen of the ministers, and by many of the active Christians, to hear Dr. Pierson speak upon missions. In the evening a Gospel meeting was attended at the McAll Mission-hall, presided over by M. Lenoir. The hall was well filled, and deep interest was manifested. One fine French workman professed to come into the light, and offered thanks in the after-meeting. He had been two years in Cardiff, and had learned to understand English there. He had also been awakened in meetings in Cardiff, and had for some time been seeking light. M. Lenoir has been much blessed in his work at Marseilles, and has had numbers of most interesting conversions.

Mr. C. E. Faithfull, the well-known English missionary to the sailors, was at the meeting at M. Lenoir's. He is prosecuting his work for the Master with energy and faithfulness, and seeking to win souls. The work of the McAll Mission in Marseilles, under the superintendence of M. Lenoir, promises great results.

From Marseilles, Nice and Mentone were visited. A very large meeting was addressed at the former city by Dr. Pierson, while Major Whittle went to Mentone, where the ordinary McAll meeting was looked in upon. Nearly one hundred were present, and all seemed interested. Rev. James Somerville and others addressed the meeting. The labours of Mr. Somerville in Mentone have been blessed of God to many of the English and American visitors, and a church building is about be erected for the use of his congregation.

Rome was reached on Saturday afternoon. On Sunday morning, Dr. Pierson preached the Gospel in Dr. Gray's Presbyterian Church, Via del Septembre. A large audience was present, and the service was deeply enjoyed by all. The text was from Romans i. 16: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ," &c. As an indication of the cosmopolitan character of Dr. Gray's audiences, the following ministers who were present might be mentioned: Dr. Philip Schaff, of New York; Dr. Lowry, of Pittsburg, Pa.; and Rev. George Wilson, of Edinburgh. In the afternoon Dr. Gray conducted a small party to the meeting of Italian soldiers conducted by Signor Capellini, in the hall of the Wesleyan Church. On the way we stopped in an old house, located in the Jewish quarter, not far from the new Garibaldi Bridge, which most of the authorities agree upon as the probable place where Paul lived in "his own hired house." It is crowded with tenants, but we obtained permission to read 2 Tim. iv., and have prayer in the room where Paul might possibly have been when he wrote his Roman letters. Those present there on that Sunday felt that Paul's Lord and Master was with them then, whether Paul had ever been on that spot or no.

At the soldiers' meeting, a deep impression was received of the reality of the work going on. Signor Capellini is a man of God, and the Holy Ghost is working through him. It would be hard to over-estimate the value of his work in the evangelisation of Italy. It should be prayed for and helped by all who love the Lord. At the meeting on Sunday night, about one hundred fine intelligent soldiers were present. There was life in their active and earnest leader, and life in the meeting. Dr. Pierson and another member of his party addressed the soldiers. After the addresses every man in the room arose, as testifying that he had received Christ, or that he wished to receive Christ. Nothing seen in Italy has more interested the visitors than this work among the soldiers. Signor Capellini is very desirous to have a Soldiers' Home in Rome.

On Sunday evening a large and representative gathering of pastors and workers gathered in the rooms of Dr. Young to hear addresses from Rev. Evan Hopkins, Dr. Pierson, and others. One could not but be impressed with the air of expectancy of blessing that seemed to pervade the place. The workers here are looking for great things to be done in Rome. On every hand there are tokens for good. The Waldensian Church is meeting with success in attracting to the preaching of Christ many of the better and thoughtful class of Italians. Pastor Conti is keeping up the work in Father Gavazzi's old field. Mr. and Mrs. Wall have full meetings of the poorer classes nearly every night. And so there are cheer and activity all along the line. Let Christians everywhere pray for Rome. The Pope and his clergy are very morose and unhappy over the state of things, and very bitter against the popular and patriotic King Humbert. There seems no prospect of any reconciliation, but a wider separation between Prince and Pope, with the people unmistakably on the side of the Prince.

The meetings this week for the deepening of spiritual life, conducted by Pastor Theo. Monod and Rev. Evan H. Hopkins, have been wonderfully well attended, and are being blessed of God to many souls.

Dr. Pierson and party go from Rome to Naples, returning for a missionary meeting on the coming Sabbath, and then going on to Florence, Venice, Milan, and the Vaudois Valley. God is owning the missionary messages of Dr. Pierson, and is blessing the Gospel word that is given as opportunity arises, even with all the disadvantages of interpretation and lack of knowledge of the people. Nothing could exceed the Christian love and kindness shown to the friends in every place they have visited, both by the English-speaking workers and by the French and Italian Christians.

Rev. F. Brown, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, Tientsin, China, would be glad of English tracts for distribution among foreigners in China; and also Chinese Scripture cards, such as Mrs. Grimké's.

THE RAILWAY MISSION.

By the kind invitation of Mr. T. A. Denny, a drawing-room meeting was held at 7, Connaught-place, on Thursday last week, on behalf of this excellent work. A good representation of workers and friends assembled to thank God for his blessing on their efforts in the past, and to ask direction and take counsel for the future. Mr. R. Nixon, the secretary, said that success continued to attend the work in all its departments. For this more credit, humanly speaking, was due to the ladies than to anyone else. The more he travelled about the country on inspection visits, the more convinced he was of the necessity of extending the scope of the work. By no other agency could the message of the Saviour be brought to bear so effectively on railway-men. Of the many instances of progress that had come under his observation, he mentioned one place where, out of a staff of one hundred and twenty men, there have been forty conversions in the course of five years. Workers are urgently required at many places, and particularly at such important centres as Swindon, Crewe, and Derby. Besides the home calls, there are pressing invitations from Burmah, India, and South America, for railway evangelists. Mr. Nixon earnestly hoped that many would come forward to engage in this cause.

Mrs. Gates, of Brighton, gave a most cheering record of progress at that station. The varied meetings are well attended. She found example to be a very potent factor in conversion. A man noted for his profanity, on being invited to attend a meeting on one occasion, blasphemously invoked a frightful fate upon himself if ever he did enter beneath the roof. That man, through God's dealings with him, became converted; another official declared it was the marked change he noticed in the life and conduct of the former that induced him to become a Christian. An interesting feature at Brighton is the visiting of the sick, which is often attended with the happiest results. Mrs. Gates showed that Christian liberality as well as Christian activity in diffusing the Gospel has been extraordinarily developed. As to the honesty which now prevailed, she had no hesitation in stating her belief that the Mission saved the railway companies many pounds annually.

Several railway-men then gave interesting narratives of their conversion, and of their subsequent experience in bringing their associates to Jesus.

Mr. Samuel G. Sheppard said lady workers are greatly needed at the Cape. He pointed out the fact that there are 400,000 railway-men throughout the kingdom to work upon. If railway directors only realised what the Railway Mission did for the protection of their property and for the safety of their passengers, they would not hesitate in doing all that is possible to promote it.

Mr. Denny, who had throughout diffused a homelike feeling among the assembled friends, briefly summed up, and pleasantly but impressively urged ladies who had plenty of money, abundant leisure, and every qualification for the duty, to come forward as volunteer workers in this great business of spreading the Gospel among the workers on our railways.

FOUR CONFERENCES

have been held within the last month, in connection with this Mission, at various centres. The first took place at Edinburgh. It commenced with a meeting of the ladies' auxiliary, which has been formed to send The Railway Signal and Gospel literature to railway-men in Scotland. Then followed a delegates' conference; at which most encouraging reports were received from various branches. Later on a meeting was held to consider the best means of extending the Mission in Scotland. In the evening a large gathering was held in Queen-street Hall, presided over by Lord Polwarth, who spoke very warmly in support of the Mission. Rev. Dr. Whyte, Provost Colville (Motherwell), and Mr. R. Nixon, general secretary, also addressed the meeting.

The second conference took place at Manchester. A large number of delegates gave encouraging reports of work, and a public meeting was presided over by Mr. F. W. Crossley. There were also Gospel meetings, at the last of which twelve souls professed to trust Christ.

On April 18, delegates from London branches met for conference at New Cross, when interesting accounts of work were given. The last series of meetings was held at Tunbridge Wells on the same day. At a conference of delegates and workers several cases of conversion were reported. An appeal was made by Mr. Nixon for more lady workers throughout the country. In the evening a large meeting was held in the Great Hall.

These conferences and gatherings will, it is hoped, have good results in extending the Mission, and also in obtaining for it the widespread and generous support from the public which it so well deserves.

HACKNEY Y.M.C.A.

At the annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A., 275, Mare-street, Hackney, on Wednesday evening, last week, an encouraging report of the year's work was presented by the energetic secretary (Mr. F. L. Porter). During the year the various meetings have been kept up in due form, and there has been gratifying evidence of progress and blessing. The present number of members is 260, being a net gain of 17 during the year. Among the special features of the work remarked upon were a total abstinence society, which has been doing useful service; a Christian workers' training class; a special late service for young men engaged in business, held on Tuesday evenings at 9.30, and breakfast meetings on Sunday mornings (through which alone between twenty and thirty conversions have taken place). There are also the usual educational classes, a good gymnasium, &c. During last summer a number of the members, instead of spending their summer holidays in selfish enjoyment, formed an encampment at a seaside resort in Suffolk, and engaged in active evangelistic effort amongst the townsfolk and visitors. They were well received, and were able to do good work. This year they purpose following the same plan in another part. Such commendable zeal might with advantage be emulated by other branches.

Lord Kinnaird, who presided over the meeting, expressed his pleasure at the amount of solid work that has been accomplished, and urged the members constantly to bear in mind that they must be missionaries to their fellows. Rev. E. A. Stuart made some practical suggestions for future effort, laying emphasis upon the statement that the Association should work hand in hand with the churches rather than as a separate organisation. Rev. Pedr Williams remarked that truth and loyalty to Christ should be the goal of all service. Rev. Evelyn Gardiner urged the members to make their Christianity manifest in their daily life. He reminded them, too, that in speaking to others they should not tell a man he needs religion because he may have to die to-morrow, but because the probability is he will have to live many a year longer.

Rev. T. Ogden Taylor, Mr. J. E. Vanner, Mr. A. H. Cocks, and Mr. J. Fyfe-Stewart also spoke briefly.

THE UNITED SALE OF WORK from various industrial and benevolent institutions annually held in connection with the Society for Promoting Female Welfare takes place at the Royal Albert Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 29 and 30. Twenty-four institutions are represented.

WALDENSIAN SCHOOLS IN ITALY.

Besides the schools in their own native valleys among the Cottian Alps, the Waldenses have started schools in connection with their work of evangelisation in different parts of the Italian kingdom. The Government, it is true, is doing its best to have instruction widely spread; but what can instruction achieve for the real welfare of man if not based on the teaching of Him who said: "Suffer little children to come unto Me." Thorough and convinced believers in the vital importance of Bible teaching, the Waldenses have opened their schools, to which children of Roman Catholic parents are flocking in so large numbers that, in many a place, not a few have had to be refused admittance for want of room.

A little anecdote from a recent letter of one of the teachers will describe the working of the schools. The scene is in Rio Marina in the island of Elba, the heroine (so to say) a little girl eight years old, Giulia S——, whose parents are both Roman Catholics. She does not attend day and Sabbath school regularly, but she wants to go to church. But let us hear the teacher tell the story:—"Giulia had often said to me, 'My greatest wish is to become evangelical.' 'Well,' said I, 'ask the Lord; pray to Him, and He will incline the hearts of your parents to give you permission.' Her father (who is a sailor) came home after an absence of fourteen months, and there was great joy in the family. After greetings, the father took up his darling little girl and asked her to recite what she had learnt at school. She did it so well that the father was perfectly charmed, and kissed his child over and over again. The Sunday came round, and Giulia went to Sunday-school and stayed also for the service in church. When she went home, her father asked why she had been so long away. 'I have been to worship.' 'To worship? do you mean to say that you are a Protestant?' 'With your permission, dear father, I wish to become one.' The father was angry at the answer, and spoke severely, ending with the words, 'If you turn Protestant, I shall not love you any more, nor shall I dress and feed you.'

"The poor girl, bathed in tears, ran to her grandmother who lived close by, and poured out her grief into sympathetic ears. 'Don't cry,' said the grandmother, 'I shall give you to eat, and your aunt here will dress you,' and in so saying she held before her a dress. Giulia wiped away her tears, and insisted on putting on at once that dress, twice as long as herself, and ran to her father. 'Father, father,' she said, 'you need not trouble yourself about my food or my dress; just keep me your love, and allow me to go to the Protestant church.' The father could not help laughing at the sight of his little girl so funnily dressed, whilst tears sprang to his eyes on hearing her words. He clasped the child to his bosom, and, after fondly kissing her, said, 'God bless you, my little one, do as you please.' Since then Giulia has been the happiest girl in the world. Two of her school companions are decided upon following her example."

Let this feeling spread; let the next generation come up with these feelings, and Italy will realise a liberty of which she at present has no idea. Communications respecting the work may be addressed to Major M. Frobisher, 118, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

BIRMINGHAM.—A convention for the deepening of spiritual life is to be held in this city from May 12 to 16 inclusive, Mr. R. Wilson, convener of the Keswick Convention, presiding. A good programme of meetings has been arranged by a very representative committee. Rev. Walter Searle, Birchfield, Birmingham, is one of the conveners.

"Nyassaland."—I.

By Capt. HORE (London Missionary Society).

In The Christian of March 21, in a notice of "Nyassaland," written by Professor Drummond, it is remarked that its vivid pictures of the land and the people, and its diagnosis of the accursed slave traffic must strengthen the hands of those who are working in various ways for the regeneration of Central Africa. The book certainly contains some of the finest description of the character and condition of African natives, and of the aspect of certain parts of East Africa, that have ever been given to the public. The new title would itself seem to militate in some measure against the great mistake in the larger book ("Tropical Africa") of at least implying that those descriptions applied to the whole of tropical Africa, were it not for the statement on page 1, "Into the heart of this mysterious Africa I wish to take you with me now;" still leading the reader to accept the descriptions in the widest sense.

The best and almost only route to Nyassa is excellently described. But, under the heading of "The water route to the heart of Africa," this, the most unhealthy and of many changes, is urged upon the public as the best entrance to those further and inner regions which the author has never seen. Further, the utterly inaccurate and unfavourable description of another route, and of the people upon whom on that route the traveller is dependent, and the reference to the establishment of twelve trading stations, several of which are, in fact, stations founded and supported by missionary societies, give the whole book, so far, the aspect of an advertisement for the African Lakes Company.

The Zambesi route may be valuable for communication with Nyassa, although, even for that purpose, its Portuguese portals, its sandbanks, the probable disappearance of the Upper Shiré as foretold by Livingstone, the numerous portages involved, and its lengthened meanderings through the worst part of the deadly coast region, have induced several travellers already to prefer a more direct and healthy overland walk To say that "by this route the Victoria Nyanza and the Albert Nyanza may be approached with less fatigue, less risk, and not less speed, than by the overland trail from Zanzibar," is only a reiteration of the exaggerated writing-up of the route that has been going on for years by those to whose sphere of influence it gives access. From the same prejudiced source doubtless comes the statement deprecating the natural and oft-used route from Ujiji to Zanzibar, which, passing by a straight line through the unhealthy coast region, at its least unhealthy part, taps the very centre of the East African Lake region.

"Let him begin at Zanzibar, plant his foot on a native footpath, and set his foot towards Tanganyika. In eight months he will be there!" (page 33).

This would seem to be an echo of the statement in The Times of March 27, 1879, that "with the assistance of steam power on Lake Nyassa and the river Zambesi, the journey from Lake Tanganyika to Quilimane might be accomplished in forty-five days, and to London in seventy-five days." This statement ignores the fact that in 1878, we sent our first letters (only by native African means) to the coast in forty-eight days by the overland route, and that London was reached in seventy-eight days from Ujiji. Over that route (Zanzibar-Ujiji) myself, and, so far from its requiring eight months, it has usually been done by heavily laden caravans in three months, or, in ordinary travellers' trim, in sixty to seventy days. Four years before the announcement of eight months as the time required, an English lady and her young child accomplished the journey in ninety days, travelling at the worst time of the year, and burdened with a full outfit.

I HAVE WALKED FIVE TIMES

Still further discouragement is given by Professor Drummond to any mode of travel that might divert attention from the so-called "water route."

"Some have the impression that everything is done in bullock waggons—an idea borrowed from the Cape, but hopelessly inapplicable to Central Africa, where a wheel at present would be as great a novelty as a Polar bear" (page 32).

At the most central point of access to the East African Lake region heavy bullock waggons proceeded, in 1877, 200 miles inland from Saadani to Mpwapwa. That the method was abandoned at that time was certainly not because it was "hopelessly inapplicable," but because it required longer time and more extensive arrangements to perfect than fell within the means and sphere of a single missionary society. In 1882, when the special work of conveying a boat to Tanganyika again made wheels desirable, six two-wheeled carts conveyed the boat sections from the coast to Tanganyika in less than four months; each of the six loads was as heavy as one piece which some years later was declared too heavy to be conveyed from Nyassa to Tanganyika—only 220 miles overland. To pile up still further the difficulties of this objectionable route, which the author, however, has not traversed, we are told of its starting-point:—

"Here these black villains, the porters, the necessity and the despair of travellers...congregate for hire. And if there is one thing on which African travellers are for once agreed, it is that for laziness, ugliness, stupidness, and wickedness, these men are not to be matched on any continent in the world....Were it only to a old requiring to employ these gentlemen, it would b: worth while to seek another route into the heart of Africa."

This is a serious slander of a hard-working body of men, whose praises are recorded in the books of almost every East African traveller; and who have received the special thanks of the Queen for their part in the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition. I have never had finer or more faithful servants, couriers, carriers, boatmen, than these Zanzibaris.

So successfully, during the last ten years, has the Zambesi route been written up that, like the imaginary "Stevenson's Road," it is supposed to have a real existence. So successfully has the Zanzibar route been written down that even Mr. Stanley, who detected the illusory nature of the one, seems also to have doubted the existence or efficiency of the other. By its use, however, I am convinced that Emin Pasha might have been relieved much earlier, and at much less expenditure of life and money. For much of difficulty and misunderstanding with regard to both, I believe that "Tropical Africa" (from which "Nyassaland" has been taken) has been very largely responsible. For ten years many thousands of pounds and many valuable lives have been spent over this straggling chain of delusive blue lines, over which there is not yet efficient organisation, which, laid out on the straight road to the real centre of the "East African Lake region," would have almost paved the way.

The titles, "East African Lake Country" and the "Heart of Africa" to a description only of a portion, and not the most important part of that region, making the special plea for British philanthropic enterprise an appeal on behalf of only a part of that enterprise in the "East African Lake Country," is leading the reader to suppose that the good work described is all that has been achieved in that region.

Appeals have been persistently made during the past ten years by the friends of British commercial and missionary enterprise for protection from Portuguese and Arab aggression upon the territories thus brought under the influence of Christian civilisation. It is quite right that they should bring all legitimate influence to bear for the protection and furtherance of their good work, which may God bless and prosper. But when an influential and learned writer takes up the cry, and with reference so pointedly to "Tropical Africa," to the "East African Lake Region," to the "Heart of Africa," the public are led to suppose that the good work referred to is all that is being done in that region.

Why is not the work of British missionary enterprise on Tanganyika and the Victoria Nyanza made the subject of like appeal? Regions surrounding those lakes have been yielded without a word to Congo Free State or German influence; States whose representatives have scarcely seen them, and have nothing whatever of the title which Portugal claims about Nyassa. These regions have been, in extent and effort and success, equally the scene of British influence; minus only the commercial element, which I can scarcely believe Professor Drummond means to include in the "purifying" and cleansing agencies referred to.

I, too, have seen and admired the work of missionaries on Lake Nyassa. I have admired their success against the prejudice of the so-called Arabs; against the heathenish ignorance of natives; against the difficulties of climate; but chiefly their success against the influences of Europeans disturbing the quiet of their native audiences, clogging and hindering all their lay organisation, and eventually so disturbing the country as well-nigh to annihilate their work.

DEEPENING OF SPIRITUAL LIFE.

ROME.

A convention for the Deepening of Spiritual Life was held in Rome, April 14 to 17, in Mr. Wall's room, "Sala Cristiana," 35, Piazza San Lorenzo in Lucina. The meetings were well sustained, and largely attended. The principal speakers were: Rev. A. C. Thistelton (Rome), Pasteur Theodore Monod (Paris), and Evan H. Hopkins (Richmond). The proceedings were in a high degree stimulating.

EXETER.

Meetings were held in Exeter from April 14 to 18. As the days went by, the Victoria Hall became a centre of increasing interest. "We are all one in Christ Jesus" was illustrated by the admirable harmony of the platform, and forcibly realised by the earnest audiences that assembled. For spiritual ardour and definite purpose, the meetings exceeded the expectations of those who were most hopeful. The principal speakers were Mr. Robert Wilson, Revs. J. B. Figgis, J. G. Gregson, W. Haslam, F. B. Meyer, H. W. Webb-Peploe, J. Butlin, and Colin Campbell, and Dr. White. Several local ministers lent hearty support. Beginning with confession and ending with praise, the convention will not soon be forgotten as a season when many were encouraged to the former and had great reason for the latter.

MR. THORNE AT DARLINGTON.

Mr. Henry Thorne has concluded a ten days' mission at Darlington, arranged for by Miss Fothergill and her unsectarian band of Christian workers. The Friends' meeting-house was lent for the mission, and members of all churches and chapels took part. The noon prayer-meetings were blessed times. The afternoon Bible-readings were well attended, especially at the close of the mission. Mr. Thorne's Bible teaching and his evangelistic addresses were highly appreciated by members of the various denominations, as well as the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., and the Christian Band. There was not one evening without some anxious inquirer professing to find salvation. Many who have reason to thank God for sending Mr. Thorne to Darlington joined heartily in singing the closing hymn, "God be with you till we meet again."

For the Young.

TANGERINE "APPLES OF GOLD."

BY MISS JAY, TANGIER.

In Matthew, our Lord tell us that in the hour of need He will put into our lips the right words to say; and I want to tell you how truly He did this for me a little while ago.

Many of you know that we have here, in Tangier, a Hospital and Medical Mission for the poor people of this dark land who do not know our Jesus, but follow the false prophet, Mahomet, and think that he can save them.

One morning, an old man came to us from a long distance for medicine. Many others were already waiting their turn to see the doctor, so, as I knew it must be some time before he could be treated, I sat down by him, and began to tell him about Sidna Aisa (Jesus), and to read the Gospel. But soon he became very much excited. I found he was one of the most bigoted Mohammedans I had ever met.

He said, "Mahomet is my prophet, I want no other; he will admit me into heaven. It is a sin to look even at the cover of the Gospel. I have the Koran."

And so he continued every time I tried to read or speak, stopping me with some long quotation from his book, or shouting out a number of angry sentences.

At last he pulled the hood of his jalab (the long woollen garment worn by all the men in Morocco) over his head, put his fingers in his ears, and refused to listen to a word more.

I felt quite at a loss what to do. He was so angry, it seemed useless to continue, and yet I felt I could not leave him in such utter darkness. I looked up for help, and, quick as thought, the answer came, and God put into my mind the following little story. I waited till I saw he was again listening; then I said—

"I am not going to mention the name of Sidna Aisa, nor of his book, but I want you to let me tell you a tale."

Moors love stories, and he was willing to listen. Many others gathered round, too, who had heard what had passed. I said—

"Once there was a poor man who had a great enemy. This enemy was stronger than he was, and one day he caught him and put him in a dungeon in the ground. The prison was far away under the earth, without windows, and the door opened into a dark tunnel. And there he shut him up in total darkness.

"The poor prisoner was young then, but many years passed, till his hair turned white and he was about sixty years old (the old man I was speaking to seemed about that age, and had a long white beard). Then, in a far-off country, the servants of a King, who was as good as he was great, heard of this poor man so long imprisoned, and their hearts were filled with pity. Their King, too, longed to save him, and He asked who would go to try to release the prisoner.

"Many offered, and those who were ready the King sent. They travelled a long way by sea and land; they met with many dangers and difficulties; but at length they reached the dungeon. Then they commenced to dig. By day and night ceaselessly they worked until, at length, into the depths of that dark prison there shone some rays of God's own blessed sunshine.

"And the prisoner—was he glad? Did he thank them? Oh! no; he pulled his old rags over his face, and cried—

"'It hurts! it hurts! take it away!'"

I never finished my little story, for the old man's face, which had been slowly softening while I spoke, now broke into a smile; and, turning to the others, he said—

"She means me. I am the poor prisoner."

Then, to my joyful surprise (Oh, ye of little faith!), he said to me, "Tell me all you like now about your Sidna Aisa, and I will listen."

And so he did for nearly an hour. He seemed deeply interested, and, at his request, received an Arabic New Testament to read in his far-off home.

When Jesus says, "Lo, I am with you alway," it is not, you see, dear children, a promise only, but a glorious fact. Will you continue to pray for poor Morocco and the work and workers here? There are thousands of prisoners still in darkness, and but a tiny band whom the King has found ready to go to their release. Who will come and bring to them "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ"?

I am sure you will sympathise with us when I tell you that we were compelled to send away just before Christmas all our in-patients, fourteen in number, having no funds for their support. It was a great trial to us all; that was one of the saddest days we have yet known, but our Father can turn even this into a blessing.—Medical Missions.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., April 27, Prov. xxii. 1—15; Mon., April 28 Prov. xxvii. 1—17; Tues., April 29, Prov. xxx. 1—9, 24—31; Wed., April 30, Prov. xxxi. 10—31; Thurs., May 1, Ps. xxiii. 1—6; Fri., May 2, Gal. i. 1—17; Sat., May 3, Gal. ii. 11—21.

ST. ANDREW'S, LAMBETH.—A children's mission was conducted here during the week commencing April 13, by Mr. Henry Hutchinson, with the most encouraging results. The large schoolroom was filled night after night by an eager and attentive audience of some 600 to 700 children, many of whom have professed to find Christ. The total absence of all undue excitement, and the evident genuineness of the anxiety shown by those who tarried at the quiet after-meetings, proclaimed the depth and reality of the work. The children of Christian parents form, as might have been expected, the majority of the most hopeful cases. A mission will follow, from April 27 to May 4, in St. Andrew's Church, to be conducted by Rev. Joseph Porter, rector of Christ Church, Londonderry.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Moseley, to April 30. Mr. H. Hutchinson, St. Leonards, April 26 to May 5. Messrs. Hankinson and Hutchinson, Corn Exchange, Hereford, May 10—19; Ross, May 20, 21. Mr. H. Hutchinson, Pershore, May 22; Reading, May 23; Mr. W. S. Standen and Mr. H. Hutchinson, Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, May 26 to June 3. Rev. J. Outram, Kenley, May 19—22.

MR. DUNCAN WRIGHT, who has for many years done the work of an evangelist in New Zealand, has arrived on a visit to Britain, as he required rest and change. He proceeds to Scotland, and if his health permits will prosecute Gospel work in Glasgow and other centres for a few months. Communications addressed to care of Rev. Robert Howie, Prince-road, Pollokshields, Glasgow, will find Mr. Wright.

BIBLE STUDY.—The annual meeting of members of the International Bible Reading Association was lately held at the Sunday-school Union. The object which the Association seeks to promote is the daily reading of the Bible, the selections for each week having relation to the subject of the International Sunday-school lesson for the following Sunday. Mr. C. Waters, hon. secretary, said the present year showed an increase of 50,000 in the membership—the total issue of English cards having reached 286,000. Canada and Newfoundland have 3000 members, and the United States 4100 members. In the West Indies and Bermudas there are 3600 members, and in British Guiana 700. Australia and New Zealand together have required 17,500 cards. There are branches also in India, Ceylon, Cape Colony, Natal, Gibraltar, Malta, Brazil, &c., and, in addition, the readings had been issued in French, German, Swedish, and Dutch. Gratifying testimonies have been received from various parts of the world in favour of the plan of Bible reading. The committee hope to employ a missionary in India whose whole time shall be given to the establishment and improvement of Sunday-schools. Addresses were delivered by Revs. James Kennedy and J. P. Potter, both of whom gave assurances that the proposed missionary would find a wide and useful field of labour.

Egypt a Mission Field.

Mr. David Baron and Dr. Dixon, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, have been distributing Hebrew New Testaments in Egypt and the Holy Land. In a recent letter Mr. Baron says:—

A good deal of our time has been spent in out-of-the-way places, where nothing whatever is being done among either Jews or Gentiles. Hundreds of thousands, yea, millions of human beings are living in ignorance and degradation, with wrong thoughts of the great loving God and the Christ He has sent to redeem them. In Egypt we were specially impressed with the great need of the intelligent and industrial masses, to meet which very inadequate efforts are put forth. So long tormented from within and without, a prey to every tyrant, the land is now struggling, partly by the help of British interference, to rise from under the oppressor's heel. Can nothing more be done for it by British Christians? British soldiers are here and British trade is prospering, as is evident from the moment you land in Alexandria.

Oh, that our eyes were sufficiently opened to the opportunities now within our reach! In other parts of the world a Mohammedan endangers his life by becoming a Christian; but in Egypt, as we were assured by those who have laboured there for years, although there may be social persecution, as far as the law is concerned there is perfect religious toleration; so that a converted Mohammedan may not only live in the country, but openly labour as an evangelist among his Moslem countrymen, as we saw to be the case at Zagazig. Alexandria is the most cosmopolitan city in the world, and there is perfect freedom for every kind of Christian work. Its importance as a mission or evangelistic centre is not to be measured merely by its large permanent population of about 250,000, of whom more than three-fourths are Mohammedans. Every nation under the sun seems to have sent its representative to this city, and they may be reached with the Gospel without let or hindrance.

Without ignoring the several excellent agencies at work, it is nevertheless a fact that the natives or Mohammedans are hardly touched. Our American friends have a good work almost entirely among the Copts; the Church of Scotland Jews' Committee has a mission working partly among the Jews and partly among the English and Scotch residents. Mr. Rudolph, an earnest Hebrew Christian, gives a dinner free daily to between sixty and eighty destitute poor of various nationalities; and the British and Foreign Bible Society has its agent and depôt. But all these are but as a drop in the bucket. There are eight or nine thousand Maltese, British subjects. Surely some effort might be made to evangelise them. In Cairo Dr. Harper, who is connected with the Church Missionary Society, is finding access to the natives by means of medical work. A good deal is being done in the city by the schools founded by the late Miss Whately; also by our American friends. There is a large Jewish population, probably twenty thousand, in Cairo. For the most part they are living in wretchedness and degradation. How many labourers do you think there are among them? Not one! No one cares for their souls; no one witnesses to them of their Messiah Jesus, who is exalted a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance unto Israel and forgiveness of sins.

THE ALEXANDRIAN ORPHANAGE, CONSTANTINOPLE, is now under the oversight of a gentlemen's and a ladies' committee. It receives children of any denomination, and trains them to know and love the Gospel. The good such institutions may do in this cosmopolitan city is incalculable. J. R. van Millingen, Treasurer.

"A Saint at Last."*

Margaret was led astray very early: found herself at the age of fifteen betrayed and left; broke out into passion and riot in the open street, and was laid hold of by the police; and thus began a wretched, independent life, though mercifully preserved from falling much further at the time....Living with a blind fiddler, James McLoughlin, a Roman Catholic, somewhere in Belfast, she was much addicted to drink....And so the time passed on until about 1856, when she was sixty years of age, with her life of sin and shame, as it might have seemed, nearly over.

One day a lady called at her door and asked her to attend a meeting. It was Mrs. McCosh, wife of a well-known professor of philosophy. She little thought of the issues of that morning call!...Margaret returned from the meeting a more miserable woman than she went. She continued thus miserable for five months; and, as she said, thoughts of self-destruction more than once crossed her mind. The sight of three funerals at one time, proceeding along near a place where three roads met, was also the means of deepening her conviction; a voice within kept asking: "If one of these were yours, where would your soul be?"

At length, one day, as she walked round a well-known square in Belfast, revolving such thoughts, and regardless of the presence of passers-by, her soul went up in a cry to God, that He would save her! "She would wear sackcloth for ever, if only God would save her!" And there, as she walked, the answer came. She passed consciously into peace with God, through the shed blood of Jesus Christ.

There was, then, much to do. One of the first things was that she and James had to be married!...packing all their earthly goods into a barrel, they crossed by steamer to Glasgow, not knowing anyone there...The only way of making a livelihood that seemed open to James and Margaret was that of

PLAYING AND SINGING IN THE STREET.

But the husband was now a Christian, and seems to have taken for a time a more decided position than his wife; so we are not surprised to find that their sweet melodies were often hymns rather than songs. They lived in one of the poorest districts in Glasgow—in the Saltmarket—surrounded by those who were depraved and vicious; and it was no easy task to serve God and trust Him there. Yet the testimony is that they did so; not merely were they kept by the Lord, but were of use to others.

Many were the answers to prayer, for herself and others, which brightened Margaret's path. Some have felt a blessing following them, they knew not why, until they traced the source of it to dear old Margaret's prayers...She recognised an answer to prayer in almost everything! Sometimes it was finding a sixpence on the high road, when there was not a crust of bread in the house; sometimes it was a friend calling, and leaving the exact sum to pay the rent (which was due that evening, and must be paid), though the friend had no knowledge of the need. One left her room refreshed and rested by communion with her who communed so much with God. She spoke to God on all subjects audibly; and sometimes, before she opened her door, one expected to find a visitor sitting with her. It was Margaret speaking to God!

A well-known minister of the Gospel tells how her prayers followed him step by step; how she asked things for him which there seemed no earthly prospect of obtaining, but many of which have already come. He describes these prayers as if they had been moulding his life, all unknown to him; and mentions that one or two yet remain to be answered—as to which only time can tell. Margaret traced these with much thankfulness; and so happy did she feel in reference to one of them that she said "she was ready to go to heaven from the church door."

At the time of James's death, she possessed much knowledge of the Lord, and could trust Him very fully in regard to all outward circumstances...She was eighty-nine years of age, and alone, when she lost her sight. She, who had for forty years watched over a blind husband, became blind herself! It was through such deep waters that the Lord had to bring her to the full rest of faith, ere He took her hence. ...About the year 1882 the Christian community in Glasgow began to be greatly stirred by the movement for "the deepening of spiritual life." Two of Margaret's friends received great spiritual benefit through the Conventions; and, being accustomed to visit her, they were led to recount to her their new experience. With wonderful readiness, she understood it all; was led to ask God for something more for herself; presented her whole soul to Him for searching and cleansing; and then was brought by the Spirit through very deep waters.

She loved to be alone. After her friend had tried several people to live with her, someone, who appeared more suitable, was at last heard of. But, on going to tell Margaret, she met with the touching reply, "Please, dear,

LEAVE ME ALONE WITH JESUS!"

You need not fear for me, for I just lay myself down in the Lord's arms; and I'm safer there than if any of you were beside me!" Her friend dreaded the fire; but Margaret answered: "The Lord will take care of that too." And He did.

In April, 1888, it became apparent to Margaret's friends that her end could not be far distant; and a doctor pronounced her disease to be aneurism of the heart...As the spasms became more and more acute, she was heard to say: "Rough and thorny is the road; but it leads to Him." Sometimes, in the intervals of the paroxysms, she whispered,

"MY JESUS!"

Once she was overheard to say: "It's sore, sore, Faither! but I'm no' a bit fear'd!" "Don't shed a tear for me!" she said. "I am not a lady; but I am a King's daughter! My voice is broken and cracked, and I cannot sing; but I'll soon have a harp of my own to praise Him"...During the last night her friend, Miss Grant, who sat watching, heard her say faintly: "He's coming!" Then silence fell; and the hours crept slowly on. Once or twice they offered her ice or water; but she slightly shook her head, and pointed upwards, as if to say, "I need nothing more. Look there!" Then she appeared to fall into a stupor. But, by and by, the lips moved; and very faintly the whisper could be heard—"Heevenly Faither!"

These were her last words—"A King's Daughter!" gone home to her Father!

"O eyes that are weary
And hearts that are sore,
Look off unto Jesus,
And sorrow no more!"

MRS. GINEVER'S HOMES.

Last year's work in connection with Mrs. Ginever's Homes was as interesting as ever. Mrs. Ginever writes in the report:—

"It has been my privilege to help many sad and urgent cases. A widow, who had supported her two children—a boy and a girl—nine years by dressmaking, was compelled to give up her business through the development of cancer. After some time she succeeded in getting her boy placed with a hairdresser, but the thought of leaving her little girl homeless was a sad trial; moreover, she had a letter of admission into a hospital, which she could not use on account of having no one to take care of the child. A lady, visiting her, was advised to apply here, where the girl was immediately received. The poor widow only survived her removal to the hospital a fortnight. A few days previous to her death, her little girl was taken to see her, and great was the joy in the mother's heart at finding her child so well cared for. I had a quiet talk with the little one on her return, and seeing her very bright and happy, remarked, 'I think you are a very brave little girl.' 'Well,' she replied, 'I did fret about mother very much, but one of your little girls talked to me and told me not to cry, for it couldn't do mother any good; she told me her mother had been ill for years, and often went into the hospital; but, instead of crying, she told Jesus all about it. So I began to do the same, and it makes me so happy.'

"The Infant Home continues to be a great boon to many wee bairns. The work at Broadstairs continues to prosper, and many little sufferers have their burdens lightened and hearts cheered by the kindness shown to them by Dr. Cresswell and other good friends. It is really marvellous how many of our little incurable cases are spared year after year; amongst so many bad cases only two were gathered home during the year. Going to see one of these not long before she passed away, I took with me a reward text from St. Mark's Scripture Union, with which she was much delighted, and, speaking of one she had left at Manor-road, she remarked, 'This is oblong, that was foursquare!' 'Square, you mean, I suppose, dear.' 'Well, yes, square, but I like to say foursquare, because that is the word in Revelation that tells about the city I am going to. Oh, I am so glad to go! Don't think I want to leave you all, and my other friends, but I do so long to see Jesus, and I shall see Him there.' Many subsequent conversations were equally pleasing, and at times when the Matron, who had been the instrument used by God to bring this dear child into full Gospel light, was sitting with her, her faith was most joyous and triumphant. On one occasion she asked me if I remembered a certain Sunday evening when, after telling the little ones some Bible stories, I had taken her into the parlour and had a talk with her. I could not say that I did. 'Oh, I do!' was the reply, 'for from that time I began to think about my soul, but it is since I came here that it seems all so clear; I never doubt, for it is so clear.'"

We rejoice to observe that the good work has many friends sewing and knitting in its interest, and that its needs are ever supplied; although sometimes the coffers are empty for awhile. Communications to Mrs. Ginever should be addressed, Kingsdown Orphanage, Pemberton-road, Upper Holloway, London, N.

Mrs. TRAVERS LEWIS,

Foundress of the Homes for Young Englishwomen in Paris.

THE subject of our sketch, better known as Miss Ada Leigh, is the fifth child, and eldest surviving daughter, of the late Mr. Evan Leigh, of Manchester. Born at Macclesfield, she was brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord by her godly mother, who is still living. She was much influenced for good by her two elder sisters, both of whom, with a younger brother, passed away within the short space of six months. This bereavement had a salutary effect on her spiritual life, but it was chiefly owing to the instrumentality of the late Canon Hugh Stowell that she was brought definitely to know Christ as her Saviour, when, at the early age of twelve, she engaged in Sunday-school teaching. She has ever since been occupied in the Master's service.

At the age of fifteen she went with two of her sisters to school near Bonn, in Germany, where she remained for about two years. On returning to her home at Manchester, she once more took up her Sunday-school work, at St. Oswald's Church, Colleyhurst, under the late Canon Berkley Addison, who shortly afterwards removed to Jesmond Church, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Here she soon gathered around her a class of young women, which completely filled the largest class-room, and many were the seals to her faithful teaching

At the time of the Cotton Famine, in 1860, Miss Leigh, along with Mrs. Goadsby, the then Mayoress of Manchester, Mrs. Clarke, and others, organised a Relief Association, which for many months did excellent work in and around Manchester, by relieving the prevailing distress. Miss Leigh's arduous services as honorary secretary were afterwards publicly acknowledged. Visitation revealed the wretched condition in which the poor were living in the slums of Manchester, and a society called the Ladies' Sanitary Association was started, Miss Leigh being the moving spirit. This Society has continued its good work in ameliorating the condition of the poor these thirty years, though recently working under a different name.

In 1861 Miss Leigh was in Paris with her sister finishing her education. On December 7 in that year, she met with an English girl in a glove-shop, and ascertained that she had been four years in Paris and never had been to any place of worship. This girl was invited to attend a Bible-class, and during the two winters spent in Paris fifteen young women were found, who welcomed Miss Leigh as their friend. On her return to England the work at Colleyhurst was again taken up, under Rev. A. Brooke Clarke, the present rector. Her family soon after removed to another part of Manchester, and Miss Leigh had then four miles to walk in order to take her class. This she cheerfully undertook Sunday after Sunday, staying the night at a lodging close by, when the day's work was over.

In 1868 Miss Leigh was again in Paris, where she expected to stay for only six weeks; but, in the providence of God, she was led to remain more than ten months. Only three of the fifteen girls she had befriended could be traced; one had married a French perfumer, and lived on the Boulevard des Italiens. She told sad stories of English girls in Paris: that they had no food unless they worked on Sundays—not working threw them, friendless, penniless, and hungry, upon the gay boulevards of Paris. Ignorant of the language, and with no one to guide their steps, it was self-evident that the wish to keep the Sabbath day holy exposed these young women to too well-timed temptation. A chord of sympathy in Miss Leigh's heart was touched. We may quote her own words taken from her published pamphlet, "Our Mission Homes in Paris" (Partridge & Co.):—

"Impelled by a strong consciousness of purpose, undefined, save in its yearning to save souls, hundreds of little notes were written, and given, with prayer, wherever an English-speaking girl could be found. These notes contained an invitation to come to the hotel where we were staying, where some refreshment was provided, and to attend a Bible-reading. One day, stepping down from a shop in the Rue de Luxembourg, a girl, as she crossed my path, exclaimed, 'I don't care what becomes of me!' 'But I do,' was my almost involuntary reply, giving her one of my little notes. Its signature, 'One who cares for you,' touched the heart of one who, from the age of twelve, had had life to face alone. She became an earnest member of the Bible-class, bringing other young women with her. Soon the Bible-class numbered sixty-four, with a weekly attendance of about thirty-five.

"When again in Paris, the young woman to whom I had spoken years ago came to me with an offering wrapped up in a slip of paper, upon which was written, 'A gift of faith and love for a Girls' Home in Paris.' It was a franc—10d.—given July 27, 1872. My resolution was at once taken, and the next day an apartment secured at 77, Avenue de Wagram, as a Home for respectable English and American young women, without distinction of creed. Beginning with twelve beds, we soon increased it to thirty-six, when the necessity for purchasing the property was manifest. This was undertaken in faith, and signed for, on August 11, 1874. The whole amount required for the purchase and expenses of transfer was paid down on May 9, 1875. Over the entrance to the Home a white marble tablet marks this transaction:—

Asked of God, August 11, 1874.
Given of God, May 9, 1875.
'Surely the Lord is in this place.'

"The total cost of purchase, legal expenses, repairs, furnishing, &c., amounted to £12,330. This Home has had 5300 admissions, most of the young women having obtained situations from it, others being helped to return to England or their friends. This part of the work is administered by one lady in charge, Miss Moon, who has now been in residence for sixteen years.

"The second branch of the work, now situated at 26, Faubourg St. Honoré, is that of our Y.W.C.A. and Home for young women apprenticed in shops, &c., and was opened at 88, Faubourg St. Honoré, February 10, 1873. The third branch was the Crèche, or infant school for children, providing a home during the working hours of the day, so as to enable many a busy mother to leave her child with safety and comfort, and was opened, December, 1875. The mission-hall, 79, Avenue de Wagram, was opened, December 25, 1875, by a Christmas dinner to working men and their families, followed by a general invitation to join mothers' meetings, clothing club, children's sewing classes, night schools, men's Bible-readings, French classes, &c. The Temperance, Band of Hope, and Total Abstinence Societies were inaugurated January, 1880. This branch of work was commenced and has developed under one of our ladies, Miss Carmichael—now with us for over thirteen years, whose name is as a household word amongst the poor—helped by younger ladies. The soup kitchen has also been in active operation during the winter months since 1875.

"The first destitute English child was received in February, 1873, and in July of the same year was most happily adopted. By July, 1876, we had received eighty-nine children, and had one storey in our Home reserved for them, where we managed to pack twenty-four each night. Some of these had been brought over and sold as artists' models, and for different performances—some as fairies, others as tight-rope dancers, performing tigers, &c. Many were deserted on account of the French law not recognising as valid marriages contracted in England between French and British subjects. Some were children left destitute upon the death of their parents. The late Monsieur Galignani hearing quite accidentally of our crowded flat offered us his hospital at Neuilly as a separate Home for them. This most generous gift of a valuable property which cost M. Galignani and his brother £16,000, was ratified, October 22, 1876, and conveyed to our Association, which had been formed for the purpose of holding in perpetuity the property which might be acquired for the special purposes of our Association.

"In September, 1884, our kind friend the Baroness Alphonse de Rothschild built a school-room and south wing, at the cost of £2000, in memory of her mother, the late Baroness Lionel de Rothschild.

"The year 1878 saw the inauguration by the late Earl of Shaftesbury of our Governesses' and Artists' Institute and Home. A large apartment has since been taken at 153, Faubourg St. Honoré, and is now under the charge of Miss Hockly, who has worked with us for several years. Our last effort is the development of our work amongst men, which began December, 1875, by holding Bible-classes for them during the winter months. The story of this work will be found fully set forth in a pamphlet, 'Am I my Brother's Keeper?'

"In looking back upon the work of the last seventeen years, I find an organisation at least so complete as scarcely now to need my personal supervision. Where I worked single-handed years ago, we have a band of noble-hearted women who have toiled on steadily from six to sixteen years at their own charges amid unutterable difficulties, with prayerful and patient perseverance, which God has owned. The work of earlier days, which reached its 'ones,' now counts some eight hundred of our country people drawn within the circle of its influence each week. Much that was attempted upon untrodden ground has been found to reach the most vital needs of our country people."

Mrs. Lewis, writing a year ago says, "And now after sixteen years of unremitting toil in a voluntary effort, the time has come when I need some relaxation, and I feel that the work of the Association which it has been such a joy to me to form will be best consolidated and its influence most fully realised by others taking a more prominent part. I shall retain my position as President and Honorary Secretary of the Association. The daily letter will become the weekly one; and though I may leave my tried and greatly valued helpers for longer intervals than hitherto without my personal supervision, I shall always hope to be in Paris when occasion may necessitate. By my marriage with one whose life and first recollections were years ago linked with our late revered President, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and with other esteemed friends, and whose labours God has greatly honoured, I feel that I shall entwine more matured experience with my hitherto single-handed toil in the work of our Association. The Bishop of Ontario has long had a special interest in my efforts, and has always upheld the cause of the weak and suffering. His sympathy in the past, and his willingness to spare me whenever I am really needed in Paris, will be the best pledges to my friends that my future life will be one of stronger influence and enlarged activity in the work I so dearly love, of leading humanity—in its weakest yet tenderest form—into touch with our loving and risen Lord."

Miss Leigh was married to the Bishop at the British Embassy in Paris on February 20, 1889. Mrs. Lewis is about to visit England on business connected with the Paris Homes.

BRIXTON HILL RESCUE AND PREVENTINE HOME.—The report of the third year's work of the Rescue Home, 143, Brixton-hill, S.W., is very encouraging. The chief event of the year was the extension of the premises, and now twelve inmates may be accommodated. Twenty girls were received last year, and twelve babies; eight of the former are now in situations, and six returned to their friends. The great aim of the work is to bring the inmates of the Home to a knowledge of Christ. All have come under direct and personal spiritual teaching, many having repented and turned to God, as their earnest and consistent lives make evident. The hon. sec. of this unsectarian work is Miss Stemp, 25, Josephine-avenue, Brixton-hill, S.W.

"BEHOLD THE LAMB OF GOD."

Soul immortal, shake thy wings
From the dust of earthly things;
Lift thy heart to Christ in prayer,
Now his fast and sorrow share.
Steal to dark Gethsemane,
Where He weeps and prays for thee,
Listening to the undertone
Of his anguish deep and lone.
Bowed by agony's sad thrall,
Sweat-drops from his forehead fall,
As He kneels upon the sod,
Son of man, yet very God.
Christ for all, above, below,
Drains the cup of guilt and woe;
Watch whilst midnight shadows fall,
See Him in the judgment hall,
Thither by the soldiers borne,
Scourged, despised, and put to scorn.
All his followers have flown,
Christ the winepress treads alone.
Priests and rulers mocking bow,
Piercing thorns enwreath his brow.
Unto Calvary's mountain led,
Jesus suffers in our stead.
On the cross uplifted high
For a guilty world to die;
E'en the golden sun has paled,
Nature is in blackness veiled.
Lowly droops that dying head,
"It is finished," Jesus said.
Hear his agonising cry,
"Eloi lama sabachthani."
From his hands, and feet, and side
Flows salvation's crimson tide.
Christ his life has freely given,
Opening wide the gates of heaven.

DR. THEODORE CUYLER.

In a letter recently received, Mr. I. D. Sankey says:—

The closing scene of Dr. Cuyler's long Brooklyn pastorate of thirty years was one of the most impressive sights ever witnessed in the Lafayette-avenue Church. The crowd in attendance overflowed the building, and large numbers were turned away from the doors unable to find even standing-room. The sermon was delivered with great unction and power. The audience was much moved by his closing words.

Not a single trace of failing strength has been visible in any of the Doctor's sermons; but in his farewell address he manifested unusual vigour. Indeed, many of his people have besought him to withdraw his resignation, and to continue with them; but to all such solicitations he has replied:—"I love Lafayette-avenue Church too well to allow any chances to be taken in regard to her future success. Ill-health or failing vigour may come to one of my years sooner or later, and before that day comes I must see a stronger and a younger man at the helm." Truly this is "the cause rising above the man."

In the future Dr. Cuyler will be looked upon as one of the fathers of the Church and a preacher at large. By his facile pen and brilliant sermons we hope he may yet reach more people than ever before. His friends are raising a fund for his use in his retirement from the pastorate. He had saved nothing in the past thirty years, while he gave freely of his substance to all who came to him for help. A beautiful life, truly, has been his, and may he long be spared to be a blessing still to tens of thousands of souls.

MALTA.—A very successful fifteen days' mission has been held at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, 104, Strada San Lorenzo, which God has greatly blessed. The friends in charge thank our readers for their gifts of tracts, books, &c., and for their prayers.

Parochial Missions.

A speaker at the annual meeting of the Church Parochial Mission Society last week, in Kensington Town Hall, claimed for that Society that it had popularised special missions in the Church of England; and we believe the claim is just. Judging from the handful of people that attended this meeting, it does not appear, however, to have popularised itself. It is not creditable to a great institution like the Established Church that the annual review of its leading evangelistic agency should attract only some three hundred persons, of whom very few indeed were gentlemen. It is true, it was an afternoon meeting. The speeches were all good, but we should have liked a little more intensity and enthusiasm in the report, in view of the noble work that is being done throughout the land by Mr. Aitken and his fellow missioners. Two items must cause universal regret—the retirement of Mr. Stephens from special mission work through ill-health, and the deficit of £260.

The most interesting part of the Bishop of Lichfield's presidential speech was the warm tribute he paid to the memory of the late Rev. Robert Aitken, of Pendeen, to whose devotion, perpetuated in his son, the establishment of the Society is really due. Speaking of Mr. Aitken, Sen., Bishop Maclagan said:—"The recollection of his impressive personality rises up before my mind while I speak. I can never forget the last occasion (I believe) on which he preached in any church in London—in my own church at Kennington. After a sermon of marvellous power and great length, which caused the deepest emotion, but no weariness, in these rough working men who were gathered together from the South of London, we adjourned to the schoolroom with a certain number of the congregation who followed us thither. There the old man began his heart-searching work among the people, speaking straight home to them with that spiritual power for which he was remarkable, and dealing with them one by one, with an intense fatherly tenderness that I have never seen equalled in any minister of Christ. Nothing impressed me more than the absolute entirety of his surrender to the work that God had given him to do; it was the subject of his conversation from morning to night. So he laid the foundations of this great work." The Bishop went on to speak weightily of the importance and the peculiar difficulties of parochial mission work, and said that in a recent conference of clergy in his own diocese its value was very warmly recognised. His Lordship hinted that perhaps in future missions it would be advisable to pay more attention to the spiritual quickening of the saints than the mere ingathering of the careless; because a quickened church would react powerfully on the outer world.

After a personal expression of indebtedness to Mr. Aitken the younger, Canon Pennefather spoke well on the important evangelising work that could be done by diocesan missioners, especially in reaching the remote and sparsely peopled country districts. There are many of our English villages, he said, that are sleeping the sleep of spiritual death. Rev. Cyril Grant, who spoke next, also began by a bit of individual testimony, telling in cordial terms how deeply he was indebted to Rev. W. Warren, one of the Society's missioners, for a great lift in his own spiritual life. The main burden of his address was a plea for an order of "flying missioners," who should visit thinly peopled districts, not by lengthened missions at one place, but staying for a day or two as circumstances might require, and passing on to another, so that all the souls in the district should have the offer of salvation. He remarked that valuable as a special mission is it can never take the place of regular and steady parish work. Mr. O'Donoghue, from Somersetshire, was another warm witness to the good of these missions, and urged that objectors to special Gospel effort should be kindly and tenderly met and answered.

Last of all was heard the voice for which many in the meeting must have been waiting, that of Rev. W. H. Aitken. We could fully share in their disappointment at discovering that Mr. Aitken was suffering from "a strange and unaccountable hoarseness," as he described it, so that he had to confine his remarks to a few sentences of very earnest and urgent appeal for more generous financial help. It was the first time, he said, in the history of the Society that monetary assistance was the prominent need of the hour. God had greatly blessed its operations, and it was painful to contemplate the possibility of having to curtail their efforts for want of the necessary help in funds. Surely Mr. Aitken's appeal cannot be in vain. Before he sat down he told a very encouraging little incident that had happened to him on Easter Sunday. A young man came into the vestry and said that he was one of the thirty-seven employées in one London commercial establishment who professed to receive blessing during one of his late missions. Of these converts at least six are now wholly engaged in doing the work of God in different parts of the world.

The Temperance Cause.

A Prohibition League has been formed at Edinburgh.

It is proposed to have a World's Temperance Congress at the Chicago Exhibition in 1892.

At the recent annual licensing courts for Scottish burghs very few new licences were issued.

Mrs. Mary Davies, the renowned Welsh lady vocalist, has been a total abstainer for the past ten years.

A Sunday Closing census taken in eight towns and villages in Westmoreland shows 3327 inhabitants in favour, 98 against, and 176 neutral.

The Aberdeen Temperance Society's winter series of meetings were encouraging in their results. Local ministers cheerfully gave their aid.

Samuel and Deborah Lloyd, members of the Society of Friends, Kansas, are at present in England. Their testimony to the value of Prohibition in that State is most decided and encouraging.

A very cordial "welcome home" was extended to Canon Wilberforce in a mass meeting at Southampton last week. He spoke strongly of the evils that are caused in India by the opium and drink trades. Mr. W. S. Caine also made a telling speech on the same lines.

In connection with the jubilee of New Zealand a great temperance meeting was held among the Maoris who were attracted to Auckland for the occasion, and 110 pledges were taken. Rev. W. Gittos has nobly devoted his life, and given of his substance, for the benefit of the Maori race.

The recent election of guardians for the Lewisham Union turned mainly on the question of drink expenditure in the workhouse, which stands at the high figure of 17s. per head of the inmates. Six persons were nominated fully pledged against this expenditure, and of them five were elected members of the Board.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in Short Cuts, warns the publicans that after the next general election a majority may be returned pledged against compensation, and he implores them to be wise in time. "There is much need (says The National Advance) of advancing some such exhortation to the temperance men. There will be no serious measure passed until all earnest reformers agree to co-operate in the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread."

MR. DANIEL MATTHEWS, of the Maloga Mission, Australia, is now in Scotland, and purposes returning to London early next month. He has had excellent meetings in Birmingham, Liverpool, and Glasgow, and will next week be visiting Edinburgh. Friends everywhere have been interested in his accounts of the work of grace among the native blacks of New South Wales. Mr. Matthews intends leaving for Australia in June.

MISSION TO LEPERS IN INDIA.

Interest in the poor lepers having increased of late, the pages of the fifteenth annual report of the Mission to Lepers in India will have a pathetic attraction for Christian workers in general. The pages narrate much self-denying endeavour in the name of the great Physician. Altogether 134 lepers, inmates of the Mission Homes, were received into the visible Church on profession of their faith. In the Purulia Asylum alone ninety-two baptisms took place, leaving only very few still in heathenism.

We rejoice to observe that special attention is being directed to the case of children of leprous parents, who have as yet shown no indication of being diseased. For years there has been one Home for such cases, but now work of this kind is being done in connection with three of the asylums. In caring for the children of lepers, there is a distinct sphere of Christian effort, the object being twofold, to save the little ones from the terrible disease, and to bring them to know the love and service of Christ.

The chief aim of the Mission is to tell the poor lepers of the Saviour. It is by no means easy to enlist active sympathy in the work in India. The report says: "On several occasions and in several places, we have been unable to carry out our plans for the benefit of the lepers just because of a lack of local interest; and yet it has been our unvaried experience that, when anyone has been once led to engage in work for Christ amongst lepers he has become so interested in it as to count it amongst his highest privileges." In view of the awakened interest in the condition of the lepers, and of important questions now pending, the secretary of the Mission is about to re-visit India.

From various centres reports have come of the progress of this labour of love. At the close of the year there were 112 people in the Almora Asylum, of whom 76 were Christians, and 12 were expecting to be baptized. Musuwa, the oldest inhabitant of the Asylum, says: "I am but a blind, helpless old leper to whom Jesus Christ, the beloved Son of God, gives peace. He is my Saviour, and not mine only, but the Saviour of all who hope and trust in Him. I try to remember Him day and night, and I love all who love Him. I am only a traveller here; my home is in heaven. I am getting ready to go there. I was very ill this year, but the Lord restored me. I remember all you my friends in my prayers, and ask the Lord to be your helper, and to bless you in all your labours. Now my salaam to all my friends, and also to Padri Bailey Sahib."

The Mission has been invited to undertake work in several new places. Communications should be addressed to the Secretary, Mr. Wellesley C. Bailey, 17, Glengyle-terrace, Edinburgh.

KING EDWARD RAGGED SCHOOLS AND MISSION.—The forty-fourth annual report shows that the great work which has its centre in King Edward-street, Spitalfields, is still carried on manifestly to the glory of God. As the expanding operations have required fresh helpers, sympathising friends have rallied to the call. At Albert-street and King Edward-street, upwards of 1100 children are in attendance on Sunday afternoons and evenings. The scholars' free library is more used than in former years; in the junior school, where the children have most leisure, only a few of them being at work, 90 per cent. use the library. The young women are grouped in week-night classes and taught to ply the needle, while the lads are instructed in carpentry, drawing, &c. Temperance principles are inculcated, and thrift encouraged. The poor are fed, and the weak are helped and cheered in many ways. The agencies, for young and old, are very numerous, and such as only require to be known to secure the cordial support of Christian people. Communications may be addressed to the hon. secretary, Mr. Charles Montague, 4, Bedford-square, E.

RESCUE WORK AT PORTSMOUTH.

The first public meeting of the Christian Rescue Association was held in the Elm-grove Baptist Church, Southsea, on April 17, being attended by many warm friends and sympathisers.

The president, Rev. J. P. Williams, in the opening address, said that the Christian Church had none too soon awakened to the actual need for this work. Is not this an evidence of the extension of the kingdom of God that, in the place of theological discussion and controversy, the Church is rousing herself to raise a fallen world? Religion is now seen to be not just singing about Christian work, but a going out, and giving a hand to raise up fallen brothers and sisters. There is now a social side to our religion—to go like Christ and mix with the outcasts, and show them active sympathy.

The Association sprang into existence in 1887. The Home, 18, Wyndcliffe-road, Southsea, can accommodate six cases only, and is very cramped in size. The work has been carried on quietly, but the time has now come to make it more known, and to ask for increased help.

Rev. G. R. Osborn remarked that in every "Home" we meet with youth, ignorance, and poverty; we see the outcast, the friendless, the betrayed. Any one of these urges a claim upon our pity. The little Home at Southsea is a busy hive, and plain needlework is done as one means for support.

A letter from the Chief Constable was read regretting inability to be present, and expressing warm sympathy in this and in every branch of rescue work. The president drew attention to the value of such a testimony, and to the blessing it is to have Christian men at the head of the police force. The speaker of the evening was Miss Salmond, of the Wesleyan East-end Mission. Women are perishing from the sin of impurity. Miss Ellice Hopkins' words are so true, that "the degradation of women is fast becoming the degradation of the children." Statistics show a downward grade from the age of seventeen to the child of eight years. We may shut our ears and eyes, but these facts of horror remain the same. Think of children being forced by their parents to do what many Christians cannot bear to speak about!

Rescue work is a duty, if but for the children's sakes. They are born in sin, reared in it, not only in East London, but everywhere where no counter influence is at work. People say that the girls and women we see in the streets look bright, cheerful, well-dressed. Draw them aside, peer behind the flimsy veil—what is there? Only a mockery of happiness and mirth; one and all own that they are wretched and miserable at heart, always in a state of semi-intoxication. Rescue work is a necessity. We who have had pure homes and the training of pious parents ought to pay this back to God in work for others.

To the individual Christian, Miss Salmond put the question—What is my duty? She herself had formerly thought it her duty to "pass by on the other side." It is our duty to cross over to the needy in a Christlike spirit.

Rev. A. Hancock urged the cause of total abstinence for rescuer and rescued. In God's day the true heroes and heroines will be those who have gone out "to seek and save that which is lost." Rev. C. Joseph struck another keynote. He warned against a false enthusiasm as to this work.

The object of the Association is excellent, and we trust it will commend itself to those who can help in any of the ways possible. Communications should be addressed to Miss Hammond, 47, Stanley-street, Southsea.

DR. F. R. LEES, the well-known temperance advocate and author, is about to take up his residence in the neighbourhood of London.

INFIDELITY IN INDIA.

To counteract and, in the end, destroy the dangerous widespread influence of the "Hindu" and "Anti-Christian" tract societies, friends have supplied literature for India. Although the principal cities of India and Ceylon have received heavy cases of literature, yet, as an antidote to the great Hindu and infidel literary war against Christ and Christianity, what has been done is as nothing in such a vast country. Many missionaries write pleading for tracts to help them in their noble work. The substance of their reports are as follows. The Indian Methodist Times for March, 1890, says:—"Most noticeable is the work of the Hindu Tract Society through its publications and its preachers. The staple of the Hindu preachers' addresses is abuse of missionaries and their religion. They are also strongly coloured by the anti-English feeling which prevails in certain circles. The people are incited to oppose us in every possible way, to keep away from our services, to withdraw their children from our schools, to tear our books and tracts to pieces. During the day the preachers visit the houses and work upon the fears of the women. They also circulate handbills or tracts, which profess to show that the Bible is full of contradictions, and which hold up the missionaries to contempt as men who have taken up their present profession because they cannot earn a livelihood at home.

"The Hindus are incited to give their money as freely to support Hinduism as Christians give it for the spread of their religion. The latest tract published bears a most offensive title: it is headed, 'Jesus Christ a fool.' It is scarcely a wonder that thus roused almost to frenzy the people have sometimes collected in mobs for the purpose of ill-treating the Christian preachers. This persecution has been borne with patience even when pain and loss have resulted."

What can we do to help our brethren to do effective work against infidel blasphemers?

As an independent worker, may I urge English Christians to send over quantities of H. L. Hastings's publications? I mention these because of their high literary style and true Christian position. I have had a hand in circulating these valuable 32-page pamphlets throughout the world, and I can speak of their great and permanent power for good. Any friend willing to assist—on going to India or Ceylon—can (through the kindness of a personal friend), on my written order on the publishers, obtain a gift of 500 for every 1000 copies purchased, that is 1500 copies for 42s., or, for the illustrated edition, 50s. Or, should friends desire, the writer will guarantee, without any further cost, a careful and proper circulation throughout India and Ceylon for any quantity.

Praying that many Christian friends will accept the offer of my friend and help our noble missionaries in fighting for truth and Christ, I am, yours, &c.,

John H. Mitchell.

THE CHURCH, says Mr. Ruskin, has dined with the rich and preached to the poor. The time has come for it to preach to the rich and to dine with the poor. What we want to adjust the balance in the Churches is more of the Apostolic methods. The Church, using the term in its broadest sense, never had a finer opportunity of bridging over the gulf—nay, not of bridging it over, but of filling it in—the gulf which has too long divorced the Church from the masses of the people. That opportunity is to be found in the Church identifying itself with their every-day life, and in giving the "Amen" of practical effort to the prayer: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth, as it is in heaven." There are, as we believe, vast resources in our Churches—at present fallow, or even waste—which may be utilised for this purpose. It is a question which concerns our life as a nation equally with the life of our Churches.—National Advance.

CHRISTIAN COLPORTAGE.

The agents of the Christian Colportage Association for England assembled in good force on Monday at Exeter Hall to celebrate, with friends and supporters, the sixteenth anniversary of the work. It is no longer needful to urge the strong claims of the Association as an aggressive evangelistic agency. We rejoice that the work is in itself as excellent as the need for it is unquestionable. In town and country alike iniquity abounds, and, such being the case, there can be no doubt as to the duty of the Christian community to show that grace has much more abounded in the provision which God has made for the salvation of men.

The proceedings began with a meeting for prayer and praise, at which several of the colporteurs gave incidents arising in the course of their work. More than one told of successful battling against corrupt literature. Horner's Penny Stories, always pure, have in many a village proved more than a match for unwholesome publications. As a consequence, small dealers whose trade was in trashy novelettes have had to give them up in order to meet a demand for papers and books at once bright and healthy in character and tone. Herein is great cause for thankfulness to God.

One colporteur undertook to supply a young woman with

A BOOK "FULL OF LOVE."

He took her "God so Loved the World," and "Herein is Love." She wanted books of a sensational type, but she felt herself bound to purchase first one and then the other, and now she lives in the sunshine of Christ's love, and commends it (and the beautiful books) to her acquaintances and friends. A cook in Belgravia would do no business with the colporteur, for, she said: "We are all infidels here, upstairs and down." A tract was left. Having called several times without realising any sympathy, the colporteur was asked to supply a novel for presentation to the young woman's mother. What more suitable than "Salvation: the Way made Plain"? Cook hesitated as to the suitability, but yielded to persuasion. Before sending it to her mother, she read it herself, and subsequently bought a second copy for her own more diligent perusal. In course of a short time Divine light dawned upon her soul, and now she knows Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

Lord Kinnaird presided over the public meeting. The report, read by Mr. H. D. Brown, secretary, was cheering. At the last annual meeting an agreement was come to that God should be asked to add twenty new colporteurs to the staff. That prayer has been answered, and at the end of the year the total number was 110. During the year over a million Bibles, books, magazines, and Scripture cards were sold, amounting in value to £13,558. About fifteen hundred villages have been systematically visited month by month, besides many others worked during the summer months. Books and men alike have been specially selected, with a view to the glory of God in the salvation of souls, and God has greatly owned the work.

Canon Money spoke of the sad need for the work, and its great importance, especially in view of the ostentation of infidelity at the present time. Rev. Colmer B. Symes declared the agency to be in line with God's plan, for God has employed both literature and the living voice in his merciful dealings with mankind. Both addresses were eminently sympathetic and encouraging. Mr. Robert Paton, hon. secretary, expressed a hope that the present year would witness a still further extension of the work.

MRS. S. MAY, the veteran Christian worker, has left Calcutta for a period of rest and recuperation with friends in England.

Good News.

"Good news! Our dear brother H—— has yielded to the Saviour."

Such was the message I lately received and for which I devoutly thanked God. As others learn the story they may rejoice in such a testimony to God's grace.

Who is H——? I knew him a few years ago; had several earnest talks with him, and often thought him at the point of decision for Christ. Since then he has gone back again, and has bitterly disappointed the hopes of his friends. He left the trade to which he was apprenticed, partly because his master could do no more good with him, and partly because he had got a craze for going to sea. Nothing could turn him from this purpose, and ultimately his mother very reluctantly gave her consent.

Sunday-school and the house of God he had entirely abandoned, professing to have no interest in them. There was a dreary outlook before him. No wonder that his widowed mother and his brothers and sisters—all Christians—were in sore trouble about him.

But how came the change? Here is the story. To get employment at sea was difficult, and necessitated some delay. In the interval, he found something to do at the coffee-tavern where one of his sisters was employed. While there, it happened that a special mission was being held at the Wesleyan chapel. Another sister, residing in the district, took an interest in the mission, and invited the workers from the coffee-tavern to the meetings. The first night, only one of them came.

"Will you come again," said the sister, "and try to get H—— to come?"

"I will try," the friend replied, shaking her head doubtfully, as though she had not much hope.

Would he come? The sister prayed that he might, but feared that he would not; but her unbelief was reproved when she beheld him in the meeting before her the following night. She accepted the reproof, and since one prayer was answered, was encouraged to ask for more. A request was sent to the evangelist. As soon as it was read, H—— knew that it referred to him, and went away very angry. Some of the people pleaded with him, but he appeared quite indifferent, and completely shocked one man by his hardness of heart.

Yet, beneath the apparent callousness, the conscience was evidently touched; for, uninvited, he came the following night, and every night during the mission. His sister grew somewhat anxious, and on the last night but one affectionately pleaded with him; but he replied that "not the slightest impression had been made," and went up to his room to bed.

"To bed"; yes, but not to sleep. In spite of his professed indifference he was so troubled that he dare not lie down until he had vowed before God to yield to the Saviour on the following night. Nor was that enough to calm his fears, for while in bed the thought came: "Suppose I should not live until to-morrow night?" and, try as he would, he could not get the thought out of his mind, and instead of sleep he spent the whole night in agony.

God spared him and gave him another opportunity. The next night found him not only in the meeting, but in the inquiry-room. The struggle with pride had been so severe that the perspiration stood in great drops upon his forehead. The love of the Saviour conquered; it broke his heart and bowed him in submission and faith to Him.

"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." And not among them alone, for throughout that chapel, where many had been interested in his case, shouts of rejoicing greeted the news of his salvation. But there was joy at home as well, where his mother and brother sat up for him, waiting with tremulous anxiety to know what news the last night would bring. Urged to go to bed, the brother said: "No, mother, I am sure good news is coming to-night, and I mean to hear it." And the good news came, The sister brought home, no longer a prodigal. but now a disciple of Jesus. As in the chapel, so in the home, shouts of rejoicing were heard, which awakened the two younger sisters in bed. They entered into the joy, and one of them said: "Another sheep brought back to the fold."

Is it not a story to praise God for? Are any of my readers trying, as H—— did, to stifle impressions? Learn from him to yield to the Saviour. Do not waste present opportunities in prospect of having others. God says: "To-day if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts."

MARIN, N.W. SPAIN.—Mr. Thomas Blamire has been engaged since 1875 in opening up Galicia for the Gospel. The work has had many difficulties, one of which is inability to retain houses and places in which to hold meetings, for no sooner does the truth get a foothold in a district than the Romish priests persuade landlords to "throw out the cursed Protestants." This has just been the case at Marin, where God has greatly blessed the preaching of the word, there being a congregation of 300 or 400, who will have none of Rome and her priests. The church members and their friends are very poor, but doing their best to provide suitable premises of their own. The Mission has a hall of its own at San Tomé, and there the work has greatly increased. At least £1500 will be required to supply the pressing need at Marin, which has already been sympathetically recognised by English friends. Communications to Mr. Blamire may be addressed to the care of Mr. J. Cordeux, Moorlands, Rockleaze, Bristol.

A TOUCHING STORY OF HEROISM in common, every-day life was brought to light at an inquest at the London Hospital upon the body of a dock labourer. The evidence showed that he was "a casual," and that, work being slack, he had been unable to earn sufficient to procure even the bare necessaries of life for himself and family of four children. Determined, however, to minimise their sufferings, whatever the cost to himself, he did his best for them, and prolonged his own fast. On the Thursday he obtained a few hours' employment; but when in the very act of drawing his pay, suddenly fell down dead, having, as the jury expressed it, starved himself to feed his children. What a picture of the evils of modern competition! A back room, with practically no furniture, in an East-end slum, for which the rent would, probably, be not less than three shillings per week. A family of four children, the eldest thirteen, the youngest four, the mother being an inmate of an asylum. After much fruitless effort, the father having given all the available food to stop the piteous cry of his children, gets a "job," and falls dead as he puts out his hand to receive his wage.—The National Advance.

SCHOOLS AT CHAMBERI.

In 1885 the parish priest of Chamberi appealed to the "piety" of the people of Madrid to enable him, by donations, to open schools close to ours, with the confessed sole object of getting away our scholars, though, since the establishment of the latter, the friars and the Association of Roman Catholic ladies had been doing what they could to this end by opening free schools in the neighbourhood; but this was to be a unique effort. The school-books were to be given as well as the education, also some articles of clothing and a packet of sweets on entering, and no children were to be received but those from one or other of our schools. Success was reckoned on, and some of our scholars were told it was no use to come to us any more, for by a fixed date (six months ahead) all the Protestants would be driven out of Chamberi. The public appeal succeeded, the funds were supplied, and the schools opened, and some parents were induced by the pecuniary advantages to take their children away from us to go to them, especially as employment was offered to any fathers who needed it.

The opposition continues in a variety of ways (often unknown to us till some time after), and a third school has been opened by the priest; but ours are still very well attended, and generally quite full. Every now and then fresh energy on the part of those who choose to be our enemies robs us of girls and boys of whom we had hoped much, but others come, and sometimes the old ones return. The congregations too have all along been good, and increase, as does the serious attention of the people. Many have been truly blessed, and very many others have been "almost persuaded," but have been unable to face the difficulties that a confession of Christ would bring upon them. The premises, of which mention was made in The Christian about the same time, in God's good providence have been continued to us until now. But our aged landlady has lately died, and we are told it will be some months before her affairs will be settled, so that we shall not be disturbed for the present, though the principal of her heirs is against us.

We go on trusting in God and fearing nothing. We are thankful for the prayers of God's people and as much of their practical sympathy as they feel they should give towards extending the Gospel of Christ in this place, where the darkness of superstition, on the one hand, is only equalled by spreading infidelity and indifference on the other. To help in the work, an evangelist, used of God in his own country to the conversion of souls and helping on believers, willing to do what his hand finds to do, and with ability to learn a new language, would be a treasure.

A WEEK'S MISSION.

The week of preaching mentioned in my last communication was the best attended mission we have ever had. For the first time in our twenty years' experience, we had to hold an overflow meeting in another locale, where our brethren had a good attendance. The opportunity was a good one for declaring the glad tidings of salvation. A copy of Luke's Gospel was given to every person not having a Bible or Testament, and the subjects taken at all the eleven meetings were chosen from it. At the after-meetings many remained until ten o'clock. Our only regret was that we had not strength enough to extend the mission another eight days. We pray that the work of the Holy Spirit may be manifested in permanent results.

The Book World.

Strayed East: A Story of Fall and Rescue. By Rev. Augustus R. Buckland, M.A. From the Same Nest: A Homely Tale. By Mrs. G. Linnæus Banks. "Church Monthly" Office, 30 and 31, New Bridge-street, E.C. Two wholesome stories, illustrated, and in other respects rendered very attractive.

Pen Pictures from the Life of Christ. By Rev. John Cullen, M.A. Dickinson. Taking Gospel passages, descriptive of outstanding incidents or embodying Divine instruction, Mr. Cullen founds thereon discourses which are uniformly thoughtful and pointed. Twenty-four in number, the addresses will richly repay perusal.

An Historical Interpretation of the Revelation of John. By Rev. Arthur Isham, M.A. Elliot Stock. The author delights to notice the minutiæ of various renderings and readings, and in this he has not succeeded in being always accurate. As an outline of the historical treatment of the Revelation, the book will prove instructive.

Noonday Addresses, delivered in the Central Hall, Manchester. By Rev. W. L. Watkinson. 1s. 6d. C. H. Kelly. Fresh and practical, these pages are well worthy of perusal. Mr. Watkinson knows what is floating in the public mind, and he sets himself to administer the antidote to intellectual poison, as well as to present the bread of life to the spiritually dead and dying. The addresses show a varied reading, as well as a broad sympathy.

The Old-Fashioned Book on the Old-Fashioned Religion. By an Old-Fashioned Man. 1s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster. We are glad to welcome this new edition of a popular reply to Unitarian teaching. Keen in argument and forcible in style, the book demolishes one by one the strongholds of sophistry wherein error trusts. The author enjoys a long Christian experience, and he makes the truth to shine brightly in the face of Jesus Christ. The book should be widely circulated among those who have been ensnared in the net of false doctrine.

Sweet Home, and the Way from Home to Heaven. By Rev. J. B. Figgis, M.A. 2s. 6d. Nisbet. In these twelve chapters there are counsels which, if acted upon, would convert many a home into a veritable gate of heaven. The first part of the book is devoted to a consideration of the foundation of the home, with its duties, dangers, joys, sorrows, pattern, purpose, and promise; the second part sets forth the way from home to heaven, and enlarges upon finding, showing, and missing the way. Is the subject attractive? So also is Mr. Figgis's treatment of it. Moreover, the pages are practical as well as charming, and we have no doubt they will have the many readers they deserve.

The Synagogue, not the Temple, the Germ and Model of the Christian Church. By Rev. James Gall. 5s. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. This is not so much a contribution to ecclesiastical antiquities, as an argument involving important issues in the field of Christian life and work. The questions discussed are hinted in the following sentences from Mr. Gall's very instructive work:—"The abandonment of the synagogue as the model of the Church, and the adoption of the Temple in its stead, laid an arrest on the progress of the Gospel by two different means. In the first place, the Church lost the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and ceased to be endued with evangelistic power. In the second place, the triumphs of the Gospel were arrested by the assumption of priestly functions by the Christian pastorate, and the enforced idleness of the Church, who were not permitted to take any part in the work of evangelism." The Temple, with its ritual, has been the model of Apostate churches; the synagogue, with its simplicity, has during recent years been increasingly copied by aggressive bodies of Christians. Clear in the description of great institutions, fearless in the exposure of religious folly and negligence, and sagacious as well as spiritual in suggestions for the promotion of world-wide evangelistic endeavour, the book is worthy of prayerful study. As the founder of the well-known Carrubber's-close Mission in Edinburgh, Mr. Gall has had experience of an eminently practical character, and this he brings forcibly to bear upon his theory of what a church should be, and what its members should do to advance the kingdom of God among men.

Strangely Led. The personal history and experience of Arnold Edwards. By Rev. H. E. Stone. 2s. E. Marlborough & Co. Those who know anything of the author of this attractive little book will not read many lines before they realise that it is autobiographical. How Mr. Stone was influenced for good by the sainted Baptist W. Noel, and why he identified himself with the Baptists, form specially interesting sections of the story.

The Lord's Supper is the title of an anonymous pamphlet published by Elliot Stock, in which the form, meaning, and purpose of the ordinance are studied in the light of the writings of the Apostle Paul. The author understands the second question in 1 Cor. x. 16 in this sense: "The bread which we break, is it not the symbol of our Christian fellowship and brotherhood, of our being members of the Church, and so of our belonging to Christ, and of our oneness with Christ our Head?" Though by no means following the writer in all his definitions and conclusions, we readily commend the book to thoughtful students of New Testament teaching.

The Mystery of God: A consideration of some Intellectual Hindrances to Faith. By T. Vincent Tymms. Elliot Stock. This is the fourth edition of a very thoughtful work. Atheistic perversions and rationalistic conceits are exposed and discredited by irresistible facts and arguments. On the "mystery of evil," we think the Scriptures, particularly in regard to the destiny of the wicked, are plainer than Mr. Tymms. The chapters on the oracles of God are specially valuable, and are well calculated to help readers who have been unsettled by the doubts and difficulties so thickly sown in the Christian world during recent years. The Person and Resurrection of Christ are likewise powerfully discussed.

The Church of the Nicene Period revived in Puseyism or Ritualism. By Captain George Palmer, R.N. 2d. Bristol: William F. Mack, 70, Park-street. A brief comparative statement and confutation of error of a sadly mischievous type.

WORK IN THE WEST INDIES.

Mr. John Mitchell, who is co-operating with Mrs. Huntley, of Georgetown, Demerara, reports a stay of seven weeks in Trinidad. He held some meetings of East Indians, and was much cheered to find many of them servants of Christ, having been brought to the Lord through the labours of Mr. Grant, who has been among them about seventeen years. Mr. Mitchell says:—"Since February 16 we have been staying at St. Marks, Grenada, West Indies. We had some good meetings in the market sheds. As there were special gatherings in other places, the priest forbad his people coming to hear me, but they came all the more, and we sold about £5 worth of Bibles and Testaments, as well as a few other books. Some professed to receive blessing.

"Our aged sister, Mrs. Huntley, paid many visits to hospitals and almshouses, reading to the inmates. She has now (March 28) left for St. Vincent. I remain to visit other parts of the island, which is indeed a beautiful land, with its many hills and valleys. The principal product is cocoa; nutmegs and cloves are exported in small quantities; and sufficient sugar is grown to meet the needs of the people, who number about 44,000, one-fifth of them professing to be Christians. The language is mixed French, similar to the speech of the people of Lower Canada. The moral tone is just as low as in other parts of the West Indies. What the people want is not so much pulpit preaching as the less formal instruction that may be given in the quiet of their homes or imparted by the circulation of religious literature."

French Protestants.

DEAR SIR,—I have this week, in company with Miss Dundas, had the privilege of being present at the assembly of the Mission Intérieure at Nîmes. It was interesting and encouraging to hear that during the past three years there has never been a deficit in the funds. Had more money been given more work could have been done, of course; but enough has been given to show that French Protestants are not indifferent to the evangelisation of their country. It made us feel how really French the Society is, as we were the only foreigners present at its deliberations.

Perhaps the most interesting persons in the assembly were the delegates sent from each groupe of the Mission Intérieure. Many, of course, were pastors, representing the busy members of their flock, but some were peasants from south, east, and west, saying little, but listening with a deep, intelligent, solemn interest to all that was spoken, and enjoying their exclusive privilege of voting. One of the delegates, a convert from Roman Catholicism, had travelled twenty-two hours by railway to be present at this meeting.

Nothing impressed me so much as the meetings for prayer. Such prayers, so varied, so earnest, so intense, so direct, following one another without pause, sometimes two commencing at once, never too long, never with needless repetitions. Pastor Delate, whose work among a Catholic population has been so successful, prayed most touchingly for France.

At the evening meetings the chapel was crowded to the utmost extent, the "temples" of Nîmes not being available for meetings on the principle of the Evangelical Alliance. I would like to tell of the throngs who pressed to the communion on the afternoon of Friday, and of the precious truths we heard from many of the Lord's faithful servants. But these truths are known well to English Christians, and there is no need to repeat them here. The two reports, by Pastor Houter and M. Sainton, are most interesting, and make known something of the work and aims of the Mission. It is probable that M. Sainton may visit England this summer to seek for the sympathy and the prayers of English Christians, by making known something of the work, the needs, and the difficulties of the Mission. The report as well as the journal of the Mission can be had from M. Houter, 7, Rue Dragon, Marseilles.

And now the assembly is over, and the delegates dispersed, it is a joy to think in how many remote villages the groupes will meet to hear what was said and done in the assembly of Nîmes, and to consult how they can in their different ways contribute to the advancement of the kingdom of God. Certainly our own groupe of the Garonne will pray for the other groups, and feel our responsibility as we have never felt it before. How much needs to be done! At Nîmes, not many minutes' walk from the Free Church where we met, bull-fights are still held on Sundays and holidays. We are a very little flock here, but we know that greater is He that is with us than he that is in the world.—Yours very sincerely,

S. R. GELDARD.

Monclar, France, April 12.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on the following:—An eight days' mission at the Bow and Bromley Institute, Bow-road, E., conducted by Rev. W. Evans Hurndall, commencing on Sunday next.——A mission at Hurstpierpoint, by Mr. John Wood, April 27 to May 4.——A three months' tent mission, at North Camp, Aldershot, conducted by Mr. Thomas Wales, to commence in May.

Concerted measures are to be taken by the representatives of all religious bodies in Newcastle and Gateshead for the suppression of drunkenness, gambling, and the neglect and cruel treatment of women and children. Mr. Fred Hemley, 7, Ellison-place, Newcastle, is acting as hon. secretary of the Conference.

Obituary.

MADAME MORIN.

THE Paris churches mourn the death of this lady, wife of the doctor whose devotion to Christian work, especially in connection with the Home of Deaconesses, is so well known. She was the eldest daughter of the sainted Adolphe Monod. An illness of several months terminated rather suddenly, but with the serenity which confidence in God alone can inspire and sustain.

REV. ROBERT McALL.

With regret we record the death of Rev. R. McAll (cousin of the well-known Dr. R. W. McAll, of Paris), which took place suddenly, on Tuesday, at Worthing, whither he had gone, in company with his wife, for rest from work. He was suffering from an affection of the heart, and an attack from this cause terminated fatally. Mr. McAll commenced pastoral work at Hanley in 1861, removing to Leeds in 1865, and to Bocking in 1871. He entered on his last pastorate at Union Church, Portishead, in 1881, but resigned the charge on his appointment, in 1887, as the representative in Great Britain of the McAll Mission in France. To press the claims of this great work upon the Christian public of England, Mr. McAll attended meetings and conferences in various parts of the country, and his services to the cause were rendered with ability and grace.

REV. J. H. BUDDEN.

The death is announced of Rev. J. H. Budden, a retired missionary of the London Missionary Society in the North-West Provinces, India. He was in his seventy-seventh year, and had laboured in India since 1841. He was the father of the Almora Mission, which was commenced by him in 1850 at the solicitation of Sir Henry Ramsay and other Christian gentlemen resident in the province of Kumaon. From that time, until his resignation at the end of 1887, he was the moving spirit of the Mission, and by his marked character and energetic Christian spirit he was instrumental in inaugurating a work in many branches, the continuous and growing prosperity of which has been the joy of his declining years. Amongst other monuments of Mr. Budden's varied and active service is a Leper Asylum which provides accommodation for over one hundred poor sufferers from that dread disease. Mr. Budden died at Almora on March 18, and although for a long time an invalid, almost helpless, he continued to do some form of work to the last.

MRS. SPENCER WALTON.

A great sorrow has befallen the Cape General Mission. The Lord has taken to Himself the wife of Mr. Spencer Walton, the director. She died on Monday, March 24, leaving a son two weeks old. Hers is another precious life laid down for Africa, not, as some have been, amid the hardships of the wilderness life. But medical skill and the best of nursing could not keep her, for the Master called her. Her life in Africa was not without precious fruit. One and another came to say, "She led me to Christ," and great was her joy to see a soul won from death to life. Those who attended her Bible-readings will not forget her clear, ringing tones, nor the earnestness with which she brought home the truth. Her bright, brave spirit, and her simple trust in God, won the hearts of all who knew her.

Seldom in Cape Town has there been such a funeral, with such demonstrations of sympathy and sorrow from the great multitude. Prayer is asked for the bereaved husband; for the parents and friends in England, to whom the sad tidings come as a heavy blow; for the Cape General Mission, that to each member may come a double portion of the Lord's Spirit through this sacrifice; and for South Africa, that the many hearts made tender through this trial may find rest and victory in Jesus.

A. P. F.

I have been asked to forward the above short notice of Mrs. Walton's death, and cannot refrain from adding a few words. The chastisement is a very grievous one, and the sorrow very deep. But we praise God for the comfort and strength given to our beloved brother to rest in his will, and even to rejoice in Himself. We praise Him for another link to bind us to heaven, and the hope of our all being gathered to our Lord in his glory. We praise Him for the assured hope that, in answer to the prayer of God's saints, this baptism of suffering to our young Mission will be the pledge of new and deeper blessing, in gathering us all in sympathy round our beloved Director, and gathering him and us around the beloved Master who hath done it. We praise Him that we know that this grain of corn too, falling into the ground and dying will not abide alone, but will bring forth much fruit. In this confidence we say to all our friends, Praise with us, pray for us. Let us all seek to live and die only that He may be known and honoured. And may we be found waiting when He comes!

PROFESSOR ODIN.

The Christian community of Lausanne is mourning the loss of M. Odin, professor at the Academy. A few days ago he ascended the Rochers de Naye, Montreux. Leaving the beaten path, he wished to pick his way where no one had ever ventured before, and at last, while still in sight of a companion, he found himself unable to advance or retreat. For eight hours, under a burning sun, he tried to extricate himself, and at last he had to let go his hold. His lifeless body was found the next day, which was his twenty-fifth birthday. M. Odin was highly respected for his Christian character and grace.

MR. ALEXANDER MACKAY.

This brave and God-honoured missionary has passed to his rest at the age of forty. He died from fever, in the dark land to the enlightenment of which he devoted his life. Mr. Mackay was a son of Rev. Dr. Mackay, a well-known Scotch minister, still alive and residing at Ventnor. When, in 1875, on the appearance of Mr. Stanley's memorable letter from Uganda, the Church Missionary Society resolved to begin work on the Victoria Nyanza, young Mr. Mackay was one of the first to volunteer service. He was then a mechanical engineer at Berlin, able and accomplished in a worldly sense, and spiritually minded in a high degree.

He sailed for Africa, with other members of the first party, in April, 1876. Rev. F. E. Wigram, hon. sec. of the C.M.S., summarises his experiences: "On the journey inland, in Ugogo, he was taken ill, and was sent back to the coast, but he refused to leave for England, and for more than a year he was occupied in making a rough road from the coast to Mpwapwa. When the news reached him of the death of Lieutenant Shergold Smith and Mr. O'Neill on the Victoria Nyanza, he pushed on to join Rev. C. T. Wilson, who was then alone in Uganda. He arrived in Mtesa's capital, after many delays, in December, 1878, and from that time until July, 1887, Uganda was his home. Other missionaries went and came; he stayed on. At length the bitter hostility of the Arab traders virtually drove him out; but even then he would not come to England, but remained at the south end of the lake, where Mr. Stanley found him in September last, and where, we presume, he has now died."

Mr. Mackay's recent negotiations with King Mwanga are still well in mind. His death is a great loss to the mission field, but God will surely carry on the work by raising up men like-minded in devotion and courage. In an early issue we hope to give a portrait of Mr. Mackay, and sketch of his life-work.

MRS. BOOTH'S general condition has somewhat improved during the past week. There has been an increase in strength, and much more freedom from intense pain than she has had for some time.

EVANGELICAL TRACT SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Evangelical Tract Society and Prayer Union was held at the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, on the 15th inst. It brought together a goodly company of Christian workers for thanksgiving and edification concerning tract distribution. Pastor Frank H. White, and Messrs. Robert Paton, James L. Stanley, William Luff, E. C. Newbery, and Alfred Holness gave stirring addresses; but to these we do not draw so much attention now as to the organisation itself, which appears to meet a long-felt need. Christians of every position in life are invited to membership. They have the privilege to contribute monthly to the funds, according to personal ability, and to receive each month as many tracts as they need for personal distribution—the tracts being always fresh, assorted, and above all, always true to the setting forth of Christ crucified. Having originated nine years ago in a Sunday-school class, the Society has now a membership of two hundred, in this land and elsewhere.

Letters to the Editor.

"APOSTOLIC WARFARE."

Dear Sir,—I have been greatly interested in the correspondence in your columns on this subject, and having had some little acquaintance with the working of the S. A., I shall be glad if you can find space for a few remarks, especially on the letter of Mr. C. J. Bird, in your issue of the 18th.

The first thing that strikes me in reading it is the difficulty our friend finds in deciding who was the General in Apostolic times. In one paragraph we have James; in the next, Paul is the autocrat; and lower down the General is spoken of as a successor of Peter.

The reference to Acts xv. is one of the most remarkable attempts to expound Scripture to suit a preconceived notion I have met with. The narrative does not tell us who presided at the meeting; still less, that James heard the opinions of his subordinates, adopted what seemed to him to be the wisest, and gave his decision accordingly. What is stated is, that after hearing expressions of opinion from Peter, James and others, the whole Church decided the question, whether by vote or otherwise we are not told, though the probability is that those present were so thoroughly of one mind that no vote was necessary. There was no need of a committee when the whole Church transacted the business; but we do find that, as soon as the whole body had decided on the course to be adopted, they proceeded to appoint a committee to carry out their decision.

The assertion that the Apostle Paul occupied a position in the early Church similar to that claimed for General Booth, has already been fully dealt with in your columns. The question is not what authority did Paul exercise over companies of believers just gathered out of heathenism and needing to be taught the very first principles of the Christian faith; but did he not endeavour so to instruct and lead them on that in a little time they should become self-governing churches, having their own elders, exercising their own discipline, and vigorously carrying forward the work of God in their own locality without external interference? Who was General over the church at Jerusalem or Antioch? Certainly not Paul, for he was commissioned by them (not by any one man, but by the whole Church, in obedience to the promptings of the Holy Spirit) to be their missionary to the Gentiles.

I most cordially endorse Mr. Bird's high estimate of the personal character of William Booth. But whilst this explains the love and devotion felt for him by thousands of his followers, it does not prove that the position claimed for him is either right or scriptural. And the question of a successor must be considered, notwithstanding our friend's dictum, "Great men rarely have a successor." Someone must take the position when the present General dies, or the whole organisation will have to be reconstructed.

I feel very diffident in criticising the conduct of one so honoured of God, but it does appear clear to me that William Booth has had one of the grandest opportunities God has been pleased to give to any of his servants in our century, and that he has missed it. Missed it because, instead of seeking to consolidate our forces and to weld all true earnest Christians into one vast army, presenting an unbroken front to the foe, he has been content merely to found a new sect. We had too many sects already, were already too divided, and what was needed was something to bring us closer together, not to create a fresh bar of separation.

That the S. A. must be regarded as a sect is evident, when we remember that before any one can be enrolled as a soldier he must not only be willing to submit to the authority of the General in matters of government and discipline, but also to a considerable extent to accept the General's interpretation of Scripture as infallible. For instance, however earnest and zealous a Christian brother may be, and however desirous of winning souls for Christ, he cannot be admitted into the Army ranks if he be known to hold the doctrine of the eternal safety of all true believers, and to believe in the literal truth of Christ's words—"I give unto my sheep eternal life, and they shall never perish."

And now as to the boasted liberty in the Salvation Army. Where is it found, and in what does it consist? I am a lay preacher, toiling hard all the week, and engaged nearly every Sunday in preaching the word of life in neighbouring village chapels; and, in doing so, I find the most absolute liberty to declare the whole truth of God, so far as God has been pleased to teach it me by his Spirit and his Word. Is there the same freedom in the S. A.? I unhesitatingly answer, No.

The officers are not only bound down as to the number of meetings to be held, but also as to what the character of those meetings must be, and the class of address to be delivered. No S. A. officer, for instance, would be permitted to organise a class for a mutual study of the Scriptures.

It is true that very few meetings are held in which a few verses of the Bible are not read, sometimes with and sometimes without comment; but anything like a continued and systematic study of the Scriptures is quite unknown in Army circles. And it is to a lack of this, together with unscriptural teaching on the subject of backsliding and falling away, that we must attribute a large proportion of the desertions to the world of those once found in the Army ranks. Earnest appeals to the unconverted, and urging of professing Christians to consecration and holiness, are doubtless pressing in their importance, but they are not all that is needed to build up a church. There must be food as well as spur.

Again, the Army officers are not at liberty to fraternise with their fellow-believers outside the Army ranks, by exchange of services, taking part in special meetings, and other ways in which Christians of other denominations show their unity and sympathy in each other's work.—Yours truly,

Northampton. Joseph Leadbeater.

[We have received several other communications on both sides of this discussion, but the pressure upon our space with the May meetings will necessitate our now closing the correspondence, unless Mr. Railton, or any other representative of the Army itself, should wish to write a final letter in reply to the criticisms that have been published.—Ed.]

CAREFUL BIBLE STUDY.

Sir,—Your trenchant criticism of some of the notes—those on Esther—which generally are so valuable, on the chapters which are being read day by day by the thousands and tens of thousands who have joined Mr. Richardson's "Bible and Prayer Union"—one chapter daily straight through the Bible—will no doubt be criticised in return, and possibly with some severity. I am therefore moved to send a few words of approval. You drew attention to a very real defect which often disfigures and even destroys the value of remarks made by commentators, which are unsuspectingly adopted by preachers. Good and wholesome doctrine is set forth, but it is not the doctrine contained in the passage on which they are making comments, or in the text on which they are preaching. The notes on Esther are, as you justly observe, an instance of this; and I for one am thankful to you for putting into emphatic language thoughts which passed through my own mind when I read those notes.

If you think well to print this confirmation of your opinion, coming from one who has no claim to be heard as an authority, but only as an ordinary, though perhaps I may venture to add careful and reverent, reader of God's Word, allow me further to found upon this incident a word of practical advice—viz., to read God's Word at least twice or thrice to every once of the commentary on it. Read the passage first, looking definitely to the Holy Spirit for some special teaching out of it; then the commentary; and then the passage again. At family prayer, for the last thirty years and more, I have done this, reading first the few verses, then the commentary, and then again the Word of God.

In connection also with this important subject of reading God's Word with a view to personal profit, may I mention a plan which I began a little more than seven years ago, and have continued using, with an intermission of about two months (from illness), to the present time. It has served me for twice, and a little over, through the Bible. It is a very simple plan, and will suit equally well for any other mode of reading the Bible. It is this: Having read the chapter for the day, select some portion out of it—a verse, seldom more, more often less, not infrequently a single word, and by preference, if it be so, one that occurs more than once in the chapter. I keep a record of these verses, and at the end of the week revise them, having seven verses chosen from the seven chapters; and of these seven I choose one. A few friends adopt the same plan, and we have formed ourselves into a little "Bible Searchers' Union." We meet once a week for an hour to talk over these—the finally selected verses, which we call our "nuggets." In fact, the plan itself had its origin from the experience, as revealed to me, of a friend who went to the gold diggings in the early days of that venture, when all was done by personal labour. He started with £100 in his pocket, remained three years, enduring very much hardship, and brought home nothing; only he was a wiser man. This was to me a very suggestive comment on Prov. ii. 4: "If thou seekest her as silver," &c., and acts still as putting to shame, by contrast, my most diligent searchings, in view of such a promise as this, "My word shall not return unto Me void."

It is just possible that on reading this mode of studying God's Word, someone otherwise disposed to try it may be deterred by the thought, the excuse, that it would take up too much time. To any such let me suggest that possibly by rising a little earlier in the morning the time may be found. My searchings are but few in any given day, if not done before breakfast. May I commend to the members of Mr. Richardson's Bible and Prayer Union a book on Job, not much known, but very thoughtfully and carefully written by Surgeon-Major Hutchinson, published by Bagster & Sons.

William Ogle.

A WORD OF CHEER.

[We not infrequently receive a letter like the following. We insert this on account of the suggestion at its close.]

Dear Sir,—I should like to bear my testimony to the increasing interest and value of your paper, The Christian. I have often had cause to be thankful for the words of help and encouragement, counsel and warning, found in your columns; it has proved a good influence in our household, and in others that I know, and is always a welcome paper to lend to neighbours. I have taken it weekly almost constantly since 1863, and I have two or three special copies of that date now, which have to me very interesting remembrances.

You may be interested to know that now and for some years past, when we have read our copy, it is posted to our relations at Hawthorne, near Melbourne. They send it on to Eagle Hawk, near Sandhurst; from there it is sent to Ipswich, near Brisbane; and sometimes from there it finds its way up country in the Bush, always proving a welcome visitor. The good this single copy does none of us can tell, but in letters we have, there is frequent mention of how it is appreciated.

I trust, Sir, the same tone of faithfulness and out-spoken love of the truth may continue to mark its pages, and that the temperance cause will also continue to have prominence with you. If you think this would be of any use to encourage others not to let their copies lie idle upon the shelf, you are welcome to use it.

Praying that you may be very richly blessed in your work of distributing the truth, I am, yours sincerely, Benjamin Cooper.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent "W. G." refers to a "Jewish Commentary," which put him in possession of the mystic meaning of the book of Esther. He gives the name of the book to which he refers, "The Coming of Messiah in Glory and Majesty, by Jehoshaphat Ben Ezra."

It may add to the interest which he justly feels in this most remarkable work to know that the writer was not a Jew (the name under which he wrote being an assumed one), but a Roman Catholic, and, strange to say, a Jesuit, by name Lacunza. I have the book in two volumes, translated from the Spanish with a long preface by Rev. Edward Irving. Irving traces his own enlightenment on the subject of prophetic truth very much to this book, and, as Irving was more perhaps than any other man the means, under God, of awakening Christians in England to right views as to the Lord's Second Coming, we all of us owe a debt of gratitude to "this worthy old Jesuit," as Irving calls him.

At the same time, it would perhaps be truer to say that at the time he wrote this great work on the Coming of Messiah, he had been a Jesuit, for he criticises the evils of the Church of Rome very freely; in fact, as Irving says, "I am very certain that, with all our boasted liberality, there is not one amongst us who durst have spoken such free truths of the evils and errors of his communion as this honest Catholic hath of the Papal Church."

I may mention, in illustration of this, that he explains the second, two-horned, lamb-like beast of Rev. xiii. as being the priesthood of the Church of Rome. Here are his words:—

"Yes, my friend; our priesthood, this it is, and nothing else, which is here signified, and announced for the last times, under the metaphor of a beast with two horns, as a lamb. Our priesthood, which, like the Good Shepherd, should defend the flock of Christ, and for it lay down their own lives, shall prove in those times its greatest scandal, and most perilous snare. Why do you hold that this proposition is extravagant? Are you haply ignorant of history? Are you ignorant of the heinous and loud scandals of the Hebrew priesthood? Who utterly undid the Jews but their priesthood?"

"W. G.'s" quotation bearing on Israel as Vashti being displaced by Esther, yet again to be brought back to the king's favour, comes with all the more weight from one who was not a Jew, but a member—though perhaps a very loose one—of that church which has, more than any other, persecuted Israel, and claimed to be permanently taken into God's favour in her stead; whose language is: "The branches were broken off that I might be grafted in" (Rom. xi. 19). "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow" (Rev. xviii. 7).

Do not the words, "I am no widow," in this last quoted text, as being the language not of the true Church but of the false, throw light on a question raised in your last week's "Inquirers' Column"? Is not the Church plainly the widow of Luke xviii. 2 (see ver. 7)?—Yours sincerely,

Bromley, Kent. HENRY E. BROOKE.

JEWS IN GERMANY.

DEAR SIR,—It was with deep regret that I read the report of a conversation between Dr. Stöcker and a representative of The Pall Mall Gazette reproduced in THE CHRISTIAN of April 4. In spite of the apparent saintliness of some phrases, the statements of Dr. Stöcker are partial, exaggerated, and altogether inspired by a spirit of unfairness. It is a gross exaggeration to say that the Jewish element in Berlin has all the money, and therefore all the power in its hands, or that they form the majority in any of the national schools. It is not true that there is such a place in the whole of Germany where the only judge and the only two solicitors are Jews. It is a misrepresentation to say that nearly the whole of the Berlin daily press is in the hands of the Jews. The story of the Jewish manufacturer who gave the nefarious advice to the manager is of such a kind that Dr. Stöcker could never substantiate it. According to his own statement he repeats the bad story from the mouth of one witness, who may have spoken in hatred or malice, or even to please Dr. Stöcker, whose hatred and ready exposure of the Jews are well known. Dr. Stöcker has had already often enough to cancel suchlike rash anti-Jewish indictments, by which his veracity and trustworthiness have greatly suffered.

We who are living on the Continent have had many proofs where the anti-Semitic agitation headed and sanctioned by Dr. Stöcker tends to. It produces riots, thefts, plunderings, all sorts of horrible deeds, even murders. Can anyone wonder that it has led to such results when we hear Dr. Stöcker unblushingly assert in the hearing of an English journalist: "It must be evident to all seeing men that it is not by fair means that the Jews acquire their great wealth. In the country they cheat as tradespeople, and in town they grow rich by their money transactions, which are anything but honest." Such a statement is simply shameful, and must incite the votaries of Dr. Stöcker with anything but a kind feeling towards these exacting Jews.

There is but one legitimate and evangelical way of counteracting Jewish influence, so far as it may be harmful to Christian nations, and that is by preaching the Gospel, in season and out of season, by teaching the virtues of righteousness, temperance, chastity, love, gentleness, and a steady confession of the truth as it is in Jesus. Agitations like those of Dr. Stöcker are as far removed from this as the east is from the west, and only embitter and harden the Jews and demoralise the Christians. And then it does not speak well of the truth and justice of the man that he has repeated the same stories contained in this conversation for the last twelve years. Has he nothing new to report?

Men like the late Professor Delitzsch have, as I learned it from his own lips, deeply regretted the tendency of Dr. Stöcker and his friends, and looked upon their anti-Jewish crusade as altogether unchristian. Dr. Stöcker is a champion and leader of the Conservative party in Prussia, which has always excelled in despising and hating the Jews. It is the "furor Teutonicus" which is raging in Dr. Stöcker against the Jews, but which he mistakes for the very zeal of the Holy Ghost.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." The fruits of Dr. Stöcker's agitation are most deplorable; he has the awful responsibility of all the outrages in connection with anti-Semitism, of which we hear and read daily. The seed which Dr. Stöcker and his co-workers have sown, and are still disseminating, is followed by a terrible harvest, without any blessings to the Christians.—Yours very truly,

C. A. SCHOENBERGER,
Missionary of the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews.

PERFECTIONISM.

Sir,—While reading the correspondence upon the subject of "Perfectionism" in THE CHRISTIAN of April 11, I recalled a conversation which I had with Rev. F. D. Sanford some two or three years ago. When I asked him whether he believed that the principle of sin was ever completely eliminated from the heart of the believer, he replied with an illustration. He told me that once on taking a house, to his horror he found that it was infested with moth. He employed what he called a "vermin-killer," to rid him of the evil. Mr. Sanford accompanied this man all over the house, with the object of discovering the source of the nuisance. They had almost despaired of success, when a small cupboard at the very top of the house, which had so far escaped observation, was opened, and, lo! an old pillow appeared, completely filled with the offending element.

"There you are," said the vermin man; "remove all this, and you will not have a single moth in your house."

"This," said Mr. Sanford to me, "illustrates the way in which God removes the principle of sin from the heart—no half measure—but a complete cleansing."

To what, I ask, does this teaching point? The answer surely is, to sinless perfection, pure and simple; and then what becomes of the inspired word, "If we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us"?—Yours, &c.,

Eastbourne. J. C. HORNSBY WRIGHT.

DEAR SIR,—Permit me to submit, in reference to the present controversy relative to "Perfection," whether the discussion would not be obviated, and much valuable time and labour saved for direct service, if each side would come to a definite understanding in relation to the following principles:—

(1) That all believers are provisionally perfect in Christ, as "Head over all things unto the Church, which is his body."

(2) That all "are justified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus."

(3) But nevertheless that all need a great High Priest within the vail so long as they are "in this tabernacle," to hear their confessions and to pronounce his priestly absolution in response thereto.

(4) That, inasmuch as this provision has been made in grace, to meet the failures of all his members while on earth, all the cautions, warnings, and dissuasive precepts anticipate and suppose these failures.

(5) Yet that the aim of each child of God should be "to strive according to his working" (i.e., the Holy Spirit), who worketh in him mightily, to shape his life, conduct, and character, according to these Divine precepts.

(6) And that, if he does not, then Divine discipline follows, according to the moral government of God, as "Our Father" in Christ—"whereof all are partakers" (Heb. xii. 8).—I am, yours to serve,

Manseville, Harringay.

[If these truths were adhered to, and all were satisfied with them, there would be no difficulty. Our contention is with the teaching which represents the believer as practically independent of the continuous cleansing of the blood of Christ and of his High Priestly ministry.—ED.]

IRELAND.—Mr. and Mrs. Powers have held successful Gospel meetings in South Great George's-street Methodist Church, Dublin. Two members of the "Faith Mission," of Scotland, are holding services in Lombard-street Bethel, Dublin.

MR. J. CHAPMAN, who recently went out to Australia to undertake mission work, has safely arrived at Sydney. During the outward voyage on board the Austral he had many opportunities of testifying for Christ among his fellow-passengers. A large number of Gospel services and Bible-readings were held, much interest being manifested in them. Two clergymen on board and other Christian friends worked harmoniously with Mr. Chapman, and spiritual blessing and encouragement were the result.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. D. L. Moody, acceding to the desire of many, is continuing his religious meetings in New York city.

Alvaston, Derby.—Rev. T. C. Harris, vicar of Alvaston, writes to say that much blessing has accompanied a mission there by Mr. Howell. He is anxious to follow up the work, and would be glad of a supply of suitable tracts.

Dr. L. Munhall, assisted by Professor and Mrs. Lowe, has been evangelising with many manifest tokens of success at Brooklyn. The work, says a New York paper, has been a memorable one, and will undoubtedly leave a lasting impression.

Mr. Wm. Forbes has been holding a weeks' mission in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Chatham, with results which have greatly encouraged the pastor (Rev. S. D. Scammell). The afternoon and evening congregations were large, and many requests for prayer were handed in. Several have been led to decide for Christ, and have applied to be received into Church fellowship.

Dr. Pentecost's mission opened very hopefully in Aberdeen. The evening meetings are held in the Music Hall, which is well filled every night and packed to overflowing on Sabbaths. The afternoon meetings are in the Free West Church. Many are professing conversion, and the interest is deepening daily. The ministers of the city are most cordial and deeply interested. The presence and power of the Spirit are most manifest.

Mr. Richard Weaver commenced an eight days' mission at the Gospel Hall, Wood Green, N., last Lord's Day. During the previous week well-attended meetings were held to pray for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit in connection with this effort. On Sunday evening the hall was crowded, and the urgent appeals of the evangelist had good effect. For some months Mr. Weaver has been in very feeble health, and the prayers of our readers are asked that he may be strengthened in his labour for the Lord.

Mr. E. P. Telford's work in New York has been greatly blessed. Throughout March, aided by his beloved wife, he laboured in connection with Olivet Church and Broome-street Tabernacle, and inquirers as to the way of salvation were many. The first two weeks of April were occupied in holding meetings in the De Witt Memorial Church. Mr. Telford writes: "On the 20th we go to Chicago to preach in Mr. Moody's Tabernacle for thirty days. We are hoping to be at Northfield during the Conference in August."

Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk.—A seven days' mission has been held at Bury, conducted by Rev. R. Balgarnie. The services were well attended, and many persons entered the inquiry-room. On the last night of the mission the Salvation Army marched with their band through the streets to the service. At the close an address was given to the converts, after which a testimony meeting was held, in which many Christians of various denominations took part. Mr. Balgarnie left to begin a mission at Preston, in Lancashire.

Mr. W. R. Lane has concluded an eight days' mission at Cambridge in connection with the Y.M.C.A. A number of young men accepted Christ as their Saviour, and bravely witnessed for Him. Backsliders have been restored, and those who had been standing aloof have been drawn together in the bonds of Christian love. Mr. Lane has won the hearts of all by his manliness, heartiness, and courtesy.

E. MONTAGU MANNING,
President Y.M.C.A. Union.

Mumbles.—Commencing on Sunday week, Mr. John Connor, of Salop, has been conducting a special mission at the Mission-room, Mumbles, near Swansea. This is not Mr. Connor's first visit to the Mumbles, and his presence amongst the congregation of the Mission-hall has been much appreciated. Throughout the week the services have been very well attended, and much good has resulted. Mr. Connor comes to London next week to conduct the services of the evangelistic mission at Malden Hall, Haverstock-hill, on Sundays and Thursdays, and at Kilburn Hall, Kilburn, on Wednesday evenings throughout May.

MR. A. H. BAYNES, secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, has returned to England after his visit to India and Ceylon.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. S. A. Selwyn is expected home in time to address the annual meeting of the Church Missionary Society on May 6.

Though he has passed the Psalmist's limit of fourscore years, the Bishop of Guiana (says The Rock) seems as energetic as ever. He is making another of his arduous diocesan tours. Just now he is visiting new territory in the Pomeroon Mission on the borders of the great Orinoco rivers. "In these expeditions he cheerfully undergoes exposures, submits to privations, and runs risks which might well damp the ardour of a young man."

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

On April 10, Darlington Monthly Meeting "liberated" the venerable Isaac Sharp, who has already travelled so widely as a Christian missionary, for service in Syria, Constantinople, India, Japan, and America. He is now in his 84th year, yet feels his heart drawn out to this extensive service to "Friends and others."

Such blessing has rested on the work in Oxford that the Friends there have been enabled and encouraged to purchase the chapel and mission-room in which the services have been held. The half of the £1950 required has already been subscribed. Great gratitude has been expressed for the success thus vouchsafed.

Bristol Quarterly Meeting, on April 15, was a time of interest and profit. Friends were cheered by an increase both of members and adherents. At Western Quarterly Meeting next day, a large increase of the "attenders" was expected. The subject of capital punishment was taken up and referred to the Yearly Meeting for immediate action; and how to reach and retain the young men is to be dealt with at the autumn Quarterly Meeting in Leominster.

METHODIST.

Memorial stones of a new Wesleyan chapel have been laid at Arkholme, near Lancaster. An old inn has been purchased, and the dancing-room is to be converted into a Sunday-school, and the inn itself into two cottages.

Blenheim-street Chapel, Newcastle, is being successfully adapted to the principles of the "Forward Movement." It is advantageously situated among the masses, and offers good opportunities for home mission work. At the last Wesleyan Conference Rev. F. C. Stuart was sent to the circuit, and he has special charge of the mission work. The services have been re-organised and made full of spirit and "go."

The Bible Christian missionaries in China report various encouraging signs that their labours are being owned of God. Having acquired a knowledge of the language they are now regularly preaching in several places in the province of Yunnan, and the hearts of many people are evidently becoming affected by the great truths of the Gospel. Messrs. Vanstone, Thorne, Pollard, and Dymond, all express confidence that a large harvest will soon be garnered into the Church of Christ in China.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. John McNeill has now been a clear year at Regent-square Church. In that time some 240 persons have been added to the membership.

The church opened at Brondesbury, N.W., three years ago has now a membership of 140, being an increase during the past twelve months of forty-four. A vigorous district mission has been begun, and has met with much success under the care of a Bible-woman.

Rev. G. A. Smith has decided not to become a candidate for the chair of Hebrew in the London Presbyterian College, vacant by the death of Professor Elmslie. The other names mentioned in connection with the professorship are those of Revs. W. A. Walton, of Berwick, and John Skinner, of Kelso.

At the meeting of the Young Men's Christian Institute of Clapham-road Church (Rev. Dr. MacEwan's), held last week, a paper was read by Mr. Cng Siang (a member of the society, but of Chinese nationality) on the Opium Traffic. He traced the history of the traffic from 1781 to the present time, showing that it had been forced upon the Chinese nation contrary to their wishes by war and by treaty, and that his nation had only yielded an unwilling consent to the demoralising and destructive drug by reason of superior force.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The last of the series of Mrs. Reaney's Sunday afternoon services at Cavendish Chapel, Manchester, will be held on Sunday, 27th inst.

Rev. H. Elwyn Thomas is delivering a series of sermons at Tolmers-square Church, Hampstead-road, N.W., on Professor Drummond's book, "The Greatest Thing in the World."

Wigston Church (Rev. F. C. Deeming, pastor) reports twenty-seven members added to the church during the past year. A monthly Sunday evening service for the people has been instituted; by the introduction of music, a practical address on some special topic, and house-to-house visitation, a crowded attendance is secured.

The annual meetings of the Yorkshire Congregational Union were held last week at Whitby. Rev. Frederick Hall, of Heckmondwike, expounded the mission of the pulpit. Rev. J. C. Johnson, of Leeds, dealt with the "Union of the Churches for a Common Aim," and Rev. Duncan Grant followed on the same subject. Rev. Bryan Dale read the report of the Committee on "Aggressive home missionary work in large towns." Mr. Alfred Sykes was elected chairman of the Union for the ensuing year. Wednesday was mostly devoted to missionary meetings.

SALVATION ARMY.

Rev. John Cox, who is now in his 80th year, and was from 1837 to 1861 a missionary in India of the London Society, since which time he has been living in retirement, has, with his wife, become connected with the Salvation Army at Madras.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

Mr. S. Williamson, M.P., recently laid the memorial stone of the Chalmers Memorial Church, now being erected in Anstruther, the native town of that great divine. The building is to seat 750 persons, and towards the estimated cost of £6500 Mr. Williamson has contributed nearly £5000.

NOTES FROM WALES.

A meeting is to be held at Shrewsbury to discuss the question of greater unity among the various denominations in Wales.

In the Principality generally, Bank Holiday is a period of great spiritual activity. During the last Good Friday and Easter days preaching services were held at many places of worship.

According to the report of President T. G. Jenkyn at the quarterly meeting of the East Glamorgan Congregational Association, the Congregational churches of the Rhonda Valley have a membership of over 7000. They have contributed upwards of £100,000 towards religious purposes in twelve years.

BAPTIST.

The church at Waltham Abbey, under the pastorate of Mr. W. Jackson, has undertaken a mission at Waltham Cross, where there is a large and new neighbourhood.

Rev. H. Winsor, of South Stockton, inaugurated a series of special monthly addresses in his church at the beginning of last year. They have proved highly acceptable and are doing much good.

The spring meetings of the Baptist Union take place in London next week. The first session will be held in Bloomsbury Chapel on Monday afternoon, when the new President (Rev. James Owen, of Swansea) will deliver his inaugural address.

Sunday afternoon services for men have been held during the winter at the church at Halifax of which Rev. A. B. Preston is pastor. There has been a good average attendance, the audiences being largely composed of sceptical and non-church-going men.

Rev. T. R. Stevenson, who a short time since left Derby to go out to China, continues to labour at Union Church, Shanghai, with gratifying tokens of success. The congregat ons are usually exceedingly good, and the attendance at the Lord's Supper has improved. During the winter season a series of special discourses was given by Mr. Stevenson on eminent men, embrac.ng John Bunyan, Robert Raikes, &c.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Dr. James O'Sullivan, Archdeacon of Galway, has been elected Bishop of Tuam, to succeed the late Dr. Bernard.

During the past fortnight about 200 meetings were held throughout Ireland in support of the Wesleyan Missionary Society.

Under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., Dr. Henry Grattan Guinness has, during the past week, delivered a series of lectures in Belfast, which were largely attended, and calculated to evoke much enthusiasm on behalf of foreign missions.

The Irish Society has had a fairly successful year, and but for its efforts many churches and schools in the south and west of Ireland would have been closed, and many districts left without any pastoral care.

The report presented to the recent annual meeting of the Hibernian Bible Society, held in Dublin, was very encouraging. Since the formation of the Society in 1806 it has circulated 5,000,000 copies of the Bible or portions of the Bible, and of these 38,000 were sent forth during the past year.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Rev. J. Edwards, Porth, suddenly.—Rev. J. Jerman Jones, late missionary on the Khassia Hills, India, died on board ship, en route for England.—Mr. Hugh Robinson, an earnest elder in Duncairn Presbyterian Church, Belfast.—Mr. John Ferguson, treasurer of Newtownstreda Presbyterian Church.—Rev. William Roberts, who for nearly half a century occupied a prominent position in the ministry in Wales, having been chairman of the Congregational Union of Wales.—Mr. Thomas Charlesworth, a prominent worker, connected with Park Wesleyan Chapel, Sheffield, for more than half a century.—In the Mauritius, Mrs. Shaw, wife of Rev. A. Downes Shaw, of the C.M.S. East African Mission.—Mrs. Franklin, for thirty years connected with the Midnight Meeting Movement.—At Crouch End, N., Rev. E. J. Evans, from 1851 to 1860 a missionary in India under the auspices of the London Missionary Society.

FRANCE.—M. Poincenot, formerly parish priest at Etobon, Haute-Saône, has just entered upon a Reformed Church pastorate in the same place.—The Paris society which concerns itself with the crying abuse of tobacco, is making new friends. The annual meeting was held a few days ago, when the need for legislation to suppress juvenile smoking was strongly emphasised.—Dr. Gustave Monod has accepted the presidency of the Paris Temperance Society.—In connection with the Reformed Church of France there are 532 parochial administrations. Not only is Divine service regularly conducted in the parish chapels and temples, but also in 696 minor preaching places.

Appeals.

Flowers for Factory Girls.—Flowers are needed for distribution amongst the thousands of women and girls working in the London factories and laundries. Write for address to which flowers can be sent direct to the hon. sec. F. H. U. Flower Misfion, Miss A. Evans, 78, West Cromwell-road, S.W.

Rev. C. F. Hubbard, the Reformed Church of England minister, New Harbour, Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, thanks all friends who have responded to former appeals. Copies of The Christian and other religious literature for distribution will be welcomed; also books suitable for lending, cards, &c., for school prizes, or worn clothing and woollen garments.

Delicate City Children.—Miss Rose Benn (38, St. Peter's-road, Mile End, E.) writes:—"Last year I was greatly helped by kind friends to send pining little ones into the country, whence they returned refreshed and rosy. I venture to come again, especially to ask for the means of clothing those whom I hope to send to Mrs. Kerwin's Forest Cottage Home, Leytonstone, during the coming season. It is necessary to dress them completely, their own ragged attire being utterly unfit for any place where cleanliness is 'the order of the day.'"

CONTINENTAL & FOREIGN NOTES.

BERLIN.—An attempt has been made lately by the well-known Pastor von Bodelschwingh to interest a greater number of women for Christian work. The plan of the Empress requires a larger number of deaconesses, but it is his idea that every Christian young lady ought to spend three to six months in a deaconess's institution to be fitted for religious work at home, in the villages, &c.

GENEVA EVANGELICAL SOCIETY.—During last year the 57 colporteurs of this Society in France put into circulation 3206 Bibles, 19,768 New Testaments, and 1733 portions of Holy Writ, besides 11,354 Christian almanacs, and 82,725 tracts. Though the Catholic priesthood puts every obstacle in the way, yet there are occasional demands for copies of God's Word, even among the strictest Romanists. At one place the prioress of a nunnery bought several New Testaments, refusing to take change due to her from the colporteur, to whom she kindly said, "Take the remainder for your Society which carries on such a good work."

BELGIUM.—The agents of the Belgian Missionary Church continue to report cheering progress. During the past three months sinners have been converted, church members have increased in numbers, the congregations generally have grown, and new meetings have been opened. In some parts persecution still shows itself. In a village near Ostend, while arrangements were in progress for interring the body of a child, the Catholics got possession of the remains, and, in spite of the wishes of the parents, buried it according to the Romish ritual. Because of his Protestant sympathies the father has since been deprived of work; having offended the priests, he has had to suffer, along with his wife and children. Those who will not obey Rome must be made to feel! The priests know the way to reduce heretics to beggary, and they do it.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

These Notes run concurrently with the Readings of the "Bible and Prayer Union," founded and conducted by Rev. Thomas Richardson, Vicar of St. Benet's, Mile End-road, London, E., of whom card of membership may be had for 1d., and Monthly Notes, prepared by himself, for 1s. per annum, post free. We hope many of our readers will become members of the "Bible and Prayer Union," and take its Monthly Notes, which of course are entirely different from these.

SUNDAY, APRIL 27.—Job XXX.

In this chapter Job contrasts his present despised and afflicted condition with the honour and prosperity he had just described (xxix.). He dwells upon two special causes for his anguish.

(1) The contempt with which he is treated by the vilest of men (1-15).—These verses (R.V.) give a most graphic picture of people driven from the haunts of civilised men, and living a most wretched and degraded life. The description probably applies to the aborigines of that district. Job's references to them are mingled with contempt (1-8); yet it must not be supposed that he had no pity for their abject condition, nor that he did nothing to help them. They are referred to in xxiv. 4-8, and were included among those mentioned in xxix. 12, 13. But they have now forgotten any sympathy he may have shown them, and are making him their byword, and the butt of their filthy insults (9-15). To be abhorred of those who were themselves abhorred of all was unspeakably trying. In this respect Job entered very closely into fellowship with the sufferings of our Lord (Ps. xxii. 6-13, cix. 1-5).

(2) The anguish he suffers from his loathsome disease (16-31).—There is a tone of despair in these words, not to be wondered at considering the contrast upon which his mind has just dwelt. And since he anticipates no deliverance from his affliction except by death (23), and regards it as being inflicted for some unexplained reason from God Himself (19), to whom he appeals earnestly, yet in vain (20-22), how can he be other than despairing? If all are against us, the thought that God is with us may sustain and comfort; but who can endure the thought that even God has become cruel to us? So Job thought, wrongly of course, but with far more excuse than can ever be pleaded for us. Let no circumstances, however trying, rob you of the assurance of God's unchanging love. The severest chastening does but prove his love (John xv. 2).

MONDAY, APRIL 28.—Job XXXI.

In this chapter and the 29th, we may learn what kind of righteousness was manifested by God's "perfect" man (i. 8). The description, though given by Job himself, must not be regarded as a self-righteous boast. He is on his defence. The cruel and unjust charges which have been made against him can only be met by such a description of his former life. No man ever gave a better experience than that given by Job. How significant the confession of vileness from such a man!

The motive of his piety was the fear of God (3, 4, 6, 14, 15, 23, 28).—If he does not always speak of God as a New Testament saint would, yet it was manifestly his desire to live constantly with the thought of God before him. He wanted to be "righteous before God" (Luke i. 6), and not merely before men. In the same way, set the Lord always before you. Unless He has the right place in our life, we cannot be right in our conduct towards others.

How sincere it was (1, 9-12).—He anticipated, and translated into action, the searching teaching of the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. v. 27-30). He aimed not only at purity of outward life, but at purity of heart. How needful it is to make a covenant with the eyes! Eve (Gen. iii. 6), Lot (Gen. xiii. 10), David (2 Sam. xi. 2), all learned the danger of a look. To keep the heart from sin we need to pray Ps. cxix. 37.

How practical it was (13-23).—It included strict and impartial justice alike in his private (13-15) and his public life (16-23). His method of looking at his servant (15), and his thought of God constantly observing him (14, 23), rendered it impossible for him to deal unjustly. The fear of God will make men deal justly towards their fellows.

How free from common sins (24-34).—Few dare appropriate such words to themselves. Neither love of gain (24, 25), nor secret joy at his enemies' misfortune (29, 30), nor want of hospitality (31, 32), nor hypocrisy in hiding his offences (33, 34), had turned him aside. Verses 26-29 refer to the worship of sun and moon, from which also he claimed to have been kept. Very much of this survives in the Ritualism of to-day. The people of God need to be kept clear of it.

Such being his character, as witnessed by his own conscience, he longs to meet with God (35-40), though he still considers Him to be his adversary (35).

TUESDAY, APRIL 29.—Job XXXII.

The controversy between Job and his friends is now ended. They had certainly failed both in comforting Job, and in making good their case against him. In this chapter Elihu appears upon the scene, charged with what he believes to be a very important message.

(1) The speaker.—Not much is known of Elihu. His name signifies "My God is He." Buz was a nephew of Abraham (Gen. xxii. 21). The city of Buz lay near to Tema (Jer. xxv. 23), so that Elihu and Eliphaz must have been near neighbours. Of Ram nothing can be known with certainty. Elihu was younger than Job's friends (4), and appears to have been a silent, but very interested, listener to the controversy just closed. In deference to those who were older than himself, he had refrained from speaking (6, 7). Such modesty became his youth.

(2) His reasons for speaking.—He was greatly indignant, first, with Job because he had not justified God (2); and then with the three friends because, though they had condemned Job, they could make no reply to his defence of himself (5). He does not say that Job was wrong merely for asserting his own righteousness, but for doing it in such a manner as to condemn God. He deems himself possessed of a Divinely inspired message (8, 9). Who can speak words in season to the weary without first being taught of God (Isa. l. 4)? Full of matter, he speaks because he must (18-22), not only for the comfort of Job, but for his own relief (20). Is he not a pattern for every man who speaks for God? To be charged with an important message, and impelled to speak it by the Spirit of God—this should be our aim (Jer. xx. 9).

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30.—Job XXXIII.

It is impossible to read Elihu's words in this chapter without feeling convinced that, whether he knew it or not, he foreshadows the Lord Jesus.

(1) The character he assumes (4, 6, 7).—Job had longed for a mediator (ix. 32-35), who could equally represent God to him, and him to God. Elihu claims to occupy that position. In Jesus we have just such a teacher, combining actually, as Elihu did not, both God and man. He is so tenderly human that the weakest and vilest may approach Him without terror; yet He possesses Divine power to save.

(2) The redemption he foretells (23-34).—Critics do not care to see here any reference to the atoning Lamb. Perhaps even Elihu did not intend it; but the Spirit who spake by him did. It is difficult to see how the word "ransom"—atonement (24)—could be applied to a mere change in the mind of man towards God. We need not hesitate to recognise thus early "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

(3) The blessings men receive through Him.—The first is conviction (9-11). Job silently listened while his own words were quoted against him (ix. 21, x. 7, 13, xiii. 24, &c.). A better knowledge of ourselves is the first result of contact with the Mediator. From this results humility (17). A convicted sinner cannot be proud. Then instruction (23), and deliverance, not only from the pit (24), but to a new life (25), in which he enjoys fellowship with God (26), and bears joyous and fearless confession before men (27, R.V.)

Apart from this typical character, Elihu's words added two important thoughts to the controversy with Job. First, the greatness of God (12) rendered it futile on Job's part to seek to understand all He did; and, secondly, in reply to Job's complaint that God would not hear him (xxx. 20), God did speak to men, in dreams (14-18); in afflictions (19-22), and by an interpreter (23, 24). The friends had contended that affliction was punitive; Elihu claims that it is disciplinary. Not punishment for past sins; but chastisement in order to future blessing. These lessons are valuable to all tried saints to-day.

THURSDAY, MAY 1.—Job XXXIV.

Elihu shows the real meaning of Job's vindication of himself (1-9). In asserting his own righteousness he had charged unrighteousness upon God. However great the mystery of his dealings with us, we must hold fast his integrity. That there can be no injustice with God is Elihu's contention in this chapter.

As the Governor and Judge of the world He is just (10-20). The judgment of the world is not imposed upon Him by another (13-15). Do not lose the thought that God is actually at work among men to-day. See his hand in everything. But if the charge of Job is to stand, how can He judge men? This was Abraham's question (Gen. xviii. 25). Paul, too, repelled a terrible suggestion by a similar inquiry (Rom. iii. 6). Hold fast to this truth. God cannot be unrighteous. There are dark mysteries in the world, and in our own lives, which we cannot explain. Let them remain inexplicable rather than suggest that God can be unjust.

His omniscience secures Him from being unjust (21-28).—He sees as man cannot. No sin can be hidden from Him. How differently this truth operates, causing terror to the ungodly who wish to escape God, but establishing the confidence of those who love Him. But as a Judge his omniscience secures Him from the possibility of mistake.

How to deal with Him when enduring affliction (31-33).—Many since Job's day have found this to be excellent counsel. A humble confession (31), even with an "if" (32) before it, is better than an assertion of righteousness that practically charges God with being unjust. Affliction that produces such a result is an unspeakable blessing.

Elihu, unlike the three friends, does not attempt to charge special sin upon Job, for which his affliction is a punishment; but he does suggest that even the best man may be made better, and that affliction is often used of God for this purpose. That Job sinned during the controversy (34-37) cannot be doubted. When the hand of God is upon us it is best to hold our peace (Lev. x. 3).

FRIDAY, MAY 2.—Job XXXV.

In this chapter Elihu replies to Job's statement that there is no advantage in serving God (2, 3). This was a most serious statement, and involved more than Job thought when he used it. The people of God have certainly a great advantage over the ungodly; and they sadly dishonour God when they live and speak as though this were not true. Men judge the service of God from what they see in those who engage in it.

Elihu's answer is twofold: (1) Our righteousness must benefit us, since it cannot benefit God (4-8). There may be a sense in which our piety does not benefit God. But God does not so represent Himself. The love, and trust, and obedience of his people minister to his delight. It is because a Godly life glorifies Him that it ministers blessing to us.

(2) Why, then, do the oppressed cry to Him in vain? (9-16).—This had been a very real difficulty to Job; but Elihu's answer is, not that God is unwilling to hear, but that men do not cry to Him aright. Our prayers may fail because "we ask amiss" (James iv. 3). When his children cry, merely as the beasts cry—because they are hurt (11) without any devout confidence in Him (10), their prayer is vanity, and will not be heard (13). To Job he suggests the further thought that if God delays to answer, yet his cause is before Him (14). To wait on God is the most difficult, yet the most blessed exercise of the soul (Hab. ii. 3).

SATURDAY, MAY 3.—Job XXXVI.

With this chapter Elihu commences his closing speech. The theme of it is "the righteousness of God" (3), which is enforced by considerations of his greatness.
